This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google™ books

https://books.google.com

3 2044 103 148 805

~~LRR~~

VE RI TAS

HARVARD LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY

NATIONAL REPORTER SYSTEM—STATE SERIES

THE
PACIFIC REPORTER

VOLUME 165

PERMANENT EDITION

COMPRISING ALL THE DECISIONS OF THE
SUPREME COURTS OF CALIFORNIA, KANSAS, OREGON
WASHINGTON, COLORADO, MONTANA, ARIZONA
NEVADA, IDAHO, WYOMING, UTAH
NEW MEXICO, OKLAHOMA AND OF THE COURTS OF APPEAL OF CALIFORNIA AND CRIMINAL COURT OF APPEALS OF OKLAHOMA

WITH KEY-NUMBER ANNOTATIONS

CONTAINING A TABLE OF PACIFIC CASES IN WHICH REHEARINGS HAVE BEEN DENIED

JUNE 25—JULY 30, 1917

KF
135
.P32

ST. PAUL
WEST PUBLISHING CO.
1917

COPYRIGHT, 1917
BY WEST PUBLISHING COMPANY

(165 PAC.)

JUDGES

OF THE COURTS REPORTED DURING THE PERIOD COVERED BY THIS VOLUME

ARIZONA—Supreme Court.

ALFRED FRANKLIN, CHIEF JUSTICE.

JUDGES.

D. L. CUNNINGHAM.
HENRY D. ROSS.

CALIFORNIA—Supreme Court.

F. M. ANGELLOTTI, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

F. W. HENSHAW.
LUCIEN SHAW.
W. G. LORIGAN.
M. C. SLOSS.
HENRY A. MELVIN.
WILLIAM P. LAWLOR.

District Courts of Appeal.

First District.

THOS. J. LENNON, PRESIDING JUSTICE.
F. H. KERRIGAN.[1]
JOHN E. RICHARDS.

Second District.

N. P. CONREY, PRESIDING JUSTICE.
VICTOR E. SHAW.
W. P. JAMES.

Third District.

N. P. CHIPMAN, PRESIDING JUSTICE.
E. C. HART.
A. G. BURNETT.

COLORADO—Supreme Court.

S. HARRISON WHITE, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

WILLIAM A. HILL.
JAMES E. GARRIGUES.
TULLY SCOTT.
JAMES H. TELLER.
MORTON S. BAILEY.
GEORGE W. ALLEN.

IDAHO—Supreme Court.

ALFRED BUDGE, CHIEF JUSTICE.

JUSTICES.

WILLIAM M. MORGAN.
JOHN C. RICE.

KANSAS—Supreme Court.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON, CHIEF JUSTICE.

JUSTICES.

ROUSSEAU A. BURCH.
HENRY F. MASON.
SILAS PORTER.
JUDSON S. WEST.
JOHN MARSHALL.
JOHN S. DAWSON.

MONTANA—Supreme Court.

THEO. BRANTLY, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

SYDNEY SANNER.
WM. L. HOLLOWAY.

NEVADA—Supreme Court.

P. A. McCARRAN, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

BEN W. COLEMAN.
J. A. SANDERS.

NEW MEXICO—Supreme Court.

RICHARD H. HANNA, CHIEF JUSTICE.

JUSTICES.

FRANK W. PARKER.
CLARENCE J. ROBERTS.

OKLAHOMA—Supreme Court.[2]

J. F. SHARP, CHIEF JUSTICE.
SUMMERS HARDY, VICE CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

MATTHEW J. KANE.
JOHN B. TURNER.
CHAS. M. THACKER.
THOS. H. OWEN.[2]
RUTHERFORD BRETT.[2]
J. H. MILEY.[2]
ROBT. M. RAINEY.[2]

SUPREME COURT COMMISSIONERS.[3]

Division No. 1.

WM. A. COLLIER.
NESTOR RUMMONS.
A. M. STEWART.

Division No. 2.

C. A. GALBRAITH.
FRANK B. BURFORD.

Division No. 3.

W. R. BLEAKMORE.
SAM HOOKER.
HUNTER L. JOHNSON.

Division No. 4.

PRESTON S. DAVIS.
THOS. A. EDWARDS.
R. P. DE GRAFFENRIED.

---

[1] J. D. Murphy served as judge pro tem.

[2] Supreme Court increased to nine members April 16, 1917.

[3] Terms of all Commissioners expired January 31, 1917.

597015

OKLAHOMA—Supreme Court (Cont'd).

SUPREME COURT COMMISSIONERS (Cont'd).

Division No. 5.

W. J. CAMPBELL.
CHAM JONES.
JOHN W. HAYSON.

Division No. 6.

J. C. ROBBERTS.
W. F. FREEMAN.
R. W. HIGGINS.

SUPREME COURT COMMISSIONERS.

March 31, 1917, to November 30, 1918.

Division No. 1.

WM. A. COLLIER.[4]
NESTOR RUMMONS.[4]
A. M. STEWART.[4]

Division No. 2.

C. A. GALBRAITH.[4]
A. T. WEST.[4]
D. K. POPE.[5]

Division No. 3.

W. R. BLEAKMORE.[4]
SAM HOOKER.[4]
W. V. PRYOR.[5]

Criminal Court of Appeals.

THOMAS H. DOYLE, PRESIDING JUDGE.

ASSOCIATE JUDGES.

JAS. R. ARMSTRONG.
RUTHERFORD BRETT.[6]
SMITH C. MATSON.[7]

OREGON—Supreme Court.

THOMAS A. McBRIDE, CHIEF JUSTICE.

Department 1.

HENRY L. BENSON, PRESIDING JUDGE.

ASSOCIATE JUDGES.

LAWRENCE T. HARRIS.
GEORGE H. BURNETT.

OREGON—Supreme Court (Cont'd).

Department 2.

HENRY J. BEAN, PRESIDING JUDGE.

ASSOCIATE JUDGES.

FRANK A. MOORE.
WALLACE McCAMANT.

UTAH—Supreme Court.

J. E. FRICK, CHIEF JUSTICE.

JUSTICES.

WM. M. McCARTY.
E. E. CORFMAN.
VALENTINE GIDEON.[8]
S. R. THURMAN.[8]

WASHINGTON—Supreme Court.

OVERTON G. ELLIS, CHIEF JUSTICE.

Department 1.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

JOHN F. MAIN.
STEPHEN J. CHADWICK.
J. STANLEY WEBSTER.
GEORGE E. MORRIS.

Department 2.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

EMMETT N. PARKER.
MARK A. FULLERTON.
O. R. HOLCOMB.
WALLACE MOUNT.

WYOMING—Supreme Court.

CHARLES N. POTTER, CHIEF JUSTICE.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES.

CYRUS BEARD.
RICHARD H. SCOTT.

---

[4] Appointed March 31, 1917.
[5] Appointed April 23, 1917.
[6] Appointed Justice of Supreme Court April 16, 1917.
[7] Appointed April 19, 1917.
[8] Appointed May 8, 1917.

COURT RULES

SUPREME COURT OF OKLAHOMA

Adopted June 11, 1917

I. The regular terms of this court will be held beginning on the second Tuesday of October, December, February, April and June of each year, at 10 o'clock a. m., standard time. Special sessions may be held at any time upon call of the Chief Justice. The forenoon sitting will convene at 9 o'clock and the afternoon sitting at 1:30 o'clock.

II. All causes in which no notice for oral argument has been given shall stand for submission on the first day of the term; all causes standing for trial will be heard in the order assigned, unless the court, on proper motion and showing, shall order otherwise; provided, that in making up the trial docket the clerk shall so arrange the assignment of the cases that those from each supreme court judicial district may be heard together as nearly as may be.

III. At least seventy (70) days prior to the commencement of each term of court, the clerk shall send to the attorneys interested a printed copy of the trial docket for the term following, showing the day on which each cause will be heard. All attorneys interested shall be notified by the clerk of all orders of the court concerning each case.

IV. Attorneys desiring to make oral arguments, shall file notice thereof with the clerk of such intention, within ninety (90) days after the commencement of the proceeding in error. If no notice is served, causes will stand submitted on briefs. No motion shall be argued unless by direction of the court. The court will allot such time as may be deemed sufficient for argument of a cause, not to exceed one hour to counsel upon each side. Only two counsel will be heard on each side, and counsel amicus curiæ will be heard by leave of court only.

V. All motions to the court shall be reduced to writing, and shall contain a brief statement of the facts and objects of the motion, supported by citation of the authorities relied upon; and, except in cases where all the facts relied upon are of record, such motions shall be supported by affidavit. No motion nor petition for re-hearing will be considered unless reasonable notice has been given to counsel upon the opposite side of the case, except where in the opinion of the court an emergency exists. Copies of all motions and petitions for re-hearing must be served upon opposing counsel who will be allowed ten days from the service thereof to file response thereto. Five copies of all motions and petitions and of the response thereto shall be filed.

VI. Every motion to advance a cause shall contain a brief statement of the matter involved, with the reason for the application.

VII. In each civil cause filed in this court, counsel for plaintiff in error shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court, serve his brief on counsel for defendant in error at least forty (40) days before the case is set for submission. Counsel for plaintiff in error shall file with the clerk of this court twenty (20) copies of such brief within the time above designated, and defendant in error shall, within thirty (30) days after the service of the brief of plaintiff in error upon him, file with the clerk of this court twenty (20) copies of his answer brief, and serve same upon plaintiff in error; and all reply briefs, except as otherwise ordered by the court, must be filed by the date the case is submitted or called for argument. Proof of service must be filed with the clerk within ten (10) days after service.

In case of failure to comply with the requirements of this rule, the court may continue or dismiss the cause, or reverse or affirm the judgment, in its discretion.

VIII. In all proceedings in this court, in citing cases from the courts of this state, counsel are required to cite the volume and page of the official state reports in which the case is reported. A failure to comply with this rule will render briefs subject to be stricken from the files.

IX. Application for a re-hearing in any cause, unless otherwise ordered by the court, shall be made by a petition to the court signed by counsel and filed with the clerk, within fifteen (15) days from the date on which the opinion in the cause is filed. Such petition shall state briefly the grounds upon which counsel rely for a re-hearing and show either that some question decisive of the case and duly submitted by counsel has been overlooked by the court, or that the decision is in conflict with an express statute or controlling decision to which the attention of the court was not called either in brief or oral argument, or which has been overlooked by the court, and the question, statute or decision overlooked must be distinctly and particularly set forth in the petition. No oral argument will be allowed on an application for re-hearing except upon order of the court; but if such application is granted, the cause shall be assigned for re-hearing and the clerk shall notify both parties or their counsel of the time when such re-hearing will be had, and such time may be given for argument or brief as the court shall allow.

In any case in which a petition for re-hearing is denied, or in which an opinion is rendered on re-hearing, no further motions or applications for re-hearing or review will be allowed and the clerk shall not file any such motions or applications, except by leave of court first obtained.

X. After the expiration of 15 days from the filing of an opinion, the clerk shall issue a mandate to the court in which the judgment was rendered in accordance with the decision of this court, provided that when a petition for re-hearing is filed within the time prescribed by rule IX or by leave of court, no mandate shall issue in said cause until said petition for re-hearing shall have been determined.

XI. Where the original supersedeas bond or a certified copy thereof is included in the case made or transcript of the record and that fact is called to the attention of the court in the briefs of counsel for defendant in error, this court will, in all proper cases, where defendant in error is entitled thereto, render judgment thereon at the same time judgment is rendered in the cause.

XII. Upon the affirmance of a judgment, execution may issue thereon from this court; or a writ of procedendo shall be issued to the court below upon the payment by the successful party of the costs incurred in this court.

XIII. Any Justice may file a dissenting opinion in any cause in which he is entitled to sit and in the determination of which he participates; but before any such dissenting opinion is filed, it shall be submitted in conference to the Justices who concurred in the original opinion. No syllabus to a dissenting opinion shall be published.

XIV. In the taxation of costs in the Supreme Court, the clerk shall not tax any costs for expense of case-made, transcript, or record, unless the person claiming same shall, prior to the filing of the opinion in the cause, file with the clerk a verified statement of such expenses and showing that he has paid the same.

XV. In all original actions or proceedings instituted in this court, it shall be necessary for the plaintiff or applicant for the writ to state fully, by affidavit, the reasons why the action or proceeding is brought in this court instead of in one of inferior courts having concurrent jurisdiction. In addition to the original petition or application, five copies thereof shall be filed.

(B) In all applications to the Supreme Court for original writs except applications for the writ of habeas corpus, either under its original or appellate jurisdiction, the applicant shall show that he has given notice to the opposite party or his attorney of record of his intention to apply for such writ and the time thereof, or furnish satisfactory reasons by affidavit for his failure to give such notice.

(C) The notice above required shall be not less than five nor more than fifteen days. Applications under this rule must be made on a Tuesday unless there be some special emergency requiring earlier action.

(D) The opposing party shall be at liberty to make any objection he sees fit upon the face of the papers presented with the application.

(E) Upon the final hearing of any application under this rule, each side shall furnish for the use of the court twelve written or printed copies of their points and authorities.

XVI. Any practicing attorney of any state or territory or of the District of Columbia, having professional business in this court, may, on motion, be recognized for the purpose of presenting such cause in which he appears as counsel.

XVII. Transcripts may be certified by the court clerk substantially in the following form:

State of Oklahoma, County of ....:

I, ..., court clerk for said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true and correct transcript of the record in the above entitled cause.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal of this court this ...... day of ......, 19.. ......Court Clerk.

XVIII. A certificate of the settlement of a case-made may be substantially in the following form:

I, the undersigned judge of the district court of ...... district for ...... county, Oklahoma, hereby certify that the foregoing was presented to me as a case-made in the action above entitled (here cite the facts with reference to the appearance of parties and suggestion of amendments), and I now settle and sign the same as a true and correct case-made, and direct that it be attested and filed by the clerk of said court.

Witness my hand at .... in ...... county, Oklahoma, this ...... day of ...... 19....
.........., District Judge.

Attest:
..........., Court Clerk.

XIX. Orders for amending or completing transcripts and case-made, or for reviving, reinstating, or dismissing causes, shall be made only upon written motions, stating the grounds thereof; and reasonable notice thereof must be served upon the opposing counsel.

XX. The record may be temporarily withdrawn by an attorney interested in the case for the purpose of enabling him to prepare his brief and abstract, and in all such cases the attorney receiving such record shall receipt for the same, and return it to the clerk within twenty (20) days from its receipt, such attorney paying all charges of transmitting and returning such record. In no case shall the clerk allow an original opinion to be taken from his office.

The original of any pleading or motion shall not be taken from the clerk's office without an order of court or one of the Justices authorizing it.

XXI. Counsel for plaintiff in error shall number the pages of the petition in error and the record, and index the record before filing the same.

XXII. The record and petition in error need not be printed, but by agreement of parties filed with the clerk, may be printed and the expense thereof taxed as costs in the case.

XXIII. No argument or motion filed or made in this court shall contain language showing disrespect for or contempt of the trial court.

XXIV. Rule VII shall not apply to cases of writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition and such other remedial writs as may be provided by law. In such cases briefs shall be prepared and served in the form, manner and time as may be directed by the court in each cause.

XXV. Whenever attorneys who are residents of this state file a written application with the clerk of this court for admission to practice as an attorney and counselor at law in the courts of this state, and show in such application that they have been admitted to practice in a court of record in another state or territory or of the District of Columbia, and that such order is still in force, it is ordered that such attorney or attorneys shall be permitted to practice in the courts of this state until the next meeting of the Bar Commission for the purpose of examining applicants or making recommendation upon such applicants.

XXVI. The brief of the plaintiff in error in all cases shall contain an abstract or abridgment of the transcript, setting forth the material parts of the pleadings, proceedings, facts and documents upon which he relies, together with such other statements from the record as are necessary to a full understanding of the questions presented to this court for decision, so that no examination of the record itself need be made in this court. If the defendant in error or appellee shall claim such abstract is incomplete for the purpose stated, his brief shall contain a counter-abstract correcting any such omissions or inaccuracies. Where a party complains on account of the omission or rejection of testimony, he shall set out in his brief the full substance of the testimony to the admission or rejection of which he objects, stating specifically his objection thereto. Also, where a party complains of instructions given or refused, he shall set out in totidem verbis in his brief separately the portion to which he objects or may save exceptions. A party need not include in his abstract all the evidence in support of a claim on his part that it does not show or tend to show a certain fact; but when such a question is presented, the adverse party shall print so much of the evidence as he claims to have that effect. The abstract shall state only the substance of those parts of the record the bearing of which upon the case can be clearly shown in this manner; such as are purely formal or otherwise immaterial shall be omitted altogether, but quotations must be made with verbal accuracy whenever the decision of any question in controversy may be affected thereby. The abstract shall refer to the pages of the record.

The brief shall contain the specifications of errors complained of, separately set forth and numbered; the argument and authorities in support of each point relied on, in the same order, with strict observance of rule VII. The brief of the appellee or defendant in error shall contain with pertinent references to the pages of the abstract, any points challenging the right of plaintiff in error to be heard; a full statement of any additional facts shown by the abstract and deemed essential; citations of authorities and discussion of the alleged errors, in the same order as in the brief of the plaintiff in error. All briefs shall be printed unless otherwise ordered.

XXVII. The court may, at any time after a cause is submitted, request counsel for either or both parties to an action to file with the court, within the time fixed by the court in its request, additional authorities, if any they have, upon any proposition involved in the action; provided, that when such request is made upon counsel for either party to the action, the same shall be made in writing, and a copy of the same shall be mailed to counsel for the opposite party to the action.

XXVIII. Whenever in any case filed in this court it shall be made to appear to the clerk of this court by the affidavit of a plaintiff in error, his agent or attorney, that the defendant in error has no attorney of record, or that he is beyond the limits of the state, or that his residence is unknown, so that it is impracticable to serve citation upon him in the ordinary method provided by law, it shall be the duty of the clerk of this court upon the plaintiff in error making provision for the payment of the expense thereof, to cause notice of the pendency of such cause to be published once each week for four successive weeks in some newspaper published in the county in which the case was tried.

CRIMINAL COURT OF APPEALS OF OKLAHOMA

I. The regular terms of this court will be held as follows:

January term, the first Tuesday after the second Monday in January.

March term, the first Tuesday in March.

May term, the first Tuesday in May.

July term, the first Tuesday in July.

September term, the first Tuesday in September.

November term, the first Tuesday in November.

Special sessions of the court may be held at any time upon the call of the Presiding Judge. At the opening of the term, court shall convene at two o'clock, p. m. The sessions thereafter shall convene at ten o'clock, a. m., and two o'clock, p. m.

II. Counsel for plaintiff in error shall number the pages of the petition in error and case-made before filing the same, and shall attach thereto a complete and correct index, indicating the pages of the record, showing the pleadings, names and testimony of the witnesses for the state, their cross-examination and the names and the testimony of witnesses for the defendant and their cross-examination, and shall file with the original petition in error and case-made a copy of the same for the use of counsel.

III. The clerk shall not permit any original record to be taken from the court room, or from the office of the clerk without an order from the court or one of the judges.

IV. Transcripts may be certified by the court clerk substantially in the following form:

State of Oklahoma, County of ——, ss.:

I, ——, court clerk for said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true and correct transcript of the record in the above entitled cause.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and the seal of this court this —— day of ——, 19—.

————, Court Clerk.

V. A certificate of the settlement of a case-made may be substantially in the following form:

I, the undersigned, judge of the district (superior or county) court of —— district (or county) of Oklahoma, hereby certify that the foregoing was presented to me as a case-made in the above entitled cause (here state the facts with reference to the appearance of parties and suggestion of amendments), and I now settle and sign the same as a true and correct case-made and direct that it be attested and filed by the court clerk.

Witness my hand at —— in —— county, Oklahoma, this —— day of ——, 19—.

————, District Judge.

Attest: ————, Court Clerk.

VI. In each cause filed in this court, counsel for plaintiff in error shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court, serve his brief upon the Attorney General within sixty days after filing his petition in error and shall at the same time file five copies of said brief with the clerk of this court, and the Attorney General shall, unless otherwise directed by the court, have thirty days after service on him of plaintiff in error's brief in which to serve and file his answer briefs. The briefs are not required to be printed, but when so desired may be printed. Proof of service of briefs may be filed with the clerk of this court within ten days after service. In habeas corpus proceedings, briefs shall be prepared and served as may be directed by the court in each cause.

VII. The brief of plaintiff in error shall contain—First. A concise abstract, or statement of the case, presenting succinctly the questions involved and the manner in which they are raised. Second. A specification of the errors relied upon, specifically and particularly setting out each error asserted and intended to be urged. When the error alleged is to the admission or to the rejection of evidence, the specification shall quote the full substance of the evidence admitted or rejected, stating specifically the objections thereto. When the error alleged is to the instructions of the court the specifications shall set out the part referred to totidem verbis, whether it be instructions given or instructions refused. Abstracts shall be indexed and shall refer to the pages of the record. Third. A brief of the argument, exhibiting a clear statement of the point of law or fact to be discussed, with a reference to the pages of the record and the authorities relied upon in support of each point. In citing cases from the courts of this state, counsel are required to cite volume and page of the official state report in which the case is reported.

VIII. The court may at any time after a cause is submitted request counsel for either or both parties to file with the court within the time fixed by the court in its request, additional authorities if any they have upon any proposition involved in the cause.

IX. When no counsel appears, and no briefs are filed, the court will examine the pleadings, the instructions of the court and the exceptions taken thereto, and the judgment and sentence and if no prejudicial error appears will affirm the judgment.

X. No argument or motion filed or made in this court shall contain language showing disrespect for or contempt of the trial court.

XI. All cases shall be assigned for oral argument in the order in which they are filed and will be heard in the order assigned unless the court on proper motion and showing shall order otherwise. At least fifteen days prior to said assignment, the clerk of the court shall notify the attorneys of record of the day on which such case will be heard. All motions to advance causes must contain a brief statement of the matter involved with the reasons for the application.

XII. The plaintiff in error shall be entitled to open and conclude the argument of the case. One hour on each side will be allowed for the argument and no more without special leave of the court. The time thus allowed may be apportioned between the counsel on the same side, at their discretion, provided always that a fair opening of the case shall be made by the party having the opening and closing argument.

XIII. All motions to the court shall be reduced to writing, and shall contain a brief statement of the facts and objects of the motion. A half hour on each side shall be allowed to the argument of a motion, and no more, without special leave of the court.

XIV. The party moving to dismiss shall serve notice of the motion with a copy of his brief of argument on the counsel for plaintiff in error of record in this court, at least two weeks before the time fixed for submitting the motion. There may be united, with a motion to dismiss an appeal, a motion to affirm on the ground that, although the record may show that this court has jurisdiction, it is manifest the appeal was taken for delay only, or that the question on which the jurisdiction depends is so frivolous as not to need further argument.

XV. All opinions delivered by the court shall, immediately upon the delivery thereof, be handed to the clerk to be recorded. And it shall be the duty of the clerk to cause the same to be forthwith recorded and to deliver a copy to the reporter as soon as the same shall be recorded.

Any judge may file a dissenting opinion in any cause in which he is qualified to sit, and in the determination of which he participated; but before any such dissenting opinion is filed it shall be submitted in conference to the judges who concurred in the original opinion. No syllabus in the dissenting opinion shall be published.

XVI. Application for a rehearing in any cause, unless otherwise ordered by the court, shall be made by a petition to the court signed by counsel and filed with the clerk within fifteen days from the date on which the opinion in the cause is filed. Such petition shall briefly state the grounds upon which counsel relies for a rehearing, and show either that some question decisive of the case and duly submitted by the counsel has been overlooked by the court, or that the decision is in conflict with an express statute or controlling decision, to which the attention of the court was not called, either in brief or oral argument, or which has been overlooked by the court, and the question, statute, or decision so overlooked must be distinctly and particularly set forth in the petition. If such application is granted, the cause shall be assigned for rehearing, and the clerk shall notify both parties or their counsel of the time when such will be had, and such time may be given for argument or brief as the court shall allow.

XVII. After the expiration of fifteen days from the filing of an opinion, the clerk shall issue a mandate to the court in which the judgment was rendered, in accordance with the decision of this court and no petition for rehearing shall stay such mandate unless the person applying for rehearing shall present such petition to and obtain from one of the judges who concurred in the opinion a stay of such mandate until such petition for rehearing shall be heard. The judge to whom such petition is presented shall examine the same, and if, in his opinion, a rehearing will probably be granted, he may make an order staying such mandate.

In any case in which a petition for rehearing is denied, or in which an opinion is rendered on rehearing, no further motions or applications for rehearing or review will be allowed, and the clerk shall not file any such motions or applications, except by leave of court first obtained.

XVIII. Any practicing attorney of any state or territory, or the District of Columbia, having professional business in this court, may on motion be recognized for the purpose of presenting such cause in which he appears as counsel.

XIX. Improper, insulting or contemptuous language or conduct of attorneys to or concerning each other in court, or to and concerning the court, or any member thereof, either in or out of court, will be considered and treated as a contempt of the court.

XX. All communications and inquiries in relation to causes pending or other court matters shall be addressed to the clerk of the Criminal Court of Appeals.

Adopted by the court July 3, 1917.

CASES REPORTED

Page
Abbott, Johnson v. (Wyo.) 991
Aberdeen Const. Co. v. Aberdeen (Wash.) 1058
Abraham v. Harry (Okl.) 1154
Abraham v. Harry (Okl.) 1155
Ackerson v. Elliott (Wash.) 899
Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (Cal.) 15
Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Kramer (Okl.) 179
A. F. Coats Lumber Co., Holden v. (Or.) 674
Agoure, Lapique v. (Cal. App.) 57
Ah Quong, Cameron v. (Cal.) 961
Akins v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 154
Alaska Gastineau Mining Co., Macario v. (Wash.) 73
Alaska S. S. Co., Larson v. (Wash.) 880
Allen, Ex parte (Okl. Cr. App.) 748
Allen v. Allen (Wash.) 889
Allen v. Huston (Okl. Cr. App.) 742
Allen v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 745
Allen v. Union Trust & Savings Bank (Cal.) 1010
Allen v. Walla Walla Valley R. Co. (Wash.) 99
Allen's Estate, In re (Cal.) 1010
Allen's Estate, In re (Cal.) 1011
Allison, Canyon Creek Elevator & Milling Co. v. (Mont.) 753
Alston, Hukoveh v. (Wyo.) 988
Amazon Fire Ins. Co. v. Bond (Okl.) 414
Amend, Jinnings v. (Kan.) 845
American Security & Trust Co., De Lan v. (Colo.) 152
Anderson v. Anderson (Okl.) 145
Anderson v. Council Lumber Co. (Idaho) 1124
Andruss, Farmers' State Bank v. (Okl.) 172
Anglo-Pacific Development Co., Castro Point Ry. & Terminal Co. v. (Cal. App.) 544
Arakelian, Luft v. (Cal. App.) 712
Arkansas Valley Interurban R. Co., Senning v. (Kan.) 863
Arkansas Valley Nat. Bank v. McCollom (Okl.) 193
Arrowsmith, Bennett v. (Kan.) 812
Arthur v. Petaluma (Cal.) 698
Asiatic Tunnel Min. & Mill. Co. v. Stephenson (Colo.) 773
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., In re (N. M.) 215
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Duran v. (Kan.) 653
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Fresno Traction Co. v. (Cal.) 1013
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Hawks v. (Kan.) 275
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. State (Okl.) 125
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sun Drilling Co. (Okl.) 1133
Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Westling v. (Kan.) 669
Athey v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. (Idaho) 1116
Aultman & Taylor Machinery Co. v. Schierkolk (Kan.) 854
Austin v. Enid (Okl. Cr. App.) 155
Avila, Taylor v. (Cal.) 533
Ayers' Estate, In re (Cal.) 528
Ayers v. Ross (Cal.) 529

Bacon, Tatlow v. (Kan.) 835
Baier, Braniff v. (Kan.) 816
Bailey v. Baker (Cal. App.) 543
Baker, Bailey v. (Cal. App.) 543
Baker, Keeler v. (Colo.) 760
Baker & Lockwood Mfg. Co. v. Voorhees (Okl.) 125
Baldridge v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 1160
Bales, Colorado Sav. Bank v. (Kan.) 843
Ball v. Collins (Kan.) 273
Bandy v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 616
Bank of California, National Ass'n v. Richardson (Cal.) 152

Page
Bank of Commerce & Trust Co. v. Kenney (Cal.) 8
Bank of Italy, Keeney v. (Cal. App.) 735
Barber, Smith v. (Wash.) 873
Barker v. Condon (Mont.) 909
Barnes v. Bruce (Okl.) 405
Barnes v. Universal Tire Protector Co. (Okl.) 176
Barrows v. Case (Colo.) 779
Bartels, Frantz v. (Colo.) 769
Barton, Houghton v. (Utah) 471
Bateman, Jackson v. (Wash.) 63
Baumgartner v. Renton (Wash.) 484
Beaubein v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 213
Beers, Tanner v. (Utah) 465
Bekins Van & Storage Co., Dynes v. (Cal.) 12
Bell v. Moloney (Cal.) 917
Bell Bros. & McDonald v. Wichita Natural Gas Co. (Kan.) 284
Bellarts, Marmeni v. (Or.) 1170
Belvin v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 617
Bennett v. Arrowsmith (Kan.) 812
Bennett's Estate, In re (Kan.) 812
Benson v. Johnson (Or.) 1001
Bernard v. Renard (Cal.) 694
Bevard v. Skidmore-Patterson Coal Co. (Kan.) 657
B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. v. Helena Motor Car Co. (Mont.) 454
Binger v. Read (Kan.) 821
Bishop v. Henry (Or.) 237
Bishop, Hodge v. (Kan.) 644
Black, Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 174
Black, Hatch Bros. Co. v. (Wyo.) 518
Blair, Brockway v. (Mont.) 455
Blakeney, Hamilton v. (Okl.) 141
Blinn Lumber Co. v. Cohn (Cal. App.) 444
Blystone v. Walla Walla Valley R. Co. (Wash.) 1049
Board of Com'rs of Arapahoe County v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Colo.) 244
Board of Com'rs of Cloud County, Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank v. (Kan.) 870
Board of Com'rs of Guadalupe County, State v. (N. M.) 213
Board of Com'rs of Sedgwick County, Gray v. (Kan.) 867
Board of Trustees of Auburn School Dist. of City of Auburn, Placer County, Sweeney v. (Cal. App.) 42
Boas v. Knewing (Cal.) 690
Bodley, Roberts v. (Or.) 1172
Boise City v. National Surety Co. (Idaho) 1131
Bond, Amazon Fire Ins. Co. v. (Okl.) 414
Booth v. Richardson (Wash.) 656
Bornschein v. Whitaker (Cal.) 523
Bouck, Cross v. (Cal.) 702
Bource, Lagneau v. (Kan.) 844
Bowman v. Clyde (Kan.) 820
Boyer, State v. (Or.) 587
Bracquee v. Mottet Co. (Cal.) 696
Bradford-Kennedy Co., M. A. Phelps Lumber Co. v. (Wash.) 376
Braniff v. Baier (Kan.) 816
Brewer v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 634
Bridge v. People (Colo.) 778
Brion v. Cahill (Cal.) 704
Brisbois, Cox v. (Colo.) 152
Brockway v. Blair (Mont.) 455
Brooke v. Quigley (Cal.App.) 731
Brown, Jackson v. (Cal. App.) 152
Brown, Smith v. (Utah) 468
Brown v. Superior Court, Los Angeles County (Cal.) 429
Brownell v. Moorehead (Okl.) 408
Browne's Estate, In re (Cal.) 960
Bruce, Barnes v. (Okl.) 405

Page
Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. v. Higgins (Mont.) ... 1109
Buck v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States (Wash.) ... 878
Buhler v. Loftus (Mont.) ... 601
Bunnell v. Thomas (Cal. App.) ... 1047
Burley State Bank, Long v. (Idaho) ... 1119
Burton v. Doyle (Okl.) ... 169
Burton, State v. (Kan.) ... 847
Buster v. Marion County (Or.) ... 1168
Butterfield, State v. (Idaho) ... 218
Byford's Will, In re (Okl.) ... 194

Cahill, Brion v. (Cal.) ... 704
C. A. Hooper & Co. v. Railroad Commission of California (Cal.) ... 689
Cale, Wetzel v. (Cal.) ... 692
Calkins, Wilson v. (Cal.) ... 423
Call v. Jenner Lumber Co. (Cal. App.) ... 23
Callaghan, State v. (Mont.) ... 753
Callahan v. Callahan (Idaho) ... 1122
Cameron v. Ah Quong (Cal.) ... 961
Camp Carson Mining & Power Co. v. Stephenson (Or.) ... 351
Camp Carson Mining & Power Co., Stuart v. (Or.) ... 359
Campbell's Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 931
Caner v. Owners' Realty Co. (Cal. App.) ... 727
Canyon County, Nampa Highway Dist. v. (Idaho) ... 1126
Canyon Creek Elevator & Milling Co. v. Allison (Mont.) ... 753
Carabin, City of Hillyard v. (Wash.) ... 381
Carey Salt Co., Rodarmel v. (Kan.) ... 668
Carpenter v. Lee (Cal.) ... 525
Carr's Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 958
Carstens Packing Co., Flessher v. (Wash.) 397
Case, Barrows v. (Colo.) ... 779
Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Scott (Wash.) 485
Casey, Frazey v. (Wash.) ... 104
Cashin, Farnsworth v. (Cal.) ... 920
Castro Point Ry. & Terminal Co. v. Anglo-Pacific Development Co. (Cal. App.) ... 544
Cater Transfer Co., Gruber v. (Wash.) ... 491
Central California Traction Co., Rystinki v. (Cal.) ... 952
Central Union Fire Ins. Co., Kelly v. (Kan.) ... 806
Chestnut, Whitaker v. (Okl.) ... 160
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County (Colo.) ... 260
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., Stanton v. (Wyo.) 993
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Fraser v. (Kan.) ... 831
Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Gray (Okl.) 157
Childs v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) ... 622
Choate, Warden v. (Cal. App.) ... 36
C. Hoffman & Son Milling Co., Feighley v. (Kan.) ... 276
C. Hoffman & Son Milling Co., Widler v. (Kan.) ... 276
Church, Wolter v. (Idaho) ... 521
Citizens' State Bank of Ft. Gibson v. Strahan (Okl.) ... 189
Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank, Spafford v. (Cal.) ... 1
City of Aberdeen, Aberdeen Const. Co. v. (Wash.) ... 1058
City of Beverly Hills v. Los Angeles (Cal.) 924
City of Boise, Keyser v. (Idaho) ... 1121
City of Collinsville v. Ward (Okl.) ... 1145
City of Enid, Austin v. (Okl. Cr. App.) ... 155
City of Hillyard v. Carabin (Wash.) ... 381
City of Hoquiam v. Moe (Wash.) ... 1055
City of Lawrence, State v. (Kan.) ... 826
City of Leavenworth v. Green River Asphalt Co. (Kan.) ... 824
City of Los Angeles, City of Beverly Hills v. (Cal.) ... 924
City of Madera, San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. (Cal.) ... 701
City of Ottawa, Roberts v. (Kan.) ... 869
City of Petaluma, Arthur v. (Cal.) ... 698
City of Petaluma, Thomas v. (Cal. App.) 1021
City of Renton, Baumgartner v. (Wash.) 484
City of San Jose v. Railroad Commission of California (Cal.) ... 967
City of Seattle v. Gibson (Wash.) ... 109
City of Seattle, Murray v. (Wash.) ... 895
City of Seattle, Wayland v. (Wash.) ... 113
City of Seattle, Willett v. (Wash.) ... 876
City of Socorro, Cook v. (N. M.) ... 341
City of Spokane v. Knight (Wash.) ... 105
City of Stafford, Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. (Kan.) ... 837
Clark, Colvin v. (Wash.) ... 101
Clark, Reynolds v. (Kan.) ... 860
Clark-Lloyd Lumber Co. v. Puget Sound & C. R. Co. (Wash.) ... 94
Claudius v. Davie (Cal.) ... 689
Clausin, Ridpath v. (Wash.) ... 656
Clay, Metz v. (Kan.) ... 809
Clayton, People v. (Cal. App.) ... 37
Clemans, Hayton v. (Idaho) ... 994
Cleveland v. Lampkin (Okl.) ... 159
Cleveland County v. Oklahoma Sanitarium Co. (Okl.) ... 171
Cline v. Lewis (Cal.) ... 915
Clyde, Bowman v. (Kan.) ... 820
Coats Lumber Co., Holden v. (Or.) ... 674
Cohn, L. W. Blinn Lumber Co. v. (Cal. App.) ... 444
Colburn v. Winchell (Wash.) ... 1078
Collins, Ball v. (Kan.) ... 273
Collins v. Morris (Kan.) ... 862
Colorado Sav. Bank v. Bales (Kan.) ... 843
Colvin v. Clark (Wash.) ... 101
Concannon, Northern Pac. R. Co. v. (Wash.) ... 657
Condon, Barker v. (Mont.) ... 909
Conklin v. Woody (Cal.App.) ... 973
Conlin v. Studebaker Bros. Co. of California (Cal.) ... 1009
Connell Co. v. Jenner (Cal. App.) ... 54
Constant-Loraine Inv. Co., Tyng v. (Utah) 509
Cook v. Leavenworth Terminal Ry. & Bridge Co. (Kan.) ... 803
Cook v. Socorro (N. M.) ... 341
Coolidge & McClaine v. Saltmarsh (Wash.) 508
Copalis Lumber Co., Hopkins v. (Wash.) ... 1062
Corbett v. Corbett (Kan.) ... 815
Cordes, Johnson v. (Cal. App.) ... 1040
Cotton v. Woods (Okl.) ... 163
Council Lumber Co., Anderson v. (Idaho) ... 1124
Countryman, Gabbs v. (Cal. App.) ... 446
Cox v. Brisbois (Colo.) ... 152
Cox, Kurt v. (Kan.) ... 827
Craig v. Henning (N. M.) ... 851
Crancer, Rohr v. (Kan.) ... 823
Crane v. Washington Water Power Co. (Wash.) ... 892
Cravens v. Putnam (Kan.) ... 801
Crawford v. Seattle, R. & S. R. Co. (Wash.) ... 1070
Cross v. Bouck (Cal.) ... 702
Cudihee, Ingersoll v. (Wash.) ... 375
Cummings, Roethler v. (Or.) ... 355
Cummins, State v. (Idaho) ... 216
Cunningham, Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Co. v. (Or.) ... 224
Cunningham, Payne v. (Cal.) ... 531
Curtis, State v. (Idaho) ... 999
Curtis v. Upton (Cal.) ... 935
Cushing v. Whaley (Okl.) ... 135

Da Vella, Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. (Colo.) 254
Davie, Claudius v. (Cal.) ... 689
Davis, Ranzau v. (Or.) ... 1180
Davis' Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 525
D. C. Wheeler, Inc., v. O'Brien Bros. (Nev.) 339
De Lan v. American Security & Trust Co. (Colo.) ... 152
Deller v. Long (Wash.) ... 93
Denio Milling Co. v. Malin (Wyo.) ... 1113
Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Da Vella (Colo.) 254
De Rome v. Great Western Smelting & Refining Co. (Cal.) ... 919
De Rome's Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 919
Des Granges v. Des Granges (Cal.) ... 13
De Sollar, Symes Investing Co. v. (Colo.) 985

Page
Devenney, Maybury Ranch Co. v. (Cal. App.) ... 1020
Dickens v. State (N. M.) ... 850
Diesel, Williams v. (Okl.) ... 187
Dietderich, Du Bois Lumber Co. v. (Wash.) 884
Director, Smith v. (Or.) ... 1171
District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Madison County, State v. (Mont.) 294
Doe Estate Co., Roebling Const. Co. v. (Cal. App.) ... 547
Donahey, Trimble v. (Wash.) ... 1051
Dondelinger v. Dondelinger (Kan.) ... 849
Doolittle v. Savage Tire Co. (Cal. App.) ... 728
Doyle, Burton v. (Okl.) ... 169
Dreyfus' Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 941
Drown v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. (Cal.) ... 5
Du Bois Lumber Co. v. Dietderich (Wash.) 884
Dudley, State v. (Okl.) ... 127
Dunfield, Manor v. (Cal. App.) ... 983
Duran v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Kan.) 653
Dynes v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (Cal.) 12

Easkoot, Upton v. (Cal.) ... 935
Eby v. People (Colo.) ... 765
Edward Thompson Co. v. Foster (Kan.) ... 841
Edwards v. Lewis and Clark County (Mont.) ... 297
Eells v. Eells (Cal.) ... 441
Ekblad v. Linderholm (Kan.) ... 830
Elder Mercantile Co. v. Ottawa Inv. Co. (Kan.) ... 279
Elliott, Ackerson v. (Wash.) ... 899
Elliott v. Robbins (Cal. App.) ... 1042
Ellis, Gibbons v. (Colo.) ... 783
Ellis v. Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Co. (Okl.) 177
Ely v. Wichita Natural Gas Co. (Kan.) ... 284
Emart's Estate, In re (Cal.) ... 707
Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Wood (Colo.) ... 263
Ennis, Love, Warren & Monroe Co. v. (Wash.) ... 119
Ennis v. New World Life Ins. Co. (Wash.) 1091
Ennis' Estate, In re (Wash.) ... 119
Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Co. v. Cunningham (Or.) ... 224
Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, Buck v. (Wash.) ... 878
Equity Exchange & Mercantile Ass'n, Kliesen v. (Kan.) ... 650
Escheman, People v. (Colo.) ... 260
Estey, Squires v. (Cal. App.) ... 34
Ewald v. Kierulff (Cal.) ... 942

Fairmont Creamery Co. v. Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Co. (Cal. App.) ... 553
Falk v. Life & Annuity Ass'n (Kan.) ... 818
Farley v. Reindollar (Cal.) ... 19
Farmers' Life Ins. Co. v. Wehrle (Colo.) ... 763
Farmers' State Bank v. Andruss (Okl.) ... 172
Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank of Concordia v. Board of Com'rs of Cloud County (Kan.) ... 870
Farmers' & Stockgrowers' Bank v. Pahvant Valley Land Co. (Utah) ... 462
Farnsworth v. Cashin (Cal.) ... 920
Fealy, People v. (Cal. App.) ... 1034
Feighley v. C. Hoffman & Son Milling Co. (Kan.) ... 276
Fetsch, State v. (Or.) ... 1179
Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Stafford (Kan.) ... 837
First Congregational Church of Christ in Corona v. Lowrey (Cal.) ... 440
First Nat. Bank, Marks v. (Or.) ... 673
First Nat. Bank, Seaweard v. (Or.) ... 232
First Nat. Bank v. Wilson (Kan.) ... 859
Fish v. Kugel (Colo.) ... 249
Fisher v. Petty (Okl.) ... 163
Fleetwood, Sowles v. (Wash.) ... 1056
Flessher v. Carstens Packing Co. (Wash.) 397
Fletcher v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) ... 907
Foote, McBride v. (Okl.) ... 160
Forsyth, Hubbell v. (Wash.) ... 481
Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. v. Black (Okl.) ... 174
Foster, Edward Thompson Co. v. (Kan.) ... 841
Foster, Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. (Or.) ... 1176
Francis v. Independent Electrical Supply Co. (Cal. App.) ... 716
Frank & Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. (Cal.) ... 927
Frantz v. Bartels (Colo.) ... 769
Fraser v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Kan.) 831
Frazey v. Casey (Wash.) ... 104
Frederick, Gardner v. (Wash.) ... 85
Fred Medart Mfg. Co. v. Weary & Alford Co. (Cal. App.) ... 35
Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Gaudio (Utah) 786
Fresno Traction Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Cal.) ... 1013
Freudenthal, Lauer v. (Wash.) ... 98
Fritts v. Reidel (Kan.) ... 671
Froage v. Webb (Okl.) ... 150
Fryar v. Hazelwood Holstein Farms (Wash.) ... 1084
Funrman, In re (Cal.) ... 958
Fuqua v. State, (Ariz.) ... 311

Gabbs v. Countryman (Cal. App.) ... 446
Gardner v. Frederick (Wash.) ... 85
Garland v. Union Trust Co. (Okl.) ... 197
Garrison v. Newton (Wash.) ... 90
Gaudio, Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. (Utah) 786
Gehlenberg v. Hartley (Kan.) ... 286
General Market Co. v. Post-Intelligencer Co. (Wash.) ... 482
George C. Peckham Co., Smalley v. (Cal.) 438
Germain, Jackman v. (Wash.) ... 78
German-American Mercantile Bank, Halloran v. (Wash.) ... 80
German-American State Bank v. Woodward (Kan.) ... 854
German American Trust Co. v. White (Colo.) ... 761
Gibbons v. Ellis (Colo.) ... 783
Gibson, City of Seattle v. (Wash.) ... 109
Gibson v. McReynolds (Cal.) ... 921
Giddings, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 904
Giebisch, Portland Gas & Coke Co. v. (Or.) 1004
Gifford, Griffith v. (Wash.) ... 874
Gillen-Chambers Co., Rogue River Fruit & Produce Ass'n v. (Or.) ... 679
Gillen-Chambers Co., Rogue River Fruit & Produce Ass'n v. (Or.) ... 1183
Glaze v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) ... 211
Goetz, Ward v. (Cal. App.) ... 1022
Goldsmith v. Winner Shingle Co. (Wash.) 392
Goodrich Rubber Co. v. Helena Motor Car Co. (Mont.) ... 454
Gordon, Ex parte (Okl. Cr. App.) ... 154
Gordon, Shane v. (Or.) ... 1167
Gould, Sommers v. (Mont.) ... 599
Graca v. Rodrigues (Cal.) ... 1012
Grandi, People v. (Cal. App.) ... 1027
Granger Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Sloane Bros. (Wash.) ... 102
Grant Realty Co. v. Ham, Yearsley & Ryrie (Wash.) ... 495
Gray v. Board of Com'rs of Sedgwick County (Kan.) ... 867
Gray, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 157
Gray, Harris v. (Okl.) ... 1148
Grayson, Miller v. (Okl.) ... 133
Great Northern R. Co., State v. (Wash.) ... 1073
Great Western Smelting & Refining Co., De Rome v. (Cal.) ... 919
Green River Asphalt Co., City of Leavenworth v. (Kan.) ... 824
Greiger v. Salzer (Colo.) ... 240
Grennell Farm Loan Co., Lehr v. (Okl.) ... 167
Griffith v. Gifford (Wash.) ... 874
Griswold v. Horne (Ariz.) ... 318
Grotefend v. May (Cal. App.) ... 27
Gruber v. Cater Transfer Co. (Wash.) ... 491

Haddock v. Sticelber & Mong (Okl.) ... 1138
Hadley, People v. (Cal.) ... 442
Haigler, Stelson v. (Colo.) ... 265
Haley v. Hollenback (Mont.) ... 459

Page
Hall v. State (Ariz.) 300
Hall, State v. (Mont.) 757
Halloran v. German-American Mercantile Bank (Wash.) 80
Ham, Yearsley & Ryrie, Grant Realty Co. v. (Wash.) 495
Hamilton v. Blakeney (Okl.) 141
Hamilton v. Mallard (Cal. App.) 725
Hamilton v. People (Colo.) 761
Hamilton v. Warneke (Colo.) 970
Hammond v. Western Casualty & Guaranty Ins. Co. (Kan.) 291
Hanks, State v. (Kan.) 865
Hanson v. Morrison (Idaho) 521
Hanson, Smith Bros. & Cooper v. (Kan.) 852
Hanson Builders' Supply Co., National Surety Co. v. (Okl.) 1136
Harris v. Gray (Okl.) 1148
Harris, State v. (Kan.) 667
Harry, Abraham v. (Okl.) 1154
Harry, Abraham v. (Okl.) 1155
Hart, Litzell v. (Wash.) 393
Hartley, Gehlenberg v. (Kan.) 286
Hartley v. Lasater (Wash.) 106
Harvey, Wynne v. (Wash.) 67
Hatch Bros. Co. v. Black (Wyo.) 518
Hawes, Stramel v. (Kan.) 646
Hawks v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Kan.) 275
Hay v. McDonald (Cal. App.) 1030
Hayes v. Osborn (Wash.) 95
Hayton v. Clemans (Idaho) 994
Hayward, White v. (Cal. App.) 972
Hazelwood Holstein Farms, Fryar v. (Wash.) 1084
Hazelwood Irrigated Farms Co., Mezger v. (Wash.) 872
Helena Motor Car Co., B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. v. (Mont.) 454
Henning, Craig v. (N. M.) 851
Henry, Bishop v. (Or.) 237
Herbold, Appeal of (Cal.) 941
Herskowitz, Myers v. (Cal. App.) 1031
Hertweck, Rauer v. (Cal.) 946
Higgins, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. v. (Mont.) 1109
Hightower, Ex parte (Okl. Cr. App.) 624
Hill v. State (Ariz.) 326
Hillyer v. Hynes (Cal. App.) 718
Hisaw v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 636
Hodge v. Bishop (Kan.) 644
Hoffman & Son Milling Co., Feighley v. (Kan.) 276
Hoffman & Son Milling Co., Widler v. (Kan.) 276
Holden v. A. F. Coats Lumber Co. (Or.) 674
Holden v. Mensinger (Cal.) 950
Hollenback, Haley v. (Mont.) 459
Holt, Smalley v. (Cal. App.) 1023
Home State Bank v. Hunkey (Colo.) 987
Hooper & Co. v. Railroad Commission of California (Cal.) 689
Hopkins v. Copalis Lumber Co. (Wash.) 1062
Horne, Griswold v. (Ariz.) 318
Horton v. Winbigler (Cal.) 423
Houghton v. Barton (Utah) 471
Houghton v. Kern Valley Bank (Cal. App.) 738
Houston, Watts v. (Okl.) 128
Hubbell v. Forsyth (Wash.) 481
Hukoveh v. Alston (Wyo.) 988
Hunkey, Home State Bank v. (Colo.) 987
Huppert, State v. (Okl.) 193
Huston, Allen v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 742
Huston v. Ohio & Colorado Smelting & Refining Co. (Colo.) 251
Hynes, Hillyer v. (Cal. App.) 718

Independent Electrical Supply Co., Francis v. (Cal. App.) 716
Industrial Accident Commission, Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. (Cal.) 15
Industrial Accident Commission, Santa v. (Cal.) 689
Ingersoll v. Cudihee (Wash.) 375
Ingram v. Slayton (Cal. App.) 1026

Page
Inland Empire Min. & Mill. Co., Marsh Mining Co. v. (Idaho) 1128

Jackman v. Germain (Wash.) 78
Jackson v. Bateman (Wash.) 63
Jackson v. Brown (Cal. App.) 152
Jackson v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 619
Jackson, Tharp v. (Or.) 585
Jackson, Tharp v. (Or.) 1173
Jaffray, Leonard v. (Cal.) 956
Jahn & Co. v. McClaine (Wash.) 1060
Jenner, Connell Co. v. (Cal. App.) 54
Jenner Lumber Co., Call v. (Cal. App.) 23
Jeremy Fuel & Grain Co. v. Mellen (Utah) 791
J. Frank & Co. v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. (Cal.) 927
J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Scott (Wash.) 485
Jinnings v. Amend (Kan.) 845
Johns, Morgan v. (Or.) 369
Johnson v. Abbott (Wyo.) 991
Johnson, Benson v. (Or.) 1001
Johnson v. Cordes (Cal. App.) 1040
Johnson v. Mennonite Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Kan.) 275
Johnson, Passumpsic Sav. Bank v. (Okl.) 181
Johnson, Tanner v. (Utah) 466
Jones, Shoenhair v. (Cal. App.) 971
Jotter v. Marvin (Colo.) 269
Joyce, King County v. (Wash.) 399
J. W. Denio Milling Co. v. Malin (Wyo.) 1113

Kalivas v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (Wash.) 96
Kane v. Kane (Mont.) 457
Kansas City, McHenry v. (Kan.) 664
Kansas City, M. & O. R. Co. v. McDaniel (Okl.) 1144
Karahadian v. Lockett (Cal. App.) 552
Kasper, Sheehan v. (Nev.) 632
Keeler v. Baker (Colo.) 760
Keeney v. Bank of Italy (Cal. App.) 735
Keith's Estate, In re (Cal.) 10
Keller v. Miller (Colo.) 774
Kelly v. Central Union Fire Ins. Co. (Kan.) 806
Kelly v. Roetzel (Okl.) 1150
Kenney, Bank of Commerce & Trust Co. v. (Cal.) 8
Kent v. Kent (Utah) 271
Kent v. Kent (Utah) 272
Kern Valley Bank, Houghton v. (Cal. App.) 738
Keyser v. Boise (Idaho) 1121
Kierulff, Ewald v. (Cal.) 942
Kilborn, Roberson v. (Nev.) 220
King, Lucas v. (Okl.) 165
King v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. (Or.) 349
King, State v. (Kan.) 665
King County v. Joyce (Wash.) 399
King County, North Pac. Sea Products Co. v. (Wash.) 656
King County, United States Whaling Co. v. (Wash.) 70
Klein v. Markarian (Cal.) 3
Kliesen v. Equity Exchange & Mercantile Ass'n (Kan.) 650
Knewing, Boas v. (Cal.) 690
Knight, City of Spokane v. (Wash.) 105
Knowling v. Morris & Co. (Kan.) 841
Knox, McIntosh v. (Nev.) 337
Kolp, Mangelsdorf Bros. Co. v. (Okl.) 1141
Kramer, Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. (Okl.) 179
Kranz, Trautman v. (Colo.) 764
Kucher v. Scott (Wash.) 82
Kugel, Fish v. (Colo.) 249
Kuhn, People v. (Cal. App.) 26
Kurt v. Cox (Kan.) 827

La Follett, Wigan v. (Or.) 579
Lagneau v. Bource (Kan.) 844
La Grande Nat. Bank v. Oliver (Or.) 682
Lampkin, Cleveland v. (Okl.) 159
Landon, State v. (Kan.) 1111
Lapique v. Agoure (Cal. App.) 57
Lapique v. Plummer (Cal. App.) 56
Lapique v. Walsh (Cal. App.) 56

Page
Larson v. Alaska S. S. Co. (Wash.)...... 880
Lasater, Hartley v. (Wash.)............ 106
Laubach, Laubach Union Check Valve Co. v. (Wash.) 1053
Laubach Union Check Valve Co. v. Laubach (Wash.)........................1053
Lauer v. Freudenthal (Wash.)........... 98
Lawson v. People (Colo.)................ 771
Leavenworth Terminal Ry. & Bridge Co., Cook v. (Kan.)........................ 803
Lee, Carpenter v. (Cal.)................. 525
Lee, State Land Board v. (Or.).......... 372
Leeper, State v. (Idaho)................. 997
Lehr v. Grennell Farm Loan Co. (Okl.).. 167
Leonard v. Jaffray (Cal.)................ 956
Levy v. State (Okl. Cr. App.)............ 741
Lewis, Cline v. (Cal.)................... 915
Lewis and Clark County, Edwards v. (Mont.) 297
Life & Annuity Ass'n, Falk v. (Kan.)..... 818
Life & Annuity Ass'n, Matthews v. (Kan.) 818
Life & Annuity Ass'n, Shaw v., three cases (Kan.) 818
Linderholm, In re (Kan.)................. 830
Linderholm, Ekblad v. (Kan.)............ 830
Lindstrom v. National Life Ins. Co. of United States (Or.)..................... 675
Linney, Peck v. (Wash.).................1080
Litzell v. Hart (Wash.)................. 393
Lloyd v. Lowe (Colo.)................... 609
Lockett, Karahadian v. (Cal. App.)....... 552
Loftus, Buhler v. (Mont.)................ 601
Long v. Burley State Bank (Idaho)......1119
Long, Deller v. (Wash.).................. 98
Lopez, People v. (Cal. App.)............. 722
Lopresto v. People (Colo.).............. 153
Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Co., Fairmont Creamery Co. v. (Cal. App.)...... 553
Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Co., Smith-Booth-Usher Co. v. (Cal.).............. 430
Los Molinos Land Co. v. MacKay (Cal.).. 926
Love, Warren & Monroe Co. v. Ennis (Wash.) 119
Lowe, Lloyd v. (Colo.).................. 609
Lower Clear Creek Ditch Co., Rogers v. (Colo.) 248
Lowery v. Parton (Okl.)................ 164
Lowrey, First Congregational Church of Christ in Corona v. (Cal.).......... 440
Lucas v. King (Okl.).................... 165
Luft v. Arakelian (Cal. App.)........... 712
L. W. Blinn Lumber Co. v. Cohn (Cal. App.) 444
Lyon, State v. (Okl.)................... 419

Mabrier, People v. (Cal. App.)...........1044
Macario v. Alaska Gastineau Mining Co. (Wash.) 73
McBride v. Foote (Okl.)................. 160
McClaine, W. F. Jahn & Co. v. (Wash.)..1060
McCollom, Arkansas Valley Nat. Bank v. (Okl.) 193
McCormack v. McCormack (Cal.).......... 930
McCormick v. McCormick (Kan.).......... 285
McCray, Wallingford v. (Kan.)........... 813
McCullough, State v. (Kan.)............ 644
McDaniel, Kansas City, M. & O. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 1144
McDonald, Hay v. (Cal. App.) 1030
McDonald, Pricer v. (Colo.)............. 153
McGinn v. Rees (Cal. App.).............. 52
McGoldrick Lumber Co., Nelson v. (Idaho) 1125
McHenry v. Kansas City (Kan.).......... 664
McIntosh v. Knox (Nev.)................ 337
MacKay, Los Molinos Land Co. v. (Cal.).. 926
McLaury, State Bank of Lansing v., two cases (Cal.) 7
McQuitty, State v. (Mont.).............. 599
McReynolds, Gibson v. (Cal.)............ 921
Magallon v. Schreiner (Wash.)...........1048
Malin, J. W. Denio Milling Co. v. (Wyo.)..1113
Mallard, Hamilton v. (Cal. App.)......... 725
Maloney, Rogers v. (Or.)................ 357
Mangelsdorf Bros. Co. v. Kolp (Okl.).....1141

Page
Mann, Stewart v. (Or.).................. 590
Mann, Stewart v. (Or.).................1169
Mannion v. Marsh (Ariz.)...............1099
Manor v. Dunfield (Cal. App.)........... 983
M. A. Phelps Lumber Co. v. Bradford-Kennedy Co. (Wash.).................. 376
Marastoni, State v. (Or.)...............1177
Marchetti v. San Francisco Oyster House (Wash.) 657
Marconnier v. Preston (Wash.)........... 72
Marcuse, Schwarz & Gottlieb v. (Cal.)...1015
Marino, People v. (Cal. App.)............ 564
Marion County, Buster v. (Or.)..........1168
Markarian, Klein v. (Cal.).............. 3
Marks v. First Nat. Bank (Or.).......... 673
Marmeni v. Bellarts (Or.)...............1170
Marron & Wood, In re (N. M.)........... 216
Marsh, Mannion v. (Ariz.)...............1099
Marsh Mining Co. v. Inland Empire Min. & Mill. Co. (Idaho)....................1128
Marshall v. State (Ariz.)................ 313
Martin, Norkett v. (Colo.).............. 256
Marvin, Jotter v. (Colo.)............... 269
Maschini, People v. (Cal. App.).......... 540
Matthews v. Life & Annuity Ass'n (Kan.) 818
Maurmair v. National Bank of Commerce (Okl.) 413
May, Grotefend v. (Cal. App.)........... 27
Maybury Ranch Co. v. Devenney (Cal. App.) 1020
Medart Mfg. Co. v. Weary & Alford Co. (Cal. App.)......................... 35
Mellen, Jeremy Fuel & Grain Co. v. (Utah) 791
Mennonite Mut. Fire Ins. Co., Johnson v. (Kan.) 275
Mensinger, Holden v. (Cal.)............. 950
Metz v. Clay (Kan.)..................... 809
Mezger v. Hazelwood Irrigated Farms Co. (Wash.) 872
Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Co., Ellis v. (Okl.) 177
Miller v. Grayson (Okl.)................ 133
Miller, Keller v. (Colo.)................ 774
Miller v. State Industrial Accident Commission (Or.)......................... 576
Miller Brewing Co. v. Gaudio (Utah)..... 786
Milloglav v. Zacharias (Cal. App.)....... 977
Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Co. v. Schalansky (Kan.)......................... 289
Miss Wolcott School Ass'n, Pitcher v. (Colo.) 608
Moe, City of Hoquiam v. (Wash.)........1055
Moloney, Bell v. (Cal.)................. 917
Monarch Cement Co., Seckman v. (Kan.).. 278
Monroe, Ex parte (Okl. Cr. App.)........ 741
Monroe v. Withycombe (Or.)............. 227
Montes, State v. (N. M.)................ 797
Moore v. San Vicente Lumber Co. (Cal.).. 687
Moore v. State (Okl. Cr. App.).......... 620
Moore v. Strayer (Cal.)................. 530
Moorehead, Brownell v. (Okl.).......... 408
Morgan v. Johns (Or.)................... 369
Morris, Collins v. (Kan.)................ 862
Morris v. State (Okl. Cr. App.)......... 742
Morris & Co., Knowling v. (Kan.)........ 841
Morrison, Hanson v. (Idaho)............. 521
Morrison, Reirdon v. (Okl.) 1135
Mottet Co., Bracquee v. (Cal.).......... 696
Mouat, Riley v. (Mont.).................1105
Mountain Timber Co., State v. (Wash.).. 971
Munson v. State (Okl. Cr. App.).........1162
Murgittroyd, Padden v. (Mont.).......... 913
Murphy v. Panton (Wash.)...............1074
Murphy v. Prosser (Wash.).............. 390
Murray v. Seattle (Wash.)............... 895
Murray v. State (Ariz.)................. 315
Myers v. Herskowitz (Cal. App.).........1031

Nampa Highway Dist. v. Canyon County (Idaho) 1126
National Bank of Commerce, Maurmair v. (Okl.) 413
National Life Ins. Co. of United States, Lindstrom v. (Or.)................... 675
National Surety Co., Boise City v. (Idaho) 1131

Page
National Surety Co. v. Oklahoma Nat. Life Ins. Co. (Okl.) 161
National Surety Co. v. S. H. Hanson Builders' Supply Co. (Okl.) 1136
Nelson v. McGoldrick Lumber Co. (Idaho) 1125
New Amsterdam Casualty Co., Drown v. (Cal.) 5
New Amsterdam Casualty Co., J. Frank & Co. v. (Cal.) 927
Newlin, State v. (Or.) 225
Newton, Garrison v. (Wash.) 90
Newton Lumber & Investment Co., Stewart v. (Colo.) 255
New World Life Ins. Co., Ennis v. (Wash.) 1091
New York Life Ins. Co., Rathbun v. (Idaho) 997
Nieschburg v. Nothern (Kan.) 857
Noble v. Watrous (Or.) 349
Nolan, People v. (Cal.App.) 715
Norkett v. Martin (Colo.) 256
Northern Const. Co., Soule v. (Cal. App.) 21
Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Concannon (Wash.) 657
Northern Pac. R. Co., Kalivas v. (Wash.) 96
Northern Pac. R. Co., Stewart v. (Wash.) 377
North Pac. Sea Products Co. v. King County (Wash.) 656
Northlake Ave., In re (Wash.) 113
Nothern, Nieschburg v. (Kan.) 857
Noyes-Holland Logging Co. v. Pacific Live Stock & Lumber Co. (Or.) 236

O'Brien Bros., D. C. Wheeler, Inc., v. (Nev.) 339
O'Donnell v. Sixth Judicial District Court of State of Nevada, in and for Humboldt County (Nev.) 759
Ohio & Colorado Smelting & Refining Co., Huston v. (Colo.) 251
O K Bus & Baggage Co. v. O K Transfer & Storage Co. (Okl.) 136
Oklahoma City v. Page (Okl.) 164
Oklahoma Nat. Life Ins. Co., National Surety Co. v. (Okl.) 161
Oklahoma Sanitarium Co., Cleveland County v. (Okl.) 171
O K Transfer & Storage Co., O K Bus & Baggage Co. v. (Okl.) 136
Oliver, La Grande Nat. Bank v. (Or.) 682
Olson v. Superior Court of Merced County (Cal.) 706
Oregon Short Line R. Co., Athey v. (Idaho) 1116
Oregon Short Line R. Co., King v. (Or.) 349
Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., Stoddard Lumber Co. v. (Or.) 363
Orrock v. South Moran Tp. (Wash.) 1096
Orth, State v. (Kan.) 652
Osborn, Hayes v. (Wash.) 95
Otis v. Zeiss (Cal.) 524
Ottawa Inv. Co., Elder Mercantile Co. v. (Kan.) 279
Overstreet, State v. (Mont.) 753
Owners' Realty Co., Caner v. (Cal. App.) 727

Pace v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 1160
Pacific Live Stock & Lumber Co., Noyes-Holland Logging Co. v. (Or.) 236
Padden v. Murgittroyd (Mont.) 913
Paden v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 1155
Page, Oklahoma City v. (Okl.) 164
Pahvant Valley Land Co., Farmers' & Stockgrowers' Bank v. (Utah) 462
Panton, Murphy v. (Wash.) 1074
Parker v. Seattle Land & Improvement Co. (Wash.) 1086
Parker v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 622
Parkhurst, Wakefield, Fries & Co. v. (Or.) 578
Parman, Smith v. (Kan.) 663
Parton, Lowery v. (Okl.) 164
Passumpsic Sav. Bank v. Johnson (Okl.) 181
Patterson v. Uncle Sam Oil Co. (Kan.) 661
Patterson v. Uncle Sam Oil Co. (Kan.) 872
Patty, Pohlmann v. (Cal. App.) 447
Page
Payne v. Cunningham (Cal.) 531
Peck v. Linney (Wash.) 1080
Peckham Co., Smalley v. (Cal.) 438
People, Bridge v. (Colo.) 778
People v. Clayton (Cal. App.) 37
People, Eby v. (Colo.) 765
People v. Escheman (Colo.) 260
People v. Fealy (Cal. App.) 1034
People v. Grandi (Cal. App.) 1027
People v. Hadley (Cal.) 442
People, Hamilton v. (Colo.) 761
People v. Kuhn (Cal. App.) 26
People, Lawson v. (Colo.) 771
People v. Lopez (Cal. App.) 722
People, Lopresto v. (Colo.) 153
People v. Mabrier (Cal. App.) 1044
People v. Marino (Cal. App.) 564
People v. Maschini (Cal. App.) 546
People v. Nolan (Cal. App.) 715
People, Saunders v. (Colo.) 781
People v. Schmidt (Cal. App.) 555
People v. Slaughter (Cal. App.) 44
People v. Stockton (Cal. App.) 717
People v. Wakao (Cal. App.) 720
People, Wheeler v. (Colo.) 257
People v. Wilbur (Cal. App.) 729
People, Zancannelli v. (Colo.) 612
Petty, Fisher v. (Okl.) 163
Phelps Lumber Co. v. Bradford-Kennedy Co. (Wash.) 376
Pitcher v. Miss Wolcott School Ass'n (Colo.) 608
Pitcher, Sowers v. (Colo.) 253
Platnauer v. Superior Court of California in and for Sacramento County (Cal. App.) 41
Plummer, Lapique v. (Cal. App.) 56
Pohlmann v. Patty (Cal. App.) 447
Portland Gas & Coke Co. v. Giebisch (Or.) 1004
Portland Gas & Coke Co., White v. (Or.) 1005
Post-Intelligencer Co., General Market Co. v. (Wash.) 482
Preston, Marconnier v. (Wash.) 72
Pricer v. McDonald (Colo.) 153
Prosser, Murphy v. (Wash.) 390
Provo City v. Provo Meat & Packing Co. (Utah) 477
Provo Meat & Packing Co., Provo City v. (Utah) 477
Puget Sound & C. R. Co., Clark-Lloyd Lum. Co. v. (Wash.) 94
Putnam, Cravens v. (Kan.) 801

Quayle v. State (Ariz.) 331
Queen Ins. Co., Violette v. (Wash.) 65
Quigley, Brooke v. (Cal. App.) 731
Quilp Gold Mining Co. v. Republic Mines Corp. (Wash.) 57

Railroad Commission, San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. (Cal.) 16
Railroad Commission of California, C. A. Hooper & Co. v. (Cal.) 689
Railroad Commission of California, City of San Jose v. (Cal.) 967
Ranzau v. Davis (Or.) 1180
Rathbun v. New York Life Ins. Co. (Idaho) 997
Rauer v. Hertweck (Cal.) 946
Ray, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 129
Read, Binger v. (Kan.) 821
Reece v. Rhoades (Wyo.) 449
Rees, McGinn v (Cal. App.) 52
Reichert v. Sooy-Smith (Or.) 1174
Reichert v. Sooy-Smith (Or.) 1184
Reidel, Fritts v. (Kan.) 671
Reindollar, Farley v. (Cal.) 19
Reirdon v. Morrison (Okl.) 1135
Renard, Bernard v. (Cal.) 694
Republic Mines Corp., Quilp Gold Mining Co. v. (Wash.) 57
Reynolds v. Clark (Kan.) 860
Rhoades, Reece v. (Wyo.) 449
Rice v. Rice (Kan.) 799
Richardson, Bank of California, National Ass'n v. (Cal.) 152

Page

Richardson, Booth v. (Wash.) 656
Richardson's Estate, In re (Wash.) 656
Richmond Dredging Co., Taugher v. (Cal. App.) 31
Ridpath v. Clausin (Wash.) 656
Riley v. Mouat (Mont.) 1105
Riley's Estate, In re (Mont.) 1105
Riner v. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. (Or.) 684
Rispin, Robinson v. (Cal. App.) 979
Robbins, Elliott v. (Cal. App.) 1042
Roberson v. Kilborn (Nev.) 220
Roberts v. Bodley (Or.) 1172
Roberts v. Ottawa (Kan.) 869
Robinson v. Rispin (Cal. App.) 979
Robinson v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 616
Rodarmel v. Carey Salt Co. (Kan.) 668
Rodrigues, Graca v. (Cal.) 1012
Roebling Const. Co. v. Doe Estate Co. (Cal. App.) 547
Roethler v. Cummings (Or.) 355
Roetzel, Kelly v. (Okl.) 1150
Rogers v. Lower Clear Creek Ditch Co. (Colo.) 248
Rogers v. Maloney (Or.) 357
Rogue River Fruit & Produce Ass'n v. Gillen-Chambers Co. (Or.) 679
Rogue River Fruit & Produce Ass'n v. Gillen-Chambers Co. (Or.) 1183
Rohr v. Crancer (Kan.) 823
Rohrer, Weaver v. (Wash.) 971
Roman, Wheelwright v. (Utah) 513
Ross, Ayers v. (Cal.) 529
Ross v. Wellington Lodge No. 133, I. O. O. F. (Kan.) 819
Royal Exch. Assur., Workman v. (Wash.) 488
Ruge v. Ruge (Wash.) 1063
Russell, State v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 156
Ryal, San Luis Obispo County v. (Cal.) 1
Rystinki v. Central California Traction Co. (Cal.) 952

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Giddings (Okl.) 904
St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ray (Okl.) 129
Salt Lake City, Warm Springs Co. v. (Utah) 788
Saltmarsh, Coolidge & McClaine v. (Wash.) 508
Salzer, Greiger v. (Colo.) 240
San Francisco Oyster House, Marchetti v. (Wash.) 657
San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. Madera (Cal.) 701
San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. v. Railroad Commission (Cal.) 16
San Luis Obispo County v. Ryal (Cal.) 1
Santa v. Industrial Accident Commission (Cal.) 689
San Vicente Lumber Co., Moore v. (Cal.) 687
Sarusal v. Seung (Wash.) 116
Saunders v. People (Colo.) 781
Savage Tire Co., Doolittle v. (Cal. App.) 728
Schalansky, Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Co. v. (Kan.) 289
Schierkolk, Aultman & Taylor Machinery Co. v. (Kan.) 854
Schmidt, People v. (Cal. App.) 555
Schofield, State v. (Mont.) 594
School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. (Colo.) 260
Schreiner, Magallon v. (Wash.) 1048
Schwartz v. Gallup (N. M.) 345
Schwarz & Gottlieb v. Marcuse (Cal.) 1015
Scofield v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 210
Scott, J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. (Wash.) 485
Scott, Kucher v. (Wash.) 82
Seattle Construction & Dry Dock Co., Tomkins v. (Wash.) 384
Seattle Land & Improvement Co., Parker v. (Wash.) 1086
Seattle, R. & S. R. Co., Crawford v. (Wash.) 1070
Seaweard v. First Nat. Bank (Or.) 232
Seckman v. Monarch Cement Co. (Kan.) 278

Page

Segelbohm v. Waldner (Kan.) 649
Senning v. Arkansas Valley Interurban R. Co. (Kan.) 863
Settle, Stieglitz v. (Cal.) 436
Seung, Sarusal v. (Wash.) 116
Seward Parke Ave. in City of Seattle, In re (Wash.) 971
Shane v. Gordon (Or.) 1167
Shaw v. Life & Annuity Ass'n, three cases (Kan.) 818
Shaw v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 617
Sheehan v. Kasper (Nev.) 632
Sherman, Winbigler v. (Cal.) 943
S. H. Hanson Builders' Supply Co., National Surety Co. v. (Okl.) 1136
Shives, State v. (Kan.) 272
Shoemake v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 632
Shoenhair v. Jones (Cal. App.) 971
Sixth Judicial District Court of State of Nevada, in and for Humboldt County, O'Donnell v. (Nev.) 759
Skidmore-Patterson Coal Co., Bevard v. (Kan.) 657
Slaughter, People v. (Cal. App.) 44
Slayton, Ingram v. (Cal. App.) 1026
Sloane Bros., Granger Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. (Wash.) 102
Smalley v. George C. Peckham Co. (Cal.) 438
Smalley v. Holt (Cal. App.) 1023
Smith v. Barber (Wash.) 873
Smith v. Brown (Utah) 468
Smith v. Director (Or.) 1171
Smith v. Parman (Kan.) 663
Smith, Tracy v. (Cal.) 535
Smith-Booth-Usher Co. v. Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Co. (Cal.) 430
Smith Bros. & Cooper v. Hanson (Kan.) 852
Sommers v. Gould (Mont.) 599
Sooy-Smith, Reichert v. (Or.) 1174
Sooy-Smith, Reichert v. (Or.) 1184
Soule v. Northern Const. Co. (Cal. App.) 21
Southern Pac. Co. v. State (Ariz.) 303
Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Foster (Or.) 1176
Southwestern Surety Ins. Co., Riner v. (Or.) 684
Sowers v. Pitcher (Colo.) 253
Sowles v. Fleetwood (Wash.) 1056
Spafford v. Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank (Cal.) 1
Spafford's Estate, In re (Cal.) 1
Sperry, Tracy v. (Colo.) 153
Squires v. Estey (Cal. App.) 34
Stannard, State v. (Or.) 566
Stannard, State v. (Or.) 571
Stanton v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (Wyo.) 993
State, Akins v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 154
State, Allen v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 745
State, Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 125
State, Baldridge v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 1160
State, Bandy v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 616
State, Beaubein v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 213
State, Belvin v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 617
State v. Board of Com'rs of Guadalupe County (N. M.) 213
State v. Boyer (Or.) 587
State, Brewer v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 634
State v. Burton (Kan.) 847
State v. Butterfield (Idaho) 218
State v. Callaghan (Mont.) 753
State, Childs v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 622
State v. Cummins (Idaho) 216
State v. Curtis (Idaho) 999
State v. Dickens (N. M.) 850
State v. District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Madison County (Mont.) 294
State v. Dudley (Okl.) 127
State v. Fetsch (Or.) 1179
State, Fletcher v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 907
State, Fuqua v. (Ariz.) 311
State, Glaze v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 211
State v. Great Northern R. Co. (Wash.) 1073
State, Hall v. (Ariz.) 300
State v. Hall (Mont.) 757
State v. Hanks (Kan.) 865

Page
State v. Harris (Kan.) 667
State, Hill v. (Ariz.) 326
State, Hisaw v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 636
State v. Huppert (Okl.) 193
State v. King (Kan.) 865
State, Jackson v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 619
State v. Landon (Kan.) 1111
State v. Lawrence (Kan.) 826
State v. Leeper (Idaho) 997
State, Levy v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 741
State v. Lyon (Okl.) 419
State v. McCullough (Kan.) 644
State v. McQuitty (Mont.) 599
State v. Marastoni (Or.) 1177
State, Marshall v. (Ariz.) 313
State v. Montes (N. M.) 797
State, Moore v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 620
State, Morris v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 742
State v. Mountain Timber Co. (Wash.) 971
State, Munson v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 1162
State, Murray v. (Ariz.) 315
State v. Newlin (Or.) 225
State v. Orth (Kan.) 652
State v. Overstreet (Mont.) 753
State, Pace v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 1160
State, Paden v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 1155
State, Parker v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 622
State, Quayle v. (Ariz.) 331
State, Robinson v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 616
State v. Russell (Okl. Cr. App.) 156
State v. Schofield (Mont.) 594
State, Scofield v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 210
State, Shaw v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 617
State v. Shives (Kan.) 272
State, Shoemake v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 632
State, Southern Pac. Co. v. (Ariz.) 303
State v. Stannard (Or.) 566
State v. Stannard (Or.) 571
State, Stevenson v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 156
State v. Story (Mont.) 748
State v. Superior Court for Kitsap County (Wash.) 493
State, Swan v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 627
State, Talkington v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 906
State, Trammell v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 742
State v. Tuffs (Mont.) 1107
State v. Ward (Wash.) 794
State, Watkins v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 621
State, Williams v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 155
State, Wilson v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 618
State v. Wood (Mont.) 592
State, Yowell v. (Okl. Cr. App.) 155
State Bank of Lansing v. McLaury, two cases (Cal.) 7
State Industrial Accident Commission, Miller v. (Or.) 576
State Land Board v. Lee (Or.) 372
Steinberger v. Young (Cal.) 432
Stelson v. Haigler (Colo.) 265
Stephens v. Weyl-Zuckerman & Co. (Cal. App.) 975
Stephenson, Asiatic Tunnel Min. & Mill. Co. v. (Colo.) 773
Stephenson, Camp Carson Mining & Power Co. v. (Or.) 351
Stevenson v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 156
Stewart v. Mann (Or.) 590
Stewart v. Mann (Or.) 1169
Stewart v. Newton Lumber & Investment Co. (Colo.) 255
Stewart v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (Wash.) 377
Sticelber & Mong, Haddock v. (Okl.) 1138
Stieglitz v. Settle (Cal.) 436
Stockton, People v. (Cal. App.) 717
Stoddard Lumber Co. v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. (Or.) 363
Story, State v. (Mont.) 748
Strahan, Citizens' State Bank of Ft. Gibson v. (Okl.) 189
Stramel v. Hawes (Kan.) 646
Strayer, Moore v. (Cal.) 530
Stuart v. Camp Carson Mining & Power Co. (Or.) 359
Studebaker Bros. Co. of California, Conlin v. (Cal.) 1009

Page
Sun Drilling Co., Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. (Okl.) 1133
Superior Court for Kitsap County, State v. (Wash.) 493
Superior Court, Los Angeles County, Brown v. (Cal.) 429
Superior Court of California in and for Sacramento County, Platnauer v. (Cal. App.) 41
Superior Court of Merced County, Olson v. (Cal.) 706
Superior & Pittsburg Copper Co. v. Tomich (Ariz.) 1101
Superior & Pittsburg Copper Co. v. Tomich (Ariz.) 1185
Swan v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 627
Sweeney v. Board of Trustees of Auburn School Dist. of City of Auburn, Placer County (Cal. App.) 42
Symes Investing Co. v. De Sollar (Colo.) 985

Talkington v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 906
Talkington v. Washington Water Power Co. (Wash.) 87
Tanner v. Beers (Utah) 465
Tanner v. Johnson (Utah) 466
Tatlow v. Bacon (Kan.) 835
Taugher v. Richmond Dredging Co. (Cal. App.) 31
Taylor v. Avila (Cal.) 533
Taylor v. Thisler (Kan.) 647
Taylor v. Wilder (Colo.) 766
Tharp v. Jackson (Or.) 585
Tharp v. Jackson (Or.) 1173
Thisler, Taylor v. (Kan.) 647
Thomas, Bunnell v. (Cal. App.) 1047
Thomas v. Petaluma (Cal. App.) 1021
Thompson Co. v. Foster (Kan.) 841
Tomich, Superior & Pittsburg Copper Co. v. (Ariz.) 1101
Tomich, Superior & Pittsburg Copper Co. v. (Ariz.) 1185
Tomkins v. Seattle Construction & Dry Dock Co. (Wash.) 384
Toney v. Toney (Or.) 221
Toston State Bank, Wilcox v. (Mont.) 292
Town of Gallup, Schwartz v. (N. M.) 345
Township of South Moran, Orrock v. (Wash.) 1096
Tracy v. Smith (Cal.) 535
Tracy v. Sperry (Colo.) 153
Trammell v. State (Okl. Cr. App.) 742
Trautman v. Kranz (Colo.) 764
Trimble v. Donahey (Wash.) 1051
Tuffs, State v. (Mont.) 1107
Tyng v. Constant-Loraine Inv. Co. (Utah) 509

Uncle Sam Oil Co., Patterson v. (Kan.) 661
Uncle Sam Oil Co., Patterson v. (Kan.) 872
Union Pac. R. Co., Board of Com'rs of Arapahoe County v. (Colo.) 244
Union Trust Co., Garland v. (Okl.) 197
Union Trust & Savings Bank, Allen v. (Cal.) 1010
United States Whaling Co. v. King County (Wash.) 70
Universal Tire Protector Co., Barnes v. (Okl.) 176
Upton, Curtis v. (Cal.) 935
Upton v. Easkoot (Cal.) 935

Van Horst v. Van Horst (Wash.) 886
Violette v. Queen Ins. Co. (Wash.) 65
Voorhees, Baker & Lockwood Mfg. Co. v. (Okl.) 125

Wakao, People v. (Cal. App.) 720
Wakefield, Fries & Co. v. Parkhurst (Or.) 578
Waldner, Segelbohm v. (Kan.) 649
Walla Walla Valley R. Co., Allen v. (Wash.) 99
Walla Walla Valley R. Co., Blystone v. (Wash.) 1049
Wallace v. Wallace (Kan.) 838
Wallingford v. McCray (Kan.) 813

Page
Walsh, Lapique v. (Cal. App.)............ 56
Walters v. West (Colo.)................ 153
Ward, City of Collinsville v. (Okl.).....1145
Ward v. Goetz (Cal. App.).............. 1022
Ward, State v. (Wash.)................. 794
Warden v. Choate (Cal. App.)............ 36
Warm Springs Co. v. Salt Lake City (Utah) 788
Warneke, Hamilton v. (Colo.)........... 970
Warren Co. v. Whitt (Ariz.)............1097
Washburn v. Wilen (Wash.).............. 403
Washington Water Power Co., Crane v. (Wash.) 892
Washington Water Power Co., Talkington v. (Wash.)........................ 87
Watkins v. State (Okl. Cr. App.)........ 621
Watrous, Noble v. (Or.)................ 349
Watts v. Houston (Okl.)................ 128
Wayland v. Seattle (Wash.)............. 113
Weary & Alford Co., Fred Medart Mfg. Co. v. (Cal. App.)........................ 35
Weaver v. Rohrer (Wash.)............... 971
Webb, Froage v. (Okl.)................. 150
Wehrle, Farmers' Life Ins. Co. v. (Colo.) 763
Wellington Lodge No. 133, I. O. O. F., Ross v. (Kan.)...................... 819
Wenman, Ex parte (Cal. App.)...........1024
West, Walters v. (Colo.)............... 153
Western Casualty & Guaranty Ins. Co., Hammond v. (Kan.).................. 291
Westling v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Kan.) 609
Wetzel v. Cale (Cal.).................. 692
Weyerhaeuser Land Co., In re (Or.)......1164
Weyl-Zuckerman & Co., Stephens v. (Cal. App.) 975
W. F. Jahn & Co. v. McClaine (Wash.).. 1060
Whaley, Cushing v. (Okl.).............. 135
Wheeler v. People (Colo.).............. 257
Wheeler, Inc. v. O'Brien Bros. (Nev.).... 339
Wheelwright v. Roman (Utah)............ 513
Whitaker, Bornchein v. (Cal.)........... 523
Whitaker v. Chestnut (Okl.)............ 160
White, German American Trust Co. v. (Colo.) 761
White v. Hayward (Cal. App.)........... 972
White v. Portland Gas & Coke Co. (Or.)..1005
Whitt, Warren Co. v. (Ariz.)............1097

Page
Wichita Natural Gas Co., Bell Bros. & McDonald v. (Kan.).................. 284
Wichita Natural Gas Co., Ely v. (Kan.).. 284
Widler v. C. Hoffman & Son Milling Co. (Kan.) 276
Wigan v. La Follett (Or.)............... 579
Wilbur, People v. (Cal. App.) 729
Wilcox v. Toston State Bank (Mont.).... 292
Wilder, Taylor v. (Colo.)............... 766
Wilen, Washburn v. (Wash.) 403
Willett v. Seattle (Wash.).............. 876
Williams v. Diesel (Okl.)............... 187
Williams v. State (Okl. Cr. App.)........ 155
Williamson, Williamson Inv. Co. v. (Wash.) 385
Williamson Inv. Co. v. Williamson (Wash.) 385
Willits' Estate, In re (Cal.)............ 537
Wilson v. Calkins (Cal.)................ 423
Wilson, First Nat. Bank v. (Kan.)...... 859
Wilson v. State (Okl. Cr. App.).......... 618
Winbigler, Horton v. (Cal.)............ 423
Winbigler v. Sherman (Cal.)............ 943
Winchell, Colburn v. (Wash.)...........1078
Winchester v. Winchester (Cal.)......... 965
Winner Shingle Co., Goldsmith v. (Wash.) 392
Wise's Estate, In re (Cal.)............. 531
Withycombe, Monroe v. (Or.)............ 227
Wolter v. Church (Idaho)............... 521
Wood, Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. (Colo.)...................... 263
Wood, State v. (Mont.) 592
Woods, Cotton v. (Okl.)................ 163
Woodward, German-American State Bank v. (Kan.)........................ 854
Woody, Conklin v. (Cal. App.)........... 973
Worden v. Worden (Wash.)............. 501
Worden v. Worden (Wash.)............. 508
Workman v. Royal Exch. Assur. (Wash.).. 488
Worthley v. Worthley (Cal. App.)........ 714
Wynne v. Harvey (Wash.)................ 67

Young, Steinberger v. (Cal.)............ 432
Yowell v. State (Okl. Cr. App.)......... 155

Zacharias, Milloglav v. (Cal. App.)...... 977
Zancannelli v. People (Colo.)............ 612
Zeiss, Otis v. (Cal.)..................... 524

REHEARINGS DENIED

[Cases in which rehearings have been denied, without the rendition of a written opinion, since the publication of the original opinions in previous volumes of this Reporter.]

KANSAS.

State ex rel. Dawson v. Kansas Flour Mills Co., 164 P. 1170.

NEVADA.

Board of Com'rs of Nye County v. Schmidt, 157 P. 1073.
Conway v. District Court of Eighth Judicial Dist. of Nevada, 164 P. 1009.
Earl v. Morrison, 154 P. 75.
Gault v. Grose, 155 P. 1098.
Gordon's Estate, In re, 161 P. 717.
McLeod v. District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Nye County, 157 P. 649.
State v. Tranmer, 154 P. 80.
Zelavin v. Tonopah Belmont Development Co., 149 P. 188.

OKLAHOMA.

Horn v. State, 164 P. 683.

†

THE
PACIFIC REPORTER
VOLUME 165

(175 Cal. 83)

In re SPAFFORD'S ESTATE.

SPAFFORD et al. v. CITIZENS' TRUST & SAVINGS BANK. (L. A. 5096.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 4, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 31, 1917.)

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS 🔑510(2)—ORDERS APPEALABLE—ORDERS IN PROBATE.

An order refusing to set aside and vacate an order settling the account of an administrator not being embraced by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 963, subd. 3, specifying the orders and judgments from which an appeal may be had in probate proceedings, is not appealable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. § 2236.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; James C. Rives, Judge.

Proceedings in the matter of the final settlement of the account of the Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank as administrator of Daniel E. Spafford, deceased. On motion of Gertrude E. Spafford and others to set aside and vacate an order settling the account. From an order denying the motion, the movants appeal. Appeal dismissed.

M. A. Fleming and Tobias R. Archer, both of Los Angeles, for appellants. Tanner, Odell & Taft, Hunsaker & Britt, and Le Roy M. Edwards, all of Los Angeles, for respondent.

VICTOR E. SHAW, Special Judge. This is an appeal from an order of court denying the motion of appellants, made September 5, 1916, under section 473 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside and vacate an order of court, made on April 19, 1916, settling the account of the administrator of the estate of Daniel E. Spafford, deceased.

The order involved is not embraced by the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 963 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which specifies the orders and judgments from which an appeal may be had in probate proceedings. Not only is there a want of statutory authority upon which to base the prosecution of an appeal from such an order, but this court has repeatedly refused to entertain appeals from such orders. See Lutz v. Christy, 67 Cal. 457, 8 Pac. 39; Estate of Calahan, 60 Cal. 233; Estate of Wiard, 83 Cal. 619, 24 Pac. 45; Estate of Cahill, 142 Cal. 628, 76 Pac. 383.

Appellants rely upon the opinion in the Estate of Bauquier, 88 Cal. 302, 26 Pac. 178, 532, wherein the court, in sustaining the right of appeal from an order denying a new trial to one named as executrix of a will and who had been adjudged incompetent, held that subdivision 2 of section 963 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which then authorized an appeal from an order granting or refusing a new trial, embraced all such orders whether made in probate proceedings or civil actions. There is nothing said in this opinion, however, which can be construed as authorizing an appeal from the order made in the case at bar. Indeed, the cases above referred to are cited with approval in so far as they determine that an appeal does not lie from an order of court vacating or refusing to vacate orders like the one which is the subject of this appeal.

The appeal is dismissed.

We concur: SLOSS, J.; SHAW, J.

(175 Cal. 84)

SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY v. RYAL et al. (L. A. 3811.)

(Supreme Court of California. April 30, 1917.)

1. BAIL 🔑64—APPEAL BOND—LIABILITY OF SURETIES.

In view of Pen. Code, §§ 1273, 1279, 1292, providing that the essential requirement of bond as far as sureties are concerned is that they will pay a specified amount to the state in event the principal should make default, an appeal bond, providing upon failure of the principal to perform its conditions "that he will pay to the state of California the sum of $2,000," did not bind the sureties to pay anything themselves.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Bail, Cent. Dig. § 278.]

2. BAIL 🔑71—ACTION ON APPEAL BOND—PLEADING—MISTAKE.

In a suit on a bond in a criminal appeal, where there were no allegations of inadvertence or mutual mistake in the preparation and giving of the bond, and it does not appear by whom it was prepared, but does appear that it was accepted and approved in the exact terms it contains, the plaintiff cannot contend that the word "he" was inadvertently used instead of the word "we," and that the real intent and purpose in giving the undertaking was to give a bond making the sureties primarily liable.

🔑For other cases see same topic and KEY-NUMBER in all Key-Numbered Digests and Indexes

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, San Luis Obispo County; E. P. Unangst, Judge.

Action by the County of San Luis Obispo against A. M. Ryal and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed.

Carpenter & Gibbons, of San Luis Obispo, for appellants. Chas. A. Palmer and Thomas Rhodes, both of San Luis Obispo, for respondent.

LORIGAN, J. This action was brought to recover from defendants the sum of $2,000, for which it is alleged they are liable upon an undertaking in that amount executed by them as sureties in a criminal action and which was declared forfeited by the superior court of San Luis Obispo county for breach of its conditions. These are all the allegations in the complaint respecting said undertaking save that it is annexed to the complaint as a part thereof.

The undertaking sued on is a bond on appeal. It is entitled People of the State, etc., Plaintiff, v. Teofil Klempke, Defendant, and recites and provides that:

> An order having been made by the superior court of San Luis Obispo county admitting said defendant to bail pending appeal in the sum of $2,000, "we, A. M. Ryal * * * and Henry C. Hansen, * * * hereby undertake * * * that Teofil Klempke will surrender himself in execution of the judgment upon its being affirmed or modified, or upon the appeal being dismissed, or * * * in case the judgment is reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial that he will appear in the court to which said cause may be remanded and submit himself to the orders and decrees thereof, or if he fails to perform either of these conditions, that he will pay to the state of California the sum of two thousand dollars." (The italics ours.)

Defendants signed the bond and justified upon it; it was thereupon approved and filed, and the defendant Klempke was released under it.

Defendants filed a general demurrer to the complaint which was overruled, and, having failed to answer within the time allowed, judgment for the penal amount of the bond was entered against them. They appeal from the judgment presenting thereunder the sole question of the validity of the order overruling their demurrer.

[1] This bond, set out in the complaint and sued on, is assumed to have been, and doubtless was, given as a bond on appeal under sections 1273, 1279, and 1292 of the Penal Code, which provide for such a bond and its form and conditions. One of the conditions provided by the Code to be inserted in such a bond, and in fact the essential requirement as far as sureties thereon is concerned, is that, in the event that the defendant in whose behalf the bond is given fails to do or perform any of the things provided therein (fully recited in the bond set out here), the sureties will pay to the state of California a sum particularly specified, being the amount in which the defendant is ordered admitted to bail; in fact, to pay a designated penal sum in the event of the delinquency of their principal. It is a familiar rule of law that sureties cannot be held beyond the terms of their contract of suretyship. They have a right to declare in their bond the terms and conditions upon which they shall be bound and to stand on the precise terms of that contract. This principle of law, when applied here, is decisive of this appeal. Though the Code has provided just what the essentials of a bond on a criminal appeal shall contain, as also what the sureties shall undertake in it, it is clear that in preparing the undertaking here in question there was not one word used in it whereby the defendants, as sureties therein, undertake or agree to do anything. The law requires, and the form of bond set out in the Code provides, that the sureties shall bind themselves in the event of the appealing defendant failing to do certain things they will pay to the state of California a specified penal sum. A valid bond would have provided that "we (the sureties) will pay" to the state in the event our principal fails to comply with any of the conditions the sum specified as a penalty. But in the bond sued on here the sureties did not agree to pay anything in default of their principal; they only promised their appealing principal—the defendant—would pay. There being then nothing in the bond which bound them to pay any penal sum in the event of the default of their principal, and standing upon the strict terms of their contract, they cannot be compelled to do it. This should require no further discussion.

[2] It is asserted by respondent that the bond is good in every particular, except that the word "he" was inadvertently used instead of the word "we," and that the real intent and purpose in giving the undertaking was to give a bond making the sureties primarily liable. But the trouble with this position is that there are no allegations of any inadvertence, lack of true intent, or mutual mistake on the part of any one in the preparation and giving of this bond. It does not appear by whom it was prepared or presented or approved. All that appears is that it was accepted and approved in just the terms it contains. There is no room for the application of any rules of construction. There is nothing uncertain or doubtful or indefinite about its terms. The language of the bond is clear. It is plain the sureties agreed that their principal would pay, but they did not agree thereunder to pay anything themselves. The Code provisions, it is true, contemplate that the sureties on a bail bond should so bind themselves and that the bond should so provide, but the trouble with the bond here is that it does not do so, and this court cannot make a different contract for the parties than they themselves have made.

The judgment appealed from is reversed.

We concur: MELVIN, J.; HENSHAW, J.

(175 Cal. 37)

KLEIN v. MARKARIAN. (S. F. 7322.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 2, 1917.)

1. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE 🔑30—CERTAINTY OF CONTRACT.

Contract providing for balance of price being paid "in quarterly yearly payments" is one the terms of which are not sufficiently certain to make the precise act to be done clearly ascertainable, and so under Civ. Code, § 3390, subd. 6, not specifically enforceable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 83–85.]

2. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE 🔑51 — JUST AND REASONABLE CONTRACT.

If it was the intention of the parties to an option contract, signed only by the vendor, requiring conveyance on payment of a quarter of the price, and not providing how the obligation to make the deferred payment is to be evidenced or secured, that he shall have no writing signed by any one else evidencing an obligation to pay the balance, nor any security therefor, beyond the inadequate security of a vendor's lien, specific performance thereof could be refused under Civ. Code, § 3391, subd. 2, as not "just and reasonable" as to the vendor defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 153, 154.]

3. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE 🔑28(1)—CERTAINTY OF CONTRACT.

Option contract for land not providing how obligation to pay balance of price is to be evidenced or secured, if contemplating the purchaser is to give some kind of secured evidence thereof, is not specifically enforceable, because of its uncertainty as to the manner thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 61, 65, 66.]

4. TENDER 🔑15(3)—OFFER OF PERFORMANCE —EFFECT—STATUTE.

Code Civ. Proc. § 2076, providing that objections not made at the time by a person to whom tender is made are deemed waived, is qualified by Civ. Code, § 1501, providing that failure to object does not waive a defect which could not, if specified, have been obviated by the person making the offer; and so where an option given by defendant to plaintiff is so indefinite as to time of payment and manner of evidencing and securing deferred payments, as not to be specifically enforceable, defendant is not bound by a tender of notes for a definite time secured by mortgage on the property, though he specified no objections thereto, as plaintiff could not have remedied the defects in the option, and to hold defendant bound by a tender outside its provisions would be to make a new contract for him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Tender, Cent. Dig. §§ 41, 42, 45.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Fresno County; W. M. Conley, Judge.

Action by L. W. Klein against M. Markarian. From an adverse judgment and order, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Everts & Ewing, of Fresno, for appellant. D. A. Cashin, Sutherland & Barbour, and L. L. Cory, all of Fresno, and Goodfellow, Eells, Moore & Orrick, of San Francisco, for respondent.

SLOSS, J. Appeal by plaintiff from a judgment and an order denying his motion for a new trial. The action was for specific enforcement of an alleged contract for the conveyance of real estate, or to recover damages for the breach.

The essential facts are stated in the court's findings, which may be summarized as follows: On November 16, 1910, Markarian, the defendant, executed a written option, whereby he offered to sell to L. W. Klein & Co. a tract of land in Fresno county "for the sum of $45,000, payable at the times and upon the terms and conditions following, to wit, $11,000 to be paid within ten days from and after said company shall have notified me of its acceptance of this offer. The balance to be paid as follows: In quarterly yearly payments, with interest at 6 per cent. annually. Upon the making of $11,000 payment of said purchase price, I will make, execute, and deliver to said company or to any person named or substituted by it my deed of conveyance of said property, with and containing the usual covenants." By the writing the defendant agreed, upon acceptance of his offer, to furnish an abstract showing good title. The offer or option was to remain in force until the 16th day of December, 1910, "and thereafter until the same shall be withdrawn by notice in writing." The option was never withdrawn. On February 17, 1911, said L. W. Klein & Co. gave to the defendant written notice that it accepted the offer, and demanded that defendant furnish an abstract and execute a conveyance to the plaintiff (named as substituted for L. W. Klein & Co.), offering, at the same time, to pay the defendant the sum of $11,000, and to execute and deliver to him plaintiff's four promissory notes for $8,500 each, payable, respectively, one, two, three, and four years after date, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, payable annually, together with a mortgage on the said land to secure the payment of such notes. The defendant refused to convey the land or to accept the money or the notes or the mortgage offered, notifying plaintiff at the same time that he would not perform said contract. On the 4th day of May, 1912—some fourteen months later—the plaintiff made a renewed tender and demand, and the defendant again refused to accept the tender or to make the conveyance. The court finds that the contract was just and equitable, and that the purchase price of $45,000 was the reasonable value of the land at the time the option was given, and at the time it was accepted, i. e., on February 17, 1911. Since the last-named date, the land has increased in value, and it was, on the 4th day of May, 1912 (the date of the second demand), worth $60,000. It is found, contrary to the averment of the complaint, that plaintiff was not damaged in the sum of $15,000. The conclusions of law drawn from these facts were that the contract was and is "incomplete, uncertain, and indefinite; that by reason thereof said contract cannot be specifically enforced"; and that plaintiff had suffered no damage. Accordingly, judgment was entered denying plaintiff either equitable or legal relief.

[1] It is an old and unquestioned rule of equity that, whatever right there may be to maintain an action at law for damages, a contract will not be specifically enforced unless it be complete and certain in its terms. Pom. Contr. § 159; Agard v. Valencia, 39 Cal. 292, 301; Co-op. Ass'n v. Phillips, 56 Cal. 539, 546; Reymond v. Laboudigue, 148 Cal. 691, 84 Pac. 189. The Civil Code (§ 3390, subd. 6) includes, among the obligations which cannot be specifically enforced, "an agreement, the terms of which are not sufficiently certain to make the precise act which is to be done clearly ascertainable." The written option or offer upon which plaintiff relies is both uncertain and incomplete in its statement of the terms of payment. After providing for a cash payment of $11,000, it declares that the balance of $34,000 is to be paid "in quarterly yearly payments, with interest at 6 per cent. annually." This is, at the best, a vague or ambiguous provision. The clause would seem, at first glance, to call for "quarterly" or "quarter yearly" payments; i. e., payments at intervals of three months. But, so understood, it fails to indicate the number of such payments, or the amount of each. The uncertainty in this respect is fatal to the claim for specific performance. Williams v. Stewart, 25 Minn. 516; Platt v. Stonington Sav. Bk., 46 Conn. 476; Potts v. Whitehead, 20 N. J. Eq. 55; Schmeling v. Kriesel, 45 Wis. 325. The appellant contends that the expression was designated to provide for annual payments, each covering a quarter of the balance. This, however, is a strained reading of the language. In any event, the words used are far from expressing the suggested purpose with anything like clearness or certainty.

[2, 3] Furthermore, the contract fails to provide how the obligation to make the deferred payments is to be evidenced or secured. The option was signed by the defendant alone. He was to convey his land upon payment of less than one-fourth of the purchase price. Thereupon he would have no writing signed by any one evidencing an obligation to pay the balance, nor any security for such balance beyond the inadequate security of a vendor's lien. If this was the intent of the parties, specific performance might have been properly refused upon the ground that the contract was not "just and reasonable" as to the defendant. Civ. Code, § 3391; Godwin v. Collins, 3 Del. Ch. 196; Diamond, etc., Co. v. Todd, 6 Del. Ch. 163, 14 Atl. 27. If, on the other hand, the parties contemplated that the purchaser should give some form of secured evidence of indebtedness to cover the deferred payments—and this the plaintiff's own conduct shows to have been his view—the agreement was entirely uncertain with respect to the manner in which the balance should be evidenced and secured. Marsh v. Lott, 8 Cal. App. 385, 97 Pac. 163.

[4] The appellant concedes, virtually, that the writing is, on its face, so uncertain as to preclude specific enforcement. He claims, however, that all uncertainty was removed by his act of tendering four notes, together with a mortgage to secure them. The defendant having then failed to specify any objections to the terms of the instruments tendered, he was, it is argued, precluded from objecting thereafter. Section 2076 of the Code of Civil Procedure, providing that objections not made by a person to whom a tender is made are deemed waived, is cited in support of this claim. This section is qualified by section 1501 of the Civil Code, which provides, in effect, that the failure to object does not waive a defect which could not, if specified, have been obviated by the person making the offer. Allen v. Chatfield, 172 Cal. 60, 69, 156 Pac. 47. No matter what the defendant might have said in response to the offer, the plaintiff could not, of course, have remedied the defects in the written option. The writing was so indefinite that the plaintiff could not, within its terms, lay the foundation for a decree of specific performance. To hold the defendant bound by a tender outside of the provisions of the option would be to make a new contract for him. His mere silence, when the unauthorized offer was made to him, did not constitute an assent to such new contract.

Under the findings, the court properly refused to award damages for the breach of the contract. There was no increase in the value of the land between the signing of the option and the defendant's breach, which occurred when he refused to comply with the first demand, that of February 17, 1911. So that, assuming that the case presents the element of bad faith which, under section 3306 of the Civil Code, is essential to a recovery of the difference between the contract price and the value at the time of the breach, the findings (amply supported by the evidence) show that there was no such difference. There is no claim that plaintiff suffered any other item of damage recoverable under section 3306.

The judgment and the order denying a new trial are affirmed.

We concur: SHAW, J.; LAWLOR, J.

(175 Cal. 21)

DROWN v. NEW AMSTERDAM CASUALTY CO. et al. (S. F. 7308.)

(Supreme Court of California. April 30, 1917.)

1. Insurance 🔑448—Right to Proceeds—Beneficiary Killing Insured.

Public policy prevents a beneficiary who unlawfully kills the insured from recovering on the insurance policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1150.]

2. Criminal Law 🔑308—Presumption—Innocence.

Under the direct provisions of Pen. Code, § 1096, defendant in a criminal trial is presumably innocent until his guilt is proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 731.]

3. Evidence 🔑60 — Presumptions — Innocence of Crime.

In a civil action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1826, a party is presumed innocent of crime until contrary is proven to a moral certainty.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 81.]

4. Insurance 🔑635—Pleading 🔑8(3) — Sufficiency of Complaint—Beneficiary Killing Insured.

In an action on an insurance policy, allegations that the beneficiary discharged a loaded pistol at insured and killed him, and therefore could not recover on the policy, do not preclude recovery, since the killing may not have been premeditated or unlawful, and the last allegation is merely the pleader's conclusion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1599–1602.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; Geo. A. Sturtevant, Judge.

Action by Willard N. Drown, administrator of the estate of Archer Cullen Drown, deceased, against the New Amsterdam Casualty Company and Amelia C. Drown. From a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

J. F. Leicester and Drown, Leicester & Drown, all of San Francisco, for appellant. Lilienthal, McKinstry & Raymond, of San Francisco, for respondents.

SHAW, J. The plaintiff has appealed from the judgment upon the judgment roll alone. The court below having sustained the demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, the sole question presented is whether the complaint states a cause of action.

The action is by the administrator of the estate of Archer Cullen Drown to recover the proceeds of a policy issued by the defendant company insuring the said Archer Cullen Drown against death by accidental means. The complaint alleges that on June 22, 1912, the defendant issued the policy sued on whereby the company agreed "to pay, * * * in the event of the accidental death of said Archer Cullen Drown, * * * to the beneficiary designated in said policy, if surviving, otherwise to the executors or administrators of said Archer Cullen Drown," the proceeds of the policy; that Amelia C. Drown, wife of the insured, was and is named therein as the beneficiary; that while the policy was in full force and effect, on the 24th day of October, 1913, the said Archer Cullen Drown met with death by accidental means in the following manner: That while the said Archer Cullen Drown was "reclining and reposing in his bed, and whilst he was wholly unarmed, and was resting and endeavoring to or was sleeping, his said wife Amelia C. Drown took a loaded pistol in her hand and discharged the same at the said Archer Cullen Drown, and shot and killed her said husband, Archer Cullen Drown"; that the injuries resulting therefrom were not intentionally or otherwise self-inflicted, and that the injuries and resulting death were without design, unforeseen, and unexpected on the part of the said Archer Cullen Drown; that claim of loss under said policy was duly presented to the defendant company; that said Amelia C. Drown, the beneficiary designated in the policy, caused the accidental death of said Archer Cullen Drown, as above related, and that "because such death was caused by her act, as aforesaid, she is not herself entitled to take any advantage or benefit under said policy. * * * but that the liability of the said defendant New Amsterdam Casualty Company upon and under said policy continues in full force and effect, and any and all moneys upon or under said policy belong to and form part of the estate of said Archer Cullen Drown, deceased"; that said Amelia C. Drown claims an interest adverse to plaintiff in the proceeds of said policy as the designated beneficiary and is a necessary party defendant; that said Amelia C. Drown after the death of the said Archer Cullen Drown did assign and transfer to the plaintiff, as such administrator, all her right and interest under the said policy; that demand was duly made by plaintiff upon the defendant company for the payment of the proceeds of the said policy, but that the said defendant company has refused to make such payment to plaintiff or to the said Amelia C. Drown, or to any other person on account of or in satisfaction of the amount due under said policy.

[1] On the part of the appellant it is conceded that where one insures his own life for the benefit of another person, and the beneficiary murders or unlawfully kills the person insured, public policy will not allow such beneficiary to recover upon the policy. It is contended, however, that in such a case if the terms and conditions of the policy have been fully performed by the person insured, the law will not permit the policy to lapse in favor of the insurer, but will raise a resulting trust in favor of the estate of the insured person and allow a recovery upon the policy by his personal representatives. Both parties have presented their views on this proposition with much force and ability.

[2-4] We cannot find in the allegations of the complaint any statement of the facts necessary to raise the question. One of the strongest disputable presumptions known to the law is the presumption "that a person is innocent of crime." Code Civ. Proc. § 1963, subd. 1. In a criminal action the defendant is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Pen. Code, § 1096. In a civil action proof to a moral certainty, which may fall short of proof beyond reasonable doubt, is sufficient. Code Civ. Proc. § 1826. It is an invariable rule that if the fact that another person has committed a felony is essential to a cause of action or defense, the person asserting such cause of action or defense must, in order to maintain it, show that such other person has committed such felony. In his pleading of the cause of action or defense he cannot rely on a statement of the mere conclusion that the other person did commit the offense, or that he was guilty thereof, but must state every fact which it would be necessary to prove against such person to establish the crime and his guilt thereof in a criminal prosecution therefor, except, perhaps, the venue. If the facts essential to the crime are not alleged there can be no presumption that such crime has been committed and the person concerned must be presumed to be innocent thereof.

If we apply these principles to the present case it will clearly appear that there is no foundation in the complaint for the argument that Amelia C. Drown was guilty of the murder or of the unlawful killing of Archer Cullen Drown. Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought. Pen. Code, § 187. Such malice may be either express or implied. Pen. Code, § 188. Manslaughter is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice, either voluntarily, "upon a sudden quarrel or heat of passion," or involuntarily, "in the commission of an unlawful act, not amounting to a felony or in the commission of a lawful act which may produce death, in an unlawful manner, or without due caution or circumspection." Pen. Code, § 192. There are no allegations in the complaint to the effect that the killing of Archer Cullen Drown was done with that malice, either express or implied, which is necessary to make the act a murder. In order to constitute voluntary manslaughter there must be an intent to kill, though it is not that deliberate and malicious intent which is an essential element in the crime of murder. People v. Freel, 48 Cal. 437. There is no allegation that the killing, though without malice, was done upon the sudden quarrel or heat of passion which is necessary to reduce an unlawful and intentional killing to manslaughter. It is not averred, either directly or indirectly, that the killing was done in the commission of an unlawful act, or in the commission of a lawful act in an unlawful manner, or without due caution or circumspection. There is, therefore, no basis for the claim that the complaint shows an involuntary manslaughter. It is not alleged that it was unlawful or that it was intentional. The pleader seems to have been careful to avoid making either of these allegations. The complaint alleges that the death was accidental, that it was "effected solely and exclusively by accidental means," that "said accidental death" resulted from the act of said Amelia C. Drown. It described the act which caused his death as follows: "Amelia C. Drown took a loaded pistol in her hand and discharged the same at the said Archer Cullen Drown, and shot and killed" him. All this might have occurred without any intention on her part either to shoot him or kill him. A loaded pistol may be discharged at a person by another without any intent whatever to kill. In the connection in which "at" is used in the sentence it means merely that she shot the pistol in the direction of said Archer Cullen Drown. It carries no necessary implication of intent, and no intent is alleged in the complaint in any other manner. If, after taking the pistol in her hand, she accidentally discharged it without any intention whatever of doing so, and the pistol was then pointed in the direction of the decedent, it could truthfully be said that she had shot the pistol at him. The language is as consistent with an unintentional and accidental discharge as with a discharge with the intent to shoot the decedent. It does not expressly declare that it was accidental, although that fact might be implied from the language describing it as "the accidental death" and as a death caused by "accidental means." In view of the lack of any showing in the complaint that the killing was felonious, the case cannot be considered upon the theory that she is estopped by her conduct and on grounds of public policy from claiming the benefits of the policy of insurance. Even an intentional killing, if done in her lawful self-defense, would not prevent her from claiming the benefits of the policy. The facts alleged, however, exclude the theory of self-defense. There is an allegation that because of the facts relating to the cause of his death, as above stated, Amelia C. Drown is not entitled to enforce the policy or take the benefit thereof. But this is a conclusion of law, and it in no wise alters or enlarges the legal effect of the facts. If the plaintiff seeks to recover on behalf of the estate on the ground that the beneficiary cannot claim the benefits of the policy, he must state the facts upon which the principles of public policy denying her right must rest. Upon this complaint such statement would be unnecessary because upon the face of the complaint the beneficiary is entitled to recover upon the policy, it being alleged that the proper proof of death and claim of loss was made, and the allegation that she has assigned her interest to plaintiff for the benefit of the estate is sufficient to entitle him to maintain the action. If the defendant desires to make a defense on the ground stated, an answer will be necessary setting up the facts upon which it is claimed the beneficiary of the policy is debarred from recovery thereon. Upon the facts stated in the complaint we can see no ground for holding that it does not state a cause of action in favor of the plaintiff. It would be manifestly improper for this court to render a decision upon an assumed fact of so grave a character, unless such fact is shown by the record before it. It may be remarked that it is stated in the briefs that she has been acquitted of criminal homicide.

The judgment is reversed.

We concur: SLOSS, J.; LAWLOR, J.

(175 Cal. 21)

STATE BANK OF LANSING v. McLAURY et al.

SAME v. McLAURY.

(Sac. 2333, 2334.)

(Supreme Court of California. April 30, 1917.)

1. Judgment 🔑894 — Satisfaction — Order to Enter Satisfaction—When Proper.

Where judgment debtor moved for order to satisfy judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 675, authorizing such order whenever a judgment is satisfied in fact otherwise than upon an execution, there was no error in denying the motion, where the only evidence as to satisfaction was affidavits in direct conflict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1706–1709, 1712.]

2. Judgment 🔑894 — Satisfaction — Order to Enter Satisfaction—When Proper.

Though, in proceeding to have a judgment satisfied of record under Code Civ. Proc. § 675, it may be that the court should not decide the issue of satisfaction on affidavits alone, a movant, who fails to ask independent trial by jury or a reference of such issue, cannot complain that the court should not have decided such issue on affidavit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1706–1709, 1712.]

3. Appeal and Error 🔑523(2)—Scope of Review — Record — Requisites and Sufficiency.

The court cannot, on appeal from granting or denial of a motion to satisfy judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 675, consider affidavits or other evidence used in the court below, unless they are authenticated by incorporation into a bill of exceptions, within court rule 29 (119 Pac. xiv).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2374.]

Department 1. Appeals from Superior Court, Tulare County; W. B. Wallace, Judge.

Actions by the State Bank of Lansing against C. S. McLaury and Harry Thompson and against C. S. McLaury. On defendants' motions for orders satisfying the judgment. From orders denying the motions, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Everts & Ewing, of Fresno, for appellants. Bradley & Bradley, of Visalia, for respondent.

SLOSS, J. Appeals in two cases are here presented. The plaintiff is the same in both actions. C. S. McLaury and Harry Thompson are defendants in the one action, and McLaury is the sole defendant in the other. Except for this circumstance, and a difference in the amounts involved in the two cases, the facts are identical, and the two appeals have been submitted upon a single set of briefs. A brief statement of the facts in No. 2334 will illustrate the legal questions common to the two appeals.

The plaintiff brought an action against McLaury on a promissory note, and recovered judgment by default. More than a year after the entry of the judgment, McLaury gave notice that he would move the court for an order satisfying the judgment and recalling an execution issued thereon. The notice of motion was accompanied by the affidavit of McLaury in which he stated, in effect, that since the entry of the judgment, the plaintiff had come into the possession of money, sufficient in amount to cancel the indebtedness represented by the judgment. Said money was declared to be the proceeds of securities belonging to McLaury, and held by the plaintiff under an agreement that money collected thereon should be applied upon said indebtedness. The plaintiff filed an affidavit denying the holding of any securities for McLaury, or the collection of any money applicable to McLaury's debt. The court made an order denying the motion to satisfy the judgment and recall the execution. The appeal is from this order.

[1] The motion was made under section 675 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which authorizes the court to order entry of satisfaction "whenever a judgment is satisfied in fact, otherwise than upon an execution." Buckeye R. Co. v. Kelly, 163 Cal. 8, 124 Pac. 536, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 840. The order is to be made only where the judgment has in fact been satisfied. In the case before us, the only evidence touching this vital question consists of affidavits which are in direct conflict. It is difficult to see, therefore, how it can be contended that the court erred in denying to the defendant the relief for which he asked.

[2] The appellant's argument is that, where the fact of satisfaction by payment is in controversy, the court should not, upon a motion under section 675, decide this issue upon affidavits alone. The payment being denied, the court, it is claimed, should either remit the defendant to an independent action, or should provide for determination of the disputed fact by means of a reference or a submission to a jury. 23 Cyc. 1498. There is much force in the suggestion that an issue of this kind could better be determined otherwise than by the summary procedure of a motion made and resisted upon affidavits. Woodford v. Reynolds, 36 Minn. 155, 30 N. W. 757; Atkinson v. Harrison, 153 Pa. 472, 26 Atl. 294. It may well be that, where the fact of payment is disputed, a reference would be proper. Dwight v. St. John, 25 N. Y. 203. But the appellant is not, on the record before us, in a position to question the action of the court below. There is nothing to indicate that he requested a reference, or the submission of the issue of fact to a jury. He undertook, apparently, to present his motion for decision on affidavits, and, having so presented it, he cannot now insist that the court below should, of its own motion, have directed a procedure different from that which he himself initiated and invited.

[3] We have discussed the case on the assumption that the record properly shows that the motion was presented to the court upon the two affidavits to which we have referred. But, in fact, the record does not show this. The transcript consists merely of copies of the complaint, the judgment, defendant's notice of motion, a written motion, defendant's affidavit, a counter affidavit, the order denying the motion, and the notice of appeal. These papers are certified by the clerk as correct copies of the originals on file. They are not incorporated in any bill of exceptions. Under the settled rule of this court, we cannot, on an appeal from the granting or denial of a motion like the one here involved, consider affidavits or other evidence used in the court below, unless such affidavits or evidence be authenticated by incorporation into a bill of exceptions. Rule 29 of this court (119 Pac. xiv) provides for this method of authentication where no other mode is authorized by law. There is no law authorizing another mode in such cases as this, unless, perhaps, the evidence taken can be brought up in a transcript prepared under the alternative method provided by sections 953a, 953b, and 953c of the Code of Civil Procedure. There is no pretense of any attempt to procure a record under these sections. Not only, therefore, are we precluded from considering the affidavits printed in the transcript, but we must assume, in support of the order, that any additional evidence which would support it was presented to the court below. Herrlich v. McDonald, 80 Cal. 472, 22 Pac. 299; Von Glahn v. Brennan, 81 Cal. 261, 22 Pac. 596; Shain v. Eikerenkotter, 88 Cal. 13, 25 Pac. 966; Melde v. Reynolds, 120 Cal. 234, 52 Pac. 491; Ramsbottom v. Fitzgerald, 128 Cal. 75, 60 Pac. 522; Skinner v. Horn, 144 Cal. 278, 77 Pac. 904; Estate of Dean, 149 Cal. 487, 87 Pac. 13. It is incumbent upon the appellant to show error, and this he has not done, where he fails to present to the appellate court the evidence on which the trial court acted. In support of the order, we would be entitled to assume, if that were necessary, that the court below did order a reference or submit the issue to a jury, as the appellant urges it should have done, and that the reference or the jury trial resulted in favor of the respondent's contention.

We are not called upon to decide here whether the denial of defendant's motion would operate as a bar to an independent action in equity to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment. It is enough, for present purposes, to say that error in the denial of the motion is not shown.

In each of the above-entitled cases, the order appealed from is affirmed.

We concur: SHAW, J.; LAWLOR, J.

(175 Cal. 59)

BANK OF COMMERCE & TRUST CO. v. KENNEY. (L. A. 3969.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 4, 1917.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑901—REVIEW—PRESUMPTIONS.

Every presumption is in favor of the regularity of the proceedings in a court of general jurisdiction upon which a judgment is based, and it devolves upon the appellant to affirmatively show the error upon which he relies for reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1771, 3670.]

2. COURTS 🔑35—JURISDICTION—PRESUMPTIONS.

In a suit to quiet title to land acquired by defendant in a partition suit, and purchased by plaintiff at sheriff's sale, where the return of summons and service thereof in that suit upon this defendant is not brought up in the record, the court in examining the recitals in the judgment roll in the partition suit will not examine for proof of personal service upon this defendant; but, since the presumption is that the court would not have acted illegally, will examine only for showing in the record of want of such personal service.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 140, 141, 145, 146.]

3. COURTS 🔑35—JURISDICTION—PRESUMPTION.

In a suit to quiet title to land acquired by defendant in a partition suit and purchased by plaintiff at sheriff's sale, where the recital in the partition suit is that legal process "was duly served upon all persons who had or claimed to have any interest in said property who are in this state," and that as to others service by publication was had, as this defendant, who had an interest in the property, will be presumed to have been within the state, in the absence of a contrary showing, and as he is not shown to be within the excepted class upon whom service was had by publication, the appellate court must accept as true that he was "duly served," which under the circumstances shown could not be other than "personally served," since any condition of facts consistent with the validity of the judgment will be presumed to have existed, rather than one which will defeat the judgment, and hence the judgment is binding upon defendant, although designating him as "Kinney" instead of "Kenney."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 140, 141, 145, 146.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, San Diego County; T. L. Lewis, Judge.

Suit to quiet title by the Bank of Commerce & Trust Company against Patrick Kenney. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

E. H. Lamme and E. I. Kendall, both of San Diego, for appellant. Sam Ferry Smith, of San Diego, for respondent.

VICTOR E. SHAW, Judge pro tem. From a judgment rendered in favor of plaintiff quieting its title to certain real property described in the complaint as lots 17 to 20, both inclusive, in block 39 of Middletown addition, according to partition map thereof on file in the county clerk's office of San Diego county, in the case of Roark et al. v. Forward et al., and an order denying his motion for a new trial, defendant appeals.

It appears in the statement on the motion for a new trial that Middleton addition is a subdivision of pueblo lot 1121 of the public lands of the city of San Diego; that after the title of the said pueblo lot had vested in a number of persons as tenants in common, among whom was Patrick Kenney, the defendant, an action was instituted wherein all owners thereof were made parties, the purpose of which suit was to obtain a decree partitioning said pueblo lot 1121. A summons was issued by the clerk in form as directed by section 756 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which, as shown by the judgment roll in the partition suit, the court found to have been served as follows:

> "That legal process of this court was duly served upon all the parties and all the tenants in common and all persons having any interest in or lien of record by mortgage, judgment or otherwise upon said tract of land or any particular portion thereof and all persons who had or claimed to have any interest in said property who were in this state, and that as to all persons or parties having any share or interest who were unknown or who resided out of this state or who had departed from this state or could not, after due diligence, be found within this state or conceal themselves to avoid the services of summons, or who was a foreign corporation, having no managing or business agent, cashier or secretary within this state, and the facts were made to appear by affidavit to the satisfaction of the court, and it appearing by such affidavit and the verified complaint on file that a cause of action existed against said defendants in respect to whom the service was made and that they were each necessary and proper parties to the action, and the said court made an order that a service be made by publication of the summons and said summons was duly served upon all and each of said parties by publication as provided by law and directed by said order."

At the trial a judgment was rendered wherein it was, among other things, decreed that Patrick Kinney was the owner of and entitled to have set apart to him as such owner all of block 39, as designated upon the partition map, subject, however, to the payment of $140.50 costs assessed against said lot. Default being made in payment of said costs, block 39 was, by the sheriff, sold and conveyed to one H. C. Gordon, from whom, by mesne conveyances, the plaintiff acquired title to the lots in question.

The proposition presented is, conceding defendant's ownership of an individual interest in the pueblo lot represented by block 39, was he divested of title thereto by the sheriff's sale to Gordon, to whose interest plaintiff succeeded? That upon this record he was so divested of title admits of no doubt, unless the proceedings in the partition suit are void as to him by reason of designating Patrick Kinney as the owner of such interest when, in fact, the true name of such owner was Patrick Kenney. Appellant concedes that had there been personal service upon the defendant, then the use of the name Kinney for Kenney might be deemed a mere misnomer, or the doctrine of idem sonans be applied, and hence, in either view of the case, no cause for complaint exist; but he contends that such rule has no application to cases where service is obtained by publication, in support of which contention he cites a number of authorities from other jurisdictions. In our view of the case, it is unnecessary to determine this proposition.

[1, 2] Every presumption is in favor of the regularity of the proceedings in a court of general jurisdiction upon which a judgment is based, and it devolves upon the appellant to affirmatively show the error upon which he relies for reversal. The return of the summons and service thereof is not brought up in the record. We must therefore look to the recitals in the judgment roll, not necessarily for proof of personal service upon the defendant, without which appellant insists a binding decree as to defendant could not have been made, but since the presumption is that the court would not have acted thus illegally, for a showing in the record of want of such personal service.

[3] Now the recital is "that legal process * * * was duly served upon all * * * persons who had or claimed to have any interest in said property who were in this state," and that, as to others, service by publication was had. Conceding, as claimed by the appellant, that under the circumstances shown service upon the defendant by publication would not warrant the rendition of the judgment against him, nevertheless, since he admittedly had an interest in the property, and since the contrary is not made to appear, the presumption is that he was within the state, and being in the state and not shown to be within the excepted class upon whom service was had by publication, we must accept as true the recital that he was "duly served," which under the circumstances shown could not be other than "personally served." "Any condition of facts consistent with the validity of the judgment will be presumed to have existed, rather than one which will defeat the judgment." In re Eichhoff, 101 Cal. 600, 36 Pac. 11; Canadian, etc., Co. v. Clarita, etc., Co., 140 Cal. 672, 74 Pac. 301. Hence, conceding the recitals in the judgment roll to be applicable to substituted service, in which case, as claimed by appellant (though not decided), the judgment is invalid, they are likewise equally applicable to and consistent with personal service, so presumed to have been made, hence the judgment is binding upon defendant.

It is significant that, while defendant disclaims being a party to the partition suit, and asserts that he was not served with process therein, he nevertheless claims ownership, not of an undivided interest in the said pueblo lot, but title to the segregated portion thereof designated as block 39 according to the partition map prepared and filed in the case of Roark et al. v. Forward et al., as set apart to Patrick Kinney, which claim, in the absence of any conveyances thereto shown, finds support in the sole theory that he, as owner of an interest therein and as a party to said action sued as Patrick Kinney, derived his title to such segregated parcel of land through and by virtue of the partition proceedings. As to such interest as he had in the property, he, as Mr. Patrick Kinney, affirms the proceeding in so far as it sets aside and confirms to him that portion of the pueblo lot designated on the map as block 39 which, except for the proceeding, would have no location or habitat. But as to the other matters connected with the proceeding, which may prove burdensome, he, as Patrick Kenney, disaffirms and repudiates the same.

The judgment is affirmed.

We concur: SLOSS, J.; SHAW, J.

(175 Cal. 26)

In re KEITH'S ESTATE. (S. F. 7965.)

(Supreme Court of California. April 30, 1917.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑757(1) — REVIEW — RECORD IN BRIEFS.
Under Code Civ. Proc. § 953c, providing that the parties must print in their briefs such portions of the record, brought up in typewritten form, as they desire to call to the attention of the court, it is not required to consider any more thereof than is incorporated in the briefs.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3092.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑757(3) — BRIEFS — SETTING OUT EVIDENCE.
To prevent affirmance on the ground that any alleged error in rulings on evidence does not appear to have been prejudicial, enough of the evidence brought up in typewritten form should, under Code Civ. Proc. § 953c, be given in the briefs to enable the court to determine whether the rulings had any bearing on the result.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3092.]

3. DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION 🔑71(6) — CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATE—CHILDREN OF TESTATOR—EVIDENCE.
Evidence held to show that one claiming against a will, making no provision for her, on the ground that she was testator's only child, was not his daughter.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Descent and Distribution, Cent. Dig. § 235.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; J. V. Coffey, Judge.

In the matter of the estate of John M. Keith, deceased, Louise K. Thomson petitioned for distribution to her, and appeals from a judgment of dismissal. Affirmed.

See, also, 159 Pac. 705.

E. B. Mering, of San Francisco, for appellant. John L. McNab, Gavin McNab and Nat Schmulowitz, all of San Francisco, for respondents.

SLOSS, J. John M. Keith died on the 27th day of April, 1914, leaving a large estate. On May 28, 1914, a paper, dated March 3, 1913, was admitted to probate in the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco as the holographic will of said decedent, and letters testamentary were issued to J. J. Mack named therein as executor. The order admitting the will to probate has long since become final. In June, 1915, the executor filed his first annual account, and soon thereafter various beneficiaries named in the will filed applications for partial distribution. While matters were in this condition, Dr. Sarah J. Tedford presented a paper, dated April 20, 1914, as the last will of John M. Keith, and filed a petition for its admission to probate. The alleged will purported to give the entire estate to Louise Keith Thomson, described as Keith's "only daughter," and named Dr. Tedford "truste to carry out the exicutive work of probating" the will.

The petition for probate was filed on September 3, 1915. The petitioner having been advised that the time for questioning the probate of the will of March 3, 1913, had long gone by, she dismissed her petition on September 15, 1915. On the last-named day, Louise K. Thomson, the appellant herein, filed a petition asking that the entire estate be distributed to her. In this petition she alleged that Keith had been married twice; that she, the petitioner, was the sole issue of the first marriage, and that there was no issue of the second; and that she, as sole heir, was entitled to receive the entire estate because of the omission of the decedent to make any provision for her in his will. She subsequently filed a petition for partial distribution, based upon similar allegations, and the proceedings here under review were had under this petition and the oppositions thereto. The court found that Keith was married only once, and that there was no issue of this marriage; that Louise K. Thomson was not a child of John M. Keith, and was not entitled to inherit any part of his estate. Judgment was entered denying and dismissing her petition for partial distribution. From this judgment she appeals. The record was brought up in typewritten form under the provisions of sections 953a, 953b, and 953c of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[1, 2] The truth of appellant's claim that she was the daughter of John M. Keith presented the one vital issue of fact in the case. She has not included in her brief, or in a supplement thereto, any part of the record, or of the evidence upon which the lower court acted in determining the fact of her alleged relationship to the decedent against her. She contents herself with referring to a few rulings in the admission and rejection of evidence, and with the claim, unsupported in most instances by argument or citation of authority, that these rulings were erroneous. Under the provisions of section 953c, the court is not required to consider any more of the record than the parties have seen fit to incorporate in their briefs. O'Rourke v. Skellenger, 169 Cal. 270, 146 Pac. 633. The bald references by appellant to alleged errors in the admission or rejection of evidence do not enable us to determine whether the rulings complained of, if erroneous, had any bearing upon the result of the trial. Abstract error is not a ground for reversal, nor is error which does not appear to have been prejudicial. The judgment appealed from might well be affirmed on this ground alone.

[3] We have, however, made a sufficient study of the evidence (the essential parts of which are carefully collated by the respondents in their brief), to convince us that the same result must be reached upon a review of the entire record. The appellant's claim rested, in the main, upon the testimony of Dr. Tedford. Stated in barest outline, Dr. Tedford's story was that she met John M. Keith in San Francisco in the year 1862. He told her that he was a native of England or Scotland. In September, 1864, Keith was married to Nina Kirby. On November 7, 1865, the appellant, Louise Keith, now Louise Keith Thomson, the issue of this marriage, was born. Her mother, Nina Kirby Keith, died within a few hours after giving birth to the child. In January, 1867, Keith was married to Adelaide M. Sheldon. The first marriage, the birth of the child, the death of the mother, and the second marriage all took place at Chicago, and Mrs. Tedford was present on each of these occasions. In 1886, at San Francisco, Keith obtained a divorce from his second wife. In 1887, Keith and his daughter Louise made a journey to Alaska, and both were thought to have been lost in a shipwreck. Dr. Tedford learned in 1898 that the daughter had survived the wreck, but neither she nor the appellant saw or heard anything of Keith until April 20, 1914, just one week before Keith's death, when they met him walking on the street in San Francisco. A mutual recognition ensued. The three went into a store, where Keith wrote his will in favor of the petitioner. This document, according to Mrs. Tedford's story, is the paper which she offered for probate many months after Keith's death. In addition to the testimony of Dr. Tedford, that of some other witnesses was offered in support of the claim that the appellant was Keith's daughter. One of these witnesses knew Keith as manager of a railroad eating house at North Platte, Neb., during the period from 1869 to 1879, Keith then having a little girl with him. Although this witness had not seen the girl for nearly 40 years, he was able, at the trial, to identify her with the petitioner. Another witness testified that he had seen the petitioner with Keith at Bakersfield in the years from 1884 to 1887. This, with some further testimony of minor corroborative value, was the evidence introduced to establish the appellant's case. We need not stop to point out its inherent weakness. A more detailed statement would disclose abundant ground for saying that the testimony of Mrs. Tedford, which formed the main reliance of the appellant, was on its face improbable and unworthy of belief. It is not, however, necessary to go so far. The respondents introduced evidence, unimpeached and convincing, making it entirely clear, either that the appellant was not the daughter of any man named Keith, or that, if her father did bear that name, he was not the Keith whose estate is here involved.

This evidence, consisting of the testimony of reputable witnesses, supported by an abundance of documentary proof, showed that John M. Keith was a native of the state of Georgia; that he came to California "in the '50's," locating in Gilroy somewhere about 1860. He was shown to have been at Gilroy, or in the San Joaquin valley, at the various times when Mrs. Tedford claimed to have seen him in Chicago. He lived in Gilroy until 1874, when he was married to Lucy Goodman. From the date of his marriage to her, he lived with his said wife until her death in 1907. Shortly after the marriage, Keith moved to Kern county, and he lived near or in Bakersfield until 1901, when he removed to San Francisco. It is abundantly shown that during the entire period of his marriage he had no child, and no child was living with him. During the years when, according to appellant's claim, he was living in North Platte, Neb., he was, beyond question, residing continuously in this state.

The appellant's case is so obviously without merit that a decision against her was inevitable. The respondents are well within the bounds of moderation when they characterize the claim as one "devoid of truth and lacking even plausibility." Under these circumstances, it would be idle to discuss, or even to enumerate, the assignments of error which are presented. If the rulings complained of had not been made, it would still be perfectly apparent that the appellant's pretensions have no substantial foundation. At no stage of the law would an appellate court, on such a record as the one before us, have felt justified in reversing this manifestly just judgment, even though some technical error may have been committed during the trial. Much less can the rulings be given any weight since the adoption of section 4½ of article 6 of the Constitution. Our examination of the record convinces us that, if there were errors in the proceedings below, they did not result in a miscarriage of justice. On the contrary, it would be a glaring miscarriage of justice to require a new trial in a case like this.

The claim of the petitioner should never have been presented to any court. When it had been rejected by the learned judge of the trial court, after a patient hearing of all the evidence there was no justification or legitimate reason for an appeal. The case is an eminently proper one for the imposition of a penalty for the protracting of baseless litigation.

The judgment is affirmed, and it is adjudged that the respondents recover from the appellant the sum of $100 as damages for the taking of a frivolous appeal.

We concur: SHAW, J.; LAWLOR, J.

(175 Cal. 72)

DYNES v. BEKINS VAN & STORAGE CO.

(L. A. 3768.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 7, 1917.)

1. Appeal and Error 🔑856(5)—New Trial—Grounds for Granting.

An order granting new trial will be affirmed, if it can be justified upon any of the statutory grounds urged by the mover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3408, 3410, 3423, 3424.]

2. Appeal and Error 🔑1015(2) — New Trial—Grounds for Granting.

An order granting a new trial will not be disturbed where the evidence is decidedly and substantially conflicting.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3860–3866.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; George E. Church, Judge.

Action by Paul Dynes against the Bekins Van & Storage Company. From an order granting defendant a new trial, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Earle & McLaughlin and Williams, Goudge & Chandler, all of Los Angeles, for appellant. Collier & Clark and Jones & Evans, all of Los Angeles, for respondent.

SHAW, J. The plaintiff appeals from an order granting the motion of the defendant for a new trial.

The action was to recover the sum of $3,000 as damages caused by the destruction of the plaintiff's goods by fire while they were stored in a warehouse belonging to the defendant. It is alleged that the plaintiff shipped the goods to the defendant and was informed by defendant that they had been received and were stored in a fireproof warehouse in Los Angeles, and that defendant agreed to store the same in said fireproof warehouse until wanted by the plaintiff; that afterwards plaintiff demanded of the defendant the possession of said goods, but defendant neglected and refused to return the same and converted the same to its own use. In a second count plaintiff alleges that while the property was in the possession of the defendant for storage defendant informed plaintiff that the goods were perfectly safe and stored in a fireproof warehouse in Los Angeles, and that plaintiff relied upon said representations and agreed to allow the goods to remain in the possession of the defendant and paid the storage charges therefor; that the said warehouse was not fireproof; that while the said goods were stored therein they were totally destroyed by fire; and that defendant failed and neglected to store said goods in a fireproof warehouse. The defendant denied that it agreed to store the goods in a fireproof warehouse, or that it received storage charges for storage of that character. It further denied that plaintiff was informed by defendant that the goods had been received by defendant and stored in a fireproof warehouse, or that the defendant undertook or agreed to do so, or that by reason of any failure to store the same in a fireproof warehouse the goods were lost or destroyed. It will be observed that there was no charge in the complaint that the fire which destroyed the goods was caused by the negligence of the defendant, or by its failure to take due care of the goods, except in so far as it may be implied from the fact that it did not store the same in a fireproof warehouse. The case was tried by a jury, a verdict of $3,000 damages in favor of plaintiff was returned, and judgment given accordingly.

[1] Defendant's motion for new trial was based on various grounds, including the ground that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, and specifically that there was no evidence of any contract to store the goods in a fireproof warehouse, or of any representations that the same had been or were stored in such warehouse.

> "It is only necessary to discover whether any of the grounds are sufficient; for the rule is well settled that the order granting a new trial will be affirmed if it can be justified on any ground made by statute the subject of a motion for a new trial." Churchill v. Flournoy, 127 Cal. 361, 59 Pac. 793.

It should be added, of course, that such ground must be properly specified in the notice of intention to move for new trial and in the specifications of error or insufficiency of the evidence in the statement or bill of exceptions on which the motion is heard.

[2] We deem it unnecessary to consider the matter at further length. A perusal of the evidence on the issues above stated shows that it is decidedly and substantially conflicting. Under these circumstances "the judge should set aside the verdict whenever he is not satisfied with it upon the evidence, and his order in that regard will not be disturbed on appeal if the evidence is substantially conflicting." Curtiss v. Starr, 85 Cal. 376, 24 Pac. 806; Condee v. Gyger, 126 Cal. 546, 59 Pac. 26.

The order is affirmed.

We concur: LAWLOR, J.; SLOSS, J.

(175 Cal. 67)

DES GRANGES v. DES GRANGES et al.
(L. A. 3732.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 7, 1917.)

1. DEEDS ⇨61—ESTATE CONVEYED.

Where husband deeded to wife fee title to his lands, and wife subsequent to his death and pursuant to his wishes executed and delivered deeds to children to be recorded upon her death, the effect of such deeds was to vest in children the legal title, with a tenancy reserved for life to the grantor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 140, 141.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR ⇨607(1)—REVIEW—RECORD.

On appeal, a transcript of evidence cannot be reviewed where appellant failed to give a ten-day notice after entry of judgment to the clerk of the superior court for its preparation, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 953a, and where appellant asked for no relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, or attempted to excuse or explain her failure to give a statutory notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2665.]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR ⇨607(1)—REVIEW.

Code Civ. Proc. § 953a, requiring ten days' notice after entry of judgment to clerk of court for preparation of transcript of evidence, is mandatory, not merely directory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2665.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Orange County; Curtis D. Wilbur, Judge.

Action to quiet title by Josephine Des Granges against John C. Des Granges and others. From a judgment quieting title in plaintiff to a life estate and in the defendants as remaindermen, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Edwin A. Meserve, Shirley E. Meserve, and Paul H. McPherrin, all of Los Angeles, for appellant. Avery & French, of Los Angeles, and Williams & Rutan, of Santa Ana, for respondents.

LAWLOR, J. This is an action to quiet the plaintiff's title to 80 acres of improved orchard land situated in Orange county. A trial was had before the court sitting without a jury. It was found that on June 11, 1898, Otto Des Granges, Sr., the deceased husband of the plaintiff and the father of the three defendants, was the owner of the land; that on that day he made various instruments in contemplation of his death for the purpose of conveying the property, excepting for a small plot reserved as "Mausoleum Premises," in severalty equally to his four children, subject, however, to the provision of a certain writing, designated as his last will, which purported to reserve a life interest in the property in favor of his wife; that on June 19th following he duly published and declared the said writing as his will, and delivered to his four children the four instruments which purported to convey the property to them; that also in connection with this transaction he acknowledged and delivered to his wife an instrument which "purported to convey to [her] the absolute title in fee simple to the premises, * * * but which said instrument was in truth and fact signed and acknowledged by said Otto Des Granges, Sr., solely and only for convenience in order to avoid the expense of administration upon his estate after his death, and to simplify the disposition of said property according to the wishes of said Otto Des Granges, Sr., after his death, which was then impending and momentarily expected by him, and with the intention and purpose on the part of said Otto Des Granges, Sr., of putting the legal title to said premises in his said wife, Josephine Des Granges, plaintiff herein, in trust for the four children of said Otto Des Granges, Sr., and Josephine Des Granges, then living, the interest of each to be a remainder in fee respectively in the separate tracts, * * * after the termination of a life estate in her, the said Josephine Des Granges, and without any purpose or intention of vesting in her the absolute title thereto in fee, and the said plaintiff well knew and understood and acquiesced in and consented to said purpose and intention, and then and there knew and understood and consented that any right or interest which she might acquire or appear to acquire by or through said instrument was and should be subject to such trust; that the said Otto Des Granges, Sr., husband of plaintiff, reposed great trust and confidence in his said wife, and at said time there was an understanding and agreement between them that she would retain the title to a life estate in said property for and during her natural life, and would execute conveyances of the remainder in fee to the four children then living; * * * that no valuable consideration of any sort was paid by or on behalf of the said Josephine Des Granges * * * except love and affection as the consideration for said life estate in said plaintiff"; that Otto Des Granges, Sr., died on June 24th, and on July 2d the plaintiff, in accordance with his instructions, executed four deeds and delivered them to the defendant John C. Des Granges, one of the children, which deeds respectively purported to convey to each of the four children the particular portion of the property which the husband had designated in the instruments first referred to, and instructed him to keep the same until her death, "and then to cause the same to be placed on record"; and that on July 7th she conveyed the plot of land set aside as the mausoleum premises to her children for a burial place for themselves and their descendants forever. From these findings the court concluded, as matter of law, "that the plaintiff is the owner of a life estate for the term of her natural life in the premises," and that the defendants are respectively the owners of the remainder estates, and accordingly entered its decree quieting the titles of the respective parties. The plaintiff appeals from the judgment.

[1] It is contended that the findings are inconsistent, and that the conclusions drawn therefrom are contrary to law. In support thereof the plaintiff claims that, according to the findings, the husband conveyed to her by his deed of July 19th merely a life estate with the remainders over to the children. But notwithstanding this proposition, argues the plaintiff, the court further found that the plaintiff by her deeds of July 2d conveyed the present title to the children, thus in effect finding that "she conveyed away a fee title which she never had." There is nothing in the findings to support this contention. The court clearly states that the plaintiff received the complete title from her husband. The children acquired no legal interest in the property, therfore, until the plaintiff, acting in accordance with her deceased husband's wishes, on July 2d delivered the deeds to John C. Des Granges, at which time, as the court finds, she "then and there relinquished and gave up all control and dominion over the same, and did not retain any power to retake or repossess herself of the same." The effect of this transaction was to vest the legal title at once in the children, with a tenancy for life reserved to herself. As regards three of the deeds, John Des Granges, the depositary, became the trustee for the three children respectively named therein as the grantees. The situation in this respect is identical with that considered in Bury v. Young, 98 Cal. 446, 33 Pac. 338, 35 Am. St. Rep. 186, and is conclusively determined by the holding of that case. The fourth deed, like the others, was absolute in terms and its delivery by the plaintiff directly to the grantee himself, John C. Des Granges, vested the title in him, but not absolutely, for the circumstances surrounding the making of the delivery, the transactions which preceded it and of which the conveyance to him was merely a part, impressed the title thereof with an equitable life estate in favor of the plaintiff, and to that extent constituted the grantee a trustee.

[2] The plaintiff's briefs are almost exclusively directed to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings. It is argued at great length that the evidence is in most respects insufficient. In support of the contentions, the plaintiff offers a transcript of the evidence which was attempted to be prepared by the alternative method of appeal, although, it should be mentioned, the judgment roll also appears before us in the usual form of a printed transcript. The transcript of evidence, however, cannot be reviewed on appeal, for the reason that the plaintiff utterly failed to give the ten days' notice to the clerk of the superior court for its preparation which section 953a of the Code of Civil Procedure requires. This fact is fully brought out in special findings made by the court "upon hearing the matter of the settlement and allowance of said transcript," following the defendants' objection to its certification. Those findings were:

> "That there had been no request to cause said transcript to be prepared, filed with said clerk prior to the 18th day of October, 1913; that the plaintiff had notice of the entry of the judgment herein on the 20th day of August, 1913, and that on the 1st day of October, 1913, the plaintiff filed in the office of said clerk her notice of appeal from the judgment theretofore entered therein; and that the plaintiff had not filed any request for the preparation of such transcript with said clerk within ten days after notice of entry of judgment."

Thus it appears that nearly two months elapsed after the plaintiff had notice of the entry of the judgment and before the required notice was given to the clerk. And it does not appear that the plaintiff at the hearing, or at any other time, asked for any relief under section 473 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or attempted to offer any explanation to excuse her failure to comply with the provisions of section 953a.

[3] There was presented, in fact, no opportunity for the exercise of any discretion by the court. Yet, as shown by the bill of exceptions prepared in accordance with the rule laid down in Hecker v. Baker, 19 Cal. App. 667, 127 Pac. 654, the trial court "announced, as a matter of law, his holding that the provision of the law, limiting the period of time for the filing of such request to ten days after notice of the entry of the judgment or decree, is directory and not mandatory," and thereupon certified to the record. This holding is clearly erroneous. It finds no support in the decisions of this court, and is in no wise justified by the scheme embodied in the alternative method of appeal. On the contrary, the application of such reasoning to the facts of this case practically nullifies the clear provisions of the Code relating thereto. The obvious conclusion is, therefore, that, by failing to give the notice within the time fixed by law, the plaintiff lost her right to proceed with the preparation of the transcript of the evidence on appeal in the manner provided by the section. See Fiske

v. Gosbey, 168 Cal. 334, 143 Pac. 611. This disposes of the appeal.

Judgment affirmed.

We concur: SLOSS, J.; SHAW, J.

(175 Cal. 91)

ÆTNA LIFE INS. CO. v. INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENT COMMISSION et al. (S. F. 7943.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 9, 1917.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑366—COMPENSATION ACT—"EMPLOYÉ"—PARENT AND CHILD.

Under Workmen's Compensation Act,[1] § 14, defining an employé as a person in the service of a person, as defined by section 13, under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, including minors, and Civ. Code, § 197, providing that the father and mother of a legitimate unmarried child are equally entitled to its custody, services, and earnings, and section 1965, providing that a contract of employment is a contract by which one, who is called the "employer," engaged another, who is called the "employé," to do something for the benefit of the employer, or a third person, an unmarried minor son, living with and supported by his parents, and doing such work as directed by father, without any agreement as to wages, is not an "employé," entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for injuries received while serving father, and entitling father to reimbursement from insurance carrier on policy protecting him against claims on the part of his employés.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Employé.]

2. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑366—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION—MINOR CHILD OF EMPLOYER—"EMANCIPATION."

That a father from time to time gave a son 19 years old small sums of money did not constitute "emancipation," where son's services belonged to his father, who supported and controlled him.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Emancipation.]

In Bank. Proceeding by the Ætna Life Insurance Company against the Industrial Accident Commission and another, to review an award under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Award annulled.

Redman & Alexander, of San Francisco, for petitioner. Christopher M. Bradley, of San Francisco, for respondents.

HENSHAW, J. Review of an award of the Industrial Accident Commission. Arthur Rieck was discovered on his father's ranch, unconscious and with a fractured skull. He was at the time a minor of the age of 19 years, who was living with his parents at their home on the ranch. He did such work on the ranch as he was directed to do by his father. No one was an eyewitness to his accident, but the evidence points with strong probability to the fact that, while riding a horse to round up mules in a field on the ranch, he was thrown and struck on his head. The evidence unquestionably, then, supports the Commission's findings that his injury arose out of the services which he was rendering to his father. The vital question is whether, under the evidence, he was an employé within the meaning of our law. The case arises under the demand of the father against the petitioner for the payment of medical and other expenses incurred by the father and growing out of this injury to his son. The Ætna Life Insurance Company had issued its policy, protecting the father against such claims on the part of his employés. This present claim was pressed upon the ground that the son was such an employé, and the Commission so held, making its award accordingly.

Section 197 of our Civil Code provides that:

> "The father and mother of a legitimate unmarried minor child are equally entitled to its custody, services and earnings."

In this class belongs Arthur Rieck, and unquestionably, unless there had been some legal change in the status of father and son, each and both were subject to the provisions of this Code section, and the provisions of section 196 of the same Code, which declares that:

> "The parent entitled to the custody of a child must give him support and education suitable to his circumstances."

Section 14 of the Compensation Act defines an employé as:

> A "person in the service of an employer as defined by section 13 under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship express or implied, oral or written, including aliens and also including minors."

In this connection section 1965 of the Civil Code defines a contract of employment in the following language:

> "The contract of employment is a contract by which one, who is called the employer engages another, who is called the employé, to do something for the benefit of the employer, or of a third person."

The evidence upon this matter (that of the father) is as follows:

> "Q. What was the agreement or arrangement between you and your son with reference to his employment? A. There was really no arrangement; he is not of age, and simply works for what I tell him, and there was no contract or agreement whatever between us; he does whatever I tell him to do. * * * Q. Your book does not show any payments made to him by check or cash? A. I have no record of that at all. He is not of age. His wages belong to me. I don't have to pay him any wages. * * * Q. How does it happen that you never had any charge against Felix in this book? A. He is my son, and I am supposed to furnish him everything until he is of age."

[1] It would seem that this law and this evidence was conclusively determinative of the matter against the award of the Commission. But the argument in support of the award is that a minor is invested with the power to make a contract of hiring under sections 33 and 34 of the Civil Code; that section 14 of the Compensation Act above quoted includes in its definition of employés minors; that from the evidence the Commission was justified in finding an implied contract of service; that such an implied contract of service will support this award; that this implied contract of service need not be for a fixed wage, but may be upon the basis of the usual payment for such services, or upon the expectations of the parties; that therefore any testimony which warrants the inference that services were rendered under such expectations, and were accepted by the other party with knowledge, actual or constructive, of such expectations, is sufficient to establish the relationship of employer and employé; and, finally, that herein it is "notable" that both father and son are insisting that the relationship existed, while it is only an outstanding third party—the insurance company—which is denying it.

---

[1] St. 1913, p. 284.

It is indeed notable that father and son have combined in their demand against the insurance company, but it has not the slightest persuasive value as tending to establish the relationship which they claim to have existed. Their interests in this particular action are identical, and together they are working for a common end. But, aside from this, the fault and fallacy of respondent's argument will at once become apparent when it is pointed out that the reasoning upon which respondents rely and the authorities which they bring to the support of that reasoning (where the relationship between parent and minor child is involved) all have to do with the case of an emancipated child, who has by virtue of that emancipation become entitled to contract for himself.

We need not here enter into any lengthy discussion of what acts or omissions will effectuate the emancipation of a child, for the simple reason that no emancipation can be here asserted, and the father's testimony, showing rather an unusually clear conception of his rights and corresponding duties, is an absolute denial of emancipation:

> "There was no contract or agreement whatever between us." "He does whatever I tell him to do. * * * His wages belong to me. I don't have to pay him any wages." "He is my son, and I am supposed to furnish him everything until he is of age."

Suffice it, upon the question of emancipation, to quote from our own case of Lackman v. Wood, 25 Cal. 147, and to refer to 25 Cyc. 1672. In Lackman v. Wood, it is said:

> "The power of a father to emancipate his minor child cannot be questioned; nor can there be any doubt as to the effect of such emancipation upon the relations of the persons who are parties to it. The child is freed by emancipation from parental control; he can claim his earnings thereafter as against his father, and is in all respects his own man. Emancipation is defined as 'an act by which a person, who was once in the power of another, is rendered free,' and the adjudged cases show that the doctrine of emancipation, as actually administered, is not less comprehensive than the definition."

[2] Nor, finally, does the fact that the father from time to time gave the son small sums of money, even though both father and son should testify that these sums were on account of payment of wages, at all militate against the incontrovertible fact that the son had not been emancipated. A son 19 years of age was surely entitled to some spending money, and, as his earnings belonged wholly to his father, it would be strange indeed if his father did not give him such sums for his own purposes. Many fathers are called upon to do the same thing, and many, to encourage their sons to form habits of industry and frugality, and "to learn the value of money," make these donations dependent to a greater or less extent upon the conduct and services of the child. But such payments in no sense work an emancipation of the child himself. Schouler on Domestic Relations (5th Ed.) § 267; Arnold v. Norton, 25 Conn. 92.

The award is therefore annulled.

We concur: ANGELLOTTI, C. J.; MELVIN, J.; SHAW, J.; SLOSS, J.

(175 Cal. 74)

SAN JOAQUIN LIGHT & POWER CORP. v. RAILROAD COMMISSION.

(S. F. 7884.)

(Supreme Court of California. May 8, 1917.)

1. ELECTRICITY 🔑11—FIXING RATES—POWERS OF COMMISSION—JURISDICTION OF COURT.

The function of making rates to be charged by an electric power company is legislative, and the only ground upon which the courts may interfere with it is that the specific order impairs constitutional rights, and interference will not be made unless on a clear showing that the constitutional rights have been invaded.

2. ELECTRICITY 🔑11—FIXING RATES—POWERS OF COMMISSION—JURISDICTION OF COURT.

Where Railroad Commission fixed 8 per cent. as reasonable return on investment of electric power corporation, and apportioned rates which the corporation asserted would produce but 6½ per cent., the court could not hold as a matter of law that the rate was confiscatory.

3. ELECTRICITY 🔑11—FIXING RATES—"PROPERTY."

A power corporation owning hydroelectric plants with extensive water rights is entitled to have the value of such water rights considered in fixing its rates; the water rights being "property."

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Property.]

4. ELECTRICITY 🔑11—FIXING RATES—REVIEW—BURDEN OF PROOF.

The burden is upon an electric power corporation, in certiorari to review an order fixing its rates, to show the existence of any value of property claimed by it.

5. ELECTRICITY 🔑11—FIXING RATES—VALUATION OF PROPERTY—METHODS.

In estimating the value of an electric company's plant for purpose of fixing rates, the value of the company's right to divert 6 per cent. of the water from a stream could not be fixed at 6 per cent. of the total damage that would accrue to the riparian owners if the entire flowage were withdrawn; such a basis being too speculative.

6. ELECTRICITY ⚷11—FIXING RATES—VALUATION OF PROPERTY.

In computing rates of electric power corporation, it was not entitled to have charged off a deficit incurred during development period, where the rates indicated that after the development period such deficits had been more than overcome by profits in excess of the standard 8 per cent.

In Bank. Certiorari by the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation, to review an order of the Railroad Commission fixing rates. Order affirmed.

Short & Sutherland, of Fresno, and Jared How, of San Francisco, for petitioner. Douglas Brookman, of San Francisco (Max Thelen, of San Francisco, of counsel), for respondent.

SLOSS, J. This is a proceeding in certiorari to review an order of the Railroad Commission fixing the rates to be charged by the petitioner, San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation, for electric energy.

From the exhaustive and painstaking opinion accompanying the order it appears that the Commission fixed the value of the petitioner's property "used and useful in electric business," at the sum of $10,054,540. On this value the Commission then undertook to allow a return of 8 per cent., or $804,363.20 per annum, and the sum last named was found to be a fair, just, and reasonable sum to be received by the petitioner as an annual return on the fair value of its property. Specific rates for the different kinds of service rendered by the utility were fixed in accord with this basis.

It is not claimed that the rates thus fixed will not yield to the petitioner the estimated return of $804,363.20. The contention is that in fixing the fair value of the property of the petitioner devoted to its electric business, the Commission failed to make allowance for two items of property, and that, in consequence, the earnings of the petitioner will fall below the rate of 8 per cent. determined by the Commission to be fair, just, and reasonable. These items consist of: (a) The value of certain water rights; and (b) the "going concern" value of the petitioner's plant. The petitioner contends that, under the undisputed evidence before the Commission, a valuation of at least $650,000 should have been allowed for the first of these items; of $1,651,021 for the second. If these sums were added to the value placed upon the plant by the Commission, the estimated return of $804,363.20 would realize to the petitioner a net earning of 6.51 per cent. instead of 8 per cent.

[1] The petitioner does not point out any evidence in the record which would force, or even justify, the conclusion that a limiting of its return to 6½ per cent. on the value of its property would amount to confiscation, or, in other words, that it would, if held to so low a rate of earning, be deprived of its property without due process of law. "The function of ratemaking is purely legislative in its character, and this is true whether it is exercised directly by the Legislature itself or by some subordinate or administrative body, to whom the power of fixing rates in detail has been delegated." Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co., 212 U. S. 1, 29 Sup. Ct. 148, 53 L. Ed. 371.

The only ground upon which the courts may interfere with the exercise of this function is that the action in question impairs constitutional rights. The rates will not be set aside except upon a clear showing that such rights have been invaded. Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co., supra; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co., 212 U. S. 19, 29 Sup. Ct. 192, 53 L. Ed. 382, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1134, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

[2] In view of our decision in Contra Costa Water Co. v. Oakland, 159 Cal. 323, 113 Pac. 668, it cannot be claimed that a return of 6½ per cent. net upon the value of property devoted to such a public use as the one in question is, as matter of law, confiscatory. As we pointed out in that case, the court is not called upon to determine the rate which it, if vested with the power of fixing rates, would determine to be just and reasonable. Its right to interfere exists only where the rate-fixing body has confined the public utility to a return below that which, under the evidence in the particular case, can fairly be regarded as the lowest reasonable percentage of profit. "If the ordinance gives a rate of return which, although low, is not palpably unreasonable, the court is not to upset the action of the council because it may think a higher rate more appropriate." In the Contra Costa Case we held that the evidence did not show that a return of 4.682 per cent. was less than the lowest rate of return which the city council might fairly have determined to be just. The petitioner contends that because the Commission fixed 8 per cent. as a reasonable rate of return, anything below that rate is, for the purposes of this case, necessarily confiscatory. We cannot accept this view. The ultimate question is whether the rates fixed for electric service deprived the petitioner of its property without due process of law. The value of the property devoted to the public use, the return which should be earned upon this property, and the specific rates which will produce this return, are all elements in the problem. The final question for the court is merely whether the rates fixed will deprive the utility of its property without due process of law. The Commission might have fixed rates without making a finding, in figures, of the value of the property, or of the rate of return which, in its judgment, should be realized. If it had so done, or if it had declared its purpose of allowing an earning of only 6½ per cent., we should have been confronted with the same question that is now before us, namely, whether the rates fixed will produce a confiscation, in whole or in part, of the petitioner's property. This question must be answered upon a consideration of the evidence tending to show the lowest rate of return which the Commission might reasonably have allowed. If it has not gone below this minimum, the courts are powerless, even though the rates fixed may not produce as high a return as the regulating body believed and intended.

But apart from this, we think the petitioner does not substantiate its claims with respect to either of the items of valuation alleged to have been improperly ignored.

[3] The San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation operates a plant for furnishing electric energy in a number of counties in the San Joaquin Valley. It is the successor in interest of various corporations, the first of which was organized in 1895. Its power is generated, in part, by means of hydroelectric plants. To this end it maintains power stations upon various streams; and in connection with these stations it has acquired and owns the right to divert a portion of the flow of such streams, returning the water in due course to the streams below the point of diversion. These water rights are property, and the petitioner is unquestionably entitled to have their value considered in the fixing of its rates. San Joaquin, etc., Co. v. County of Stanislaus, 233 U. S. 454, 34 Sup. Ct. 652, 58 L. Ed. 1041.

[4] The Commission, in the present case, made an allowance for such value, based upon the cost incurred in the acquisition of these rights. The petitioner claims that a further allowance should have been made. Concededly, the burden is upon the public utility, in cases of this kind, to show the existence of any value claimed by it. In the effort to establish the value of its water rights, the petitioner proceeded upon two theories.

The first of these is described in the briefs as the "comparative steam cost theory." It is well described in the respondent's brief as "based on the assumption that the value of petitioner's water rights can fairly be determined by capitalizing, at 8 per cent., the difference in the cost of service resulting from the operation of petitioner's hydraulic installations and what the cost of service would be if petitioner's electric energy were generated in a steam plant located near the oil field and burning oil." Of this element of the case it is sufficient to say that there was substantial evidence before the Commission to the effect that, at the ruling price of oil at the time of the hearing, the petitioner could generate electricity by means of steam plants at a less cost than that involved in the operation of its hydroelectric plants, after making due allowance for all charges in connection with the installation of the necessary steam plants. According to this testimony, the advantage in favor of generation by steam would continue until the price of oil had increased by 50 per cent. Without expressing any opinion regarding the propriety of this method of fixing the value of a water right, it is perfectly obvious that the Commission did not impair the petitioner's rights, when it concluded that application of the comparative steam cost theory did not show that the water rights had any value beyond their cost.

[5] The other theory was advanced with reference to a water right on the North fork of the San Joaquin river. There the corporation had constructed and was maintaining the Crane Valley reservoir, in which it stored a portion of the water flowing in the river, in order to equalize the flow during different portions of the year. Ultimately, the water stored found its way back into the river. The result of this course was to decrease the flow of the river from January to June, inclusive, and to increase it from July to December, inclusive. The petitioner's diversion is subject to a prior right to the first 1,500 second feet of the San Joaquin river. There are some 170,000 acres of land riparian to the San Joaquin river which are, or may be, affected by the withholding and storage of water by the petitioner. The effect of the storage in the Crane Valley reservoir is to diminish the water which would otherwise flow to these lands by 8.1 per cent. in the month of March, and 2.6 per cent. in the month of April. During these months irrigation upon a considerable portion of the riparian lands begins, and the use of water upon them is beneficial. The argument made is, in effect, the following: The right to store and withhold water is a detriment to these riparian lands. If that right were not already owned by the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation, it would have to be acquired from the lower riparian owners, either by purchase or by condemnation, and the value of the right is to be measured by the price which would have to be paid for this acquisition. The difficulty with the argument is, however, that the petitioner, upon whom rested the burden of proof, failed to furnish data from which any satisfactory estimate of value could be deduced. Evidence was introduced tending to show that the 170,000 acres of land would be worth $65 per acre less, if the entire flow of the San Joaquin river were stopped, than they would if the flow continued undiminished. On this basis the damage which the entire acreage would suffer from total deprivation of water would amount to $11,050,000. The diminution during the months of March and April caused by the storage in the Crane Valley reservoir averaged about 5 or 6 per cent. of the total flow during these months. Hence, it is said, the lands are damaged to the extent of 5 or 6 per cent. of the damage which they would suffer if all of the water were withdrawn. So estimated, the value of the water rights amounts to $650,000. The basis of this computation is too speculative, not to say fanciful, to be entitled to any serious weight. It assumes that the benefit derived by riparian land from the flow through or by it of a stream is in direct proportion to the volume of the stream. Such is not the fact. In point of legal right, of course, the owner of land bordering upon a stream has a right to have the usual flow of the stream unimpaired, and may enjoin any unauthorized diminution. But the amount of damage which he will suffer by the subtraction of any fractional part of the water depends upon a multitude of circumstances. In some instances the damage resulting from the removal of a part of the flow might be very great, while in others it might be nominal. Furthermore, the petitioner's position involves the additional assumption that the withdrawal of water during two months will have the same detrimental effect upon lower lands as that which would follow a diversion for the entire irrigating season. Certainly, no fair estimate of the value of a water right can be based upon such broad and unsupported generalizations as underlie the appellant's argument here.

[6] It is further claimed that the Commission refused to make a proper allowance for "going concern" value. It is recognized by the authorities that a business in active and successful operation has a value over and above that of its component parts. Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co., supra. The decision of the Commission states that the tangible propery "is being valued as property in successful operation by a going and successful utility." We see no reason to question the propriety of this declaration, unless we accept the claim of petitioner that the evidence required the inclusion of an additional sum of $1,651,021. This figure is reached by computing the company's deficit in revenue, during the development period, in 8 of its 15 districts, and extending the averages derived from such computation so as to make them apply to the entire system. The "development period," thus referred to, covers the period from the inception of the enterprise until the given district earned a net revenue of 8 per cent., which is taken as the standard earning. The opinion of the Commission declares, and the record sustains the statement, that since the development period the petitioner's earnings over and above the 8 per cent. standard have been sufficient to balance all of the deficits of the development period, with interest thereon for the entire period. Under these circumstances the Commission was fully justified in excluding the item of development cost as an element of going concern value. The question is not essentially different from that before the Supreme Court of the United States in Des Moines Gas Co. v. Des Moines, 238 U. S. 153, 35 Sup. Ct. 811, 59 L. Ed. 1244. The following quotation is in point:

> "Included in going value as usually reckoned is the investment necessary to organizing and establishing the business which is not embraced in the value of its actual physical property. In this case, what may be called the inception cost of the enterprise entering into the establishing of a going concern had long since been incurred. The present company and its predecessors had long carried on business in the city of Des Moines, under other ordinances, and at higher rates than the ordinance in question established. For aught that appears in this record, these expenses may have been already compensated in rates charged and collected under former ordinances. As we have said, every presumption is in favor of the legitimate exercise of the rate-making power, and it is not to be presumed, without proof, that a company is under the necessity of making up losses and expenditures incidental to the experimental stage of its business."

Here the evidence showed affirmatively that the company was under no such necessity.

We see no ground for interfering with the action of the Commission. The order is affirmed.

We concur: ANGELLOTTI, C. J.; SHAW, J.; MELVIN, J.; HENSHAW, J.

(174 Cal. 703)

FARLEY v. REINDOLLAR et al.

(S. F. 7143.)

(Supreme Court of California. March 26, 1917. On Petition for Rehearing in Bank, April 25, 1917.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS 🔑298—PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS—PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS—PROTESTS.

Under the Improvement Act of 1911 (St. 1911, p. 734) § 6, providing that protests against the doing of proposed work shall be heard by the city council at its next regular meeting after expiration of the time within which protests may be made, and that the council "may adjourn said hearing from time to time," a council, taking up the matter of a protest at such next regular meeting, did not lose jurisdiction to proceed further because it did not decide the protest at such meeting, but duly adjourned the hearing to a date two weeks later; such date not being unreasonably later.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 799.]

On Petition for Rehearing.

2. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS 🔑298—PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS—PRELIMINARY PROCEEDINGS—PROTESTS—OBJECTION BY NONPROTESTING OWNER—"JURISDICTION."

A nonprotesting property owner cannot urge that the city council lost or failed to acquire jurisdiction to proceed under the Improvement Act of 1911, § 7, by failing to hear protests of other property owners "at the next regular meeting * * * after the expiration of the time within which * * * protests may be made," as required by section 6 of the act, where all of the protestants have been heard and no one of them is complaining; for the "jurisdiction" spoken of in section 7 of the act means only that, if the council has not duly disposed of the protests, then, so far as protestants are concerned, it shall have no power to proceed further.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 799.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Jurisdiction.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Alameda County; T. W. Harris, Judge.

Action by W. S. Farley against C. F. Reindollar and another. From judgment for the named defendant, plaintiff appeals. Reversed. Petition for rehearing denied.

Phil J. Strubel and W. T. Kearney, both of San Francisco, for appellant. Walton C. Webb, of San Francisco, and Ben F. Woolner, of Oakland, for respondents.

HENSHAW, J. Plaintiff having performed certain street work upon a street of the city of Oakland under the Improvement Act of 1911 (Stats. 1911, p. 730), brought his suit to foreclose an assessment lien on the property of defendant Reindollar. A general demurrer to his complaint was sustained, and from the judgment which followed plaintiff has appealed.

It is conceded that in all respects saving one the complaint is sufficient. The particular in which it was found to be insufficient is the following: The complaint alleged that a protest against the doing of the proposed work was made by certain owners of property. That defendant was not one of the protestants, and—

> "that the said city council proceeded to hear and pass upon said protest at the next regular meeting of said city council, after the filing of said protest, to wit, on the 11th day of July, A. D. 1911, and thereupon and at said time, by resolution, duly continued and adjourned said hearing to the 24th day of July, A. D. 1911, at the hour of 11:30 a. m. of said last-named day, and that due notice was given to said protestants of the time and place of hearing said protest. That the hearing of said protest came on regularly before said city council at a regular meeting thereof, at the time and place set for said hearing, and said protestants being personally present, or being duly represented at said hearing, the said council, after due consideration by its resolution No. 111, N. S., duly and unanimously overruled and denied said protest, and sustained the aforesaid resolution of intention No. 38,299."

[1] The law governing the right to protest and the procedure after protest is found in section 6 of the act of 1911, and so far as it pertains to this consideration the language of the section is as follows:

> "At the next regular meeting of the city council after the expiration of the time within which said protest may be so made, the city council shall proceed to hear and pass upon all protests so made and its decision shall be final and conclusive. * * * The city council may adjourn said hearing from time to time."

Respondent's view, which successfully he impressed upon the trial court, was that this language made it imperative upon the city council to pass on the protest and to decide the protest at its next regular meeting, or, failing to do this, its jurisdiction to proceed further was lost. Even if this statute did not authorize, as in terms it does, an adjournment of the hearing from time to time, no court would hold that such a tribunal lost jurisdiction to proceed with a matter which it had regularly taken up for hearing because it continued that hearing to some other not unreasonable or forbidden date. It would require some positive declaration of law to abridge the general right which belongs to all legislative, ministerial, and judicial officers to continue the hearing and consideration of a matter over which they have acquired jurisdiction within reasonable limits and bounds of time. Thus, to instance but one of many similar conditions which will readily occur, if the law declared that all protests must be heard and disposed of within one month after the filing of the protest or all power and jurisdiction to proceed further should be at an end, here would be a peremptory and mandatory time limit fixed within which the council must act or lose the power to act. But all this is superfluous in view of the fact that the law itself makes express provision for continuances and adjournments of the hearings—just such continuance and adjourned hearing as the pleading declares was regularly ordered and at which adjourned hearing, as the pleading further declares, every protestant was present and was heard. But two cases from our state are cited by respondent in support of his most untenable position. Unhesitatingly we declare that if either in fact supported that position it would call for immediate reversal in the light of the plain language of the law. But neither does so. The first of these is Stoner v. City Council of Los Angeles, 8 Cal. App. 607, 97 Pac. 692. There a protest was filed under a law which declared that the protest should be laid before the council at its next regular meeting, and that the "council shall hear all such objections at said meeting, or at any other time to which the hearing thereof may be adjourned." The protest was not laid before the council either at its next or at any of several succeeding regular meetings. The council thus never acquired jurisdiction, and so never, after having acquired jurisdiction, did it continue the hearing. After a considerable lapse of time the council took up the matter of the protest, and the Court of Appeal very properly held that there had been a failure on the part of the council to acquire jurisdiction of the proceeding by virtue of its neglect to take up the matter of the protest for hearing at its next regular meeting. Here the matter of the protest was taken up at the next regular meeting of the council, and the hearing was duly adjourned to a later and not unreasonable date. The second case is Southern Construction Co. v. Howells, 21 Cal. App. 330, 131 Pac. 756. In that case the law provided for an appeal to the council by disaffected property owners, and declared that after the filing of such an appeal "notice of the time and place of the hearing shall be published for five days." The required publication was not made, and again the Court of Appeal, with strict legality, held that the publication was made jurisdictional to the right of the council to pass on the appeal. Enough has been said to show the inappositeness of both of these cases, and for the reasons given the judgment appealed from is reversed.

We concur: MELVIN, J.; LORIGAN, J.

On Petition for Rehearing.

PER CURIAM. Upon petition for rehearing respondent urges that this court failed to apprehend and so to discuss and to decide the principal proposition upon which he relies, and there is merit in respondent's contention. Respondent's position as it now appears is that protests were filed before the 11th day of July, 1911, but that the time for filing protests did not expire until July 13, 1911; nevertheless that on the 11th day of July, before the expiration of the time within which protests might be filed, the city council took up the matter of the protests already filed and continued and adjourned the hearing of the protests until the 24th day of July, 1911; still further that the street law provides (Stats. 1911, pp. 734, 735) that "at the next regular meeting of the city council after the expiration of the time within which said protests may be so made, the city council shall proceed to hear and pass upon all protests so made"; that the city council having continued the hearing of the protests until July 24th did not, as the law required, proceed to hear and pass upon the protests "at the next regular meeting of the city council after the expiration of the time" because such next regular meeting was upon July 14th, the day after the expiration of the time for filing protests. Such being the facts, respondent's contention is that the council never acquired jurisdiction to proceed further with the matter, because in cases where protests have been filed (so respondent argues) only after the regular disposition of those protests in accordance with the law is the council deemed to have acquired jurisdiction to order the proposed improvements. Street Law, Stats. 1911, p. 730, pt. 1, § 7.

[2] It is to be noted that no question is here presented of the regularity of the notice to property owners, giving them an opportunity to protest; still further that this defendant was not himself a protestant. His proposition, then, is that because of this asserted irregularity in the matter of the hearing of the protests of those who actually did protest, the council failed to acquire jurisdiction to proceed with the work, and that this failure so to acquire jurisdiction can be urged by a nonprotesting property owner. But such is not our law, nor does respondent cite any authority in support of the law. In Stoner v. City Council of Los Angeles, 8 Cal. App. 607, 97 Pac. 692, the property owners who urged the objection that the city council had failed to acquire jurisdiction were the very ones whose protests had not met with hearing in accordance with the law. In Construction Co. v. Howells, 21 Cal. App. 330, 131 Pac. 756, the objection to the failure to give notice was heard in an action of a property owner who had appealed to the city council objecting to the assessment. Preliminarily it may be said that the law looks with steadily decreasing favor on property owners who sit by without urging any objections which they may have to the proceedings about to be taken, for the hearing of which objections the law affords ample opportunity, and then, after their property has been improved, endeavor to deprive the contractor of his just remuneration by ultra technicalities. Harney v. Benson, 113 Cal. 314, 45 Pac. 687; O'Dea v. Mitchell, 144 Cal. 374, 77 Pac. 1020; Haughawout v. Raymond, 148 Cal. 311, 83 Pac. 53; McCaleb v. Dreyfus, 156 Cal. 204, 103 Pac. 924.

Therefore to this objection it must be made answer that whatever force might attach to it were it an objection made by a protestant who had, for failure of the council to observe the requirements of the law, been deprived of a legal hearing of his protest, from the lips of this respondent, who never made a protest at all, it is entitled to no weight. The jurisdiction spoken of in section 7 of the street act means no more, as used in that section, than that if the council has not duly disposed of the protests, then so far as protestants are concerned it shall have no power to proceed further. If it has duly disposed of the protests, then as to all the world it has the power to proceed. But where, as here, all of the protestants have been heard, and no one of them is complaining, and the sole complainant is one who has sat by in silence, it is too well settled to require more than a citation of authority, that such a property owner cannot object to the disposition of protests to which he was not a party. Harney v. Heller, 47 Cal. 15; Lent v. Tillson, 72 Cal. 404, 14 Pac. 71; Duncan v. Ramish, 142 Cal. 686, 76 Pac. 661; Chase v. Trout, 146 Cal. 350, 80 Pac. 81.

Wherefore the petition for a rehearing is denied.

(33 Cal. App. 300)

SOULE v. NORTHERN CONST. CO. et al.
(Civ. 1907.)

(District Court of Appeal, First District, California. March 22, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 21, 1917.)

1. WORDS AND PHRASES—"SLAB"—"BEAMS"—"GIRDERS"—"REINFORCING STEEL BARS"—"TYING WIRE"—"FABRIC."

A "slab" in concrete construction is that portion of the structure underneath and supporting the floor and extending between the beams and girders. The "beams" support the slabs, while the "girders" are the long supports running a few feet apart longitudinally through the interior of the building and generally supported by the columns. "Reinforcing steel bars" are small sections of steel made into straight or twisted bars embedded in the concrete to take up tensional and shearing strains due to the longitudinal load of the structure. "Tying wire" is No. 16 black fencing wire used to fasten the steel together. "Fabric" consists of a union of drawn wires made up in rows.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Fabric; Second Series, Slabs; Beams.]

2. CONTRACTS 🔑199(1) — CONSTRUCTION — CONFLICTING CLAUSES.

Where contract specifications for concrete work were conflicting as to whether reinforcing bars or fabric should be placed in floors and roofs, the provision definitely giving contractor such option will be given preference over a contrary provision of general nature.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 884, 884½, 885, 887-889.]

3. CONTRACTS 🔑152—CONSTRUCTION—"ETC."

A subcontract with plaintiff "to furnish and set in place all the reinforcing bars, tying wire, etc.," according to contract specifications, referred to other reinforcing material, including fabric specified in contract, the court not being justified in holding the term "etc." meaningless, since the words "et cetera," abbreviated to the form "etc.," are equivalent to the phrase "others of like kind; and the rest; and so on."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 732, 733, 738.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Et Cetera—Etc.]

Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; Bernard J. Flood, Judge.

Action by Edward L. Soule against the Northern Construction Company and others. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant named appeals. Reversed.

N. A. Dorn, of San Francisco, for appellant. Jordan & Brann, of San Francisco, for respondent Soule. Henry Ach, of San Francisco, for respondent Abrams. Cushing & Cushing, of San Francisco, for respondent First Federal Trust Co.

KERRIGAN, J. This is an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien. From the judgment given and entered against it, the defendant Northern Construction Company has appealed.

The sole point in the case is whether or not, under a fair construction of a contract entered into between the plaintiff and said company, the former was required to install reinforced steel bars or fabric in the floor and roof slabs entering into the construction of a certain building. From the record it appears that the Northern Construction Company on the 21st day of April, 1913, entered into a written contract with Albert Abrams for the construction of a garage upon a lot in San Francisco. Under the terms of this contract the company was required to construct a concrete building, to be reinforced by steel bars, fabric stirrups, and tying wire. In the specifications, which were a part of the contract, there was a general provision reading: "Bars will be used in all footings, beams, girders, walls, but in no floor or roof slabs." Following upon the execution of this contract the company entered into a contract with plaintiff, who was a dealer in and a contractor for the installation of reinforcing steel, by the terms of which plaintiff agreed "to furnish and set in place in a workmanlike manner all reinforcing steel bars, tying wire, etc., required to be used in the construction of that certain building to be erected on the lands hereinafter described in accordance with the plans and specifications for the construction of said building." It is the contention of the plaintiff that under the terms of this contract he was not required to furnish and set in place reinforcing steel for the floors and roof of the building.

[1] Before discussing this point it may not be amiss to say that a slab in concrete construction is that portion of the structure underneath and supporting the floor and extending between the beams and girders. The beams support the slabs, while the girders are what are commonly termed the long supports, which run a few feet apart longitudinally through the interior of the building, and which are generally supported by the columns. Reinforcing steel bars are small sections of steel made into straight or twisted bars, which are imbedded in the concrete to take up the tensional and shearing strains which are due to the longitudinal load of the structure where such strains are encountered. Tying wire is No. 16 black fencing wire, and is used to fasten the steel together. Fabric consists of a union of drawn wires made up in rows. In passing it may also be stated that no personal judgment is sought against Albert Abrams or against the First Federal Trust Company. They are merely formal parties defendant to the action.

[2] Under one provision of the specifications no bars are to be used in the slab reinforcement of the floors and roof, while under another provision it is optional with the contractor as to whether or not in the slab reinforcement of the floors and roof bars or fabric shall be used. There is a conflict between those two provisions of the specifications; but the provision stating that no bars shall be used in the floor and roof reinforcement is general in its character, while the other provision refers specially to floors and roof, and perhaps that provision therefore should control as to the nature of the work to be done on that part of the building. We have no doubt, however, but that under these two provisions the original contractor was required to furnish and set in place either bars or fabric for the floor and roof reinforcement; and this, of course, is required of the subcontractor unless, as asserted by him, the expression "etc." found in his contract is without force, and means nothing.

[3] He took over the contract for the general installation of the reinforcing steel for the building, and when he did so it was doubtless expected that all work of that character would be done by him; and we think this contract when fairly construed so provides. The contract requires him to furnish and set in place all the reinforcing bars, tying wire, "etc.," according to the plans and specifications for the building. The words "et cetera," abbreviated to the form "etc." are said by Webster to be equivalant to the phrase "others of like kind; and the rest; and so on." In the case of Gray v. Central R. R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 70, 75, it was held that the term "etc.," as used in a contract for the sale of a boat, where the parties agreed to take the boat, "provided, upon trial, they are satisfied with the soundness of her machinery, boilers, etc.," meant "other things," referring to other material parts of the boat. The expression "etc.," as used in the contract before us, certainly must have been used for some purpose; and we think it means "other reinforcing material," which, of course, would include fabric. There is nothing in the case which would warrant us in holding the term to be meaningless. In our opinion its effect, taken in connection with the provision of the specifications above quoted, was to require the contractor to furnish and install bars or fabric in the slab reinforcement of the floor and roof. We think the trial court was in error in exempting the plaintiff from this obligation, and that the judgment should be reversed. It is so ordered.

We concur: LENNON, P. J.; RICHARDS, J.

On Resubmission.

LENNON, P. J. The judgment is reversed, for the reasons stated in an opinion filed February 23, 1917, which opinion is hereby adopted as the opinion of the court following the resubmission of the cause, and said opinion is hereby ordered refiled as of this date.

(33 Cal. App. 310)

CALL et al. v. JENNER LUMBER CO.

(Civ. 2034.)

(District Court of Appeal, First District, California. March 26, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 24, 1917.)

1. LOGS AND LOGGING 🔑3(14)—SALES—STANDING TIMBER.

A contract for the cutting of timber on plaintiff's land provided that the cutting and removal should be completed within five years from the time of commencement and in no event later than July 1, 1915; that upon ceasing to cut timber the premises were to be surrendered to plaintiff; and that no right existed to enter upon the land after the time specified. Defendant's assignor entered the land and cut timber for about three months upon which it suspended operations entirely. Before July 1, 1915, but after the expiration of five years from the commencement of the cutting, defendant entered the land to continue operations. Held, that the right to cut timber had been forfeited, since a sale of standing timber, the same to be removed within a specified time, is a grant of only so much thereof as shall be removed within that period.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 11; Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 890, 898.]

2. LOGS AND LOGGING 🔑3(14)—SALE OF TIMBER—CONDITIONS—COVENANTS.

A provision, in a contract for the cutting of standing timber on the land of another, that the cutting should be completed within five years and in no event to be carried on beyond a given date, the premises to be surrendered upon the completion of the cutting, is a condition of the same and not a mere covenant to remove the timber.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 11; Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 890, 898.]

3. LOGS AND LOGGING 🔑3(14)—SALE OF TIMBER—FORFEITURE—TIMBER CONTRACTS.

A contract for the sale of standing timber provided that the cutting should be completed within five years and in no event to be carried on after a specified date, at which time the premises were to be surrendered to the owner. The vendee of the timber commenced operations but suspended them after three months, but the owner of the land continued in possession during the three months and for the remainder of the five years. Held that, upon the happening of the default, it was not necessary for the owner of the land by any overt act to assert his right of forfeiture.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 11; Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 890, 898.]

4. LOGS AND LOGGING 🔑3(14)—SALE OF TIMBER—FORFEITURE—NOTICE.

Where operations under a contract to cut standing timber within a specified time were abandoned, no other notice of forfeiture of the contract was necessary than the service of such notice upon the vendee's assignee when he attempted to recommence operations after the time limited in the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Logs and Logging, Cent. Dig. § 11; Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 890, 898.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Sonoma County; Emmet Seawell, Judge.

Suit by Mercedes L. Call and others against the Jenner Lumber Company to enjoin cutting of timber. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

J. R. Leppo, of Santa Rosa, for appellant.
Geary & Geary, of Santa Rosa, for respondents.

KERRIGAN, J. Action to enjoin the defendant from entering upon certain lands of the plaintiffs and cutting and removing the redwood and pine timber thereon. The judgment went for the plaintiffs as prayed, and defendant appeals.

The predecessor of the plaintiffs on June 15, 1906, entered into a contract with the Western Redwood Lumber Company, the assignor of the defendant, by which it granted and conveyed to said lumber company the redwood and pine timber upon a tract of land known as Mayer's ranch or tract. Said contract was entered into pursuant to an option previously given fixing the price to be paid and providing that the timber should be removed by July 1, 1915. Among the provisions of the contract by which the timber was conveyed to the lumber company were the following:

> "It is further mutually agreed and made an express condition hereof that said party of the second part is to and will fully complete the cutting and removal of the said pine and redwood timber and trees hereby conveyed to it within the period of five years from the time when it shall commence to cut the same, but in no event later than the 1st day of July, 1915; that when it shall commence to cut and remove the said timber and trees it shall thereafter proceed with the cutting and removal thereof with due diligence and dispatch; and that as soon as it shall stop the cutting and removal thereof it is to and will surrender, turn over and deliver to said parties of the first part the full, actual and exclusive possession of the said Mayer tract, and of every part and parcel thereof, to be by them thereafter held, possessed, used and enjoyed as of their first and former estate therein. * * *
>
> "It is further mutually agreed and made an express condition hereof that all of the timber and trees purchased by or hereby granted and conveyed to said party of the second part are to and shall be cut and removed from the said Mayer tract before the said 1st day of July, 1915, and that upon the expiration of the period ending on said last named day, and by reason of the expiration thereof, this conveyance and all rights of the said party of the second part hereunder, if not previously determined, shall forthwith and wholly cease, determine, lapse and become void, and that it shall not have any right whatever at any time after said last named day to enter upon the said Mayer tract, or any part of the same, or to cut or to remove any of the timber, trees or wood growing or standing or lying or being thereon; also that any and all timber, trees, wood, logs or other products of the said land, or of the trees or timber thereon, which shall on said last named day, or on the sooner determination of the rights of the said party of the second part hereunder, remain or be upon the said tract, shall belong absolutely and exclusively to said parties of the first part."

In the month of August, 1907, the Western Redwood Lumber Company proceeded to cut and remove the timber, and in a period of three months had cut and removed about one-half of the standing timber, at which time it became insolvent and ceased operations. Some three years thereafter the defendant succeeded to the rights, if any at that time existed, under its said grant and contract, but did nothing towards resuming operations until some time during January, 1914, some 6½ years after the Western Redwood Lumber Company had commenced the removal of the timber, and over 6 years after its cessation of operations, at which time it began to make preparations therefor. Immediately thereupon, to wit, on February 5, 1914, the plaintiffs served written notice upon the defendant not to enter upon the said tract of land or to cut or remove timber therefrom, and notifying it that the rights to the timber formerly owned by the Western Redwood Lumber Company had been terminated and had reverted to said plaintiffs. The plaintiffs through their predecessor and tenants were at all times, including the brief period of operation by the lumber company, in possession of the land involved in the action, using the same in connection with an adjoining tract for dairying purposes. After the shutting down of operations by the lumber company, no attempt was made to preserve the railroad and other improvements upon the premises constructed by it to facilitate its work; the railroad was partly destroyed by slides and washouts; the cabins and cookhouse remained unoccupied; the wire rope and machinery were left out in the woods to rust. The doors and windows of the cabins were at all times left open and the stove in the cooking house fell to pieces. After the abandonment of the work of cutting and removing the timber and until early in the year 1914, an employé of the lumber company or its successor, designated as a "caretaker," visited the Mayer tract about once a month; but such visits were unknown to the plaintiffs, and resulted at no time in any effort or steps taken to preserve the improvements or personal property left by the lumber company at the scene of its former operations. The land both before and after the execution of the contracts upon which the defendant's rights are founded was at all times assessed to the plaintiffs, and their predecessors, who paid all taxes thereon, and at no time was any interest therein assessed to the defendant or its assignor.

Upon evidence establishing the foregoing state of facts, the court found that on October 30, 1907, the Western Redwood Lumber Company and all of its agents and employés entirely withdrew from the land; and that neither they nor the defendant has thereafter ever been in possession thereof or exercised acts of ownership with regard thereto, but that the plaintiffs ever since said 30th day of October, 1907, have been in possession of the lands and of all the standing and growing timber thereon; and as a conclusion of law found that the defendant has no interest in the pine or redwood timber growing upon said tract.

[1] In support of the appeal, it is the principal contention of the appellant that under the contract in suit, construed in connection with the option which preceded it, no forfeiture of the right to cut and remove the timber could occur before July 1, 1915. With this contention we cannot agree. We are of the opinion that the rights granted to the assignor of the defendant are to be found in the contract of June 15, 1906, entered into upon the exercise by said assignor of the option previously given to it, and that the plain meaning of the provisions of that contract above quoted is that the right of the grantee thereunder to cut timber should expire ipso facto at the end of five years from the commencement of the cutting, and in any event should expire on July 1, 1915, so that, if the grantee delayed the commencement of its operations until a point of time less than five years prior to said last-mentioned date, the five-year period would be thereby correspondingly curtailed. It is not necessary in sustaining this judgment to go so far as to hold that the grantee's rights were forfeited by its discontinuance of operations on October 30, 1907. It is sustainable upon the theory that those rights continued in force five years from the commencement of the removal of the timber, which would be in August, 1912. As we have seen, it was nearly two years later than this date that the defendant prepared to re-enter the lands for the purpose of resuming operations. It has been frequently and expressly held that a sale of standing timber, the same to be removed within a specified time, is a grant of only so much thereof as shall be removed within that period.

The rule applicable to contracts such as the one in suit is stated in 25 Cyc. 1551:

> "It is customary, where standing timber is sold without the land, to provide in the contract that the timber shall be removed within a specified time. Where such clause is inserted, the time usually begins to run from the execution of the conveyance, although sometimes a different time is agreed upon, such as the time of the commencing of the cutting. The general rule is that where the contract requires the timber to be removed within a given time the sale is only of so much timber as is removed within that time, and confers no authority to remove after the expiration of the time specified. The majority of cases hold that the title to the timber not removed reverts to the owner, but some of the cases merely hold that the buyer has no right of entry. Each case depends upon the terms of the particular contract."

In the case of King v. Merriman, 38 Minn. 47, 35 N. W. 570, an action for damages for the conversion of a quantity of sawlogs, the court used this language:

> "Contracts relating to an interest in standing timber, with an express limitation as to the time of removal, are familiar to the American courts in the timbered states. * * * Sometimes these contracts are in the form of conveyances of timber; sometimes of a sale, coupled with a license to enter; sometimes of a formal license to enter and cut, and again of a reservation of the timber by the grantor in the conveyance of the land. But, whatever the form, the limitation as to the time of removal has been almost invariably held to be a limitation of the grant or reservation itself. The reasons are manifest. Any other construction would be against the expressed intention of the parties. Moreover, if the right of entry be not limited to the time fixed, it would be practically unlimited, which would amount to so serious an incumbrance upon the land as to materially interfere with the owner's right to use or dispose of it."

In Utley v. S. N. Wilcox Lumber Co., 59 Mich. 263, 26 N. W. 488, the Supreme Court of Michigan says:

> "The legal effect of this contract was that Wilcox, the owner of the land, sold to Utley the pine timber thereon for $2,500, Utley to cut and remove the same therefrom during the winter of 1877-78, or, if it could not be done for lack of snow, then he was to cut and remove the same during the winter of 1878-79, and before May 1, 1879. The title of the timber passed to Utley immediately upon the execution of the contract. * * * The license to enter, and remove the timber, continued, * * * until May 1, 1879. The express agreement of Utley was that he would commence at once on the job" and finish by May 1, 1879. "The intention is clearly expressed to limit the time in which he might cut and remove the sawlogs. * * * From all the contracts and acts of the parties in connection therewith the intention clearly appears to limit the time in which the timber * * * should be cut and removed, and that the sale was confined to such timber as should be cut and removed within the specified time."

In Null v. Elliott, 52 W. Va. 229, 43 S. E. 173, the owner of the land granted, bargained, and sold all the timber, tanbark, and ties on the premises. The contract provided that the grantee was to have two years from date to take off and remove said timber and not later, and to have all the privileges of going on said land with roadways, millsites, etc. The time limit in the contract expired, and the grantor notified the grantee not to further trespass upon the land by cutting any more timber, or removing that already cut, or the temporary buildings erected by the grantee upon the land. The grantee filed his bill, setting out the hardships of the contract, the great loss he would sustain if he was prevented from reaping the benefits thereof, and asking the court to relieve him by extending the time for the execution of the contract. The court in deciding the case says:

> "A contract for the sale of all the timber, tanbark, and ties on a certain tract of land, and providing that the purchaser is to have two years to take off and remove such timber, and not later, does not authorize the purchaser to sever any timber standing on the land after the two-year limit has expired. Such a provision as this in timber contracts is held to be a condition of the sale, and not a covenant to remove, and that the purchaser only takes such of the timber as he may cut and remove in the specified time; otherwise it remains the property of the landowner as part of the land. * * * Such being the law, the plaintiff could not ask a court of equity to extend the time limit, for it would be making a new and entirely different contract between the parties."

[2] The appellant further contends that the provision in the contract that the removal of the timber should be completed within five years from the time of its commencement is a mere covenant on the part of the grantee such as is alluded to in the case from which we have just quoted, the breach of which entails no forfeiture; and cites the case of Peterson v. Gibbs, 147 Cal. 6, 81 Pac. 121, 109 Am. St. Rep. 107. The facts of that case, however, were different from those here. The contract gave to the grantees ten years within which to remove the timber, followed by a provision that for every year thereafter that the timber was allowed to remain on the land the grantees should pay the sum of $200. The court held that in such a case the removal within ten years was not a condition attached to the grant of the timber, but it also laid down the rule that "the question in each case is as to what is the contract between the parties."

[3] The next contention of the appellant is that if the right of forfeiture existed before July 1, 1915, it was not self-executing, but upon the happening of the default it was necessary for the plaintiffs by some overt act to assert their right of forfeiture, and that if they failed to do so, or thereafter recognized the defendant's interest as continuing, no forfeiture accrued. We think that this contention is sufficiently answered by the finding of the trial court that the plaintiffs at all times were in possession of the land after the withdrawal by the defendant's assignor, and by what we have already said as to the five-year limitation upon the right to cut timber upon the plaintiff's land.

The adverse findings of the trial court also dispose of the further contention that the plaintiffs expressly, impliedly, and by laches waived any right of forfeiture that existed in their favor, and were estopped by their conduct to claim any termination of defendant's rights prior to July 1, 1915.

The further claim is made by the appellant that any limitation of time for the cutting of timber was superseded by express agreement; but the evidence upon which this contention is based, viz. an expression in a letter written by one of the plaintiffs to the defendant, was not considered by the trial court as susceptible of receiving this construction, and we think the trial court was entirely correct in its conclusion.

[4] It is finally urged in support of the appeal that the court's finding, "That prior to the service of said notice (of February 5, 1914) plaintiffs did no other act to indicate a claim of forfeiture," entitled defendant to judgment; but we think it sufficiently apparent from what we have already stated that under the facts of this case it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to do more than they did to permit them to exclude defendant from their lands from and after the month of August, 1912; and the only occasion or necessity for serving the defendant with the written notice of February 5, 1914, alluded to in the finding of the trial court in question, arose from the asserted intention of the defendant at that time to resume lumbering operations upon the plaintiffs' land.

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment is affirmed.

We concur: LENNON, P. J.; RICHARDS, J.

(33 Cal. App. 319)

PEOPLE v. KUHN. (Cr. 532.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. March 27, 1917.)

1. FORGERY 🔑47 — FRAUDULENT INTENT—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In a prosecution for forging a check, the fraudulent intent of defendant was a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Forgery, Cent. Dig. § 123.]

2. FORGERY 🔑44½ — SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of employé for forging employer's check.

3. FORGERY 🔑14 — NECESSITY FOR ACTUAL DAMAGE.

It is not necessary to sustain a conviction for forgery that the party whose name has been forged has suffered actual damage; it being only essential that it appear that if manifest intent of defendant culminated in success, such damage would follow.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Forgery, Cent. Dig. § 49.]

Appeal from Superior Court, San Bernardino County; J. W. Curtis, Judge.

A. Kuhn was convicted of forgery, and appeals from judgment and from an order denying motion for new trial. Affirmed.

Albert D. Trujillo, of San Bernardino, for appellant. U. S. Webb, Atty. Gen., and Robert M. Clarke, Deputy Atty. Gen., for the People.

JAMES, J. Defendant was convicted of the crime of forgery and sentenced to a term of imprisonment. He appeals from the judgment and from an order denying his motion for a new trial.

[1, 2] It was charged by the information that the defendant forged the name of G. W. Dewey to a check for the sum of $25, drawn on the Farmers' Exchange National Bank of San Bernardino. The defendant did not deny having drawn the check, and did not deny having signed the name of Dewey thereto. He claimed in his defense to have obtained some authority authorizing him so to do, although he did not assert that this authority expressly authorized him to draw checks, but rather that he was authorized to do business for Dewey. In the city of San Bernardino Dewey owned a furniture business, which was conducted by an agent named Lipphard. Dewey lived in the city of Los Angeles. Lipphard had full control of the business in San Bernardino, including the making of deposits of money in bank, and drawing checks thereon. Such checks were drawn in the name of Dewey, with the initials of Lipphard following the signature. The defendant had made some collections and attended to the sales of some merchandise on behalf of the Dewey store in San Bernardino. The manager, however, testified that no authority had at any time been given to defendant to draw checks, either by himself or by Dewey. The check described in the information was cashed by the defendant at a saloon in Colton. Defendant testified that of the $25 which he received he paid to Lipphard, manager of the store of Dewey, $10, and retained the remaining $15 for the purpose of paying his expenses on a trip to the city of Los Angeles, where he claimed to have had some business to do with Dewey himself. Lipphard denied having received the $10 mentioned by the defendant. The check upon being presented to the bank for payment was declared to be a forgery, and the arrest of defendant followed in consequence. Upon this state of the evidence the defendant here contends on his appeal that there was no showing made of any intent to defraud Dewey. The matter of the intent of the defendant was a thing to be determined by the jury, and upon the whole evidence, which has been briefly stated in the abstract, we think the verdict of guilty was wholly authorized.

[3] It is not necessary, as has been held, that a party whose name has been forged has suffered actual damage; it is only essential that it appear that if the manifest intent of the defendant culminated in success, such damage or detriment would follow. People v. Turner, 113 Cal. 280, 45 Pac. 331.

We have examined very fully the statement of the evidence as brought here in the reporter's transcript, as well as the instructions given by the trial judge. We can discover no error which prejudiced the defendant in his right to a fair trial, and we think that the proof was ample to sustain the verdict.

The judgment and order are affirmed.

We concur: CONREY, P. J.; SHAW, J.

(33 Cal. App. 321)

GROTEFEND v. MAY et al. (Civ. 1634.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. March 27, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 24, 1917.)

1. Action 🔑22 — Nature of Cause of Action—How Determined.

Where a plaintiff sets up two different causes of action upon the same contract, the real nature of the cause of action will be determined from the contract itself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Action, Cent. Dig. §§ 124–139, 143, 145.]

2. Trusts 🔑35(1)—Express Trust—Distinguished from Sales Contract.

An agreement under which plaintiff withdrew his claim for a land patent and defendant agreed that, upon obtaining a patent, he would convey to plaintiff a portion of the land so obtained, is a sales contract and does not create an express trust so as to make the doctrine of laches inapplicable until defendant repudiated its terms.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 45, 49, 50.]

3. Specific Performance 🔑105(3)—Demand for Performance—Laches.

Plaintiff's cause of action upon an agreement, under which he withdrew his claim to a patent for land and defendant agreed to convey to him for a certain consideration a portion of such land after obtaining a patent, accrued when defendant obtained the land, and no demand for performance was necessary to make the doctrine of laches applicable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 327–341.]

4. Limitation of Actions 🔑66(15)—Computation.

Where a demand for performance of a contract is necessary to start the statute of limitations running, the demand must be made within a reasonable time.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. §§ 373, 374.]

5. Contracts 🔑211 — Construction—Time of Performance.

Whether time is of the essence of a contract is ordinarily determined from its terms, although some consideration may be given the character of the property involved when the contract is silent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 938–943.]

6. Specific Performance 🔑105(3)—Laches.

If a demand to perform a contract to convey mining property was necessary to make the doctrine of laches applicable, more than a reasonable time elapsed for such demand where made eight years after defendant obtained the land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Specific Performance, Cent. Dig. §§ 327–341.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Trinity County; J. W. Bartlett, Judge.

Action by George A. Grotefend against Edward F. May, George L. Taylor, and H. White, surviving trustees of the Trinity Dredging & Hydraulic Gold Mining Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed.

W. C. Sharpstein, of San Francisco, for appellants. Thomas B. Dozier, of San Francisco, for respondent.

HART, J. The following, extracted from the initial brief of the appellant, comprehends a complete and an accurate statement of the facts of the controversy presented for solution by this appeal:

"The second amended complaint alleges two causes of action, both of which, however, are founded on a single written instrument, Exhibit A, which is annexed to the pleading.

"It appears therefrom and from the allegations of the first cause of action that the Trinity Dredging & Hydraulic Gold Mining Company, to which we shall hereafter refer as the 'corporation,' was an applicant before the local United States Land Office for a patent to certain mineral lands, including the premises in controversy; that plaintiff filed an adverse to said application as to practically all of said land, including the premises in controversy, and commenced an action in the superior court pursuant to Revised Statutes U. S. § 2326 (Comp. St. 1916, § 4623), 'to determine the question of the right of possession' to the lands embraced in said adverse; that while said action was pending the parties to it entered into an agreement by the terms of which plaintiff was to dismiss said action and his adverse, the corporation was to proceed with its application for patent upon the issuance of which it was to convey the premises in controversy to plaintiff free of incumbrance, who was thereupon to pay the corporation $50 in cash and deliver to it his promissory note for $50, without interest, payable in six months; that pursuant to this agreement plaintiff did dismiss said action and his adverse, and the corporation prosecuted its application for patent with the result that the patent was issued June 30, 1906; that on November 30, 1907, the corporation became dissolved for nonpayment of the corporation license tax, and the defendants are the survivors of the directors of the corporation in office at the date of the dissolution; that on April 30, 1914, plaintiff tendered performance on his part and demanded of defendants the deed provided by the agreement, which demand was refused; that this action was commenced May 15, 1914.

"The second cause of action omits all reference to the adverse proceedings by plaintiff in the land office and in the court, but in lieu thereof alleges that the corporation agreed to sell to plaintiff the premises in controversy upon receipt of the patent. Otherwise the allegations are identical with those of the first cause of action."

The defendants interposed a demurrer to each of the causes of action stated upon the grounds: (1) That there was no cause of action stated; (2) that the cause of action was barred by the provisions of section 337, subd. 1, and section 343, of the Code of Civil Procedure; (3) that the plaintiff has been guilty of laches. The demurrer being overruled, the defendants answered, and thus, without denying the allegations of the complaint, pleaded the statute of limitations, basing said plea upon the sections of the Code of Civil Procedure invoked and specified in the demurrer; and also pleaded laches. It was stipulated by the parties that the cause be submitted to the trial court for its decision upon the second amended complaint and the answer thereto; it being further stipulated, in support of the allegations of the answer, that the original complaint in the action was filed and said action commenced on the 19th day of May, 1914. Findings were by said stipulation waived, and it was further stipulated that "this stipulation shall form a part of the judgment roll." Upon the issues framed as indicated and the above-mentioned stipulation, the court rendered and entered its judgment, decreeing and adjudging that the defendants, within 30 days from and after "the date of service of notice of entry of this decree, make, execute, acknowledge and cause to be certified, a good and sufficient deed, conveying and assuring the title, and all of the title" to that portion of the lands referred to in the complaint which is described as the N. E. ¼ of the N. W. ¼ of section 28, township 36 N., range 7 W., M. D. M., situated in the county of Trinity. This appeal is prosecuted by the defendants from said judgment.

It will be observed from the above statement that the parcel of land in controversy is a fractional portion of all the lands mentioned in the complaint, and that the adverse filed by the plaintiff to the application of the defendants for a patent involved all of the lands so mentioned and described, "save and except the N. E. ¼ of the N. W. ¼, and the E. ½ of the W. ½ of the N. W. ¼ of section 28, township 36 N., range 7 W., M. D. M.," within which section all the lands described in the complaint are situated.

The questions submitted for decision by this appeal, as must be obvious from the above statement of the issues, are whether the causes of action set out in the complaint are barred by the provisions of the statute of limitations invoked and pleaded by the defendants or by the laches of the plaintiff.

As seen, the first cause of action stated proceeds upon the theory that the corporation, in prosecuting its application for and obtaining a patent to the land in dispute, acted for and in behalf of the plaintiff, and that, upon securing the patent, it became the holder of the legal title in trust for the plaintiff. In other words, the contention is that by the agreement an express trust was created. It is hence argued that, since the statute of limitations cannot run against a trust until the repudiation thereof by the trustee, and, inasmuch as there was no repudiation of said trust until the 30th day of April, 1914 (15 days preceding the commencement of this action), the statute cannot be invoked to defeat the plaintiff's right of action.

In the second count or cause of action, the complaint, as shown, alleges that by the written agreement referred to the corporation agreed to sell, and the plaintiff agreed to purchase, the land in question upon the issuance to the former by the general government of a patent to said land. Thus a contract for the purchase and sale of the property is stated.

The plaintiff, however, relies mainly upon the theory upon which the first cause of action proceeds, and, while we may properly assume that the decision of the trial court was founded upon said theory, we are of the opinion that, in either case, the plaintiff's cause of action has lapsed by reason of laches.

[1, 2] Although the plaintiff has set up two different causes of action under the written agreement upon which the action is founded, we must, nevertheless, determine the nature of the cause of action which is available to him under the contract upon which he declares from the nature of the contract itself. Burling v. Newlands, 112 Cal. 476, 494, 44 Pac. 810. Thus considering and viewing the action, we are constrained to the opinion that it is not, nor could it be, under the agreement, one for the enforcement of an express trust, as counsel for the plaintiff contend, but merely one for the specific performance of the terms of a contract whereby a prospective vendor has agreed, for a specified consideration, to convey to a prospective vendee a certain parcel of land, after the former had acquired title thereto. In other words, we are unable to perceive in the contractual relation established between the parties by the agreement the essential elements of an express trust. Of course, in a sense, there existed between the parties a trust relationship. Nearly all contracts and every agency embrace a trust relationship, but it does not follow that in all such contracts or agencies an express trust is created or that the running of the statute is affected thereby.

Boyer v. Barrows, 166 Cal. 757, 758, 759, 138 Pac. 354. Here neither of the parties, although claiming a conflicting priority of right to purchase the land, was vested with the legal title, the perfection of which in either the one or the other rested upon the event of the prosecution to completion of the requisite proceedings before the land department of the general government. The plaintiff withdrew his application or adverse, and, when this was done and the suit arising thereon dismissed, the parties in legal effect conceded that the land in contest was the property of the corporation, subject, of course, to the paramount title of the government. Thereupon the agreement or contract between the parties supervened, which alone formed the basis of any right of action in the plaintiff. Stevens v. McChrystal, 150 Fed. 85, 87, 80 C. C. A. 39. The agreement, however, bears a close analogy to and is, in effect, one whereby the parties agreed to join in the acquisition for their joint benefit a certain parcel of land, the one to obtain the legal title and thereupon, for a stated consideration, to convey to the other an interest therein. Boon v. Chamberlain, 82 Tex. 480, 18 S. W. 655. In that case, the parties had entered into an agreement for the joint acquisition of land, one of the parties impliedly agreeing that, upon securing the legal title, he would convey to the other a half interest therein. The point submitted for decision was whether the action was one for the specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of real property, and therefore subject to the operation of the statute of limitations as to such actions, or whether the agreement, which formed the basis of the action, created an express trust and the action thereon not barred until there had been a repudiation of the trust. The Texas court thus disposed of the respective contentions of the parties:

> "Was the contract between Clark and appellant a contract for the conveyance of real estate? We think it was. It is true that it was a contract for the joint acquisition of lands, and not a contract for the sale of lands. It is none the less true that by its terms Clark impliedly bound himself to convey to appellant a half interest in the land as soon as he acquired the legal title. This suit seeks to enforce that contract; that is to say, to have it specifically performed. * * *
>
> "The last question which suggests itself in this case is: When did the cause of action accrue? Did it arise as soon as Clark acquired the legal title, or not until there was some act repudiating the trust? In suits for specific performance of contracts to convey land, the cause of action accrues upon the happening of the condition upon which the vendor binds himself to make the title. Glasscock v. Nelson, 26 Tex. 150. And so in case of a contract for the joint acquisition of land, in which it is contemplated that one party shall acquire the title and convey an interest to the other, we see no reason why the latter may not sue as soon as the title is acquired. It may be that, by reason of the trust existing between the parties, equity would not hold the plaintiff guilty of laches until the defendant had done some act which showed that he no longer recognized the trust; yet the defendant binds himself to make the title to the plaintiff for his interest in the land as soon as he acquires title himself, and we are of opinion that upon a mere failure to do so a cause of action arises."

We can perceive no substantial distinction between the agreement in the Texas case and that with which we are here concerned.

The cases cited by the respondent are not conceived to be in point here. For instance, the cases of Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 6 Am. Rep. 624, and Luco v. De Toro, 91 Cal. 405, 18 Pac. 866, 27 Pac. 1082, cited by respondent, were where the parties who were to receive the conveyances had rendered services which were the consideration for the deeds. But in neither of those cases did the agreement create an express trust. Of course, a resulting trust arose, and this from the nature of the transaction—not only because of the nature of the agreement, but by reason of the fact that the party to receive the conveyance had performed or executed the consideration for the deed.

In the instant case, no money was paid nor service performed as a consideration for the conveyance. Indeed, it does not appear that the plaintiff paid any part of the expense incident and essential to the prosecution of the claim for a patent. There was no relation of confidence subsisting between the parties at the time of the making of the agreement. They were, in fact, in antagonism with each other relative to the contested land until the agreement was entered into between them. Recapitulating, the transaction simply amounted to this: That each of the parties claimed the prior right to apply for a patent. One withdrew his claim, and the other agreed that, upon obtaining the patent, he would convey to the former for a specified consideration a certain portion of the land so obtained. As before stated, we can discern in this transaction nothing more than either a mere agreement for the sale of real property or one for the joint acquisition of real property by the parties for their joint benefit.

But it is claimed that the fact that the effect of the agreement was to create an express trust is evidenced by the recital therein that:

> "The parties hereto have reached an agreement and understanding as to the rights of the several and respective parties."

The complaint, however, nowhere directly alleges that the corporation ever at any time acknowledged or conceded that the plaintiff was the owner or entitled to the property described in the agreement. Assuming therefore that the recital referred to was amenable to the interpretation to which the plaintiff subjects it, it cannot be considered as in aid of or as supplying pretermitted averments essential to the making of that proposition an issue. In Hayt v. Bentel, 164 Cal. 680, 686, 130 Pac. 432, 434, a similar point was made. The court said:

> "But there is no allegation, in either the complaint or the answer, that plaintiff ever did re> ceive or take possession of the lot. The contract is annexed to the complaint and made a part thereof. But all that is averred is that the parties made an agreement for possession, not that possession was in fact delivered. Recitals in a contract incorporated in a complaint will not supply the want of essential averments in the pleading"—citing a number of cases.

The reason underlying this rule is that it is only by inference or argument from the recital in the contract that it can be assumed that the fact to which the recital relates existed, "and the rule is as much in force under the Code as at common law that argumentative pleading is not permissible." Hibernia S. & L. Soc. v. Thoronton, 117 Cal. 483, 49 Pac. 578.

[3, 4] No reason is to be perceived for doubting that the agreement upon which this action is predicated is a "writing" within the contemplation and meaning of section 337, subd. 1, of the Code of Civil Procedure; and, while we are of the opinion that a cause of action arose in favor of the plaintiff eo instanti upon the acquisition of the legal title to the land by the corporation (Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266, 282; Danielson v. Neal, 164 Cal. 748, 130 Pac. 716), and that therefore no demand for performance was necessary to start the statute to running, yet, assuming that a demand was necessary for that purpose, the proposition remains that such demand should have been made within a reasonable time after the acquisition by the corporation of the legal title to avoid the intervention of the presumption of abandonment of the agreement.

> "Where a party's right to sue depends for its perfection solely upon the necessity of a demand by him to put his adversary in default, he cannot indefinitely and unnecessarily extend the bar of the statute by deferring such demand, but must make it within a reasonable time." Thomas v. Pac. Beach Co., 115 Cal. 136, 142, 46 Pac. 899, 900; Palmer v. Palmer, 36 Mich. 494, 24 Am. Rep. 605; Hintrager v. Traut, 69 Iowa, 746, 27 N. W. 807; Steele v. Steele, 25 Pa. 154; Bills v. Silver King Mining Co., 106 Cal. 9, 39 Pac. 43; Hopkins v. Lewis, 18 Cal. App. 107, 113, 122 Pac. 433.

[5, 6] Conceding, then, that a demand was necessary in this case, the question arises: Was the demand made within a reasonable time? The answer must be in the negative.

What is a reasonable time in a given case must always depend, of course, upon the circumstances thereof; and, in determining this question where the contract is for the sale of property, and where, as is so in this case, there is no express provision in the contract fixing the time within which the conveyance is to be made, some consideration is to be given to the character of the property which is the subject of the contract, although the general rule is that whether time is of the essence of the contract is to be determined from the terms of the writing itself. Skookum Oil Co. v. Thomas, 162 Cal. 539, 546, 123 Pac. 363.

Judge Lindley, in his treatise on Mines (volume 2, § 859), says:

> "The authorities, both in England and America, recognize that, where mines or mining property are the subject of the contract, time is of the essence, independent of any express stipulation inserted in the instrument."

In Waterman v. Banks, 144 U. S. 394, 12 Sup. Ct. 646, 36 L. Ed. 479, one of the syllabi reads:

> "Time may become of the essence of a contract for the sale of property, not only by the express stipulation of the parties, but from the very nature of the property itself; mineral property requires the parties interested in it to be vigilant and active in asserting their rights."

This rule is approved in Skookum Oil Co. v. Thomas, supra. The reason of this rule is that mining property is of that peculiar character that it is subject to frequent, sudden, or great fluctuation in value, and to permit an advantage to be gained or great loss to be suffered by long and unreasonable delay in demanding a conveyance or the money stipulated to be paid for such land would constitute the transaction an unconscientious one.

Under the above-stated principles and the facts as they are made to appear here, the conclusion is inevitable that the plaintiff, by postponing the taking of steps looking to the acquisition of his rights under the contract, was guilty of laches, and that by reason thereof his right of action on the contract is barred. Marsh v. Lott, 156 Cal. 643, 648, 105 Pac. 968; Hopkins v. Lewis, 18 Cal. App. 107, 113, 122 Pac. 433.

The land involved in this controversy is admittedly mining property. By the agreement, as we have seen, the corporation bound itself to convey to the plaintiff when it acquired title to the land. This agreement necessarily implied that at the same time the plaintiff would perform his part of the contract. And thus the time was definitely fixed when either, by offering to perform the condition to which he had bound himself, could put the other in default. The corporation failed to perform its obligation, and, of course, the plaintiff knew it. He further knew, or at least was well justified in assuming, from the fact that the corporation was as against him an applicant for a patent to the land, that the latter desired to retain it, and this, too, notwithstanding its agreement to relinquish the title to him after the patent was received. If, then, it was his intention or desire to secure the conveyance, he should have been active and vigilant in the matter of the enforcement of his rights thereunder and not have been guilty of that procrastination or inaction or passiveness which will be held to constitute acquiescense in the breach of a contract of this character or to raise the presumption of the abandonment thereof. Nor has he shown any admissible reason or valid excuse for his long period of inaction and passiveness.

A court of equity does not encourage the litigation of stale claims. It will not grant aid to those who slumber upon their rights. Nothing can call that court into activity but conscience, good faith, and diligence, and, where these (or any of them) are wanting, it will remain passive and do nothing.

It is further to be suggested that it is to be presumed, from the fact that the title to the property has been in the corporation or its successors (the trustees) during the entire period intervening between the date of the issuance of the patent to the corporation and the date upon which the plaintiff for the first time made a move to secure a conveyance, that the corporation and its successors have paid the annual taxes accruing against said property. The agreement provides that the corporation shall convey the property to the plaintiff "free and clear of all incumbrances," which include taxes and assessments levied upon and against property. Civ. Code, § 1114. It will hardly be contended that the agreement contemplates that the corporation should be charged indefinitely with the payment of the taxes levied against the property, and, since the duty or obligation of taking the initiative in the consummation of the agreement rested upon the one no less than upon the other of the parties thereto, it would seem that the failure of the plaintiff to offer to pay the taxes which had presumably been paid by the corporation upon the property for over seven years means a failure to offer to do complete equity in the premises.

The appellant makes a number of other points in impeachment of the judgment; but, as we believe the action here is barred by laches, those points need not be considered.

The judgment is reversed.

We concur: CHIPMAN, P. J.; BURNETT, J.

(33 Cal. App. 303)

TAUGHER v. RICHMOND DREDGING CO. et al. (Civ. 1626.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. March 22, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 21, 1917.)

1. Appeal and Error ⇐1011(1)—Review—Findings of Fact.

The finding of a trial court as to a matter of fact based upon conflicting evidence is conclusive on appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3983-3988.]

2. Appeal and Error ⇐1073(1)—Harmless Error—Judgment.

In a suit against a corporation and a stockholder thereof owning almost all of the stock, there was no prejudice in entering judgment in a fixed sum against each, since the payment by the corporation will discharge the liability of the stockholder, and the payment by him of the amount adjudged payable by him will discharge the corporation pro tanto.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4240.]

Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; W. M. Conley, Judge.

Action by Edward B. Taugher against the Richmond Dredging Company and another. From a judgment for plaintiff and the denial of a new trial, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

W. H. H. Hart, of San Francisco, for appellants. J. L. Taugher, of San Francisco, for respondent.

CHIPMAN, P. J. The action is by the assignee of the claim of J. L. Taugher for legal and professional services as attorney at law alleged to have been rendered and performed at the special instance and request of defendant Richmond Dredging Company, at divers times between May 1, 1910, and March 8, 1912, both dates inclusive, which said services were of the alleged value of $13,180, no part of which has been paid. Cutting was made a party defendant as a stockholder in said dredging company. The complaint specifies five different matters in which said attorney performed services of considerable consequence to the dredging company. One of these matters related to services rendered in commencing and conducting an action in the superior court of Contra Costa county wherein said dredging company was plaintiff and the Santa Fé Railroad Company the defendant, in which plaintiff recovered judgment for $25,925. Another was for services in connection with the recovery of the possession of the dredger "Richmond No. 1" prior to the filing of a libel in the United States District Court, in Admiralty, and also for services in said admiralty court in connection with said libel. Other services are alleged to have been rendered for said dredging company in and about two certain actions commenced in the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco by the Richmond Light & Power Corporation against said dredging company. Also for services in connection with a certain contract wherein the Santa Fé Railroad Company was party of the first part, the said dredging company party of the second part, and the East Shore & Suburban Railway Company party of the third part. It is alleged that the capital stock of said dredging company was $200,000, divided into 2,000 shares, each of the par value of $100, and that all of said shares were subscribed, of which said stock said Cutting was, at all times mentioned in the complaint, the owner of 1,998 shares in his own right. The pleadings are verified.

In their answer the defendants made certain admissions, but denied in substance that said attorney performed the services alleged to have been performed by him, and denied any indebtedness to him or to plaintiff on account of any said alleged services; denied, on information and belief, that J. L. Taugher "ever was, or now is, a duly, or otherwise qualified, or licensed attorney, or counselor at law, or licensed, or practicing as such, or entitled to practice at any time as such"; denied that the subscribed capital stock of said company was or now is greater in number than 38 shares; and alleges that Cutting "was the subscriber of one share and no more." It is alleged as further answer in substance that Cutting engaged Attorney Taugher (plaintiff's assignor) "to help him, the said Cutting, with the cases and legal affairs of him, said Cutting, and the various corporations in which he, the said Cutting, was interested," including the corporation defendant herein, and that said Taugher agreed "to do all of said Cutting's legal work and the legal work of said corporations in which said Cutting was interested, for and in consideration of said $200 per month, with the express understanding that nothing further whatever would be charged or paid except such further sums as would be satisfactory to said Taugher in the event that he (said J. L. Taugher) should succeed in winning said cases satisfactorily to said Cutting," and that said Taugher "promised to see the whole work through and get nothing over $200 per month until the work was finally finished and the money collected, and then only such further sum as would be satisfactory to said Cutting." It is further alleged "that no moneys as yet have been collected from any of the judgments, and said J. L. Taugher has not completed his said service and has not complied with or performed the terms of said contract," wherefore said Taugher is not entitled to any further compensation; that defendants have and each of them has complied with every condition of said contract on their part to be performed; and that, before the assignment made to plaintiff, said J. L. Taugher "had been fully paid for all work that he had performed in the premises and for all the work mentioned and described in plaintiff's complaint herein"; that said J. L. Taugher "refused to perform further services for said defendants, or either of them, in said business; and that by reason thereof said defendants, and each of them, were not satisfied with said J. L. Taugher's services in the premises."

The court found as facts: Finding 1. That J. L. Taugher was a duly qualified and licensed attorney practicing as such under the laws of this state. Finding 2. That Richmond Dredging Company was at all times mentioned a duly organized corporation under the laws of California. Findings 3, 4, 5. That the capital stock of said company is as alleged in the complaint and was all duly issued, "and, at all and every of the times mentioned in plaintiff's complaint, H. C. Cutting was and now is the owner in his own right of 99.9 per centum of the whole capital stock of said company, and of the subscribed stock thereof and was the owner of 1,998 of said shares." None of the foregoing findings is now challenged, although in their verified answer defendants denied that said J. L. Taugher was an attorney at law, denied that more than 38 shares of the capital stock of said company had been issued, and alleged that Cutting "was the owner of one share and no more." Findings 6 to 12, both inclusive, are challenged as not supported by the evidence. They may be summarized as follows: That J. L. Taugher performed services for the dredging company as alleged in the complaint, of the reasonable value of $4,650, no part of which has been paid, and that plaintiff is the owner of said claim by assignment to him prior to the commencement of the action. Findings 6, 7, 8. That there is now due and owing to plaintiff for said services, from said dredging company, the sum of $4,650, and from said Cutting the sum of $4,645.33. Findings 9, 10, 11. Finding 12 is as follows: "That all the allegations of the answer of defendants are untrue, except the express admissions contained therein."

As conclusions of law the court found that plaintiff was entitled to recover from defendant dredging company, the sum of $4,650 and costs of suit and from defendant Cutting the sum of $4,645.33 and 99.99 per centum of the costs. Judgment passed accordingly. Defendants appeal from the judgment and the order denying their motion for a new trial.

There is abundant evidence that plaintiff's assignor performed services as attorney practically as averred in the complaint, and there was ample evidence to support the findings as to the value of said services. The evidence would have justified a larger judgment. The evidence was that much important successful litigation was conducted by Attorney Taugher for defendant dredging company, occupying substantially all his time for nearly two years.

The only questions as to which there was any serious controversy were: First, were the services rendered by Attorney Taugher performed for the Richmond Dredging Company at its instance and request? Second, were these services performed under the contract alleged in the answer which in effect was alleged to have been that Mr. Taugher "would do all of said Cutting's legal work and the legal work of the corporations in which said Cutting was interested, for and in consideration of said $200 per month" and, when the work was finished, "only such further sum as would be satisfactory to said Cutting"? Third, did Mr. Taugher fail to perform the terms of said contract? Fourth, has he been fully paid?

It appeared that Mr. Cutting was president of the Richmond Dredging Company and also president of the Point Richmond Canal & Land Company, and owned substantially all of the shares of these corporations. In the course of his testimony concerning the alleged contract he claimed to have made with Mr. Taugher, Mr. Cutting testified:

"Q. Did you at that time explain to him with reference to the different corporations that you had? A. Oh, yes. He thoroughly understood that. Q. Tell what you said to him on that subject. A. I told him all about it; I told him the whole layout. That the Point Richmond Land & Canal Company and the Richmond Dredging Company were practically myself, the same thing; and I explained to him the business and the construction of the whole thing. We went clear through it with long explanations."

He testified that he had a great deal of private business outside of these corporations.

[1] It appeared that Mr. Taugher performed services for the Richmond Land & Canal Company and also for Mr. Cutting individually, and there was evidence that payments were made by Cutting and by the Point Richmond Canal & Land Company to Mr. Taugher, as shown by checks and receipts, amounting to $3,669.50. Defendants claim that this amount should have been deducted from the amount found by the court to be due for said services, to wit, $4,650. Mr. Taugher contended, and so testified, that these payments were made by Cutting and the Richmond Canal & Land Company for services rendered by him to them, and that he had applied the payments on account of such services, and that there remained an unpaid balance due him from Cutting and said corporation. None of these payments appeared to have been made by the Richmond Dredging Company or on account of services for that company. As to the alleged contract that Attorney Taugher was to receive only $200 per month and such further compensation as Cutting might feel disposed to allow, the testimony of Cutting and Taugher was in sharp conflict, the latter testifying that no such contract was made. The finding of the court that defendants' claim in this respect is untrue is, under the rule, conclusive upon us. As the court found that the contract alleged by defendants was not entered into, it would follow that there was no breach of such contract by Attorney Taugher.

There was no formal employment of Attorney Taugher evidenced by a resolution of the directors of the dredging company. His employment was by Cutting on its behalf, and it received the benefit of the services rendered. Cutting was for all practical purposes the corporation and was managing its business much the same as if it were his own. We do not think the corporation can escape liability on the theory that Cutting was unauthorized to incur it. The finding of the court that the services of Attorney Taugher were performed at the instance and request of the defendant company, and not under the contract alleged by defendants, finds support in the evidence.

This action was commenced March 9, 1912. After the judgment had been recovered against the Santa Fé Railroad Company in favor of the Richmond Dredging Company and some time prior to the commencement of the present action, a disagreement arose between Attorney Taugher and Cutting as to the compensation due to the former for his services, who at the time was urging further payment on account. Some of the matters in the attorney's charge had been finally disposed of, while others were yet unfinished and an appeal by the Santa Fé Company in the dredger case was impending. It is not necessary to burden this opinion with the testimony bearing upon the merits of this dispute. It arose mainly out of Cutting's contention that Taugher was working under a contract for $200 per month, which the court found was not true. Much bitterness of feeling between the two men was engendered which resulted in the substitution by Cutting, with Taugher's consent, of another attorney to conduct the Richmond Dredger Company case for respondent on the appeal and the severing of all relations as client and attorney, followed by the present action.

We think the evidence abundantly showed that Taugher had not been paid in full for his services, as is now contended by appellant, and treating the payments made, as probably the court did, as justly applicable, as far as they went, towards compensating the attorney, his services were shown to be reasonably worth an additional amount quite equal to that found by the court.

Nor do we think the evidence showed that there was an agreement on Taugher's part, as is claimed, "to prosecute each of the cases mentioned in plaintiff's complaint, to a finality, which he did not do." No doubt he expected to be retained in the business to a finish, but the evidence would not have justified the court in finding that his compensation depended upon such a condition. Besides, he did not voluntarily throw up his brief, but was relieved from further responsibility in the business by Cutting himself. His action was for services rendered up to the date of his discharge, which was early in March, 1912. The evidence was directed to the value of his services rendered, and the witnesses based their estimate of such value upon the successful manner in which he had conducted the business prior to his discharge.

[2] It is claimed that the court erred in entering judgment against the dredger company for $4,650 and costs of suit, $56.25, and a separate judgment against defendant Cutting for $4,645.33 and $56.19 costs. There is in fact but one judgment; but, inasmuch as Cutting's liability was that only of a stockholder, the amount of the judgment chargeable to him was necessarily less than that against the dredging company because he did not own all of its capital stock. A payment of the judgment by the dredging company would discharge his liability under it, and the payment by him of the amount adjudged payable by him would discharge the dredging company pro tanto. We do not see how either appellant is prejudiced by the form of the judgment.

The judgment and order are affirmed.

We concur: HART, J.; BURNETT, J.

(33 Cal. App. 287)

SQUIRES v. ESTEY. (Civ. 1871.)

(District Court of Appeal, First District, California. March 22, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 21, 1917.)

1. TAXATION 🔑800(1)—TAX SALES—CANCELLATION—REIMBURSEMENT OF PURCHASER.

Where owner of property seeks equitable relief against tax deed or sale as a cloud upon his title or seeks to obtain judgment invalidating such sale or deed, relief will be refused unless he first repay to the tax purchaser or his grantee or assignee the taxes, penalties, interest, and costs justly chargeable against the land and paid by such purchaser, with legal interest from time of payment, less such rents as the purchaser in possession may have received, even though the assessment and levy of the taxes for which the property was sold was irregular or void.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1586.]

2. TAXATION 🔑809(3)—TAX SALES—REIMBURSEMENT OF PURCHASER—PLEADING.

In action to quiet title against defendant claiming under tax deed, defendant's amended answer and cross-complaint alleging amount of taxes paid held sufficient as to details of assessment and levy of taxes in absence of special demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1586, 1602.]

3. TAXATION 🔑814(1)—TAX SALES—REIMBURSEMENT OF PURCHASER.

The right of a purchaser of a tax title upon the cancellation of his tax deed to recover taxes, interest, and penalties paid by him rests upon equitable principles, and is not dependent upon Pol. Code, § 3898, subd. 5, as amended in 1913 (St. 1913, p. 560).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. § 1612.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Alameda County; J. J. Trabucco, Judge.

Action to quiet title by Raymond J. Squires against Charles V. Estey. From a judgment directing the reimbursement of defendant for taxes paid as a condition of the judgment quieting title, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

L. A. Kottinger and Milton Shepardson, both of Oakland, for appellant. John G. Lawlor, of San Francisco, for respondent.

RICHARDS, J. This is an appeal from the judgment in defendant's favor in an action commenced by the plaintiff, as the owner of a certain tract of land, to quiet title thereto against the defendant claiming under a tax deed. The defendant in his answer and cross-complaint set up his tax deed as a defense to the action, and also averred that he had paid out and expended the sum of $905 as taxes, penalties, costs, interest, and charges which were assessed and a lien upon said property at the time he obtained said tax deed to the same, and the payment of which was a condition precedent to the issuance of said tax deed; and the defendant prayed that, should the court find his tax deed for any reason invalid, and adjudge the plaintiff to be the owner of the property, it should also in its judgment decree that the plaintiff be required to repay to the defendant the sums so expended. Upon the issues as thus made up the trial court found the defendant's tax deed to be invalid, but directed the repayment to the defendant by the plaintiff of the sum of $835.90 so expended by him for taxes and so forth, and decreed that its judgment quieting the plaintiff's title should be ineffectual until such sum was paid. From this judgment the plaintiff prosecutes this appeal.

[1] The main contention of the appellant is that the various items of taxes, etc., alleged to have been paid by the defendant as a prerequisite to the issuance to him of the tax deed were based upon assessments and levies of taxes by the state and by the city of Oakland which were void on account of numerous defects and irregularities as shown in the proofs and pointed out in the briefs of appellant. Conceding that such defects and irregularities exist, and that they were such as would have rendered void the tax deed issued to the defendant, and uncollectible the taxes based thereon in any proceedings initiated by the state to compel the plaintiff as the owner of the property to pay the same, or even in any proceeding initiated by the defendant to quiet his title to the property, we are still unable to distinguish this case from the case of Holland v. Hotchkiss, 162 Cal. 366, 123 Pac. 258, L. R. A. 1915C, 492, wherein the rule is laid down that:

> "Where the owner comes into equity asking equitable relief to remove or cancel a tax deed or sale as a cloud upon his title, or to obtain a judgment which, in effect, will invalidate such sale or deed, the court should refuse any relief except upon the condition that he first repay to the tax purchaser, or his grantee or assignee, the taxes, penalties, interest, and costs justly chargeable upon the land and which the purchaser has paid at the sale, or afterward upon the faith of it, with legal interest from the time of such payment, less rents received, if any, if the purchaser has been in possession."

It is contended, however, by the appellant that this rule has only application to cases where the assessment and levy of the taxes sought to be recovered were so far legal as to have created a lien upon the property. But the case above cited does not make this distinction in its application of the broad principle that he who seeks equity must do equity; but, on the contrary, the most recent cases which are cited therein as upholding the doctrine, or which have been decided since, are cases in which the assessments and levies of taxes were void for irregularities as vital as those relied upon by the appellant in the case at bar, notwithstanding which the owners of the property going into a court of equity, seeking the equitable relief of a decree quieting their title as against void tax deeds, were required in each case to pay or offer to pay a sum equal to the taxes which would be justly due. Couts v. Cornell, 147

Cal. 560, 82 Pac. 194, 109 Am. St. Rep. 168; Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Burke, 151 Cal. 616, 91 Pac. 504; Campbell v. Canty, 162 Cal. 382, 123 Pac. 266; Johnson v. Canty, 162 Cal. 391, 123 Pac. 263; Cordano v. Kelsey, 28 Cal. App. 9, 151 Pac. 391, 398. Upon the authority of those cases we find no merit in the foregoing contention on the part of the appellant.

[2] The appellant also contends that the defendant's amended answer and cross-complaint were insufficient in respect to their affirmative averments as to the details of the assessment and levy of the taxes sought to be recovered. We are of the opinion that, however uncertain and indefinite the defendant's pleading may be in the respects indicated, it was sufficient to raise the issue in the absence of a special demurrer.

[3] As to the appellant's contention that section 3898, subd. 5, of the Political Code, as amended in 1913 (St. 1913, p. 560), is void in its attempted application to assessments and levies of taxes made before the passage of such amendment, it is sufficient to say that the respondent's right to a recovery in the case at bar does not depend upon this or any other section of the Code, but rests upon a principle of equity well established in the decisions of the courts long prior to the amendment of the Code.

Judgment affirmed.

We concur: LENNON, P. J.; KERRIGAN, J.

On Resubmission.

LENNON, P. J. The judgment is affirmed, for the reasons stated in an opinion filed March 2, 1917, which opinion is hereby adopted as the opinion of the court following the resubmission of the cause, and said opinion is hereby ordered refiled as of this date.

* * *

(33 Cal. App. 347)

FRED MEDART MFG. CO. v. WEARY & ALFORD CO. (Civ. 2019.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. April 3, 1917.)

1. SALES 🔑52(6) — SELLER'S ACTION FOR PRICE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In a seller's action for price, evidence that plaintiff's alleged agent notified defendant buyer that he was acting as such agent, and that the goods were billed directly from the plaintiff to defendant, does not sustain a finding that defendant purchased from the agent and not from plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. § 138.]

2. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑105(4)—AUTHORITY OF AGENT TO COLLECT PURCHASE PRICE.

An agent for the sale of personal property without possession thereof is not authorized to collect the purchase price, although Civ. Code, § 2325, authorizes a general agent intrusted with possession of the thing sold to do so.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 301, 374.]

3. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑137(1)—LIABILITY OF THIRD PARTIES—COLLECTING PURCHASE PRICE.

Where defendant buyer notified plaintiff seller that he intended to pay the purchase price to plaintiff's alleged agent, and no objection was raised, plaintiff is estopped to claim that such agent was unauthorized to receive payment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 492, 494.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; Paul J. McCormick, Judge.

Action by the Fred Medart Manufacturing Company against the Weary & Alford Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Bicksler, Smith & Parke, of Los Angeles, for appellant. Ralph F. Twombly, of Los Angeles, for respondent.

JAMES, J. Suit was brought to recover the sum of $411.64 alleged to be due and owing to the plaintiff from the defendant on account of the sale of certain merchandise. Judgment was in favor of defendant. The appeal is from the judgment and is presented upon the judgment roll and a bill of exceptions.

Plaintiff at times material to the controversy was engaged in the city of St. Louis, Mo., in manufacturing steel office furniture of certain particular varieties. J. M. Bloom was an agent of the plaintiff in the city of Los Angeles. In July, 1913, he quoted to the defendant prices on certain articles of metal furniture. In the letter containing the quotations he stated:

> "The lockers are made by the Fred Medart Mfg. Co. of St. Louis, for which I am California agent."

The offer made by Bloom was accepted by the defendant, and the articles of merchandise were thereafter delivered, being billed directly from the plaintiff manufacturing company to the defendant. On December 24, 1913, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant advising the latter that their draft drawn to cover a portion of the purchase price of the merchandise had been returned with the notification from the collecting bank that the drawee was "paying their local agent." The letter also contained the following:

> "Up to this writing, we have not received the remittance through our local agent and are today taking this matter up with him."

On January 6th the plaintiff wrote to defendant as follows:

> "We have not received this remittance, and we again take this matter up with you and ask that you kindly advise us immediately upon receipt of this letter if you have paid any money to Mr. J. M. Bloom. P. S. If you have not paid this account to Mr. Bloom, kindly mail us check."

On January 15th the defendant wrote to the plaintiff acknowledging receipt of the letter of January 6th, and stating to the plaintiff that settlement had been delayed, but that, as soon as the goods had been satisfactorily installed, "we will settle in full with Mr. Bloom." It appears to be agreed that full settlement was thereafter made with Bloom, the agent, subsequent to which time defendant received notification from the plaintiff that Bloom was not authorized to accept the payment on its behalf. This suit was prosecuted on the same theory.

[1] The trial judge by his findings determined that the merchandise in question was purchased from Bloom, and not from the plaintiff, and that Bloom had been fully paid therefor. In view of the fact, as shown by the evidence, that Bloom in his first letter to the defendant gave notice that he was acting as agent for the plaintiff, and also as the merchandise was billed directly from the plaintiff to the defendant and correspondence was had showing at all times that plaintiff was the principal of Bloom, it must properly be said that the finding referred to is not supported by the evidence. However that may be, the court did find that Bloom received payment in full for the merchandise.

[2] This brings us to the question as to whether, assuming that an agency only existed between plaintiff and Bloom, Bloom possessed authority to bind the plaintiff by receipt of the purchase price agreed upon. The rule is of long standing that an agent for the sale of personal property merely, not having possession thereof, is not thereby vested with authority to bind his principal by collection of the purchase price. Our Civil Code, § 2325, provides:

> "A general agent to sell, who is intrusted by the principal with the possession of the thing sold, has authority to receive the price."

[3] Herein the authority of a factor having possession of goods and a mere sales agent without possession differs. But, conceding that Bloom had no authority under his contract of agency to collect the proceeds on the sale of the merchandise furnished by the plaintiff, we think that under the facts here shown there was created for such purpose an agency by estoppel; that is, that the failure of the plaintiff to notify the defendant of the limitation on the agent's authority closed its mouth against any claim denying that such authority existed. The plaintiff was first advised by letter and by the return of their draft of defendant's intention to pay Bloom, and did not object thereto, but stated to the defendant that they were taking the matter up with Bloom in order to secure the remittance. The next letter written by the defendant to plaintiff again advised plaintiff of the intention of defendant to settle in full with Bloom, which the defendant so did. After all the money had been paid, for the first time the defendant is advised that no authority existed in Bloom to make collections on behalf of the plaintiff. We are well satisfied that the payment to Bloom under such circumstances discharged the debt to the plaintiff. See Mechem on Agency, vol. 1 (2d Ed.) § 932 et seq. As under the facts shown and by reason of the conclusion which we have drawn no recovery could be had by the plaintiff against the defendant, the question of the correctness of the finding of the court that there was no contractual relation between the plaintiff and defendant becomes immaterial.

The judgment is affirmed.

We concur: CONREY, P. J.; SHAW, J.

(33 Cal. App. 354)

WARDEN et al. v. CHOATE. (Civ. 1927.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. April 3, 1917.)

1. INJUNCTION 🔑252(6)—BOND—DAMAGES.

Where defendants in a suit for injunction made no motion to dissolve the temporary restraining order, but only resisted the order to show cause, as the temporary restraining order fell of its own weight at the time limited therein, being the time fixed for the hearing of the order to show cause, in an action on the undertaking given for damages sustained by reason of such restraining order, the court properly determined that no attorney's fees were incurred as damages by reason of the restraining order.

2. INJUNCTION 🔑252(4)—BOND—DAMAGES.

Where assessment certificates acquired on account of sale of property for delinquent street assessments were sequestered by a temporary restraining order, in an action on the undertaking given therein, in which it was alleged that by the restraint imposed plaintiffs had been prevented from securing a deed to a lot affected by one of the certificates, and had been prevented from accepting an offer made for such lot, it was not proper to allow damages therefor, where there was no allegation in the complaint or evidence that the lot was worth less after the restraining order had become of no effect than it was at any time during the pendency of the injunction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Injunction, Cent. Dig. §§ 589, 590, 592-595.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; John W. Shenk, Judge.

Action by Julia P. Warden and another against J. B. Choate. From a judgment for defendant and from an order denying a motion for new trial, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

J. Irving McKenna and Catherine A. McKenna, both of Los Angeles, for appellants. Carlyle Wynn, of Los Angeles, for respondent.

JAMES, J. Appeal by the plaintiffs from a judgment denying them any relief in this action, and also from an order denying a motion for a new trial. The defendant here, in March, 1914, brought an action against these plaintiffs and certain officials of the city of Los Angeles in which injunctive relief was asked for. A temporary restraining order was made pending the hearing of an order to show cause which was set for the 6th day of April, 1914. These plaintiffs appeared in response to the order to show cause and demurred to the complaint of the plaintiff (this defendant), and made a further showing by affidavit in opposition to the application for injunction pendente lite. At the time fixed as the return day on the order to show cause, the demurrer was considered by the court and sustained, and the action there ended. This action was prosecuted for the purpose of obtaining damages alleged to have been sustained by reason of the restraint imposed under the temporary restraining order. The action, however, is upon the alleged undertaking of the defendant here, who was plaintiff in the injunction suit, by which the plaintiff in that suit gave security against damages on account of the restraining order. The security was not in the form prescribed by the Code, to wit, by written undertaking, the order to show cause and restraining order as signed by the court reciting that "plaintiff having given cash bond in the sum of $300 to indemnify defendants against damage by reason of this restraining order," et cetera. The question as to whether the acceptance of money in lieu of such undertaking as is authorized by the Code to be given upon injunctions (Code Civ. Proc. § 529) was proper may be passed, and it may be considered that it was permissible for the court to require indemnity in that form.

[1] In the injunction action it was alleged that the plaintiffs here were the holders of certain property assessment certificates acquired on account of sale of such property for delinquent street-assessments in the city of Los Angeles, which certificates and the redemption proceeds from the same it was sought by the injunction suits to have sequestered or impounded in order that the plaintiff in that suit, he being a judgment creditor of the defendant C. D. Warden, might cause them to be subjected to satisfaction of his debt. The Wardens in this action alleged that they had incurred damages in the sum of $300, being money paid as counsel fees for the purpose of securing the dissolution of the temporary restraining order, and further that by reason of the restraint imposed they had been prevented from securing a deed to a certain lot affected by one of the assessment certificates and had been prevented from accepting an offer of $500 made to them for said lot. The court in this case determined by its findings that no amount of attorney's fees had been incurred or paid out by these plaintiffs for the purpose of securing a dissolution of the temporary restraining order. It does not appear from the evidence taken, as set out in the reporter's transcript, that the plaintiffs made any motion to dissolve the temporary restraining order, but that the whole of their efforts were directed to resisting the order to show cause. At the time fixed as the return day in the order to show cause they appeared, and their demurrer at that time to the complaint of the plaintiff (this defendant) was sustained. The temporary restraining order fell of its own weight at the expiration of the time limited therein, to wit, at the time fixed for the hearing of the order to show cause. In such a case the court properly determined that no attorney's fees were incurred as damages by reason of the temporary restraining order. See San Diego Water Co. v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co., 101 Cal. 216, 35 Pac. 651; Curtiss v. Bachman, 110 Cal. 433, 42 Pac. 910, 52 Am. St. Rep. 111. It is contended that the answer of the defendant here admitted that some amount of attorney's fees had been incurred on the behalf alleged; but taking the answer altogether in its various allegations, we find that it contains an allegation denying that any damage at all was sustained on the part of the plaintiffs by reason of the temporary restraining order.

[2] Neither was it proper to allow damages on account of the second alleged cause therefor, to wit, by reason of loss alleged to have been incurred on account of the inability of the plaintiffs to accept an offer of $500 for the lot as before mentioned. There is no allegation contained in the complaint, and neither does the evidence support any such condition, that the lot was worth any less after the restraining order had become of no effect than it was at any time during the pendency of the restraint imposed by that order. We conclude that the judgment of the court was proper, and is supported by the record presented.

The judgment and order are affirmed.

We concur: CONREY, P. J.; SHAW, J.

(33 Cal. App. 357)

PEOPLE v. CLAYTON. (Cr. 388.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. April 3, 1917.)

1. Criminal Law ⟹1063(4)—Appeal from Judgment—Question Presented—Insufficiency of Evidence.

Upon appeal from judgment in a criminal case, without making motion for new trial, announcement having been made in open court as provided by Pen. Code, § 1239, and notice for transcript of record having been given pursuant to section 1247, assignment that evidence was insufficient to support conviction was reviewable, and evidence may be considered for any of the purposes of the appeal, in view of Const. art. 6, § 4½, providing that no judgment shall be set aside "unless, after an examination of the entire cause, including the evidence," the court shall be of opinion that a miscarriage of justice has occurred, and St. 1909, pp. 1083 to 1086, altering system of appeals, do not change the rule formerly existing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2673, 2680.]

2. Criminal Law ⟹1104(6)—Appeal—Application for Transcript—Sufficiency.

Notice prescribed by Pen. Code, § 1247, asking court to direct reporter to transcribe parts of record necessary for criminal appeal need be in no particular form, it being only necessary to set forth in general terms grounds of appeal and points relied on and designating particular portions of record necessary to be transcribed; hence fact that appellant states that he "thinks" that all the testimony is necessary does not invalidate notice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2776.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Sacramento County; Malcolm C. Glenn, Judge.

George Clayton was convicted of grand larceny, and upon a suggestion of diminution of the record, on appeal from judgment, applies for further transcription and certification of testimony under Pen. Code, § 1247c. Application granted.

Ralph H. Lewis, and Grover W. Bedeau, of Sacramento, for appellant. U. S. Webb, Atty. Gen., and J. Chas. Jones, Deputy Atty. Gen., for the People.

HART, J. Upon a suggestion of diminution of the record, the defendant has applied to this court for a further transcription and certification of the testimony taken at the trial. Pen. Code, § 1247c. The application is supported by the affidavit of the defendant. The Attorney General opposes the application for reasons to be hereinafter stated.

[1] The defendant was, on the 21st day of November, 1916, found guilty by a jury, in the superior court of Sacramento county, of the crime of grand larceny. On the 24th day of said month the court pronounced its judgment of sentence upon the defendant, adjudging and decreeing that he be imprisoned in the state penitentiary at Folsom for the term of ten years. Thereupon G. W. Bedeau, counsel for the defendant, announced in open court:

> "That the defendant appealed * * * to the District Court of Appeal in and for the Third Appellate District from the final judgment of conviction, made, rendered, and entered herein this day and from the whole thereof."

On the 29th day of November, 1916, counsel for the defendant filed with the clerk of the court a written document purporting to be the notice prescribed by section 1247 of the Penal Code, upon which, when legally sufficient in all respects, a trial court is authorized and required to order the phonographic reporter who reported the case to transcribe such portions of the notes as in its opinion may be necessary fairly and fully to present the points relied upon by the appellant. Said notice set forth a number of the grounds, including that of the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict, which are enumerated in section 1181 of the Penal Code as the grounds upon which an application for a new trial may be made and granted. In addition to the grounds mentioned, the notice also contained the following statement of the points upon which the defendant intended to rely:

> "(1) Inadmissible and prejudicial statements made by witnesses for the prosecution, irrelevant to the issue, which served to poison the minds of the jury against defendant and prevent him from having a fair and impartial trial; (2) that the chief deputy district attorney, during the course of the trial, and during the course of his closing argument to the jury therein, was guilty of misconduct prejudicial to the defendant and which was intended to and did prevent this defendant from having a fair and impartial trial."

The notice then concludes with the prayer or request that the court direct the phonographic reporter who reported the case—

> "to transcribe all evidence and proceedings and all objections and exceptions made during the trial, and all rulings made thereon adverse to defendant, and exceptions made thereto, and all remarks of the judge or district attorney, made during the course of the trial and during argument in the presence of the jury, to which defendant objected and excepted."

The notice proceeds:

> "Defendant, in his opinion, thinks it necessary in order to fairly present all his points on appeal, that the phonographic notes of the testimony of all witnesses, all proceedings, rulings, and exceptions had and taken at said trial, and the closing argument of the chief deputy district attorney be transcribed."

As much of section 1247 of the Penal Code as is relevant to the inquiry presented here reads:

> "Upon an appeal being taken from any judgment or order of the superior court, to the supreme court or to a district court of appeal, in any criminal action or proceeding where such appeal is allowed by law, the defendant, or the district attorney when the people appeal, must, within five days, file with the clerk and present an application to the trial court, stating in general terms the grounds of the appeal and the points upon which the appellant relies, and designate what portions of the phonographic reporter's notes it will be necessary to have transcribed to fairly present the points relied upon. If such application is not filed within said time, the appeal is wholly ineffectual and shall be deemed dismissed and the judgment or order may be enforced as if no appeal had been taken. The court shall, within two days after the filing of such application, make an order directing the phonographic reporter who reported the case to transcribe such portion of his notes as in the opinion of the court may be necessary to fairly and fully present the points relied upon by the appellant."

The position of the Attorney General in opposition to the allowance of the application herein asked for is: (1) That the paper or writing purporting to be the notice required by the above section for the transcription of all the testimony is legally insufficient, that is to say, that it does not comply with the requirements of said section; (2) that the point that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict cannot be reviewed upon an appeal from the judgment, but only upon an appeal from an order denying a new trial, and that, as the defendant made no motion for a new trial, and so elected to rely for a review of his case solely on an appeal from the judgment, there is no necessity, so far as the question of the insufficiency of the evidence to uphold the verdict is concerned, for a transcription and certification to this court of all the testimony and proceedings of the trial.

We will first consider the point last above stated.

Prior to the adoption of the present method of taking appeals in criminal cases, it was requisite, in order to take such an appeal, to file with the clerk of the court in which the action was tried a notice stating the appeal from the judgment or order or from both, and serving a copy thereof on the adverse party. See Pen. Code (Ed. 1906) § 1240. Such appeal, if not from the judgment only, upon the judgment roll alone, was required to be supported by a bill of exceptions. See Pen. Code (Ed. 1906) § 1170. Section 1171 of said Code, as it then read, specified the points to the decision of which exceptions might be taken by the defendant. Under the then system of appellate procedure in criminal cases, as we shall presently see, the defendant could, upon an appeal from the judgment, rely on any of the exceptions specified in section 1170 of the Penal Code, it being necessary, of course, for him to have preserved and presented his exceptions in the manner prescribed by section 1171 of said Code, as it then read.

The Legislature of 1909, however, introduced radical changes in the system. Sections 1170, 1171, 1172, 1173, 1174, 1175, and 1177, all relating to certain exceptions which might be taken to rulings upon certain matters and to bills of exceptions and the manner of their preparation and settlement, were in the year mentioned repealed (Stats. 1909, pp. 1083 to 1086), and a number of new sections, prescribing a different method of taking appeals and preparing the record thereon, were substituted in lieu of the former system. By the change so effected the defendant may now take an appeal from the judgment by announcing personally or through his attorney in open court, at the time the judgment is rendered, that he appeals from the same; and from any appealable order after judgment by announcing in open court at the time the same is made that he appeals from the same. Pen. Code, § 1239. Thereupon the clerk must immediately enter in the minutes of the court the announcement of the appeal. The record on appeal must then be prepared, in pursuance of the notice required to be given, in accordance with the provisions of section 1247, supra, and the judge must then certify the same as required by section 1247a of said Code.

Under the former system there was no express provision of the Penal Code specifying the points which might be reviewed in criminal cases on an appeal from the judgment. Section 1181 then, as the same section does now, specified certain grounds upon which a new trial might be asked for and granted.

In the case of the People ex rel. Smith v. Keyser, 53 Cal. 183, the relator, having been convicted of a felony and duly noticed an appeal from the judgment and the order denying him a new trial, presented a bill of exceptions to the trial judge, who refused to settle the same for the reason that it was not presented within time. The defendant applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel the trial judge to settle the bill. The court said:

> "We are of the opinion that the bill of exceptions ought to have been settled by the judge. The defendant may appeal from the judgment, without having made a motion for a new trial; and on the appeal he may rely upon any of the grounds of exception mentioned in section 1170 of the Penal Code, and in such case he must have a bill of exceptions, settled as provided in section 1171."

The conclusion thus announced was reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in Walker v. Superior Court, 135 Cal. 369, 67 Pac. 336, and People v. Walker, 142 Cal. 90, 93, 75 Pac. 658.

We can discern no just ground for holding, from any change made by the Legislature of 1909, or by any subsequent Legislature in the procedure relative to appeals in criminal cases and the preparation of the records thereon, that there is now, under the existing system, any less reason for the application of the rule laid down in People v. Keyser, supra than there was prior to the reform in the procedure referred to. It is true that the ground that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the verdict was not referred to by section 1170, as it then existed, but said section did specify, among others, including that of exceptions to rulings on questions involving the admissibility of evidence, a number of grounds or exceptions which were then and are now reviewable on an appeal from the order, and nowhere in the Penal Code was there a provision expressly authorizing such review of those exceptions. As before declared, there is not now, and, so far as we are otherwise advised, there never has been, any express provision in the Penal Code specifically enumerating and so restricting the number or nature of the points which may be reviewed on appeal from the judgment. Upon principle, it seems to us, there is every reason why the assignment that the verdict is not supported by the proofs should be reviewable on such an appeal. If, without express authority therefor, it may with reason be held proper, as the Keyser Case holds, that exceptions to rulings upon evidence may be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment, then a fortiori it is proper so to review the question whether the evidence is of sufficient strength to support the verdict; for the appeal from the judgment involves a direct attack thereon, while a motion for a new trial is a mere collateral assault upon the judgment. Quite consistently, therefore, and indeed most naturally, the question whether the verdict is sufficiently supported would arise on an appeal from the judgment, to nullify which or the verdict itself is always the very object of an attack thereon, even where such attack is collaterally made, as on a motion for a new trial.

The Attorney General declares, however, that:

> "Wherever an appeal from a judgment only has been taken, the only papers which go up to the appellate court are prescribed by section 1246 of the Penal Code."

That section provides for the transmission by the clerk of the trial court to the appellate court, upon an appeal being taken thereto, of the papers and proceedings which, properly speaking, constitute the judgment roll in a criminal case, and they must be so transmitted whether the appeal is from the judgment or from the order denying a new trial or from both. They now constitute the clerk's record, and are so designated, and were formerly included in the bill of exceptions as a necessary part of the record on appeal. As a matter of course, it is indispensably necessary that the record, whatever its prescribed form, should show that a judgment against the appellant had been rendered, whether the appeal be from the judgment or the order or both; otherwise there would be nothing in the record to show that the court below had done anything which would occasion an appeal.

The cases of Turner v. Bauer, 28 Cal. App. 312, 152 Pac. 308, and Mankins v. Forward M. Syn., 28 Cal. App. 285, 152 Pac. 313, cited by the Attorney General, are wholly inapplicable to any question presented here. In those cases it is merely held, as obviously no other conclusion could be announced, that where the appeal is from the judgment on the judgment roll alone, the only recourse for the ascertainment of the facts is to the findings, and that in such case it will be presumed that the evidence justified the findings.

But there is still another consideration which, it seems to us, makes it not only proper, but quite necessary, in almost all cases, that the record on appeal should contain all the material and important testimony received at the trial, and this arises from the provisions of section 4½ of article 6 of the Constitution. That section, as is now pretty generally understood, provides that no judgment shall be set aside, or new trial granted in any case, on the ground of errors in instructing the jury or in the rulings of the court on the evidence or in the matters of pleading or procedure, unless, after an examination of the entire cause, including the evidence, the court shall be of the opinion that the error complained of has resulted in a miscarriage of justice. Thus the appeal courts, as should be so, are expressly enjoined from reversing causes for error occurring in the trial of the case, however obvious and glaring, unless the evidence is of such a character as clearly to disclose that an affirmance would result in a miscarriage of justice. The importance, therefore, of presenting to the court to which the appeal has been taken all the testimony upon the vital points in the case is, if for no other reason than for that purpose, plainly apparent and readily to be apprehended. A reviewing court would hardly be in a position to determine whether a miscarriage of justice would follow the affirmance of a case in which the trial court had made egregious error in its rulings or instructions unless the evidence in full was before it, thus enabling it to determine, after a review thereof, whether the evidence appeared to be so conclusive of the defendant's guilt as to justify it in reaching the conclusion that an affirmance of the result arrived at by the jury would not produce a miscarriage of justice. But, as declared above, we think the testimony when brought up on an appeal from the judgment may be considered for any of the purposes of the appeal.

[2] 2. The notice filed by the defendant for the transcription of all the material testimony was in time and legally sufficient. No particular form of notice is required. All that is necessary is that the defendant shall, within the time prescribed, file a notice containing a statement setting forth in general terms the grounds of the appeal and the points upon which he relies, and designating therein the particular portions of the reporter's notes it will be necessary to have transcribed to fairly and fully present the points relied upon. This he has done, by designating all the testimony taken at the trial. The fact that he stated in the notice that he "thinks" or is of the "opinion" that all the testimony is necessary to the full and fair presentation of the points upon which he relies does not detract from the force or impair the efficacy of the notice for the purpose for which such a notice is required to be filed. In fact, it seems to us that the "designation" in any such case can be the result only of the opinion or belief or thought of the defendant that the testimony designated is necessary for the purposes of his appeal.

It follows from the foregoing views that the application for further transcription of the testimony in this case must be granted. It is accordingly ordered that the phonographic reporter who reported the case shall, within 15 days from the date of the filing of this opinion transcribe all such portions of the testimony taken and received at the trial of this case as have not already been transcribed and incorporated in the record now on file herein in this court, together with such portions of the address to the jury by the chief deputy district attorney as may be claimed to have been legally unwarranted and prejudicial to this defendant's substantial rights and as are not incorporated in the transcript now on file herein in this court, and to which remarks the said defendant duly excepted.

We concur: CHIPMAN, P. J.; BURNETT, J.

(33 Cal. App. 394)

PLATNAUER v. SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA IN AND FOR SACRAMENTO COUNTY et al. (Civ. 1600.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. April 6, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court June 4, 1917.)

CONTEMPT 🔑68—COUNTIES 🔑197—APPEAL—COSTS.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1027, allowing costs to the prevailing party on appeal, and section 1032, allowing similar costs where an inferior court's decision is reviewed in a special proceeding, do not authorize taxing costs against a judge whose judgment of contempt is set aside, nor authorize collection of such costs from the county, especially where no claim therefor was presented to the county board of supervisors as required by Pol. Code, §§ 4075 and 4078.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contempt, Cent. Dig. §§ 238–241; Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 309–311.]

Petition by R. Platnauer against the Superior Court of County of Sacramento and Charles O. Busick, Judge thereof. On motion to disallow costs and to strike out. Motion to strike out granted.

A. M. Seymour, J. S. Daly, and R. Platnauer, all of Sacramento, for petitioner. Meredith, Landis & Chester, of Sacramento, for respondents.

BURNETT, J. A judgment was rendered by said superior court finding petitioner guilty of contempt, and, upon petition to this court, said judgment was set aside upon the ground that the conduct of petitioner was not such as to justify said finding. 163 Pac. 237. Petitioner thereupon filed in this court a memorandum of his costs incurred in the above-entitled proceeding, which respondent has moved the court to strike out "upon the ground that the decision and judgment of the court in said matter did not award costs to the petitioner, and upon the further ground that costs are not recoverable by petitioner in any event in said matter and are not authorized or allowed by law."

Petitioner claims that he is entitled to his costs by virtue of sections 1027 and 1032 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The former provides:

> "The prevailing party on appeal shall be entitled to his costs excepting when judgment is modified, and in that event the matter of costs is within the discretion of the appellate court," etc.

Section 1032 is:

> "When the decision of a court of inferior jurisdiction in a special proceeding is brought before a court of higher jurisdiction for a review, in any other way than by appeal, the same costs must be allowed as in cases on appeal, and may be collected by execution, or in such manner as the court may direct, according to the nature of the case."

But this is not the ordinary action to which said sections of the code apply. It was directed against a court of record for the purpose of reviewing a judicial determination of that tribunal. In such cases the court is not liable for damages or for costs. The rule is stated in 23 Cyc. 567, as follows:

> "As a general rule no person is liable civilly for what he may do as a judge while acting within the limits of his jurisdiction, nor is he liable for neglect or refusal to act. The rule is especially true where the judge is one having general jurisdiction, and in such cases there is no liability even though he exceeds his authority. The overwhelming weight of authority is to the effect that, where a judge has full jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties, whether his jurisdiction be a general or limited one, he is not liable civilly when he acts erroneously, illegally, or irregularly, and he is not chargeable with costs resulting from his erroneous rulings, or the cost of a proceeding to prohibit erroneous action on his part."

It has even been held that he is not liable when he acts from malicious or corrupt motives. 23 Cyc. 569. Here, it may be said, there is no contention nor evidence that the court acted from anything but proper motives. Nor is there any doubt that it had jurisdiction of petitioner and of the subject-matter. It, however, acted erroneously in finding from the facts that a contempt had been committed. It is true that its judgment was annulled on certiorari for excess of jurisdiction, but, after all, it presented a case, in the opinion of this court, of reaching a wrong conclusion from the premises involved therein. However, petitioner admits that no cost can be allowed against the judge or the court, but he contends:

> "That inasmuch as the statute is mandatory, and that he must be allowed his costs, and, seeing that they have been incurred in connection with the maintenance of the superior court of Sacramento county, the same should be paid by the county, and that respondent should be directed to draw an order on the treasurer of Sacramento county for the amount."

In support of this view he cites State v. Whitaker, 45 La. Ann. 1299, 14 South. 66; Haviland v. White, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 154; and People v. Flake, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 527.

The first of these involved the violation of an ordinance of the city of New Orleans. The judge of the recorder's court refused to allow "a suspension appeal," and it was held that his course was totally unwarranted. As to the costs it was said by the Supreme Court:

> "Although the action of the city judge in the matter was unjustifiable, reasons of public policy protect him from being made to pay the costs. They must be borne by the city of New Orleans."

The point involved in 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 154, was whether the provision of the statute as to costs applied to certiorari proceedings. After "a good deal of consideration and considerable hesitation," the court reached the conclusion that it was a case for costs, but it is to be observed that there were adversary parties in the litigation, and the costs were awarded against the losing party.

The Flake Case, supra, was similar to State v. Whitaker, supra. It was held that the referees or commissioners of highway acted as judges and constituted a court of inferior jurisdiction within the meaning of the Code of New York. In speaking of the action of said commissioners in the matter it was said:

> "Their error is an error of judgment, at least in the view of this court, and no obliquity of motive is to be imputed to them. They should not, therefore, be charged with the costs of the appeal."

It was further held that the appellants should not be charged with the costs, and the final conclusion of the court was announced in these words:

> "On the whole, I think the proper direction, under all the circumstances of the case, is that the costs of the relator in this court, as of an action at issue, or an issue of law, be awarded against and collected of the town of Westfield, and that the amount thereof be collected by a tax, as a part of the town charges of that town, in the next levy of taxes."

Thus it appears that two of these cases seem to afford some countenance to the contention of petitioner herein, but we can find no law in this state that authorizes us to make the order which petitioner seeks.

The county itself was not a party to the action. Besides, the superior court is an agency of the state rather than of the county. It is the superior court of the state of California in and for the county of Sacramento. Again, it is difficult to understand how said costs were incurred "in connection with the maintenance of the superior court." But if we assume that petitioner has a claim against the county for his outlay, he must in the first instance present it to the board of supervisors for allowance. If they reject it, he can then maintain the proper action for its recovery. Sections 4075 and 4078, Pol. Code.

As we are satisfied that no allowance of costs should be awarded in this proceeding, the motion to strike out is granted.

We concur: CHIPMAN, P. J.; HART, J.

(33 Cal. App. 331)

SWEENEY v. BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF AUBURN SCHOOL DIST. OF CITY OF AUBURN, PLACER COUNTY. (Civ. 1652.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. March 27, 1917.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑113(2) — BUILDING CONTRACTS—RIGHTS OF MATERIALMEN.

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1184, providing that upon notice of materialmen, etc., the owner of property not subject to mechanics' liens shall withhold from the contractor sufficient money to cover such claims, a school district may withhold from a contractor's executrix sufficient money to cover claims filed by materialmen previous to the executrix's demand for payment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 148.]

2. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑228 — BUILDING CONTRACTS—RIGHTS OF MATERIALMEN.

The right of a contractor's materialmen under Code Civ. Proc. § 1183, to sue on a bond insuring construction of a school building, etc., does not exclude their right to share in money withheld from contractor by the school district pursuant to section 1184.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 411.]

Petition for writ of mandate by Mary Sweeney, executrix under last will of George S. Hayes, against the Board of Trustees of Auburn School District of the City of Auburn, Placer County. Writ denied.

P. H. Johnson and W. H. Ashby, both of Sacramento, for petitioner. Meredith, Landis & Chester and Chas. A. Swisler, all of Sacramento, for respondent.

CHIPMAN, P. J. Mandate. It appears from the petition that on March 29, 1915, defendant entered into a written contract with plaintiff's testate by which he agreed to furnish the materials and erect for defendant a school building for the agreed price of $35,725; that before entering upon the performance of said work the said Hayes filed with defendant a good and sufficient bond in a sum not less than one-half the total amount payable by the terms of said contract, which said bond was duly executed, filed, and approved according to the requirements of the act approved May 1, 1911 (St. 1911, p. 1422), entitled "An act to amend * * * 'An act to secure the payment of the claims of materialmen, mechanics, or laborers, employed by contractors upon state, municipal or other public work,'" approved March 27, 1897, "and was given for the purpose of securing the payment of such claims"; that the said Hayes duly performed all the conditions of said contract and completed said building on or about February 12, 1916, and said building was duly accepted by defendant and used thereafter as a public school building; that the whole sum of $35,725 is long past due, and there remains unpaid thereon the sum of $10,844.75; that at all times mentioned there was in the hands of and subject to the order of defendant, appropriated for the specific purpose of paying said indebtedness, more than sufficient to pay said balance of $10,844.75; that the final certificate of the completion of said building of the architect of defendant duly issued and is in the hands of defendant; that all payments on said contract were made by warrants drawn by defendant payable to said Hayes; that there is still due, owing, and unpaid to said Hayes on said contract the sum of $10,844.75 for the payment of which petitioner has duly demanded of defendant the warrant for said sum, but defendant has refused and still refuses to issue the same. The death of said Hayes and appointment of plaintiff as executrix of his last will are alleged.

A general demurrer was filed, and also an answer. Among other facts it is alleged in the answer that a large number of persons, naming them, "claim to have furnished materials in the construction of said school building or to have rendered and performed work, labor and services thereon." It is further alleged as follows:

> "(5) That each and all of said persons have heretofore and had prior to any demand being made on the respondent by the said petitioner herein, or the said George S. Hayes, for an order or warrant for the payment of any sum whatever payable under said contract, made demand upon and filed with respondent notices that they had respectively performed labor, or furnished materials, or both, to the said George S. Hayes, or to other persons claiming to have been acting by authority of said George S. Hayes, and stating in general terms the kind of labor and materials and the name of the person to, or for whom, the same was done or furnished, or both, and of the whole agreed to be done or furnished, or both; that such notices were respectively delivered by each and all of the said persons, firms, and corporations hereinbefore named and left with respondent and were in writing; that each and all of said notices demanded of respondent that it withhold from the said George S. Hayes sufficient money due, or that might become due, to said George S. Hayes to answer such claims and each and all of said respective claims. That said notices in all respects complied with section 1184 of the Code of Civil Procedure.
>
> "(6) Avers that the claims of said various persons and the amounts specified in the notices of the said various persons hereinbefore named filed and left with respondent exceed the sum of $21,000.
>
> "(7) Avers that neither the respondent, Auburn school district, nor the board of trustees of said Auburn school district, nor any member of said board of trustees has any knowledge, information, or belief as to, and is ignorant of the merits of, the respective claims of the hereinbefore named persons, firms, and corporations to the balance of said moneys payable under said contract, and does not know to whom said balance should be paid."

It was agreed by counsel at the argument that such alleged notices were duly given as alleged, and that the sole question to be determined is whether they justified the defendant in refusing to issue the warrant demanded by plaintiff.

Section 1184 of the Code of Civil Procedure reads as follows:

> "Any of the persons mentioned in the preceding section, except the contractor, may at any time give to the owner a notice that they have performed labor or furnished materials, or both, to the contractor or other person acting by the authority of the owner, or that they have agreed to do so, stating in general terms the kind of labor and materials and the name of the person to or for whom the same was done or furnished, or both, and the amount in value, as near as may be, of that already done or furnished, or both, and of the whole agreed to be done or furnished, or both, and any of said persons who shall on the written demand of the owner refuse to give such notice shall thereby deprive himself of the right to claim a lien under this chapter. Such notice may be given by delivering the same to said owner personally, or by leaving it at his residence or place of business with some person in charge, or by delivering it to his architect, or by leaving it at the latter's office with some person in charge. No such notice shall be invalid by reason of any defect in form: Provided, it is sufficient to inform the owner of the substantial matters herein provided for. Upon such notice being given it shall be lawful for the owner to withhold, and in the case of property which, for reasons of public policy or otherwise, is not subject to the liens in this chapter provided for, the owner or person who contracted with the contractor, shall withhold from his contractor sufficient money due or that may become due to such contractor to answer such claim and any lien that may be filed therefor including the reasonable cost of any litigation thereunder."

[1] The question now here arises out of that part of the section quoted in italics. This section has long existed substantially in its present form, with the exception that by the amendment of 1911 (Stats. 1911, p. 1315) there was introduced the following in the last paragraph:

> "And in the case of property which, for reasons of public policy or otherwise, is not subject to the liens in this chapter provided for," the owner shall withhold, etc.

The nature and effect of the notice referred to in the statute as it stood prior to the amendment of 1911 was stated in Diamond Match Co. v. Silberstein, 165 Cal. 282, 288, 131 Pac. 874. It was there said that it was intended to serve as an "equitable assignment"; that the notice "is a form of equitable subrogation regulated by statute" and entitled the persons serving the notice to receive so much of the money due the contractor as would satisfy the claims of the persons giving notice"; that the "right to a recovery of the money so garnished by the notice does not depend upon the establishment of a lien," but is "a cumulative" remedy. The decisions of the Supreme Court settling the foregoing principles are cited in the opinion.

The case of Miles v. Ryan, 172 Cal. 208, 157 Pac. 5, was a case similar to the one in hand. It was there pointed out that, under the decisions of which Mayrhofer v. Board, 89 Cal. 110, 26 Pac. 646, 23 Am. St. Rep. 451, is an example, neither the Constitution nor the statute gives laborers or materialmen any lien against public buildings, and in the opinion of the court it is shown why in the very nature of such cases no lien should be given, and that the rights of laborers and materialmen must be determined by the section 1184, Code of Civil Procedure. Quoting the provision above italicized, the court said:

> "The provision in the last quotation referring to property not subject to the liens was added by the amendment of 1911. It merely put in statutory form the previous decisions of this court. In other respects the section is substantially the same as it was prior to said amendment. It has been held that the proceeding authorized by this section is substantially an equitable garnishment by the claimant of the fund due to the contractor from the owner (Bates v. Santa Barbara, 90 Cal. 543 [27 Pac. 438]), and that it secures to the person giving the notice a claim on the funds due which is paramount to that of the contractor, or any person claiming under him by assignment or attachment made after the service of such notice (First National Bank v. Perris Irr. Dist., 107 Cal. 55 [40 Pac. 45]; Newport, etc., Co. v. Drew, 125 Cal. 585 [58 Pac. 187]; Long Beach School Dist. v. Lutge, 129 Cal. 409 [62 Pac. 36])."

To the foregoing cases may be added Clark v. Beryle, 160 Cal. 311, 116 Pac. 739; Dorris v. Alturas School Dist., 25 Cal. App. 30, 142 Pac. 795; Suisun L. Co. v. Fairfield School Dist., 19 Cal. App. 587, 595, 127 Pac. 849.

Miles v. Ryan, supra, involved the priority of right between the labor claimant and an attaching judgment creditor who had served his notice of garnishment or attachment upon the owner before the laborer had served his notice upon the owner. The court held that the attachment took priority. But it very clearly appears that, had the laborer's notice been served before the attachment, his claim would have been held good against the fund in the hands of the owner belonging to the contractor by reason of the notice and section 1184.

[2] It is further contended that the remedy given laborers and materialmen to resort to the bond given under section 1183 is exclusive. In the Diamond Match Co. Case, supra, it was shown that the money garnished by means of the notice does not depend upon the establishment of a lien but is a cumulative remedy. The lien provided for is found in section 1183, as is also the bond required to be given. The one is no more exclusive than the other, nor is the remedy by notice less cumulative to the one than to the other. Goldtree v. City of San Diego, 8 Cal. App. 505, 97 Pac. 216. See a very careful and timely opinion as to the purpose and scope of the amendatory act of 1911 in Roystone Co. v. Darling, 171 Cal. 526, 154 Pac. 15.

The writ is denied.

We concur: BURNETT, J.; HART, J.

(33 Cal. App. 365)

PEOPLE v. SLAUGHTER. (Cr. 368.)

(District Court of Appeal, Third District, California. April 4, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court June 2, 1917.)

1. Indictment and Information 🔑75(2) — Sufficiency—Clerical Error.

An indictment charging that accused wrongfully, etc., "accomplish" an act of sexual intercourse, etc., is not erroneous because not using the words "did accomplish."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. § 204.]

2. Jury 🔑70(6)—Special Venire.

Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 226, 227, authorizing additional jurors to be summoned when the regular venire is insufficient, the court in a criminal case may summon special venire before the regular jurors are exhausted, where all regular jurors were examined before names were drawn from the special venire.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. §§ 322, 330.]

3. Jury 🔑133—Competency of Jurors.

In a criminal case doubt as to a juror's competency should be resolved in defendant's favor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. §§ 586–598.]

4. Jury 🔑110(14) — Objection to Juror — Failure to Peremptorily Challenge.

Defendant in a criminal case cannot complain because a juror was accepted over his objection where he might have eliminated him by a peremptory challenge.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 520.]

5. Jury 🔑103(3) — Competency of Juror — Formation of Opinion.

Accepting a juror in a criminal case who stated that he could lay aside an opinion derived from newspaper reports and short conversations and decide the case on the evidence held not reversible error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 463.]

6. Witnesses 🔑396(1) — Explanation of Contradictory Statements.

In prosecution for unlawful sexual intercourse, prosecutrix may explain circumstances under which she wrote letters and signed an affidavit contradicting her direct testimony and elicited upon her cross-examination.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1261, 1262.]

7. Criminal Law 🔑680(1)—Reception of Evidence—Order of Proof.

Receiving evidence of other similar acts out of order is not reversible error where the particular offense relied on for conviction was stated at the beginning of the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1609, 1613.]

8. Criminal Law 🔑822(1)—Instructions—Construction as a Whole.

An instruction authorizing conviction if the offense occurred at any time on a specified day is not erroneous because there was evidence of two offenses on such day, where another instruction specifically limited such general language to one of such offenses.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1990, 1994, 3158.]

9. Criminal Law 🔑789(14)—Instructions—Reasonable Doubt.

An instruction that other similar acts may be considered to determine whether it was probable the act charged was committed is not erroneous because authorizing a conviction upon a probability of guilt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1846–1849, 1919, 1960, 1967.]

10. Criminal Law 🔑789(4)—Instructions—Reasonable Doubt.

An instruction that one witness' testimony may establish any fact necessary to be proved if believed beyond a reasonable doubt is not erroneous, although awkwardly expressed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1846–1849, 1880, 1909, 1960, 1967.]

11. Criminal Law 🔑829(9)—Requested Instructions—Presumption of Innocence.

Refusing a requested instruction in a criminal case that the presumption of innocence is an "instrument of proof" held not erroneous, where another instruction clearly charged that such presumption is not a mere form, but attends defendant through all stages of the trial, etc.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2011.]

12. Criminal Law 🔑859 — Trial — Jury's Requests to Have Evidence Read.

Where jurors in a criminal case after retiring requested that certain evidence be read them, the reporter was instructed to locate it, and jury told how long it would probably take, and they expressed opinion that they might agree without such evidence, which they did, defendant's rights under Pen. Code, § 1138, providing that information desired by jury must be given in presence of defendant, etc., are not violated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1600, 2064.]

13. Rape 🔑54(1) — Sufficiency of Evidence—Uncorroborated Testimony.

A prosecutrix's uncorroborated testimony may sustain a conviction for unlawful sexual intercourse.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Rape, Cent. Dig. § 83.]

14. Rape 🔑52(1) — Sufficiency of Evidence.

Evidence consisting chiefly of a 15 year old prosecutrix's testimony, which was impeached by contradictory letters and affidavit and others witnesses, held to sustain a conviction for unlawful sexual intercourse.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Rape, Cent. Dig. §§ 71, 72, 76.]

15. Criminal Law 🔑1158(1)—Appeal and Error—Reviewing Evidence.

Const. art. 6, § 4½, prohibiting reversals unless court concludes the error resulted in a miscarriage of justice after examining the entire case, including the evidence, does not authorize the appellate court to weigh the evidence and judge the credibility of witnesses in a criminal case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3070, 3071, 3074.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Butte County; H. D. Gregory, Judge.

Madison Slaughter was convicted of unlawful sexual intercourse, and appeals. Affirmed.

Rehearing denied by Supreme Court. See People v. Davis, 147 Cal. 346, 81 Pac. 718; Burke v. Maze, 10 Cal. App. 206, 211, 101 Pac. 438, 440.

Wm. H. Schooler, of San Francisco, and Madison Slaughter, for appellant. U. S. Webb, Atty. Gen., and J. Chas. Jones, Deputy Atty. Gen., for the People.

BURNETT, J. We are not unmindful of the grave importance of the questions involved in the determination of this appeal. We are appreciative of the significance of the various circumstances connected with the charge and the trial to which our attention has been earnestly invited. We have given serious attention especially to the reiterated and emphatic declaration that appellant did not receive that fair and impartial trial which is the unquestionable right of every American citizen, and we have considered as carefully as possible the various specified particular grounds for that contention. It is undoubtedly true that a charge of this kind is likely to make such an impression on the minds of many people in the vicinity as to unfit them for that calm, impartial, and deliberate action which the law demands of every juror. The mere accusation when given wings, as usually happens in such cases, excites the prejudice, arouses the resentment, and disturbs and impairs the judgment of a part of the community, and there is danger, of course, that the unfair and hostile attitude toward the defendant thereby engendered may reach the jury box and even the judge upon the bench. The fact that the one accused is a minister of the gospel intensifies the situation and increases the probability of unfavorable and malevolent impressions and sentiments. Even upright and righteous persons with a due conception of the importance and sanctity of this high calling are sometimes too easily moved to give credence to a story impugning the chastity of one filling the holy office of the ministry, and therefore also too ready to contribute to the creation of an unfavorable environment for the dispassionate determination of the guilt or innocence of the accused. It is more emphatically true that in every community there are some small souls who by reason of their sinister and malignant opposition to the cause of religion and through a depraved desire to cripple the efficiency of religious efforts and to destroy confidence in its advocates and promoters, with avid glee welcome every imputation, especially of the kind involved herein, against the character and standing of a minister of the gospel. These people generally also hasten to prejudge the case and with feverish anxiety seek to inoculate as many as possible of the community with the virus of their own prejudice and hatred. These and other unfavorable considerations were, no doubt, at work in the community wherein the defendant was tried and convicted, and probably quite a number of the citizens had irrevocably determined his guilt before a witness was heard in court.

However, we feel satisfied that the vast majority of the people of Butte county, moved by the spirit of fair play and a desire that there be no unwarranted interference with the orderly processes of the law, were in that mental and moral frame of mind essential to the impartial administration of justice as between the plaintiff and defendant.

But, what is more to the point, we are convinced from an examination of the record that there was no such prejudice or hostility on the part of the trial judge or of any of the jurors nor was there any misconduct on the part of either nor any such acts or omissions during the course of the trial as would legally justify this court in setting aside the verdict. We go further, and say that in none of the contentions of appellant do we find sufficient merit to warrant any interference with the judgment of the lower court, as will more fully appear while we proceed to notice the specific points which are urged upon our attention with great ability and impressiveness in the four different briefs filed in his behalf, three of which bearing his own signature were undoubtedly prepared by a former astute member of the bar now sojourning at San Quentin.

[1] The indictment is grammatically defective in using the word "accomplish" instead of "accomplished" or "did accomplish," but while the district attorney thus manifested a degree of carelessness it is perfectly apparent that the defendant suffered no prejudice by reason of the defective averment. The charging part of said instrument is as follows:

> "The said Madison Slaughter on or about the 7th day of November, A. D. 1915, at the county of Butte and state of California, and before the finding of this indictment wrongfully, unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously accomplish an act of sexual intercourse with one Gertrude Lamson, * * * a female under the age of 18 years, to wit, the age of 15 years," etc.

If any one at all familiar with the English language could not understand that the intention was to charge that the said Madison Slaughter "did accomplish" the act on said date, his sanity would be the proper subject for investigation. And yet, with great earnestness and apparent sincerity, it is argued that the cause should be reversed for this verbal inaccuracy. We are spared any further comment, however, for the reason that the identical point was decided in the case of People v. Haagen, 139 Cal. 115, 72 Pac. 836, wherein it was said:

> "We do not think there is any merit in this contention."

[2] The jurors drawn on the regular venire were insufficient to complete the jury, and a special venire was issued. This is made the subject of criticism and complaint by appellant, but the practice is authorized by the Code and sanctioned by the decisions of the courts. Sections 226 and 227, Code Civ. Proc.; People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 508, 48 Pac. 495; People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 359, 75 Pac. 1093. In the Sehorn Case it was said:

> "There may, no doubt, be cases where, as was said in Levy v. Wilson, 69 Cal. 111 [10 Pac. 272], the drawing of the entire jury from the box would be 'more consistent with the correct administration of justice'; but it has frequently been held, with respect to both grand and trial jurors, that after the venire drawn from the regular jurors had been exhausted the court may order additional jurors to be summoned from the county at large, and that such proceeding is valid—at least, unless there has been a gross abuse of discretion."

There is nothing in the case here to show that the discretion thus vested in the trial court was not properly exercised. No doubt, the special venire was ordered to save time and expense, and we are not authorized to conclude that appellant suffered any prejudice thereby. The fact that the order was made before all the jurors on the preceding venire had been examined is of no moment, since such examination was completed before any name was drawn from the special venire. The procedure was, at most, an irregularity which worked no damage.

[3-5] Complaint is made that the court improperly overruled defendant's challenge to certain jurors for bias. Of the 12 selected it is not pretended that such objection could be made to more than two. These are John Finning and T. R. Boalt. As to the others there can be no possible controversy. The court might well have excused Mr. Finning, although he declared that he could and would disregard his opinion and be controlled entirely by the evidence and the instructions. However, his was a doubtful case, and there should be no hesitation in resolving such doubt in favor of the defendant. But, for the reason that he accepted the juror while still having five peremptory challenges, appellant is in no position to complain of the ruling. The point is covered and controlled by the cases of People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 196, 48 Pac. 75; People v. Schafer, 161 Cal. 576, 119 Pac. 920; Scragg v. Sallee, 24 Cal. App. 139, 140 Pac. 706; and People v. Perry, 25 Cal. App. 338, 143 Pac. 798. Therein this and the Supreme Court approved the doctrine stated in Thompson on Trials, § 120, as follows:

> "It is a rule of paramount importance that errors committed in overruling challenges for cause are not grounds of reversal, unless it be shown an objectionable juror was forced upon the challenging party after he had exhausted his peremptory challenges; if his peremptory challenges remain unexhausted, so that he might have excluded the objectionable juror by that means, he has no grounds of complaint."

It is true that his peremptory challenges were finally exhausted, but not until he had accepted Mr. Finning, and he was sworn to try the case. In People v. Riggins, 159 Cal. 113, 112 Pac. 862, relied upon by appellant, it appears—

> "not only that the defendant exhausted all his peremptory challenges, but that by reason of the rulings of the court he was forced to accept McKeen, a juror objectionable to him and challenged by him for cause, and also that he asked the privilege of challenging McKeen peremptorily, and that his request was denied."

The rule is one not only of expediency, but of justice. The peremptory challenge affords an auxiliary or additional method for getting rid of an objectionable juror. If the defendant feels that a juror is disqualified, he may challenge him for cause, but the court may not concur in that view. If so, and the limit of peremptory challenges has not been reached, the defendant must avail himself of that remedy, or else be deemed to have waived his objection. When the peremptory challenges have been exhausted, the situation, of course, is quite different, as he then has only the one remedy, and in case of an adverse ruling he may have it reviewed by the appellate court. Such is the instance of juror Boalt. On his direct examination he testified that he had an opinion in regard to the case, and, asked as to how it was formed, he answered, "By newspaper talk and talking on the streets;" and, in reply to the question, "In what other manner if any was this opinion formed?" he said, "I have heard a few words that took place here; I heard of some parties who talked with parties that were here who quoted me about ten words." If it be argued that he meant by these answers that his opinion was influenced by the ten words that had been repeated in his presence, we cannot assume that they were prejudicial to appellant, since it does not appear what they were. Besides, in the further course of the examination he stated that his opinion was founded entirely upon newspaper reports and street gossip, and still further that his opinion was based only upon "what little I read in the paper." It was therefore for the trial court to determine what was the source of his opinion and the decision is binding upon this court. Indeed, the examination of the juror presents an instance for the application of the rule laid down in People v. Ryan, 152 Cal. 371, 92 Pac. 853, and People v. Edwards, 163 Cal. 752, 127 Pac. 58, and other decisions. In the former it is said:

> "The trial court must decide which of the answers most truly shows the juror's mind."

Indeed, so far as we can judge from the cold record, Mr. Boalt was unbiased and entirely disposed to be fair and just. He declared several times that he would lay aside any opinion that he might have and be guided entirely by the evidence and the instructions of the court, and that he would act fairly and impartially in the case. As we read the record, we are satisfied there is no just ground for complaint as to the selection and impanelment of the jury.

[6] Among the many questions presented as to the admissibilty of evidence, we notice first the ruling of the court in relation to the explanation by the prosecutrix of an affidavit and two letters made and written by her. These instruments were secured by the defendant and offered in evidence on her cross-examination.

The first letter was addressed to Mr. Kennedy, one of the counsel for appellant, was dated February 19, 1916, and was as follows:

> "I am writing this of my own free will, and under no one's influence. I have done a very great wrong which I am very sorry for and want to correct. I have told an outrageous lie. I don't know whether any one will speak to me or not; I hope they will. That what I have charged against Mr. Slaughter is an absolute lie, which I want seen to and done away with soon as possible. And I will say with the oath of God I will never tell another lie to any one of any kind again as long as I lives. I was very angry when I told this lie and the second one I told it to encouraged me so much I kept it up. Now I deny it, and deny it forever. Remember no one has influenced me in any way only to tell the truth, unless it was the partys that got me in this mess."

The other letter was directed to "Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter and Girls," and was of similar tenor. It concluded with the declaration:

> "I am sorry to the bottom of my heart and soul and experience has been a very dear teacher to me and I mean to begin over again and live a new good right life."

The affidavit is clearly in the language of an expert, and not such as would have been chosen by the prosecutrix. Therein, among others, were the statements that said letters contained the truth; that she was not influenced by Mr. Kennedy to write the same, but did so of her own free will; that said statement was made to right a great wrong; that she never had sexual intercourse with defendant at any time or place, and that he had always acted toward her "in a proper, gentlemanly, and straightforward way"; that the affidavit was made to rectify a great wrong, and, while made at the request of Guy R. Kennedy, it "has been read to me, and the entire contents of the same is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." The witness also testified on said cross-examination as to declarations she had made to Mr. Schooler, one of the attorneys for appellant, denying any improper relations with Mr. Slaughter. Over strenuous objections the witness was permitted to explain these various statements and to detail the circumstances under which they were made. The purpose was, of course, to show the undue influence that was exerted in behalf of appellant and to minimize or nullify the effect upon her credibility of her different contradictions. It was the theory of the plaintiff that a conspiracy existed in which the mother, father, and defendant with his attorneys participated, designed to coerce the witness into a renunciation of her charges and an abandonment of the prosecution. On redirect examination the people therefore, in support of the contention, were permited to show that she was told her mother's health was bad, and that she would cause her death if she persisted in the prosecution; that defendant himself brought her father, Frederick Lamson, to his daughter, and the father said: "There, see what you have done; you will kill your mother"; that one of the defendant's attorneys came in the nighttime to her home to use his influence upon her; that her mother told her the defendant should not be prosecuted; that statements were made by defendant's attorneys calculated to induce the belief that she would get into trouble if she insisted upon the charge against Mr. Slaughter and some other circumstances of similar tenor were related by the witness. To illustrate this line of examination we may set out her statement of what her father said to her:

> "He had told me that he believed my story and that he had believed it all along, but for me not to say anything or not to tell mamma that he did, or to tell anybody, and during the time mamma was having these spells he said: 'Whatever she said to answer "Yes" and never to dispute her in anything,' and he said that I would probably be the cause of her death, anyway."

We think there was no violation therein of the familiar rule permitting a witness to explain contradictory statements. It would be strange if her mouth were closed as to the circumstances and inducements of the transaction called out on cross-examination for the purpose of impeaching her veracity and destroying her credibility. Some portions of said testimony may have been objectionable, but there was no motion to strike them out, and the questions themselves were entirely proper. Of course, the only purpose of such examination is as we have indicated, and her recital of certain statements made to her was not to be considered as evidence of the truth of said declarations. If this was not made entirely clear to the jury, it was the fault of appellant in not requesting a specific direction to that effect.

In People v. Smallman, 55 Cal. 185, on the cross-examination of the prosecuting witness, defendants, for the purpose of affecting her credibility, offered an affidavit made and signed by her, but written by one Carey, who presented and read it to the witness. On the direct examination the witness was asked as to the circumstances under which the affidavit was made, and what conversation she had with Carey about it. The defendants objected to any conversation of witness with Carey in relation to this affidavit which was had in the absence of the defendant. The court overruled the objection, and admitted the evidence. The Supreme Court said:

> "We see no error in this ruling. It was proper to ask the witness as to every matter which occurred in relation to and in connection with, the affidavit."

In People v. Wessel, 98 Cal. 352, 33 Pac. 216, the court said:

> "To contradict the testimony of the prosecutrix, who was a child of eleven years, the defense read her testimony before the committing magistrate, in which it was claimed she had made statements inconsistent with her evidence on the trial. Thereupon the prosecution recalled the prosecutrix and asked her to explain the discrepancies. This course was too plainly proper and of too common practice to justify the presentation of the question here."

In Bradford v. Woodworth, 108 Cal. 684, 41 Pac. 797, it was said:

> "It was proper to permit plaintiff to explain in rebuttal the telegram which had been introduced by the defendant to contradict his testimony."

See, also, People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 233, 74 Pac. 745; Risdon v. Yates, 145 Cal. 212, 78 Pac. 641; Hoggan v. Cahoon, 31 Utah, 172, 87 Pac. 164; Strebin v. Lavengood, 163 Ind. 478, 71 N. E. 494.

The prosecution adopted a circuitous method of obtaining the explanation and asked of the witness many unnecessary questions, but circumlocution or volubility is not necessarily error. The witness was not lacking in intelligence or assurance, and a simple question as to why she made such contradictory statements would probably have produced the explanation and avoided the necessity for such protracted and wearisome examination. However, the defendant opened the door for an investigation of the reasons that moved and influenced the witness to make such contradictory statements, and we find therein no prejudicial error. The cases cited as to this point by appellant do not sustain his contention.

In Wagner v. People, 30 Mich. 384, the evidence brought out on the cross-examination was incompetent, although admitted without objection, and it was correctly held that this hearsay evidence was not subject to modification or explanation on the redirect examination.

The later Michigan case, People v. Hanifan, 98 Mich. 32, 56 N. W. 1048, supports respondent's position here. Therein it was held that:

> "Where, on the trial of a respondent for larceny, his counsel show on the cross-examination of one of the people's witnesses that the witness had some trouble with the respondent subsequent to the alleged larceny, and that he would like to get even with respondent, it is proper to permit the witness, on his redirect examination, to explain the nature of the trouble."

In Atherton v. Defreeze, 129 Mich. 364, 88 N. W. 886, where the relevant part of a conversation was received, it was held that on cross-examination it was not proper to introduce another part of the conversation which had no connection with the issue involved, and had no bearing whatever upon the part that was relevant.

The case of Garey v. Nicholson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 350, is of similar import. Referring to the rule that, where a part of a conversation is introduced in evidence by one party the other has a right to call for the whole conversation, the Supreme Court of New York said:

> "That, however, must obviously mean that the additional conversation called for should be relevant to the matter in issue. All evidence is received under that qualification, and, if not so restrained, might operate as a waste of time. Other subjects might be introduced having no connection with the subject-matter of the suit."

Commonwealth v. Keyes, 11 Gray (Mass.) 323, is to the same effect. In reference to the complaint of the defendant that she was debarred from proving the residue of a conversation of which a part had been produced by the prosecution against her, it was declared by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts:

> "The proof in such case is to be confined to what was said upon or concerning those matters which are made subjects of inquiry or investigation. Every remark or observation made upon those topics is to be received as competent evidence, because they may essentially modify the character and purport of the whole conversation, and vitally affect what might otherwise appear to be explicitly asserted or denied. 1 Green. Ev. §§ 201-218."

A great many other rulings of the court as to the admissibility of evidence are severely criticized by appellant. We do not feel called upon to notice them specifically, although they have been carefully examined. Some of them, it may be said, are of doubtful propriety, but it could hardly be otherwise, considering the mass of testimony and the multitude of objections. However, as before stated, we find in none of the rulings any warrant for a reversal of the judgment Each side was very swift to object to questions propounded by the other, and thereby the time of the trial was greatly extended, and the labor of the trial judge was largely increased. In the heat of the contest, also, counsel indulged in frequent interruptions and in occasional acrimonious suggestions which, no doubt, tried the patience of the court, but we believe the trial was conducted with due regard for the proprieties of juridical procedure.

[7] That other acts of a similar nature were permitted to be shown out of order was not error in view of the fact that at the beginning of the trial the district attorney made and stated the election of the prosecution as to the particular offense for which a conviction was asked. People v. Koller, 142 Cal. 624, 76 Pac. 500.

[8] Earnest objection is made to this instruction given by the court:

> "The indictment in this case charging defendant with the offense for which he is now on trial was filed January 31, 1916. In that indictment it is alleged that the offense was committed by defendant on or about the 7th day of November, 1915, and before the finding of the indictment. It is not necessary to prove the commission of the offense now on trial at the precise time or date alleged in the indictment, but it is sufficient to prove its commission at any time on November 14, 1915, if the evidence proves beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant on said last-mentioned date has been guilty of the offense of rape charged in the indictment."

It is not claimed that the people are confined to the precise date contained in the indictment, and it is admitted that ordinarily the instruction would be unobjectionable, but it is insisted that by reason of the fact that there was evidence of two separate offenses on said date of November 14th the instruction authorized a conviction if a part of the jury believed that one and the remaining jurors believed that the other was established, although there was no concurrence of the 12 as to to either of said declared offenses. There would be much force in this criticism were it not for the fact that this instruction was qualified by another reading as follows:

> "I will instruct you now that wherever in these instructions I have referred to the act as charged of November 14, 1915, I have referred to the act charged as having been committed on a chair in the dining room as charged in the evidence as the only act upon which he is now on trial."

This was not inconsistent with the former, but a definite limitation of the more general language, and it removed any probability of the result apprehended by appellant. People v. Besold, 154 Cal. 370, 97 Pac. 871.

[9] In instruction No. 42 the jury was directed that they might consider previous acts similar to the one charged in the indictment as tending to show the disposition of the defendant towards the prosecutrix and "for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is or is not more probable that the act of sexual intercourse charged to have been committed on November 14, 1915, was committed and for no other purpose." There is no merit in the contention that thereby the jurors were instructed that they might convict upon a probability of guilt. It signified no more than an instruction that they might consider such evidence as bearing upon the question of appellant's guilt or innocence of the charge made in the indictment. If they were to consider it at all, it is difficult to understand how it could be regarded except as relating to the probability of guilt. As to the rule requiring the jury to be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt in order to convict they were fully and repeatedly instructed. It may be said that a similar instruction to the one before us was approved in People v. Mathews, 139 Cal. 530, 73 Pac. 416.

[10] Instruction No. 40 was to the effect that in such prosecution the testimony of one witness is sufficient to establish any fact necessary to be proved if believed by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. There can be no fault found with the principle therein declared, although it is somewhat awkwardly expressed. The jury, though, could not have been misled by it.

[11] The defendant requested an instruction as to the presumption of innocence. Therein was an expression that "this presumption is an instrument of proof," and it is contended that this specific affirmation ought to have been brought to the attention of the jury. It is perfectly clear, however, that the consideration which should be accorded to this presumption was fully set forth in several instructions given by the court. That it was not designated as an "instrument of proof" or "evidence" is a mere verbal criticism without merit. People v. Linares, 142 Cal. 17, 75 Pac. 308; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 17 Sup. Ct. 235, 41 L. Ed. 624. The fact is that the rejected instruction would have added nothing to the following which was given:

> "The jury is instructed that the defendant comes before you clothed with the presumption of innocence, and that such presumption is not a mere form to be disregarded by the jury at its pleasure, but it is a substantial part of the law of the land, and binding on the jury in this case, as in all criminal cases, and it is the duty of the jury to give the defendant in this case the full benefit of this presumption, and to acquit him, unless the evidence in this case convinces you of his guilt as charged beyond all reasonable doubt; and you are compelled under your oaths to carry this presumption in your minds during every stage of the trial, and give the defendant the benefit of it until such time as you may be convinced beyond all reasonable doubt of his guilt, as charged in the specific offense elected by the prosecution, that of November 14, 1915."

The foregoing was given at the request of appellant, and leaves nothing to be desired on the subject. Indeed, the jury were fully and correctly instructed on every material phase of the case, and no just criticism can be made of the court in reference to the instructions given or refused.

[12] After the submission of the cause and the jury had deliberated for several hours they returned, and, through their foreman, made a request to have a portion of the testimony read. The proceedings in relation to it are shown by the record as follows:

> "Foreman Darrell: If the court please, we wish to apologize to your honor and the attorneys and the court officials and others present for causing you to convene court at this time, but there are certain points in the evidence upon which we do not agree, and we deem it necessary that the evidence be read. The clerk has the memoranda for the evidence we desire. The Court: Yes; I see. Mr. McCallum, you have seen that memoranda, have you? Show it to Mr. Schooler. (At this time Mr. Schooler examines note containing request for testimony.) The Court (to the reporter): How long would it take you, Mr. McCallum, to prepare yourself to read that to this jury? (The testimony requested by the jury to be read included the testimony of Gertrude Lamson, cross and direct, and that of Thomas Whidden and Mrs. Whidden.) (At this time the reporter stated that in order to go over the entire direct and cross examination of Gertrude Lamson, of Thomas Whidden and of Mrs. Whidden, which testimony extended continuously over a period of approximately four days, that he might be able to locate the particular testimony desired in an hour, but in order to look over all the testimony mentioned by the jury and to locate it in its entirety with the required certainty necessary, it would take perhaps several hours, and that to read the entire testimony mentioned, thus entirely avoiding the danger of omitting any portion of that mentioned by the jury, that it would require at least three days' time.) Foreman Darrell: If the court please, it is just a slight portion of the evidence of the witness referred to in the memoranda we desire. The Court: I see, but we have to give the reporter some time to look it up. I will have to give him some time to report to me that he has found it. You see that big stack of books before him there, gentlemen; they contain the evidence that he has to seek through and get the line and the sentences that you want in order to cover your request fully. Foreman Darrell: Providing we determine to get along without this testimony, if, after debating the matter further, we can proceed without this particular evidence, then what? The Court: It is for you, gentlemen of the jury, when you get ready to report a verdict, if you find a verdict, to notify the officers, and they will notify the rest of us. Foreman Darrell: My point was this, that I do not believe that those who desire the reading of this portion of the testimony—in fact, I am sure that they were not aware that it would take any considerable time to produce that. There was simply a question that arose upon which we could not agree. As stated in the memoranda, we were under the impression that it required only a few moments, as it was a very small part of the evidence that was given by those three parties that we wanted. The Court: I do not know of anything to do only to let you go to your jury room and let the reporter go to work and find the testimony that you want, and when he finds it we will report to you. You can now return to your jury room. (In accordance with the foregoing proceedings, after the jury retired again to their jury room to deliberate further, the reporter proceeded to locate through the testimony of the foregoing named three witnesses, covering some 1,000 or 1,200 pages of shorthand, the portions thereof covered by the memoranda submitted to the court by the jury and awaited a further call from the jury.) At this time, to wit, 9:10 o'clock a. m. on this 13th day of May, 1916, after having been out all night, the jury returned into the courtroom, and the following proceedings are had."

Then follows the announcement of the verdict in the usual manner without any further reference to said testimony.

Section 1138 of the Penal Code provides:

"After the jury have retired for deliberation, if there be any disagreement between them as to the testimony, or if they desire to be informed on any point of law arising in the cause, they must require the officer to conduct them into court. Upon being brought into court, the information required must be given in the presence of, or after notice to, the district attorney, and the defendant or his counsel, or after they have been called."

It is the claim of appellant that to his prejudice he was deprived of the substantial right to which he was entitled by this statute, and therefore his conviction should be reversed. His contention is not supported by the record. The statute must, of course, have a reasonable construction. No one but the reporter could furnish the information, and he could not do so without laborious investigation. He made the effort and located the testimony, but at what time he was prepared to read it the record does not show. It may have been after the verdict was reached by the jury. At any rate, there was no disposition apparently on the part of said reporter or of the trial judge to withhold from the jury what they requested and preparation was made to comply with the request. But it is manifest that the jury, after further consultation, concluded that they did not need the additional information and they could and did agree upon a verdict without waiting to have the said testimony read. As seen, it had been stated by the foreman that they might thus be able to agree and we must conclusively presume, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, that they were entirely satisfied to forego the reading, believing that it would not affect their conclusion as to the guilt of the defendant. There is nothing in the matter to indicate any improper conduct on the part of any officer of the court or of the jury, nor can it be said that any harm was thereby done to appellant.

[13-15] It is insisted with frequent repetition that there is no proof of the act upon which the district attorney elected to rely. In this appellant is entirely mistaken. The evidence is set out in the brief of the Attorney General. The salacious story need not be repeated. The testimony of the prosecutrix is direct and positive as to the consummation of the offense at the time and place alleged. Her credibility was, of course, matter of argument before the jury and the trial court. The considerations suggested affecting her veracity were, no doubt, forcibly presented at the proper time in that tribunal, but they failed of their purpose, and we are in no position to say that she did not tell the truth when she attempted to relate the occurrence in question.

Appellant is also in error when he asserts that the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix is insufficient to warrant a conviction. There are some early decisions to that effect, but such is not the law as now recognized in this state.

In People v. Logan, 123 Cal. 414, 56 Pac. 56, it is said:

"Upon the trial of a defendant accused of rape, if the evidence of the prosecuting witness is sufficient to support the verdict, the truth or falsity of her evidence is a matter for the jury, and a verdict of conviction will not be disturbed, notwithstanding conflicting evidence for the defendant, and notwithstanding the circumstances and conditions forming part of the res gestæ of the offense are unusual, and not entirely convincing."

It is true that her testimony should be clear and convincing, but it is for the jury and the trial judge to determine whether it fulfills that requirement, and the record here shows that their conclusion was against the contention of appellant. We may say also that there was some circumstantial corroboration of the testimony of the prosecutrix to which, no doubt, some heed was given. Manifestly, the jury should exercise the greatest care and circumspection in considering the evidence in cases of this character, as was aptly said in People v. Price, 26 Cal. App. 550, 147 Pac. 591. They were so instructed in the present instance, and we cannot say they failed to observe the admonition.

Many circumstances tending to discredit her testimony are pressed upon our attention. It is urged that she was strongly impeached and discredited by her own voluntary and repeated repudiation of the charge, that it is so inherently as well as circumstantially improbable, and the great preponderance of the evidence is to the effect that the testimony given by her on the trial of the case is absolutely false. Hence it is argued that the verdict must be the result of passion and prejudice, and "a conviction upon such evidence would be a blot upon the jurisprudence of the country and a libel upon jury trials." People v. Hamilton, 46 Cal. 540.

That she had made contradictory statements was, as we have seen, the subject of explanation, and the value of it as a probative fact was for the jury. That on behalf of the defendant there was much evidence in irreconcilable conflict with the testimony of the prosecutrix cannot of itself justify us in setting aside the verdict. These considerations are amply discussed in People v. Kaiser, 119 Cal. 458, 51 Pac. 702, People v. Lewis, 18 Cal. App. 364, 123 Pac. 232, People v. Preston, 19 Cal. App. 679, 127 Pac. 660, People v. Crawford, 24 Cal. App. 403, 141 Pac. 824, and People v. Rongo, 169 Cal. 75, 145 Pac. 1017, and no further comment is deemed expedient. But if we could say that her story is inherently improbable, we should, of course, have no hesitation in branding it as false and malicious and awarding appellant the relief he seeks.

In support of his contention that her charge is incredible, appellant calls attention to the peculiar and unusual circumstances attending each occasion of immorality as related by the prosecutrix, and the improbability of the story is enhanced and emphasized, so it is claimed, by—

> "the established good character of the defendant for decency and morality, prohibiting the belief that he did the monstrous and depraved things the prosecutrix in her destructively self-contradictory testimony says he perpetrated against her virtue. Surely the defendant's good character as a minister of Christianity established by 33 years of constant devotion to the maintenance and advocacy of religion and morality should be and is a powerful circumstance indicating the great improbability of the accusation that has been made against him at the sinister instigation of his enemies, by a woman who it must be conceded is not 'above suspicion and reproach.' Says a learned court: 'Character under all circumstances is the best earthly inheritance. It is a shield to the innocent when unjustly accused.' United States v. Emerson,. 6 McLean, 406 [Fed. Cas. No. 15,051]."

The considerations thus forcibly set forth are of great significance and potency, but we need not dwell upon them at length. As to the peculiar circumstances of the various delinquencies, we may say they do not stamp the recital of the prosecutrix with inherent improbability, but they furnish the basis for a persuasive argument against the truth of her statements, and, no doubt, this feature of the case was conscientiously considered by the jury. It does, indeed, seem strange and almost incredible that any man in his senses would commit such an offense under such circumstances, but we cannot say that it is so unbelievable that the jury had no legal right to accept the story told by the prosecutrix. People v. Moore, 155 Cal. 241, 100 Pac. 688. The profession to which he belonged was a circumstance also vastly in favor of appellant's innocence. No higher calling ever enlisted the services of mankind, and it must be said that nearly all who are engaged in this great work are worthy of the respect and confidence of all upright people, but they are subjected to peculiar temptations along the line of this regnant impulse, and occasionally one falls, and some of them, of course, are "wolves in sheep's clothing." We need hardly say that there are many historical examples of similar and other crimes committed by persons of high standing in the community under circumstances more strange and startling than are revealed in the case before us. It is especially true of this character of offenses. It is the old story, as old as the history of the race, of man yielding to the almost irresistible coercion of the strongest instinct of animal life. Indeed, we have the authority of Paul, the greatest preacher that ever lived, that there is a constant strife between the carnal and the spiritual forces for supremacy in man's nature, and he himself found it necessary to be constantly on his guard lest he become a castaway. Cases equally as strange have come under the observation of all of us, and many of them could be readily recalled.

Of course, this might have been an unjust conviction. Mr. Slaughter may have been the victim of a foul conspiracy. If so, a monstrous wrong has been committed, but we are not in a position so to determine or so to declare. The responsibility of passing upon such considerations is not lodged with us. Finding, as we do, sufficient evidence to support the verdict and an absence of prejudicial error in the record, and having no means of determining that there was a miscarriage of justice, we can do nothing else than affirm the judgment; for it is not true, as contended by appellant, that under Amendment 4½ of article 6 of the state Constitution we are authorized to weigh the evidence and judge of the credibility of the witnesses, and thus virtually try the case anew. That amendment has been the subject of frequent exposition, and we need not add to the decisions. However, we may say that in view of the record it is impossible for us to be "satisfied" that an injustice was done to the defendant. We cannot say, as declared by appellant, that the verdict was the result of "the impassionate clamor of the mob, of the intemperate indignation of the multitude," or that it was influenced by "the mad assaults of a sensational and hysterical public press," but we are required to hold, rather, that it was the conscientious judgment of a jury anxious to do right and to vindicate the law, like "the true judicial opinion" of which appellant speaks, resembling "the magnificent nobility of the great ocean in its mighty grandeur, calm and dispassionate in rest, eternal in power." It is true that the law "condemns with intransigeant denunciation a verdict or decision that is induced by passion or prejudice and exacts from the courts a stringent supervision, as well as a liberal exertion of remedial power to redress a grave wrong destructive of justice and the supremacy of the law." But the mandate is equally insistent that the courts content themselves with the exercise of the power committed to their hands by the Constitution and the statutes, and that they refrain from an unwarranted interference with the prerogatives and duties assigned to other agencies by the deliberate action of the sovereign power of the state.

The judgment and order are affirmed.

We concur: CHIPMAN, P. J.; HART, J.

(33 Cal. App. 291)

McGINN v. REES et al. (Civ. 1849.)

(District Court of Appeal, First District, California. Dec. 30, 1916. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 21, 1917.)

1. Appeal and Error ⚷865—Question Presented—Motion to Set Aside Judgment.

Appeal from order refusing motion to set aside default judgment not made under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, but on ground of lack of jurisdiction, presents only the question of jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3462–3466.]

2. Judgment ⚷138(3)—Default—Vacation—Failure to Serve Complaint with Summons.

Failure to serve copy of complaint with summons, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 410, will warrant vacation of default judgment for lack of jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 254.]

3. Judgment ⚷138(3)—Default—Vacation—Variance between Complaint and Copy Served.

The fact that copy of complaint served with summons differed from complaint filed in omitting one of the names of the defendants, where this was stated in the summons, did not violate Code Civ. Proc. § 410, requiring service of copy of complaint with summons, so as to warrant vacation of default judgment for lack of jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 254.]

4. Process ⚷156 — Defective Service — Time for Objection.

If defendant desired to test sufficiency of service of copy of complaint with summons, she should have appeared and made appropriate motion at the trial, instead of waiting until judgment was taken against her and then claiming it a nullity because of minor differences between complaint filed and copy served.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. § 211.]

5. Process ⚷158—Service—Motion to Set Aside.

A motion to set aside service of summons will be denied unless defendant's substantial rights were affected.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. §§ 218–220.]

6. Process ⚷164(3)—Amendment to Proof of Service—Fictitious Defendant.

Where complaint named a defendant as John Doe R. and default judgment was taken against Mark R., being defendant's true name, and he being served with process, motion to amend proof of service to correspond with the judgment should have been granted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Process, Cent. Dig. §§ 245, 246.]

7. Judgment ⚷18(3) — Pleading to Support—Name of Defendant — Failure to Amend—Fictitious Defendant.

The fact that complaint was not amended so as to state defendant's true name, where defendant was sued under a fictitious name, was a mere irregularity, and did not invalidate the judgment, where the real defendant was served with process, and court had jurisdiction of subject-matter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 36.]

8. Judgment ⚷18(3) — Complaint to Support—Prayer for Judgment.

The fact that the body of the complaint seeks no personal judgment against defendant, in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, did not invalidate judgment, where the prayer of the complaint demanded personal judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 36.]

9. Appeal and Error ⚷188—Necessity of Objection—Motion to Amend Return of Process.

Where defendant failed to object to plaintiff's motion to amend return of process because of failure to state grounds, appellate court will not entertain such objection.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1190–1204.]

Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; E. P. Mogan, Judge.

Action by George W. McGinn against Mrs. Helen Rees and others. Judgment for plaintiff. Defendant named appeals from order refusing to set aside judgment and open default, and plaintiff appeals from order refusing to permit amendment of return of summons and from order vacating judgment as to defendant Mark Rees. Judgment for plaintiff against defendant named affirmed, and orders refusing permission to amend return of summons and opening default of defendant Mark Rees reversed.

John T. Williams and John D. Harloe, both of San Francisco, for plaintiff. Stafford & Stafford, of San Francisco, for defendant Helen Rees.

PER CURIAM. This is an action to foreclose a lien for street work. According to the caption of the complaint the action is against Helen Rees, John Doe Rees (her husband), and four fictitious defendants. Helen Rees, it is alleged in the complaint, is the owner of the property upon which the lien is claimed, and she alone entered into the contract with plaintiff for the performance of the street work. John Doe Rees is not alleged to be a fictitious defendant, but he and the four fictitious defendants, it is averred, claim some right or interest in the property, but which is subordinate to plaintiff's claim. In the prayer of the complaint judgment is demanded against the defendants for $377.75, with interest and costs, and for a foreclosure of plaintiff's lien. Summons was served on Helen Rees and Mark Rees, and a judgment by default for the amount demanded was entered against said defendants and the requested decree granted. Within about three months after the entry of the judgment each of the above-named defendants, specially appearing for that purpose, moved the court to set aside the judgment. Such motion was made, not under the provisions of section 473 of the Code of Cicil Procedure, but upon the ground that the court was wholly without jurisdiction to enter the same. The plaintiff also upon due notice requested permission to amend the proof of service of summons on Mark Rees. The court refused to grant the motion to set aside the judgment against Helen Rees, and refused to permit the plaintiff to amend the return of summons, but granted the motion to vacate the judgment as to Mark Rees. The plaintiff and defendants respectively prosecute appeals from these orders. These appeals are all embraced in one record, and will be considered together.

[1] Several of the points made in their briefs by Helen and Mark Rees could be considered only upon an appeal from the judgment or upon a motion made under the terms of section 473 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and not upon the motions giving rise to these appeals, which simply test the question of the jurisdiction of the court.

[2] The ground upon which Helen Rees relies for a reversal of the order denying her motion to vacate the judgment against her is that in effect she was not served with a copy of the complaint on file in the action as required by section 410 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A copy of the complaint must be served with the summons. S. P. R. Co. v. Superior Court, 59 Cal. 471. That case was approved in State v. Harrington, 31 Mont. 298, 78 Pac. 485, where the court held that when a summons was served without a copy of the complaint the court was without jurisdiction.

[3-5] In the present case there were a number of trivial differences between the complaint on file and the one served, the most important of which was the omission from the latter of one of the names of the defendants contained in the former, but as the summons served on Helen Rees with the copy of the complaint contained the omitted name, we take the view that there was not such a failure to comply with the terms of section 410 as would result in a lack of jurisdiction in the court of the person of said defendant. If she had desired to test the sufficiency of the service, she could have appeared and by an appropriate motion had that question settled at once. Arroyo D. D. Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 52, 28 Pac. 54, 27 Am. St. Rep. 91. We think she could not wait until judgment was taken against her, and then claim that it was a nullity because of minor differences between the complaint filed and the copy served upon her. Brum v. Ivins, 154 Cal. 17, 96 Pac. 876, 129 Am. St. Rep. 137; Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455. And even on a motion to set aside the service of summons, unless her substantial rights were affected—which does not appear to be the case here—such a motion would be denied. Fraser v. Oakdale L. & W. Co., 73 Cal. 187, 14 Pac. 829.

As to the appeal by Mark Rees, it appears from the return that the summons with a copy of the complaint was served on this defendant, but that the name of Mark Rees did not appear in the complaint or summons. In this state of the record, without any amendment thereof, plaintiff took by default a decree of foreclosure and a judgment for $377.75 with interest and costs, not only against Helen Rees, but also against Mark Rees. On the hearing of the motion made by Mark Rees to vacate the judgment against him he made no showing or claim that he was not served with summons, or that he was not the person intended to be sued by the name John Doe Rees. He depended—or in any event, according to the motion and the grounds thereof, was compelled to depend—on the point that from the face of the record it would not be presumed that John Doe Rees and Mark Rees were the same person, and therefore the action appearing to be against John Doe Rees, the court was without jurisdiction to render a judgment against Mark Rees.

If it appeared from the face of the record, as contended, that one person was served, and a judgment was obtained against a stranger to the action, although served with summons, it would, no doubt, be held that the court was without jurisdiction of the person so served, and that such judgment might be annulled at any time upon motion. But that is not this case, for here, although it is not so alleged, it would seem to appear from the name itself that John Doe Rees was a fictitious defendant, and this inference is strengthened by the fact that John Doe Rees in the complaint, and Mark Rees in the judgment, are referred to as the husband of the defendant Helen Rees.

[6] But however that may be, prior to the hearing of the motion to set aside the default of Mark Rees the plaintiff had moved the court for permission to amend the return of proof of service of summons so as to make it show that Mark Rees was the person sued as John Doe Rees, and that Mark Rees was in fact served with summons. This proposed amendment was in conformity with the facts; it was in support of the judgment, and in our opinion it ought to have been granted. Morrisey v. Gray, 160 Cal. 390, 117 Pac. 438; Herman v. Santee, 103 Cal. 519, 37 Pac. 509, 42 Am. St. Rep. 145. With the return amended as proposed the record would then have shown that Mark Rees was the person referred to and intended to be described in the complaint by the name of John Doe Rees, in which event the judgment could not be regarded as void on its face and consequently subject to be set aside at any time on motion.

[7] Perhaps, as suggested, if the plaintiff desired to obtain judgment against Mark Rees, the complaint should have been amended by substituting his true name for that by which he had been sued; but failure in this respect amounted to no more than an irregularity, for which the judgment might have been reversed on appeal. McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570; Alameda Co. v. Crocker, 125 Cal. 101, 104, 57 Pac. 766. The court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and when Mark Rees was served as a defendant sued by the name of John Doe Rees, which appears to be the fact, the court aquired jurisdiction of his person. Campbell v. Adams, 50 Cal. 203; Baldwin v. Morgan, 50 Cal. 585.

[8] While it is true that in the body of the complaint no personal judgment was sought against Mark Rees, nevertheless the judgment, although of that nature, is not void, for the reason that the prayer of the complaint demanded a personal judgment against him for the amount of the contract price of the work performed together with the incidental costs. If there had been no such demand, the judgment here entered might be regarded as subject to the attack now made upon it, but there is a conflict of the authorities upon that question. Chase et al. v. Christianson, 41 Cal. 253; George v. Nowlan, 38 Or. 541, 64 Pac. 1; Sache v. Wallace, 101 Minn. 169, 112 N. W. 386, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 807, and notes, 118 Am. St. Rep. 612, 11 Ann. Cas. 348; Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527; Brooks v. Forington, 117 Cal. 219, 48 Pac. 1073.

[9] Plaintiff's motion to amend his return fails to state the grounds upon which it was based. It does not appear that the defendant objected to the hearing of the motion on that ground, and apparently the objection is here made for the first time, for which reason we cannot entertain it.

For the foregoing reasons the judgment against defendant Helen Rees is affirmed, and the orders refusing plaintiff permission to amend his return of summons and opening the default of defendant Mark Rees are reversed.

LENNON, P. J. The judgment appealed from is affirmed, and the orders, refusing plaintiff permission to amend his return of summons, and upon the default of defendant Mark Rees, are reversed, for the reason stated in opinion filed December 30, 1916 (24 Cal. App. Dec. 52), which opinion is hereby adopted as the opinion of the court following the resubmission of the cause, and said opinion is hereby ordered refiled as of this date.

(33 Cal. App. 350)

CONNELL CO. v. JENNER. (Civ. 1901.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. April 3, 1917.)

1. Master and Servant 🔑80(15)—Compensation—Findings.

Findings that defendant employé was engaged at a specified salary but that for two months he procured credit for a larger monthly salary without plaintiff employer's consent, the excess being later charged back to him, negatives the conclusion that his salary was increased.

2. Master and Servant 🔑80(15)—Action for Compensation—Pleading.

Allegations that defendant was employed at a specified monthly salary in 1912 held supported by findings that such a contract was made in 1909, and had not been changed with plaintiff employer's consent.

3. Master and Servant 🔑80(5) — Action for Compensation—Pleading.

Under a common count for money had and received plaintiff employer may have amount of salary due defendant employé determined in order to ascertain the balance due it from collections made by defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 114.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; Charles Wellborn, Judge.

Action by the Connell Company against Arthur Jenner. From an adverse judgment, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Stephens & Stephens, of Los Angeles, for appellant. Kendrick & Ardis, J. C. Craig, and Edward Winterer, all of Los Angeles, for respondent.

JAMES, J. Appeal by the plaintiff taken from an adverse judgment and presented on the judgment roll.

The complaint of plaintiff contained statements of four alleged causes of action, the first two only of which need to be considered. In the first cause of action it is alleged that on the 1st day of February, 1912, and subsequent thereto, defendant was employed by the plaintiff under an arrangement by which defendant was to devote his time and services in the business of the plaintiff for a salary of $100 per month, with an additional sum of $20 per month to be paid to him for the use of an automobile. In this cause of action it was further alleged that defendant had received and collected from debtors of the plaintiff the sum of $443.86 in excess of the amounts which he had earned by reason of the agreement aforesaid, and which excess sum of money he had refused to pay to the plaintiff upon demand. The second cause of action was in the form of a common count for the same amount of money as money had and received by the defendant to and for the use of the plaintiff. By way of answer the defendant alleged that on or about the 1st day of March, 1909, he entered into an agreement with the plaintiff to render services for the compensation of $100 per month, and that in May, 1909, there was added to his compensation the sum of $20 per month for the use of his automobile. He alleged that that arrangement was to continue for a period of one year, but that he continued to render services until December 31, 1910, without any further agreement for a different compensation, and that he collected and received up to December 31, 1910, the sum of $120 per month according to the agreement, although he alleges that his services were worth the sum of $150 per month. He then alleged that about the 1st day of December, 1910, he notified the manager of the company that, if he continued to work for the plaintiff company, "he must have $150 per month," and that he would retain that amount out of moneys collected by him, and that plaintiff nor its manager made any objection thereto; that defendant continued to serve the plaintiff and to retain the sum of $150 per month; that his services continued up to the 15th day of March, 1913. The court made findings by which the facts were determined to be that on or about the 1st day of March, 1909, the defendant was employed by the plaintiff at the monthly compensation of $100, and that about the 1st day of May, 1909, an agreement was made allowing to defendant $20 per month additional for the use of an automobile, and that defendant continued in the employ of plaintiff until the 6th day of March, 1913. Further facts are found in the following terms:

> "That in the month of December, 1910, the defendant demanded of the plaintiff that his salary be thereafter raised to the sum of $150 per month for his services and for the use of his said automobile; that said demand was made of the plaintiff through the secretary and treasurer of the plaintiff, one Madge H. Connell; that thereupon the said Connell failed to refuse said demand, and failed to accede to said demand, and failed to discharge the defendant from the employ of the plaintiff; that thereafter, at the direction of the defendant, the bookkeeper for the plaintiff, entered upon the books of plaintiff in the account of said defendant for the months of January and February, 1911, a credit to the defendant of $150 for each of said months as salary. Thereafter the fact of said entries was brought to the attention of the said Connell, who voiced objections to the same to the defendant, and called the attention of the president of the plaintiff thereto; that said president thereupon instructed the defendant that he had no right to raise his own salary, and pursuant to the instructions of said president, on the 28th day of February, 1911, a charge was made upon said books against the defendant in the sum of $60 for excess in salary; that at all times thereafter said account upon said books of defendant was credited with the sum of $120 per month and no more; that said books were at all times open to the inspection of the defendant, and were inspected by him, and he had knowledge of the fact of all of said entries; that thereafter, up to the time of the termination of the employment of the defendant, the defendant and said Connell continued to quarrel and dispute with each other as to the amount of the salary of the defendant."

It was further found that it was not true that the defendant was employed for the period of one year, "or for any other definite period of time." It was also found that the defendant had collected the sum sued for by the plaintiff, and that such sum was in excess of the amount of money which would be due him under the compensation as agreed of $120 per month. It was further found that it was not true that defendant's services were worth $150 per month, but that it was true that about the 1st day of December, 1910, the defendant notified the manager of the company that, if he continued to work after the 31st of December, he must have $150 per month, and that plaintiff nor its said manager made any objection at that time, and that the defendant was credited with the sum of $150 per month for the months of January and February, 1911. This finding then follows:

> "That it is true that the services of the said defendant after January 1, 1911, continued during all the time from that date until on or about the 15th day of March, 1913, with full knowledge on the part of the manager of the plaintiff and of its directors. But it is not true that said services continued with full knowledge that the defendant has given notice that he would serve the company only on the condition that he was paid or allowed to draw from the company $150 per month during the time that he served the plaintiff."

[1-3] The findings, as will be noted, were somewhat contradictory. The substance, however, of the findings, to our minds, clearly negatives the conclusion that the defendant at any time was serving the plaintiff company under any different arrangement as to compensation than that originally entered into by him. Up to the time that he sought to secure an increase in compensation there was no dispute as to the terms of his employment, and if he continued to work for the plaintiff without any agreement consented to by the plaintiff which would change that compensation, we think that it must be inferred as a legal conclusion that he consented to work for the compensation theretofore agreed upon. It appears from the findings that, while a credit of $150 per month was entered for two months, that credit was not authorized by the plaintiff company, and that the excess was charged back to the defendant, and that he continued to work many months thereafter with the accounts on the books of the company showing a credit of compensation as originally agreed upon only, and that he had knowledge of the fact that the books were so kept. Counsel for respondent argue that the plaintiff declared upon an express contract which the court found to be different from that alleged; but we do not think that such is the effect of the findings. At any rate, under the allegations of the second alleged cause of action, plaintiff was entitled to have ascertained the amount due to the defendant in order to have fixed the amount which it was alleged he had collected and not accounted for.

By a supplemental complaint the plaintiff sought to set up certain facts regarding a judgment of the justice's court wherein the assignor of the defendant had brought suit on behalf of the defendant to recover from the plaintiff certain money alleged to be due, and by reason of which judgment it was asserted defendant was estopped from claiming any offset against the demand of the plaintiff. We do not think that that judgment was properly pleaded in bar under the condition of the issues; but, in the view we have taken of the case, that matter becomes immaterial here.

The judgment is reversed in order that a new trial may be had.

We concur: CONREY, P. J.; SHAW, J.

(33 Cal. App. 317)

LAPIQUE v. PLUMMER et al. (Civ. 2231.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. March 26, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 24, 1917.)

Appeal and Error 🔑631 — Transcript of Judgment Roll—Necessity of Printing.

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 953a, 953b, and 953c, as effective August, 1914, regulating the preparation, etc., of phonographic reports and transcripts on appeal, did not apply to an appeal from a judgment upon the judgment roll alone, and such a record must be printed under the direct provisions of Supreme Court rule 7 (119 Pac. xi).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2766–2770.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; Lewis R. Works, Judge.

Action by John Lapique against Eugene R. Plummer, Catherine Agoure, and others. From a judgment dismissing the action as to Catherine Agoure, plaintiff appeals. Appeal dismissed.

John Lapique, of Orange, in pro. per. O'Melveny, Stevens & Millikin and Stuart O'Melveny, all of Los Angeles, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. This is an appeal upon the judgment roll from a judgment of dismissal of the action as to respondent, Catherine Agoure, as administratrix of the estate of Pierre Agoure, deceased, entered upon an order of court sustaining her demurrer to the second amended complaint, without leave to amend.

As stated, the appeal is upon the judgment roll alone, a transcript of which is presented by a certified typewritten copy. No authority is found, either in the rules of the court or in the statutory provisions of the Code, for this method of bringing up the record, where it consists solely and alone of the judgment roll. In the cases there specified sections 953a, 953b, and 953c, Code of Civil Procedure, provide for the preparation, certification, and filing of phonographic reports and transcripts of records to be used on appeal; but these sections do not apply to the transcript where the appeal is from the judgment upon the judgment roll alone.

> "The provision that the transcript need not be printed applies only where the appellant has availed himself of section 953a, and the latter section relates and applies only to cases where a reporter's transcript is prepared and settled." Harpold v. Slocum, 168 Cal. 364, 143 Pac. 609.

Hence, it follows that in cases where there is no substitute for the bill or reporter's transcript prepared under section 953a there is no statutory exemption from the necessity of printing the transcript, as required by rule 7 (119 Pac. xi) of the Supreme Court on the subject, which must prevail. For this reason, the appellant is not entitled to a hearing of the appeal, which should be and it is dismissed.

Our opinion is based upon the sections of the Code as they were in August, 1914, when the transcript herein was filed.

(33 Cal. App. 807)

LAPIQUE v. WALSH. (Civ. No. 2230.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. March 26, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 24, 1917.)

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; Fred H. Taft, Judge.

Action by John Lapique against Frank E. Walsh, administrator of the estate of Laurent Etchepare, deceased. From a judgment dismissing the complaint, plaintiff appeals. Appeal dismissed.

John Lapique, of Orange, in pro. per. H. H. Appel and Horace Bell, both of Los Angeles, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. It appearing that the facts in this case are identical with those involved in civil No. 2231, entitled John Lapique, Appellant, v. Eugene R. Plummer et al., Respondents, 165 Pac. 56, wherein an opinion was this day filed dismissing the appeal, it is ordered, upon the authority of the opinion so filed in said last-mentioned case, that the appeal herein be, and the same is, dismissed.

(33 Cal. App. 807)

LAPIQUE et al. v. AGOURE. (Civ. No. 2229.)

(District Court of Appeal, Second District, California. March 26, 1917. Rehearing Denied by Supreme Court May 24, 1917.)

Appeal from Superior Court, Los Angeles County; Lewis R. Works, Judge.

Action by John Lapique and others, as surviving copartners, etc., against Catherine Agoure, administratrix of the estate of Pierre Agoure, deceased. From a judgment dismissing the complaint, John Lapique appeals. Appeal dismissed.

John Lapique, of Orange, in pro. per. O'Melveny. Stevens & Millikin and Stuart O'Melveny, all of Los Angeles, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. It appearing that the facts in this case are identical with those involved in civil No. 2231, entitled John Lapique, Appellant, v. Eugene R. Plummer, et al., Respondents, 165 Pac. 56, wherein an opinion was this day filed dismissing the appeal, it is ordered, upon the authority of the opinion so filed in said last-mentioned case, that the appeal herein be, and the same is, dismissed.

(96 Wash. 439)

QUILP GOLD MINING CO. v. REPUBLIC MINES CORP. et al. (No. 13751.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 19, 1917.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS 🔑55(5)—CONTRACTS—CONSTRUCTION—TITLE.

Under a contract providing that upon forfeiture defendant was to give a good and sufficient deed, conveying to plaintiff all ore bodies of every description lying east of the west line of the Q. claim extended down vertically and lying south of the north end line of the Q. claim extended down vertically, and which may apex within the lines of the S. claim, held that as the claims overlapped in their original survey, and the amount of such overlap was included in the patent to the S. claim, but excepted from the approximate northwest corner of the Q. claim by a later patent to it, plaintiff was, upon forfeiture, entitled as to defendants to all ore bodies the apex of which was within the S. claim lying south of the north end line of the Q. claim extended vertically down, and east of the west line extended vertically down, determined to be the line from the point where the north end line of the Q. claim intersects the east line of the S. claim; thence along and coincident with the east side line of the S. claim, from the point of intersection to the southeast corner of the S. claim; thence along and coincident with the south end line of the S. claim to the point of intersection with the west side line of the Q. claim as surveyed; thence southerly along the west side line of the Q. claim as surveyed to its southerly end line.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 155, 162.]

2. MINES AND MINERALS 🔑31(1)—EXTRALATERAL RIGHTS—COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTE.

As Congress has prescribed the conditions upon which extralateral rights may be acquired, a party dealing with mining locations must bring himself within those conditions or else be content with simply the minerals beneath th surface of his own territory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 75.]

3. MINES AND MINERALS 🔑31(2)—RIGHT TO VEIN HAVING APEX WITHIN CLAIM.

Under Act Cong. May 10, 1872 (Rev. St. U. S. § 2319 et seq. [U. S. Comp. St. 1916. § 4614 et seq.]) the end lines of a mining claim are required to be projected parallel with each other and crosswise of the general course of the veins within the surface limits of the location, and whenever the top or apex of the vein is found within the surface lines extended vertically downwards, the vein may be followed outside of the vertical side lines.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 76.]

4. MINES AND MINERALS 🔑31(2)—RIGHT TO FOLLOW A VEIN ON ITS DIP.

If the apex of a vein crosses one end line and one side line of a lode mining claim as located thereon, there is the right to follow the vein on its dip beyond the side line.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 76.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; E. K. Pendergast, Judge.

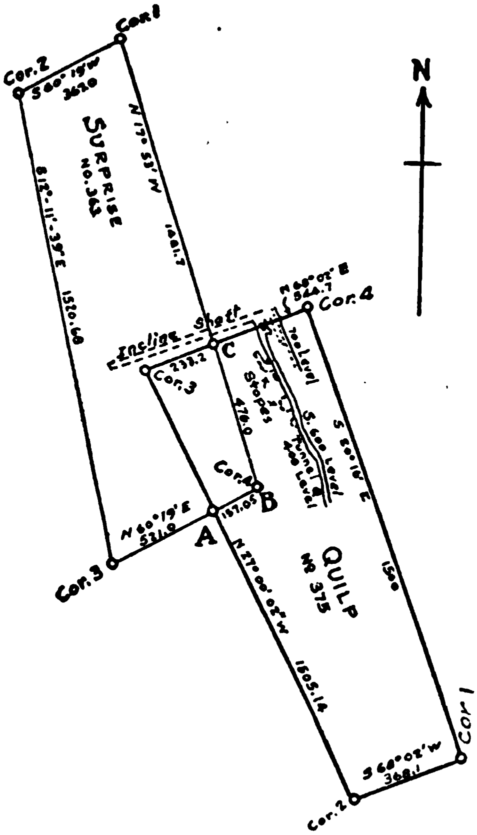
Action by the Quilp Gold Mining Company against the Republic Mines Corporation and others. There was a judgment for plaintiff containing certain exceptions and provisions, from which it appeals. Reversed, with directions.

Voorhees & Canfield, of Spokane, for appellant. A. J. Laughon, of Republic, for respondents.

HOLCOMB, J. This is an appeal from parts of a judgment and decree in an action brought by appellant against the Republic Mines Corporation and the other respondents and defendants claiming under it, to establish the ownership of appellant in and to the Quilp lode mining claim, government survey No. 375, in and to all lodes, veins, ores, minerals, ore bodies and deposits of ore lying within the surface boundaries of the Quilp lode mining claim, extended vertically downward, and to declare that respondents and defendants have no right, title, estate, interest, claim, or right of possession therein, and to enjoin and restrain them from asserting any right therein and from entering or trespassing thereon or mining or removing the ores therein, and to quiet the title of the appellant in all ore bodies of every description lying east of the west line of the Quilp mining claim, extended vertically downward and lying south of the north end line of the Quilp mining claim extended down vertically and which may apex within the lines of the Surprise lode mining claim, and to compel the execution and delivery of a deed of conveyance by respondents to appellant of all the ore bodies above described according to the terms and conditions of a certain contract made and entered into between appellant and the Republic Mines Corporation or Imperator Company.

The pleadings and issues in the case are very multifarious and intricate, some of them being immaterial or of only incidental importance as the case comes here and in view of our disposition of the case. Upon the trial of the action the court entered a decree in favor of the appellant generally, but containing certain exceptions and provisions from which appellant prosecutes this appeal.

Appellant produced proofs to sustain substantially the following facts: For many years prior to the month of October, 1912, appellant had been, and ever since has been, the owner of the Quilp lode mining claim, survey No. 375, in Ferry county, Wash., and during such time the Republic Mines Corporation and its successors in interest have been the owners of the Lone Pine, Last Chance, and of the Surprise lode mining claim, survey No. 363, a prior location and claim in that county. The Quilp and Surprise claims overlap in their surveys. The relative situation of the two claims is shown by the following map or diagram to which reference is made:



This diagram shows the courses and distances of the end and side lines of each claim, the location of the corners thereof, and the amount of the two claims that are in conflict. The area in conflict as to location on the surface is the equilateral figure A B C 3 on the diagram, which area was conveyed by patent from the government to the Surprise lode mining claim and was specially excepted from the grant in the patent from the government to the Quilp lode mining claim. But this territory is not in dispute here, and does not include any of the ore bodies in dispute. During the year 1910 appellant had given an option or bond upon the Quilp lode mining claim to one J. L. Harper, by whom it was assigned to defendant Imperator Quilp Company, hereinafter called the Imperator Company. In working this bond within the Quilp Lode Mining claim the Imperator Company, in running a tunnel from the south in the 400-foot level of the Quilp lode mining claim, encountered a body of ore on the 400-foot level. The tunnel and the ore encountered marked "stopes" are approximately located on this diagram. On August 20, 1912, the Imperator Company being then in default upon its bond to appellant, the latter declared the bond forfeited and the rights of the Imperator Company within the Quilp lode mining claim terminated. Previous to this time the Republic Mines Corporation had begun the excavation of an incline shaft north of the north end line of the Quilp claim, the location of which is indicated upon the diagram. In the summer of 1912 appellant was informed that the Republic Mines Corporation had drifted into and was taking out and removing ores at the 600-foot level of the Quilp, which ores were taken from within the vertical boundaries of the Quilp lode mining claim.

Believing that it was the owner of this ore body which was being removed by the Republic Mines Corporation, appellant directed the prosecution of an action to restrain and enjoin the Republic Mines Corporation from mining or extracting ores from within the surface lines of the Quilp lode mining claim extending vertically downwards. This suit, which was subsequently brought, was referred to in the trial of the action as the apex suit. The Republic Mines Corporation at this time and the Imperator Company when being operated were both under the management of J. L. Harper. When Harper was advised that the appellant was about to begin an action against the Republic Mines Corporation to enjoin it from taking out and removing the ores from within the Quilp lode mining claim, the Imperator Company, at his direction, commenced an action in the superior court of Spokane county on October 15, 1912, against the Quilp Gold Mining Company, for the recovery of the sum of $410,000, which action was referred to in the trial as the fraud action. On August 31, 1912, the Quilp Company had commenced an action in the superior court of Spokane county against Harper, the Imperator Company, and the North Washington Power & Reduction Company, another Harper corporation, for the sum of $4,100, claimed to have been due as royalties under the first bond given by the Quilp Company to Harper, and held by the Imperator Company, and not paid to the Quilp Company in accordance with the terms of the bond, as was contended by the Quilp Company. This action was pending at the time of the commencement of the apex suit. The apex suit referred to was begun on October 17, 1912. The question of the ownership of the ores, then being taken out and removed by the Republic Mines Corporation and Harper from within the surface lines of the Quilp claim extended vertically downward, was therein involved. The plaintiff in that action, appellant here, claimed the same by reason of its ownership of the ground, and the defendant Republic Mines Corporation set up an ownership in the ore body itself by reason of the alleged fact that the vein wherein the ore body was situate had its apex within the surface lines of the Surprise claim, and that therefore the Republic Mines Corporation, under the doctrine of extralateral rights, had a right to follow and remove these ores wheresoever the same should be situated. In the apex suit the plaintiff further demanded judgment for $100,000 damages for trespass upon the Quilp claim by the defendants. The apex suit came on for hearing upon a temporary injunction during the pendency of the action, and was partially heard by the court upon oral testimony, and such proceedings were had that, on November 20, 1912, an order was entered temporarily restraining and enjoining the Republic Mines Corporation from taking or removing any such ores pending the trial of the action upon the merits. Some of the antecedent facts are here recited as tending to show the situation existing at the time of the execution of the contract sued upon and their bearing thereon.

While these various actions, except the present one, were pending, and on May 2, 1913, a contract was entered into between the Republic Mines Corporation, the Imperator Company, and the appellant, which is the contract upon which appellant bases this action. In this contract, after reciting the ownership of the Quilp and Surprise claims and their location with reference to each other and the existence of the three several controversies and pendency of the three several suits and the desire of each and all to settle all controversies, the parties agreed: (1) That the Imperator Company would pay the Quilp Company certain sums of money on or before January 1, 1914, with other deferred payments, and that upon such payment the Quilp Company would execute and deliver to the Imperator Company a good and sufficient deed of conveyance of the Quilp lode mining claim, with all the dips, spurs, angles, etc., together with certain personal property. (2) That if the Imperator Company should fail to make any payment within the time specified, then the contract should become forfeited and all payments made by the Imperator Company prior to such forfeiture should be forfeited to the Quilp Company as liquidated damages. (3) That the Imperator Company might, so long as it complied with the contract, enter upon the Quilp claim and mine and work the claim and extract ores, provided that, if it so did, it should pay plaintiff Quilp Company as royalty 20 per cent. of all net mill or smelter returns and 50 cents per ton flat rate upon said ore extracted from said Quilp claim. (4) That the Imperator Company should cause the smelter or mill treating said ores to send royalties to the Quilp Company at its office, and should cause the mill or smelter to send smelter returns to the Quilp Company. (5) That the royalties paid to the Quilp Company should apply toward the extinguishment of the purchase price of the claim. The sixth paragraph is not material. (7) It was agreed by the Imperator Company and the Republic Mines Corporation, with the consent of the Quilp Company, that the Republic Mines Company might enter into all that part of the Quilp claim which lay north of a line drawn parallel with the south end of the Surprise claim and running east and west across the Quilp claim and intersecting the east line of the Surprise claim at a point 142 feet northwesterly from corner No. 4 of the Surprise claim, and might mine, extract, mill, and smelt the ores therefrom to any depth in following the vein during the life of the agreement, upon payment to the Quilp Company of a royalty of 20 per cent. of the net smelter returns and 50 cents per ton flat rate for all ores so mined, and that the mills or smelters should send the royalty to the Quilp Company at its office, and the royalty should apply upon the purchase money the same as if the ore had been mined and smelted by the Imperator Company. (8) It was agreed that the Republic Mines Corporation would commence work and would mine or smelt from the territory agreed upon not less than 750 tons of ore per month until all moneys due under the contract should have been paid, and if it failed to mine, ship, mill, or smelt said tonnage for a period of two months, then it should forfeit its right to occupy and operate the territory. (9) The Republic Mines Corporation agreed that, in case it should fail to mine, extract, mill, and treat ores in accordance with the contract to such an extent that its rights thereunder should be forfeited under the provisions heretofore set forth, then upon such forfeiture it would, by good and sufficient deed executed by it, convey to the Quilp Company all ore bodies of every description lying east of the west line of the Quilp mining claim extended down vertically and lying south of the north line of the Quilp mining claim extended down vertically and which may apex within the lines of the Surprise lode mining claim.

The ninth paragraph of the contract is the important and critical portion thereof. By the twentieth paragraph it was agreed that all the suits and actions theretofore mentioned then pending between the various parties should be dismissed with prejudice and without costs to any of them, and that the injunction then existing against the Republic Mines Corporation in the suit of the Quilp Company against it should be dissolved, and the Quilp Company and its bondsmen exonerated and released from all claims for damages. By the twenty-first paragraph it was agreed that every clause, covenant, and condition in the agreement should extent to and be binding upon the successors and assigns of the respective parties.

Upon the execution of this contract stipulations for the dismissal with prejudice of the suits pending were executed, and judgments of dismissal with prejudice and without costs were entered. The Imperator Company entered into possession of the Quilp claim generally, and the Republic Mines Corporation began to mine ore from that portion of the Quilp claim described in paragraph 7 of the contract and which is referred to by the parties and in the brief as the disputed territory. On February 13, 1912, the Republic Mines Corporation, then owing to its miners some $14,000 unpaid labor bills, had entered into an agreement with the miners by which its property was being operated by a trustee under a contract to disburse the moneys derived from the mining operations in certain specified ways. The royalties on the ores extracted from the Quilp claim, both in and outside the disputed territory, were regularly paid the Quilp Company, but no payment other than the royalties was ever made to the Quilp Company.

On August 15, 1913, the Republic Mines Corporation and the Imperator Company made a mining bond to J. L. Harper, under which their interest under the contract of May 2, 1913, together with the Surprise claim and other claims, was agreed to be conveyed to Harper for $600,000, and thereupon Harper went into the full possession of the Quilp claim. Thereafter the Republic Mines Corporation was adjudged to be insolvent and a receiver was appointed, and later, in a bankruptcy proceeding, it was adjudged to be bankrupt by the United States District Court, and a trustee in bankruptcy appointed. On June 19, 1914, the stockholders of the Republic Mines Corporation passed a resolution, reciting that the contract of May 2, 1913, was invalid as to it for want of authorization or notification by the stockholders of the corporation, and rejected and disaffirmed the contract and caused notice of their action to be sent to respondent Bailey, then trustee in bankruptcy of the Republic Mines Corporation, and to the Quilp Company. Soon after receiving notice of this action by the stockholders of the Republic Mines Corporation, respondent Bailey placed a bulkhead in the tunnel leading from the Quilp shaft to the disputed territory, thereby excluding appellant from that portion of the Quilp claim, and ever since has claimed title to these ore bodies adverse and superior to the contract of May 2, 1913. In August, 1914, he refused to remove this obstruction or permit its removal.

By their answers the defendants made several defenses: (1) They denied that the Republic Mines Corporation executed the contract because of a want of ratification or authorization thereof by the stockholders; (2) they averred that the contract was fraudulently entered into and was a fraud on the rights of the Republic Mines Corporation and its successors in interest; that (3) the contract was so unconscionable, harsh, and unjust that the appellant should be denied relief of specific performance under it; that (4) the contract was without consideration because in truth the ledge from which the ore was being extracted had its apex within the surface lines of the Surprise claim. These defenses were met by denials and by plea of ratification and estoppel by conduct as to defenses 1 and 2, and by failure to do equity as to defense 3.

Upon the trial of the cause the court, with ample evidentiary support, upheld the execution of the contract, its honesty and the absence of fraud, its fairness and enforceability, the adequacy of the consideration therefor, and the default of the defendants thereunder, and granted appellant generally the relief demanded, and decreed that the respondents convey to appellant the body of ore within the disputed territory lying within the Quilp claim north of a line 142 feet north of the south end of the Surprise claim and parallel with the southern line projected. The court, however, in the decree found that the vein containing the ore body to be conveyed to appellant dips towards the east and will in all likelihood, on its dip and in its downward course, be found to pass through and beyond indefinitely the vertical plane extending through the easterly side line of the Quilp claim, and thereupon entered a decree which cuts the ledge in question into three segments, the first being from the apex of the ledge to the line B C extended vertically downward (see diagram), which segment is awarded to respondents and which is undoubtedly correct; the second being from the line B C to the line from corner No. 4 of the Surprise claim to corner No. 2 of the Quilp claim extended vertically downward, which was awarded to appellant, and the third being from the last-mentioned line easterly to the utmost depth of the ledge, which was awarded to the respondents. The disputed territory as to surface area is therefore that south of the projected line from a point 142 feet north of the south end line of the Surprise claim parallel therewith and extended vertically downward and east of a line from point B to corner 2 of the Quilp claim. The court further decreed that the Quilp claim is subject to an easement in favor of the respondents of a right of way across the Quilp claim to the territory lying easterly of the Quilp claim, with the right of ingress, egress, and regress through the same for the purpose of removing ores from the third segment. The court further undertook to establish the surface boundaries of the Surprise claim and Quilp claim, and found the location and dip of the vein on the surface, and undertook to establish a new end line of the Surprise claim erected at a point 142 feet northerly from the point B on the line B C, where the lode appears to cross the east side line thereof, all of which appellant contends is wholly beyond the issues and the evidence in the action, and is erroneous, and from which it appeals.

[1] Starting from the proposition that it was found and determined that the Republic Mines Corporation had not complied with the contract of May 2, 1913, that the contract was enforceable and not founded in fraud or unconscionable, and that the corporation had forfeited its rights under the contract, which adjudications respondents have not attacked, we observe by paragraph 9 of the contract that, upon such forfeiture, the Republic Mines Corporation was required to give a good and sufficient deed, executed by it, conveying to the Quilp Company all ore bodies of every description lying east of the west line of the Quilp mining claim extended down vertically and lying south of the north end line of the Quilp mining claim extended down vertically, and which may apex within the lines of the Suprise lode mining claim. The only question to determine, then, is what is the true construction and meaning of the foregoing italicized description. It is conceded that there is an ore body extending below the Quilp mining claim the apex of which is within the lines of the Surprise mining claim some distance northerly of corner 3 of what was originally the Quilp mining claim. The dip of that lode from its apex seems to have been southerly and easterly and to have struck the easterly line of the Surprise claim about 142 feet in distance north of point B or corner 4 of the Surprise claim.

[2, 3] In dealing with this question we must keep in view that we are dealing with contractual rights of the parties, and also that the parties in contracting with reference to the matter had in view their statutory rights as provided by the mining statutes of the United States. Congress prescribed the conditions upon which extralateral rights might be acquired; and a party dealing with mining locations necessarily must bring himself within those conditions, or else be content with simply the mineral beneath the surface of his own territory. These mining claims or rights are acquired by virtue of the act of Congress of May 10, 1872, found in Revised Statutes, § 2319 and following (U. S. Comp. St. 1916, § 4614 et seq.), which are the statutes in force to-day. These statutes had been thoroughly and plainly construed by decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and their applications were well known. Under these statutes the end lines of a mining claim are required to be parallel. The side lines are not required so to be. The end lines of a mining location are required to be projected parallel with each other and crosswise of the general course of the veins within the surface limits of the location, and whenever the top or the apex of the vein is found within the surface lines extended vertically downwards, the vein may be followed outside of the vertical side lines. The end lines are not necessarily those which are marked on the map or diagram of the location as such, but they may be projected at the extreme points where the apex leaves the location as marked on the surface. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. Co., 118 U. S. 196, 6 Sup. Ct. 1177, 30 L. Ed. 98; Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., 171 U. S. 55, 18 Sup. Ct. 895, 43 L. Ed. 72; Clark v. Fitzgerald, 171 U. S. 92, 18 Sup. Ct. 941, 43 L. Ed. 87; Walrath v. Champion Min. Co., 171 U. S. 293, 18 Sup. Ct. 909, 43 L. Ed. 170. These provisions of the law the parties to the contract of May 2, 1913, were presumed to know, and in fact from the nature of the provisions of their contract we assume they did actually know.

The trial court took the view, as shown by his notes to the decree in this case, that the Surprise and Quilp claims have but one common identical side line and boundary, namely, the line B C described on the diagram, which line B C is in part the east boundary side line of the Surprise lode and in part the west boundary side line of the Quilp, and that the parties contracted with reference thereto because they decided in the contract that the workings were to be north of the point where the vein on the Surprise claim crossed the west side line of the Quilp claim. But the court evidently erred in supposing that the parties contracted with reference to the ore bodies only lying east of the line B C. For one thing, as was said in the Del Monte Mining Company Case, supra, these side lines may be curved lines or irregular lines; and by referring to the diagram in this case it will be seen that the established westerly line of the Quilp claim cannot logically be construed to be anything but a broken or irregular line extending northerly, with westerly bearings, from corner 2 at the south to the point A where it intersects the Surprise claim end line; thence easterly to the point B which is corner 4 of the Surprise claim end line as established and granted in its patent; thence northerly to the point C in the north end line of the Quilp claim, and there terminates. To be consistent this must be considered the entire westerly line of the Quilp claim. The north end line then begins at the intersecting point of the Surprise claim side line, point C, and extends easterly to corner 4. The easterly side line is then the straight line running southerly with a bearing to the east to corner 1 of the Quilp claim. Thus the Quilp claim has two parallel end lines as required by the statute and two side lines, one of which is presumably a straight line on the easterly side and the other a broken, irregular line on the westerly side. We can see no uncertainty or ambiguity in the language of the contract describing the lines and the ore bodies to be conveyed.

We thus construe the contract as providing most comprehensively in paragraph 9 that all ore bodies of every description lying east (or easterly) of the west (or westerly) line of the Quilp claim extended down vertically, and south (or southerly) of the north end line of the Quilp claim extended down vertically, include all ore bodies within the Quilp claim east of the line from 2 to A, A to B, and B to C, and south of the line from C to corner 4, and necessarily, of course, south of the line from A to B. This is in harmony with the decisions in Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., supra, and Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. Co., supra, and other decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

[4] It is evident that some of the litigation pending at the time of the execution of the contract here involved presented the question of where the right of the Republic Mines Corporation as the owner of the Surprise claim, and of the vein which has its apex therein, terminated. It is contended here, and no doubt was in the other litigation which was ended by the contract, that the east side line of the Surprise claim was the side and not the end line with reference to its vein, and that it had the right to pursue the vein and all its dips, spurs, and angles indefinitely so far as it might extend, although it might pass under the entire length of the Quilp claim. A glance at the diagram showing the apex and trend of the Surprise vein shows that it would be indeed difficult to determine whether the east side line of the Surprise claim was in fact a side line or the end line, for the vein strikes the east side line in its trend from the north at a sharp or acute angle. Under the federal statute under which mining claims are located there is no command that the side lines shall be parallel, but it is required and it has been determined by the Supreme Court of the United States that the requisition that the end lines shall be parallel was for the purpose of bounding the underground extralateral rights which the owner of the location may exercise. As was said in the Del Monte Case, supra:

> "He may pursue the vein downwards outside the side lines of his location, but the limits of his right are not to extend on the course of the vein beyond the end lines projected downward through the earth. His rights on the surface are bounded by the several lines of his location, and the end lines must be parallel in order that going downwards he shall acquire no further length of the vein than the planes of those lines extended downward enclose. If the end lines are not parallel, then, following their planes downward his rights will be either converging and diminishing or diverging and increasing the farther he descends into the earth. In view of this purpose and effect of the parallel end lines it matters not to the prior locator where the end lines of the junior location are laid. No matter where they may be, they do not disturb in the slightest his surface or underground rights."

And it was further said in that case that, if the apex of a vein crosses one end line and one side line of a lode mining claim as located thereon, there is the right to follow the vein on its dip beyond the side line—citing other cases. Respondents quote from the above case as follows:

> "Every vein whose apex is within the vertical limits of his surface lines passes to him by virtue of his location. He is not limited to only those veins which extend from one end line to another, or from one side line to another, or from one line of any kind to another, but he is entitled to every vein whose top or apex lies within his surface lines. Not only is he entitled to all veins whose apexes are within such limits, but he is entitled to them throughout their entire depth, 'although such veins, lodes or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface locations.' In other words, given a vein whose apex is within his surface limits, he can pursue that vein as far as he pleases in its downward course outside the vertical side lines."

But respondents do not quote the next paragraph of that decision as follows:

> "But he can pursue the vein in its depth only outside the vertical side lines of his location, for the statute provides that the 'right of possession to such outside parts of such veins or ledges shall be confined to such portions thereof as lie between vertical planes drawn downward as above described, through the end lines of their locations, so continued in their own direction that such planes will intersect such exterior parts of such veins or ledges.'"

And the court continues its limitation as follows:

> "This places a limit on the length of the vein beyond which he may not go, but it does not say that he shall not go outside the vertical side lines unless the vein in its course reaches the vertical planes of the end lines. Nowhere is it said that he must have a vein which either on or below the surface extends from end line to end line in order to pursue that vein in its dip outside the vertical side lines. * * * The locator is given a right to pursue any vein, whose apex is within his surface limits, on its dip outside the vertical side lines, but may not in such pursuit go beyond the vertical end lines. And this is all the statute provides. Suppose a vein enters at an end line, but terminates half way across the length of the location, his right to follow that vein on its dip beyond the vertical side lines is as plainly given by the statute as though in its course it had extended to the farther end line."

It was further held in that case that the only exception to the rule, that the end lines of the location as the locator placed them established the limits beyond which he may not go in appropriation of a vein along its course or strike is where it is developed that in fact the location has been placed, not along, but across, the course of the vein. In such case the law declares that those the locator calls his side lines are his end lines, and those which he calls the end lines are in fact side lines, and this upon the proposition that it was the intent of Congress to give to the locator only so many feet of the length of the vein, that length to be bounded by the lines which the locator has established as his location.

Now it must be apparent that there was considerable dispute and controversy as to whether the Republic Mines Corporation, the owner of the Surprise claim, was entitled to follow the vein which apexed within its claim any further than the located east side line of the claim, or might follow it and work it in its trend downward and to the south, to the south end line as located on the Surprise claim extended westerly. This situation was evidently the cause of the original dispute and litigation between these parties. But whatever was the reason for their controversies, under the broad and comprehensive terms of the contract entered into, all the ore bodies which apexed within its claim lying east of the west side line of the Quilp claim and south of the north end line of the Quilp claim, extended indefinitely, so far as the owner (and its successors and assigns) of the Surprise claim was concerned, were to be conveyed unreservedly and become the property of the appellant upon the default and failure of respondents to perform the contract of May 2, 1913. And this adjustment was purely a matter of contract, regardless of the precise legal extralateral rights or terminal rights of the owner of the Surprise lode, in full contemplation of all the conditions, and with perfect competency so to contract.

With this construction of the contract it is evident that the court erred in decreeing that the appellant was entitled to a conveyance of all ore bodies only lying east of the line B C of the Quilp mining claim.

The court seems to have granted and decreed to the Republic Mines Corporation and its successors the right of ingress and egress across that part of the Quilp claim to and from the ore body included within the disputed territory, because of granting the right to that territory to the respondents. Respondents, not being entitled to the ore bodies lying within that territory or beyond it easterly and southerly, are not entitled to any right of way for ingress and egress to and from the same.

The judgment or decree is reversed, with instructions to enter a decree in favor of appellant, granting to it all the right, title, interest, and estate, claim, and right of possession to all the ore bodies the apex of which lies within the Surprise claim, lying south of the north end line of the Quilp mining claim extended vertically down, and east of the west line extended vertically down, determined to be the line from the point where the north end line of the Quilp mining claim intersects the east side line of the Surprise mining claim; thence along and coincident with the east side line from the above point of intersection to corner No. 4 of the Surprise mining claim; thence along and coincident with the south end line of the Surprise mining claim from corner No. 4 to the point of intersection with the west side line of the Quilp mining claim as surveyed; and thence southerly along the west side line as surveyed of the Quilp mining claim to corner No. 2 of the Quilp mining claim; and that the respondents be enjoined and restrained perpetually from asserting any right therein, and from entering or trespassing thereon or mining or removing the ores therein, and quieting the title of appellant in all ore bodies of every description lying within the above-described area as to its surface lines extended vertically downward.

Appellant will recover costs below and of appeal.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, MOUNT, and PARKER, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 329)

JACKSON et al. v. BATEMAN. (No. 13700.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

TAXATION 🔑734(7)—SALE FOR DELINQUENCY—RIGHT TO ATTACK FORECLOSURE SALE—LACK OF NOTICE—STATUTE.

Where land sold on foreclosure of a delinquent tax certificate was assessed from 1909 to 1914, inclusive, in the name of Bessie Jackson, who during such years was in possession of the property by herself or by tenant, the party who purchased on foreclosure knowing that the property was hers, and, by a clerical error in transcribing the names from the assessor's roll to the treasurer's roll, Bessie Jacobson was named as the owner of the property for 1912, and the county treasurer issued a certificate of delinquency naming Bessie Jacobson as the owner, and the foreclosure was had against Bessie Jacobson, the owner, having been given no notice of the proceeding, could attack the sale upon tendering taxes, interest, and costs; service by publication upon the person named on the treasurer's roll not being sufficient to give the court jurisdiction under Rem. Code 1915, § 9257, providing that the name of the person on the treasurer's roll as the owner for the purpose of the chapter shall be considered as the owner of the property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 1470, 1471.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; J. T. Ronald, Judge.

Action by Bessie Jackson and another against E. S. Bateman. From a decree for plaintiffs, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

L. E. Kirkpatrick, of Seattle, for appellant. Oliver Hulback, of Seattle, for respondents.

MOUNT, J. This action was brought by the respondents to set aside a judgment foreclosing a delinquent tax certificate and to set aside a deed issued by the treasurer upon such foreclosure. Upon the trial of the case the court entered a decree as prayed for. The defendant has appealed.

The facts are as follows: The real estate for which the deed was issued was owned prior to the foreclosure sale by Bessie Jackson and her husband. They allowed the taxes to become delinquent for the years 1910, 1911, 1912, and 1913. The property was assessed upon the assessment roll for these years in the name of Bessie Jackson, but, by a clerical error in transcribing the names from the assessor's roll to the treasurer's collection roll, Bessie Jacobson was named as the owner of the property for the year 1912. The county treasurer issued a certificate of delinquency, naming Bessie Jacobson as the owner, and the foreclosure was had against Bessie Jacobson. The sale was made, and the deed issued pursuant to that foreclosure. Bessie Jackson, the owner of the property, was not served with summons, and did not know of the foreclosure until after the deed had been issued. She thereupon tendered to the appellant the amount of taxes, interest, and costs, and demanded a deed to the property, which was refused. This action was thereupon brought to set aside the treasurer's deed, for the reason that the foreclosure was void as to her.

In addition to the facts stated, the trial court found that the defendant, the appellant here, had been personally acquainted with Bessie Jackson ever since she purchased the property, that Bessie Jackson, either in person, or by tenant, had occupied the premises even since the purchase, and was so occupying the premises at the time of the foreclosure, and that the appellant knew that the lots in question had not been assessed to Bessie Jacobson, but that the lots had been assessed upon the assessor's roll to Bessie Jackson.

The sole contention of the appellant is that the service by publication upon the person named upon the treasurer's roll is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction to sell the land. He relies upon the provision of the statute (Rem. Code, § 9257) as follows:

> "The names of the person or persons appearing on the treasurer's rolls as the owner or owners of said property for the purpose of this chapter shall be considered and treated as the owner or owners of said property. * * *"

And it is argued that the foreclosures of delinquent tax certificates are proceedings in rem, and that, when the statute is strictly followed, foreclosure is valid. A number of cases to that effect are cited in the brief. But we think that rule does not apply to the facts in this case. Under the statute (Rem. Code, § 9113) it is the duty of the assessor to list the real estate, "showing the names and owners, if to him known, and if unknown, so stated." The assessor knew the owner when this property was assessed for taxation, and listed it as the property of Bessie Jackson for all of the years from 1909 to 1914, inclusive. The assessor is also required by that section to extend and certify the rolls to the county auditor. After the rolls are delivered to the county auditor, and the taxes are extended thereon, they are certified by the county auditor to the county treasurer. Section 9217, Rem. Code. The county treasurer is required to collect the taxes. By an error in extending the assessor's rolls, the name of the owner was changed from Bessie Jackson to Bessie Jacobson upon the treasurer's rolls. The statute (Rem. Code, § 9254) requires that the holder of a certificate of delinquency shall give notice to the owner of the property described in the certificate that he will apply to the superior court for judgment foreclosing the lien against the property mentioned. Section 9255, Rem. Code, provides that this summons shall be served in the same manner as summons in a civil action.

While this court has many times held that these tax proceedings are proceedings in rem, it is necessary that notice be given as required by statute. In Carney v. Bigham, 51 Wash. 452, at page 455, 99 Pac. 21, at page 22, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 905, we had occasion to construe the provision relied upon by the appellant, and hereinabove quoted, and we there said:

> "This section makes it clear that the person to whom the property is assessed is the only person other than the true owner against whom a valid foreclosure proceeding may be had in the courts, and that the insertion by the treasurer of the name of a person different from that appearing on the assessment rolls as the owner does not authorize the holder of the certificate to foreclose the lien by making such person a party defendant unless he be the true owner. On the contrary, the holder must at his peril foreclose against the person named on the treasurer's rolls as the owner of the property, or he must foreclose against the true owner."

It is a conceded fact that there was a clerical error in transcribing the assessment roll to the treasurer's collection roll. The name of Bessie Jackson was erroneously transcribed as Bessie Jacobson. The treasurer's certificate of delinquency was issued in the name of Bessie Jacobson. The property was assessed upon the assessor's rolls from the year 1909 to the year 1914, inclusive, in the name of Bessie Jackson. Bessie Jackson, during all these years, was in possession of the property, either by herself or by her tenant. The appellant, when he purchased the property, knew that it was the property of Bessie Jackson. He was acquainted with her, and the result of the foreclosure was an apparent fraud upon her, because she was given no notice of the proceedings. She was entitled, under the statute, to have the property assessed in her name, and the collection made in her name. She was at liberty to rely upon the statute to the effect that notice of some kind would be served upon her, either personally or by publication. This was not done, and she had no actual notice of the foreclosure until after it had resulted in a sale. The effect was in the nature of a fraud upon her, which, we think, invalidated the foreclosure proceedings, and she was therefore at liberty to attack the sale upon tendering the taxes and interest and the costs of the foreclosure proceedings.

We are satisfied that the trial court properly set aside the judgment of foreclosure.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON and PARKER, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 303)

VIOLETTE v. QUEEN INS. CO.

(No. 13765.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 17, 1917.)

1. INSURANCE 🔑665(2) — CANCELLATION OF POLICY—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action on a fire policy, evidence held sufficient to warrant a jury finding that the policy was not canceled before the fire, though plaintiff, one of whose policies had been canceled, acted on the mistaken impression that the policy sued on was the one canceled.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 1709.]

2. INSURANCE 🔑165 — PROPERTY INSURED — DESCRIPTION OF LOCATION.

A fire policy covered liquors, etc., described as contained in a two-story brick building with composition roof. Insured occupied one room in such building as a saloon and the adjoining room as a restaurant. In the rear of these two rooms was a wooden building, physically attached to the brick wall of the main building, and with a door leading therefrom into the restaurant. It was known as insurer's "liquor room," and was used wholly in connection with the main building. Prior to the issuance of the policy liquor had been stored there to some extent, and after its issuance it was used for that purpose to a larger extent. Held, that such so-called liquor room was a part of the building described in the policy, and liquors stored therein were covered by the policy.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 351.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Chelan County; William A. Grimshaw, Judge.

Action by J. B. Violette against the Queen Insurance Company. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

McCarthy, Edge & Davis, of Spokane, and Kemp & Baker, of Wenatchee, for appellant. C. B. Hughes and Hughes, Sumner & Adams, all of Wenatchee, for respondent.

PARKER, J. The plaintiff, Violette, seeks recovery upon a fire insurance policy issued to him by the defendant, insuring his stock of liquors kept for sale at his saloon in Leavenworth, in Chelan county. The policy was issued August 1, 1914. The fire occurred, resulting in total loss of the goods insured on December 30, 1914. Trial in the superior court for Chelan county resulted in verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiff, awarding him $1,560, from which the defendant has appealed to this court.

[1] It is first contended in appellant's behalf that the policy was canceled at the instance of the respondent on December 12th, some two weeks prior to the occurrence of the fire. This contention involves nothing but a question of fact, as we view it, which was determined by the jury in favor of respondent. It seems to be rested upon alleged admissions and contentions made by respondent inconsistent with his claim under this policy. This apparently inconsistent attitude of respondent grew out of his misunderstanding of what was said and done by himself and Robert B. Field, the agent of appellant and other insurance companies at Leavenworth, looking to the cancellation of one of several policies on his stock of liquors, which policies had been issued by Field as agent of the several insurance companies. It is plain that on December 12th respondent requested Field to cancel one of the policies, and that, laboring under the impression that it was this policy which was canceled in pursuance of that request, he sought pro rata recovery for his loss from the other companies, when it developed that one of the policies so sought to be recovered upon had been canceled by Field, instead of this policy. Field testified that this policy was not canceled, nor requested to be canceled, by respondent. Appellant did not tender back to the respondent the premium which would have remained unearned on this policy until long after the fire, which premium had been paid in full shortly after issuing the policy and long before the fire. All of the policies had been left with the agent Field for safekeeping. In fact respondent did not see any of the policies until after the fire. There was simply an understanding that the policies be issued and so retained. It seems quite plain to us that the jury were fully warranted by the evidence in concluding that this policy was not canceled before the fire as claimed by appellant. We think this branch of the case needs no further discussion.

[2] It is further contended in appellant's behalf that the larger part of the goods destroyed was at the time in a room not in the building described in the policy as being the location of the insured goods, and that therefore such portion of the goods was not covered by the policy. This involves the question of whether or not this room was a part of the building described in the policy. The jury, by answers to two interrogatories submitted to them, found that of the goods destroyed $1.450 worth were in the saloon room, while $4.920 worth were in the room claimed by appellant not to be a part of the building described in the policy. The jury awarded respondent $1,560 as the pro rata liability of appellant with other insurance companies having concurrent insurance upon the goods, finding, in effect, that the room claimed by appellant not to be a part of the building was in fact a part of the building, which question the court by its instructions submitted to the jury for decision. The goods and their location were described in the policy as follows:

> "The following described property while located and contained as described herein, and not elsewhere, to wit: $2,500 on stock of wines, liquors, cigars, soft drinks and all other goods usually kept for sale in a first-class saloon; all while contained in the two-story brick building, with composition roof, situate on lot 3, block 1, Ralston addition to Leavenworth, Wash."

The walls of the main portion of the building were constructed of brick. It was about 80 by 90 feet in area upon the ground. It faced the street to the north. It had four rooms on the ground floor, the second floor being used as a hotel. Respondent's saloon proper occupied the east room on the ground floor, which was 18 by 80 feet. At the time of the fire, back of the saloon room and a portion of the room next west thereof, there was a room 18 by 30 feet, one story high. It was built of wood, with a roof of somewhat similar material as on the main building. This room had been used, since its construction several years prior to the fire, wholly in connection with the main building, both as a kitchen in connection with a restaurant in the room next west of the saloon room, and also as a liquor storeroom in connection with the saloon. It was known as "Violette's Liquor Room" long before the issuing of this policy. This room or structure was physically attached to the brick wall of the main building. Its sills projected into and were supported by the brick wall of the main building, and its roof was also attached to the brick wall. There was a door from the room next west of the saloon room leading into the liquor room and there was access from the saloon room to liquor room over a small porch through the rear wall of the saloon room and thence into the liquor room. Respondent held all three of these rooms under lease. While this outside room was known as "Violette's Liquor Room," it is not very clear as to what extent it had been used for storing his liquor prior to the issuance of this policy, though manifestly it had been then used to some extent for that purpose. After the issuing of the policy the liquor room apparently was used to a much larger extent for that purpose. It is plain that the policy would have covered all liquor belonging to respondent within the brick walls of the main building regardless of which room of the building such liquor might be in, since no particular room of the building is mentioned in the policy. Therefore the liquor room is no less a part of the main building so far as this policy is concerned by the fact that the only door from it directly into the main building led into the room next west of the saloon room. It is quite plain that the liquor room was never used for any purpose except in connection with the main building.

It seems plain to us in the light of these facts that there is ample warrant for the conclusion that this so-called liquor room was a part of the brick building described in the policy as being the location of the insured goods. As was well said by the Kentucky court in Prussian National Ins. Co. v. Terrell, 142 Ky. 732, 135 S. W. 416:

> "It must be borne in mind that a description in a policy of the building insured is never accompanied, or intended to be accompanied, by the particularity of an architect's plans and specifications. The purpose of the description is simply to identify in a general way the building insured."

In that case the building insured was described as a "brick gravel roof building." After the construction of the building, but before the issuance of the policy, a brother of the insured was permitted to construct a room on the roof of this building for his own use for an indefinite period, covering evidently only a part of the roof some 18 by 60 feet and 10 or 12 feet high, with a metal roof, the understanding being that the brother was to use it as long as he desired, and in the event he ceased to use it he had the right to tear it down or let it remain and become the property of the insured. This structure was held to be a part of the building insured. It is somewhat difficult to see that this structure was any more a part of the building insured, though constructed on top of it, than the structure called the liquor room here involved was a part of the building described in the policy.

In Gross v. Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance Co., 92 Wis. 656, 66 N. W. 712, the policy involved insured goods "while contained in the one-story frame store building situated," etc. At the time the policy was issued the main building had a lean-to, or shed, in the rear, with a door opening into the main building. The two structures were used together. Thereafter the shed was moved about 20 feet back from the main building, and an addition was built back to within 3 feet of the shed which had been moved back, it being attached to the new addition by a platform nailed to both structures with doors for convenient passage from one to the other over the platform. Thereafter all the structures were used together. After noticing some of its earlier decisions, the court concluded that:

> "Such addition, former main building and shed, all connected and used together, constituted the one-story frame store building within the meaning of the policies at the time the loss accrued."

In Still v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co., 185 Mo. App. 550, 172 S. W. 625, the policy involved was upon a "shingle-roof frame barn." A silo was built against the side of the barn, so that it had openings directly to the inside of the barn, though the structure itself was outside the walls of the barn. The silo was held to be part of the barn, the court observing:

> "Insurance is a matter of contract, and the intention of the parties, if it can be ascertained, must determine the sense in which terms employed are used. Of course if that sense is clearly expressed in the policy, then the written terms are binding and conclusive. But if the policy does not clearly express the meaning to be attached to the terms used in describing the property insured, then resort may be had to the surrounding circumstances to ascertain the meaning. In doing so we must have in mind that a policy of insurance, so written as to require construction of its meaning, will be construed in favor of, rather than against, the insured. It is a contract drawn by the insurer, and, when it is open to two possible interpretations, that one will be adopted which is least favorable to the party drawing it. Belch v. Schott, 171 Mo. App. 357, 157 S. W. 658. The language of the policy should be construed, if practicable, so as to cover the subject-matter intended to be covered. 19 Cyc. 664."

The circumstances attending the issuance of the policy here involved point to an intention on the part of the insured, and also on the part of Field, the agent, to insure all of respondent's stock of liquors. This we think renders the above-quoted language of the Missouri court quite pertinent here.

The following authorities lend support to the conclusion that this so-called liquor room was in fact a part of the building described in the policy as the location of the insured goods: Commercial Fire Ins. Co. v. Allen, 80 Ala. 571, 1 South. 202; White v. Mutual Fire Assurance Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 566; Westfield Cigar Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 169 Mass. 382, 47 N. E. 1026; Workman v. Ins. Co., 2 La. 507, 22 Am. Dec. 141; 1 Wood, Fire Insurance (2d Ed.) § 85; 2 Joyce, Insurance § 1739.

Counsel for appellant cite and place some reliance upon our recent decision in Johnson v. Franklin Ins. Co., 90 Wash. 631, 156 Pac. 567. Plainly we think that decision is of no controlling force whatever here, in view of the fact that the goods destroyed were at the time several blocks distant from their described location in the policy.

We conclude that the judgment must be affirmed. It is so ordered.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, FULLERTON, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 379)

WYNNE et ux. v. HARVEY et al.

(No. 13787.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑16—Malpractice—Liability of Physicians Individually Engaged.

Where two physicians have been individually engaged in the same case, each is answerable, not only for his own conduct, but for unlawful acts or omissions of the other, which, exercising reasonable diligence, he should have observed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 31.]

2. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑18(8)—Malpractice — Liability of Assistant Surgeon—Sufficiency of Evidence.

Evidence held insufficient to establish assistant surgeon's liability for his chief's negligence in failing to remove a sponge from an incision; it not being his duty by custom to keep track of sponges, and he not having been directed to do so, and his duties being to do as directed by the chief operator.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 43.]

3. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑18(9)—Malpractice—Question for Jury—Sufficiency of Evidence.

Evidence held sufficient to warrant submission to jury of question of surgeon's negligence in the use of silk thread in tying arteries during operation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 44.]

4. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑14(1)—Malpractice—Degree of Skill.

A surgeon was chargeable with reasonable care, skill, and knowledge in the use of silk thread in tying arteries and suturing ruptured intestines during operation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. §§ 21, 24, 25, 28–30.]

5. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑18(9) — Treatment After Operation — Question for Jury.

Patient's testimony as to surgeon's treatment after operation held sufficient to submit issue of surgeon's negligence to the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 44.]

6. Evidence 🔑471(11)—Opinion Evidence—Treatment After Operation.

A patient, who is a layman, is possessed of sufficient knowledge to render competent his testimony as to commonplace conditions and effects concerning surgeon's negligence in treatment following operation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2161; Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 833–836.]

7. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑15—Malpractice—Failure to Remove Sponge.

A surgeon's failure to remove a sponge before sewing up incision is negligence per se.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 32.]

8. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑15 — Malpractice — Failure to Remove Sponge — Exception to Rule—Evidence.

Surgeon's testimony that he did not know that a sponge had been left in an incision, and that no count of sponges had been kept by nurses, took the case out of exception to general rule holding surgeon not liable for removal of sponge where patient's life would be endangered by further exploration.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 32.]

9. Physicians and Surgeons 🔑18(8)—Malpractice—Cause of Injury — Sufficiency of Evidence.

Evidence held sufficient to show that injuries complained of were caused by surgeon's negligence in leaving a sponge in incision.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 43.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Stevens County; A. W. Frater, Judge.

Action by Fred J. Wynne and wife against L. B. Harvey and others. Judgment for plaintiffs against defendants Harvey and Clark, and they separately appeal. Reversed, with instructions to dismiss action, as to appellant Clark, and affirmed as to appellant Harvey.

L. C. Jesseph, of Colville, for appellant Harvey. Graves, Kizer & Graves, of Spokane, for appellant Clark. Davis & Heil, of Spokane, and L. B. Donley, of Colville, for respondents.

HOLCOMB, J. On March 11, 1914, respondents Fred J. Wynne and Margaret Wynne, his wife, commenced this action against appellants Harvey and Clark and one Martha L. Cousins, a nurse, to recover damages for malpractice. For convenience, Margaret Wynne alone will hereafter be referred to as respondent.

The record shows that for some time prior to May 8, 1913, Margaret Wynne had been suffering from an enlarged uterus, and, her condition growing steadily worse, after consulting with several physicians, it was decided that an operation was necessary. On the above-mentioned date she was operated upon by appellant Harvey as operator in chief, with the assistance of appellant Clark and two nurses, one of whom was the defendant Cousins. After the incision had been made, it was discovered that her condition was very serious, and a large mass of pus was found in the ovarian tube. Because of these serious complications and the weakened condition of the patient, appellant Harvey deemed it necessary for the safety of the patient to bring the operation to an end as speedily as possible, and drainage tubes were inserted to draw off the pus, and the wound was immediately sewed up. Appellant Harvey continued to treat respondent for a period of six weeks thereafter. The operation did not seem to be very successful, as the wound refused to heal and a fistula was formed, which discharged impure matter, including a silk thread which had evidently been used in the operation of May 8th. Thereupon respondent Fred J. Wynne, becoming dissatisfied, discharged appellant Harvey, and employed appellant Clark. Shortly afterwards Clark, with the aid of a local anæsthetic, made a small incision in the abdominal wall below the first incision for the purpose of securing better drainage; and, because the original wound gave Mrs. Wynne great trouble and refused to heal, a third operation was performed by appellant Clark on August 18, 1913, to discover the reason therefor. Next to the inside of the abdominal wall there was found a small mop sponge, which had been overlooked in the operation performed by appellant Harvey on May 8th. Other evidence will be discussed when considering the different assignments of error to which it relates. After a trial on the merits, a motion for nonsuit was granted as to Martha Cousins, but a verdict for $5,000 was entered against Harvey and Clark, who now prosecute separate appeals.

In the complaint it is alleged that appellants were negligent: (1) In using silk thread, instead of catgut, in tying up the ends of arteries; (2) in the manner of treating and caring for the wound subsequent to the first operation; (3) in failing to remove the sponge from the wound. Since the lower court held that there was no evidence to show that appellant Clark was guilty of the first two grounds of negligence alleged, and so instructed the jury, in disposing of his appeal it is necessary to determine only if he was legally guilty of negligence because the sponge was left in the wound.

[1] Appellant Harvey had been treating respondent for some time prior to the first operation, but on account of the seriousness of the operation it was decided that Harvey should have an assistant, and appellant Clark was employed by respondent Fred J. Wynne in that capacity. In cases of this kind the rule is well stated in Morey v. Thybo, 199 Fed. 760, 118 C. C. A. 198, wherein it is said, concerning the liability of two physicians independently engaged:

> "Each, in serving with the other, is rightly held answerable for his own conduct, and as well for all the wrongful acts or omissions of the other, * * * which in the exercise of reasonable diligence under the circumstances he should have observed."

[2] Appellant Clark having had nothing to do with the sponges or mopping with them on the inside of the incision, as is shown by all the evidence, except the testimony of appellant Harvey that Clark mopped with a sponge down into the back of the abdomen to the uterus, immediately afterwards modified by his statement that he did not remember whether Clark did any mopping or not, it is obvious that Clark would not be liable for this negligence because of any wrongful act of his own. Clark's activities were confined mainly to the outside of the wound, and, since the duties of an assistant are to do as directed by the chief operator, and there was no showing that he was either directed to keep track of the sponges or that it was made his duty by custom to do so, it is apparent that, in the exercise of reasonable diligence under the circumstances, no duty devolved upon Clark to discover that the sponge was not removed, the omission of which would render him liable in an action for damages. The nonsuit should have been ordered as to him.

[3, 4] In considering Harvey's appeal, we find that the complaint alleged negligence in the use of silk thread, instead of catgut, in tying off the arteries, and the only evidence to sustain this allegation was that a piece of silk thread was discharged through the fistula which formed in respondent's body. Counsel for appellant Harvey moved the court to withdraw this issue from the jury's consideration, on the ground that there was no evidence to support the same, and now assign as error the action of the trial court in overruling such motion. Impliedly admitting that it was improper to use silk in tying off arteries, and to explain its presence, appellant Harvey claims that it was used in suturing a ruptured intestine, and produced evidence to show that in so doing silk was the proper and better material to use. While there was no direct evidence to show that silk was negligently used in tying off arteries, there was evidence to show that silk was negligently used, as the thread discharged through the fistula was No. 12, which, according to the testimony of the experts, was far too large for use in suturing a ruptured intestine; the majority of the experts being of the opinion that in no event should silk thread of larger size than No. 3 or No. 4 be used for this purpose. Precisely what use was made of the silk thread, and where, was manifestly unknown to respondent, save by results. The exact place and manner of use were known to appellant Harvey, who used it, and he was chargeable with reasonable care, skill, and knowledge in its use. We do not consider this evidence a material variance from the allegations of the complaint, and there was, therefore, sufficient evidence to submit this issue to the jury's consideration.

[5, 6] It is also contended by appellant Harvey that there was no evidence to sustain the allegation charging him with negligence in his treatment of respondent subsequent to the first operation, and that this issue should not have been submitted to the jury. In reviewing the evidence, we find respondent testified that the dressings were sometimes changed by appellant Harvey and sometimes by a nurse named Miss Cousins; that a great many times Harvey was asked over the telephone to come to the hospital to attend to respondent, and that some of the times requested he would not come; that when no one was there except Miss Haynes, another attendant, the dressings were not changed at all, because she was not a graduate nurse; that on some occasions the dressings were in so long that the pus would dry on them; and that the drainage tubes were not sterilized every time the dressings were changed, but were simply wiped off. Appellant Harvey contends that, since respondent is a laywoman, she is not possessed of a sufficient degree of knowledge in the science of medicine and surgery to give competent testimony as to whether she received proper treatment after the first operation or not, and that the testimony above referred to is of no weight, and has no legal standing as evidence. While this may be true with respect to some of the more intricate problems incident to taking care of a patient convalescing from an operation, we do not think it applies to such commonplace conditions and effects as those testified to by respondent, and concerning which even a layman is possessed of knowledge sufficient to render his evidence on such a subject competent. The evidence was of conditions and obvious results therefrom, and was therefore evidence of facts, and not of conclusions, or mere opinions. This issue was therefore properly submitted to the jury.

[7, 8] Finally, it is urged by appellant Harvey that as a matter of law he is not liable for failing to remove the sponge from the wound, and that, even though he is, respondent has failed to prove that the presence of the sponge in her abdomen was the proximate cause of the injuries complained of. Although it is admitted by appellant Harvey that the failure to remove any foreign substance from an incision is negligence per se, it is strenuously urged that there is an exception to this rule in this: That it is not negligence for a surgeon to leave a foreign substance in a wound when in his professional judgment further exploration for such foreign substance would endanger the safety of the patient. It is therefore claimed that, the evidence showing that respondent was failing fast on the operating table, and that in his judgment it was necessary to sew up the wound at once in order to save her life, this case is brought within the exception. In Davis v. Kerr, 239 Pa. 351, 86 Atl. 1007, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 611, and Van Skike v. Potter, 53 Neb. 28, 73 N. W. 295, this exception is recognized; but in both these cases it was based on the ground that either the surgeon relied on the count of the sponges kept by the nurses, or that he knew the foreign substance still remained in the patient's body, and in his judgment the patient's safety would be greatly endangered by any further exploration to discover and remove the same. There being no evidence in the record that the sponges were counted by the attending nurses, or that appellant Harvey knew there was another sponge in the incision (he, in fact, testified that, had he so known, he might have removed it), the facts in this case do not bring it within the exception, conceding and approving for the sake of argument that such an exception exists. This, on principle, at present we doubt, but find it not necessary to decide.

[9] Nor do we discover any merit in the claim that there is not sufficient evidence to prove that the injuries complained of were caused by the interned sponge. It is not surprising that the evidence on this question is not very clear and convincing, for at best it is largely a matter of opinion and conjecture. There was proof tending to show that the sponge at the time of its removal was saturated with pus; that the result of leaving a foreign body in the abdomen would be that the tissues, if weakened, would fall prey to infective bacteria, causing a deposit of pus; that the wound would not heal over a foreign septic body; that a sponge covered with pus is likely to carry infection to other parts of the body; that respondent Margaret Wynne's condition became better after the removal of the sponge; and that the wound would not heal with the sponge in the abdomen.

The judgment is therefore reversed, with instructions that the action be dismissed as to appellant Clark, with costs to him. In so far as appellant Harvey is concerned, the judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, PARKER, and FULLERTON, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 434)

UNITED STATES WHALING CO. v. KING COUNTY et al. (No. 13952.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Taxation 🔑98—Place of Taxation — Tangible Personal Property.

Tangible personal property is taxable at the place of its actual situs, even though it may be used by its owners in interstate commerce, and no distinction in this respect is made between vessels engaged in trade between the ports of the different states and other carriers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 196-198, 200.]

2. Taxation 🔑98—Place of Taxation — Tangible Personal Property—Whaling Vessels.

Vessels used for whale fishing and not common carriers having their sole home port in the state of Washington where they are moored more than one-half the year, and where they receive the benefits and protection of the laws of the state, and where they are equipped for their only voyages, have acquired a situs and are subject to taxation at such port, although the domicile of their owners and their place of registration is without the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Taxation, Cent. Dig. §§ 196-198, 200.]

3. Stipulations 🔑18(7)—Construction.

In an action to enjoin the collection of taxes on whaling vessels, the statement in the stipulation that the vessels are only temporarily in the state of Washington, while it might be given effect as a statement of ultimate fact, is rendered but a conclusion or deduction, and must be disregarded where the actual facts are shown, and the court must accept such facts as determinative.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Stipulations, Cent. Dig. § 51.]

En Banc. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Kenneth Mackintosh, Judge.

Suit to enjoin the collection of a tax by the United States Whaling Company against King County and others. From a judgment of dismissal, the plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Huffer & Hayden, of Tacoma, for appellant. Alfred H. Lundin and Edwin C. Ewing, both of Seattle, for respondents.

FULLERTON, J. In this action the United States Whaling Company, a corporation, seeks to enjoin the collection of certain taxes levied for the year 1915, by the county of King, state of Washington, upon three steam whaling vessels known as Star I, Star II, and Star III, the property of the corporation. The pleadings are appropriate to the issues raised, and need not be further noticed. At the conclusion of the evidence introduced at the trial the court decided that the vessels had acquired an actual situs in the county of King, and were subject to taxation therein, entering a judgment of dismissal with costs against the complainant. This appeal is from the judgment so entered.

The facts were in part stipulated and in part shown by oral evidence given at the trial. The appellant corporation was organized under the laws of South Dakota, with its main office at the city of Huron in that state. It is authorized to transact business in the state of Washington in virtue of having filed its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state of the state of Washington, having appointed a statutory agent who resides therein, and having otherwise complied with the state laws relative thereto. The business of the corporation is under the direction of a board of directors, five in number, one of whom resides at Huron, S. D., one at Glasgow, Scotland, two at Sandefjord, Norway, and one at the city of Seattle, Wash. By its articles wide and diverse powers are conferred upon the corporation, among which is the power to engage in the business of whale fishing, and to dispose of the products thereof. Its articles also empower it to establish branch or business offices at a number of named places, at which the company can hold meetings of its stockholders and directors; among the places so named being Seattle, Wash. It is not disclosed that the corporation engaged in any business other than that mentioned. In the prosecution of this business it constructed the vessels named in the city of Seattle in the year 1912, causing them to be registered as of the port of Ketchikan, Alaska. The vessels are not engaged in the general carrying trade. At the opening of the whaling season of each year, about the beginning of May, they are fitted out at Seattle and sent north to Alaskan waters where they engage in whaling until the close of the season, about the 1st of October, when they are returned to the same place and moored for the winter months. The business in which the vessels are engaged is under the general direction of a manager who resides at Sandefjord, Norway. The manager either comes in person or sends a representative to Seattle at the beginning of each whaling season, and superintends the repairing and outfitting of the vessels; the repairs being made, the supplies purchased, and the crews, with the exception of the gunners, being hired at that place. The business is financed by Balfour, Guthrie & Co., from their branch office located at Seattle. This company likewise disposes of the products of the enterprise; the vessels themselves bringing their catches to a station established on the Alaskan coast, whence the manufactured product are carried to market by commercial carriers. No taxes are paid upon the vessels in the state of South Dakota, nor was it known by any of the witnesses that taxes were paid thereon in the territory of Alaska or elsewhere.

[1] The law is well settled that tangible personal property is subject to taxation in the jurisdiction in which it has its actual situs, regardless of the place of domicile of its owner. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 11 Sup. Ct. 876, 35 L. Ed. 613; Old Dominion Steamship Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 25 Sup. Ct. 686, 49 L.

Ed. 1059, 3 Ann. Cas. 1100. It is equally well settled, also, that such property is taxable at the place of its actual situs, even though it may be used by its owner in interstate commerce, and no distinction in this respect is made between vessels engaged in trade between the ports of the different states and other forms of carriers. Ayer & Lord Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 26 Sup. Ct. 679, 50 L. Ed. 1082, 6 Ann. Cas. 205; Southern Pacific Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 32 Sup. Ct. 13, 56 L. Ed. 96. In the case of Ayer & Lord Co. v. Kentucky, this language was used:

> "The general rule has long been settled as to vessels plying between the ports of different states, engaged in the coastwise trade, that the domicile of the owner is the situs of a vessel for the purpose of taxation, wholly irrespective of the place of enrollment, subject, however, to the exception that where a vessel engaged in interstate commerc has acquired an actual situs in a state other than the place of the domicile of the owner, it may there be taxed because within the jurisdiction of the taxing authority."

Our own cases are to the same effect: Northwestern Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County, 25 Wash. 95, 64 Pac. 909, 54 L. R. A. 212, 87 Am. St. Rep. 747; North American Dredging Co. v. Taylor, 56 Wash. 565, 106 Pac. 162, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 105; Pacific Cold Storage Co. v. Pierce County, 85 Wash. 626, 149 Pac. 34; Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. King County, 90 Wash. 38, 155 Pac. 416. In Northwestern Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County it is said:

> "Sound reasons exist for the right of the state to tax these vessels that are permanently here transacting local business. They receive the full protection of the local government, and, if mere registry in another port is conclusive against the right to tax here, a boat can operate in our local waters, confined entirely to local business, and, if owned elsewhere, may evade all taxation in this state. Such construction should not be adopted unless imperatively demanded by superior authority. Under the revenue law of this state, personal property is taxed at its situs, and without reference to the residence of the owner."

So in North American Dredging Co. v. Taylor it is said:

> "If the trial court was right in holding the state of Washington to be the situs of the property, that fact is decisive of the case. * * * It is the general rule that vessels in state or interstate traffic with no established situs, but going in and out of a port upon a fixed run or as the necessities of the business engaged upon may demand, or when engaged upon no fixed schedule, but sailing from one port to another as a carrier of state, interstate, or international traffic, shall be assessed at the home port, or at the domicile of the owner. * * * However, a vessel may be assessed without reference to the home port or the residence of the principal owner or agent, when it is put to such use as to impress it with a local character. * * * There must be some reasonable limit to the rule that overcomes the ordinary rule of situs when applied to such property, and we think it must be found in the answer to the question whether the presence in Pierce county of the dredger was temporary or merely indefinite. If the former, it would probably not be taxable. If the latter, it would be, so long as it was there at a time when the levy was made and the lien attached."

In Pacific Cold Storage Co. v. Pierce County the rule was stated in the following language:

> "Stated in another way, the domicile of the owner fixes the situs of the vessel, where it does not appear that it has acquired an actual situs elsewhere."

The case of Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. King County was a controversy over a tax levied upon certain railway cars owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and which were daily delivered to the Northern Pacific Railway Company and by the latter company hauled over its own tracks from the International boundary line to the city of Seattle and back to such line. The court held the tax valid, announcing "the general rule to be that tangible personal property is subject to taxation by the state in which it is, no matter where the domicile of the owner may be."

[2] Applying these legal principles to the facts shown, we are constrained to hold these vessels subject to taxation by the taxing authorities of King county. Were they vessels engaged in a coastwise traffic, or in traffic between the port of Seattle and a foreign port, the question might not be entirely free from doubt. But the vessels are not common carriers in any sense of the term. They are fishing vessels, nothing more. They have but one home port. From this port they are fitted out and equipped for the only voyages in which they engage, and to it they return when the purposes of the voyages are accomplished. The business in which they are engaged occupies them less than half the year, and for the remainder of the year they are moored at their home port, where they receive the benefits and protection of the laws of the state. Clearly, it seems to us, if tangible personal property in the form of seagoing vessels can ever acquire a situs apart from the domicile of its owner, these vessels have acquired such a situs. This being so, they are subject to taxation at the place of the acquired situs.

[3] We have not overlooked the fact that it is recited in the stipulation that these vessels are only "temporarily in the state of Washington." But this is not controlling. Were it all that appeared the court would be warranted in treating it as the statement of an ultimate fact and giving it effect accordingly. Here, however, the actual facts are shown, of which this is but a conclusion or deduction. In such a case the Court must accept the facts shown as determinative, and disregard the conclusions which conflict therewith.

The judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, MAIN, PARKER, HOLCOMB, CHADWICK, MORRIS, and WEBSTER, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 374)

MARCONNIER et al. v. PRESTON.

(No. 13778.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. WILLS 🔑734(4)—LEGACY—INTEREST.

A general pecuniary legacy begins to draw interest at the time the testator intended it should be payable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 1851.]

2. WILLS 🔑733(12) — CONSTRUCTION — LEGACIES—TIME OF PAYMENT—INTEREST.

A will giving testatrix's property in trust with directions to pay certain pecuniary legacies, without direction as to time of payment, made bequest to certain charitable and religious organizations, and in a residuary provision specified that the remainder of the property should be used to establish a home for aged persons. It further provided that the executors and trustees should pay the legacies as rapidly as business judgment might require, without sacrificing the estate, providing for legacies as much as possible out of notes and mortgages and certificates of corporate stock. Following this was a provision that bequests to charitable and religious organizations should be first paid, subject to the right of the executors and trustees, in case of sickness or misfortune of any legatee, to pay any legacy at any time. Payment was to be made without intervention of any court. It appeared that, if the pecuniary legacies were to draw interest beginning one year after the death of the testatrix, the amount which would go under the residuary clause would be diminished. Held, that testatrix intended that the pecuniary bequest should not be payable until such time as the executors and trustees, in the exercise of good business judgment and without sacrificing the estate, would be able to convert the estate into cash, or so much thereof as might be necessary to pay the legacies, and that therefore such legacies would not begin drawing interest until such time, though it was more than one year after testatrix's death.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 1845.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Pierce County; M. L. Clifford, Judge.

Action by A. C. Marconnier and others as executors of the last will and testament of Sarah L. Crowley, deceased, against E. Margaret Preston and another. From judgment for plaintiffs, named defendant appeals.

Gose & Crowe, of Walla Walla, for appellant. Sullivan & Christian, of Tacoma, for respondents.

MAIN, J. The purpose of this action was to obtain a construction of the last will and testament of Sarah L. Crowley, deceased. The plaintiffs were the executors and trustees named in the will. The defendants were two of the pecuniary legatees. The point at issue was whether the legacies bore interest beginning one year after the death of the testatrix. The trial in the superior court resulted in a judgment adverse to the contention of the defendants. From this judgment E. Margaret Preston, one of the defendants, alone appeals.

The appellant claims that the legacies bore interest beginning one year after the death of the testatrix. The respondents claim that the legacies do not bear interest until, in the exercise of good business judgment, and within a reasonable time, the estate can be converted into cash, and the money made available to meet the bequests.

[1] The common-law rule, no doubt, is that general pecuniary legacies draw interest after one year from the death of the testator, or testatrix, unless a contrary intention appears from the will. This rule arose in the ecclesiastical courts in England, was adopted by the common-law courts, and is based on the presumption that, within that time, the executor would be enabled to ascertain the condition of the estate, collect the assets, and be prepared to pay the legacies. In applying the rule it is generally held that the legacy begins to draw interest at the time the testator intended it should be payable. Sloan's Appeal, 168 Pa. 422, 32 Atl. 42, 47 Am. St. Rep. 889; Cline v. Scott's Ex'r et al. (Ky.) 32 S. W. 215; Osgood v. Lovering, 33 Me. 464; Bowdre v. Jones, 34 Ga. 399; Valentine v. Ruste, 93 Ill. 585.

[2] Inquiry, therefore, must be directed to the provisions of the will in question, in order that the intent of the testatrix may be ascertained. The will, after naming the respondents as executors and trustees, contains this provision:

> "I give, bequeath, and devise to my said executors and trustees all property which I may own at the time of my death, whether real, personal or mixed, which gift, bequest, and devise is in trust for the purposes herein enumerated and to fulfill and put into effect the gifts, bequests, and devises which I make herein."

Following this provision, there is a devise and bequest to Mary Lynch, the mother of the testatrix, with the requirement that the executors and trustees shall pay to Mary Lynch, during her lifetime, the sum of $300 per month, which is to be a preferred charge against the estate. Following the provision for the mother, there are numerous bequests to relatives and friends of the deceased. Of these there are approximately 16 in number, the amounts of which vary from $500 to $10,000, and total approximately $70,000. Following these legacies, there are bequests to certain charitable and religious organizations, aggregating approximately $12,500. Then follows the residuary provision, by which the remainder of the property of the testatrix was to be used for the purpose of establishing and maintaining, in the city of Tacoma, or in the immediate vicinity thereof, a home for aged persons, "upon condition and out of respect to the memory of my late beloved husband, that the same shall be known and designated as St. Joseph's Home for the Aged." Another provision in the will is this:

> "They [the executors and trustees] shall pay the aforesaid legacies as rapidly as good business judgment may require without sacrificing the estate, providing for legacies as much as possible out of notes and mortgages due me and certificates of stock in corporations. However, this is not intended as a limitation upon their powers, if in their judgment it is to the best advantage to sell any of the real estate or other property for such purposes, excepting, of course, the real estate devised for life to Mary Lynch and afterward to Gertrude L. Marconnier."

Following this is a provision that the bequests to the charitable and religious organizations shall—

"be first paid. Giving to my said executors and trustees power, however, if in their judgment it is advisable, owing to misfortune or sickness of any legatee, to pay any other legacy or legacies in whole or in part at any time."

The will contains a direction that the estate shall be managed and settled by the trustees, without the intervention of the court, except to admit the will to probate and to file an inventory, and that the executors and trustees shall not be required to give bond.

To the will is attached a codicil, the provisions of which it is unnecessary to review, because there is nothing therein that would shed light upon the question here at issue.

The testatrix died some time during the month of February, 1914, and on the 27th of that month the will was duly admitted to probate by the superior court of Pierce county, since which time the executors and trustees have been in the management and control of the estate.

No claim is made that the estate has not been properly managed. The reason that the bequests have not been paid is that, owing to business conditions, the estate, in the judgment of the executors and trustees, could not be converted into cash without great sacrifice. While the will specifies no time at which the legacies shall be paid, yet it is apparent, when all the provisions thereof are considered, that the testatrix did not intend their payment until such time as the executors and trustees, in the exercise of good business judgment, should be able to convert the estate, or sufficient thereof to meet the legacies, into cash, without sacrificing the estate. The executors and trustees are given large discretionary powers. The property is conveyed to them in trust, for the purposes specified in the will, as indicated by the paragraph from the will first above quoted. By the second quoted paragraph they are directed to pay the legacies as rapidly "as good business judgment may require, without sacrificing the estate." By the third quoted provision they are given power, if, in their judgment, it is deemed advisable, owing to misfortune or sickness of any legatee, to pay a legacy, or legacies, in whole or in part at any time.

As indicated by the residuary clause, one of the dominating purposes in the mind of the testatrix was the erection, in memory of her late husband, of a home to be known as St. Joseph's Home for the Aged.

If the pecuniary legacies draw interest beginning one year after the death of the testatrix, the amount which would go under the residuary clause would be diminished to the extent of the accumulation of such interest, and thereby the fund for the erection of the home for the aged would be impaired to that extent.

Considering all the provisions of the will, and endeavoring to ascertain therefrom the intention of the testatrix, we are of the opinion that it was her intention that the pecuniary bequests should not be payable until such time as the executors and trustees therein, in the exercise of good business judgment, and without sacrificing the estate, would be able to convert the estate into cash, or so much thereof as might be necessary to pay the legacies. It is true that the will nowhere specifies a particular date upon which the legacies shall be paid, nor that such legacies shall not draw interest after the expiration of one year from the death of the testatrix, but it is a cardinal rule of construction that the intention of the testator, or testatrix, shall be ascertained from the provisions of the will, and, when so ascertained, be given effect. There is no reason why the intention of the testatrix, when gathered from all the provisions of the will, should not be as controlling as if that intention were expressed in direct and specific language.

It is unnecessary to review, in detail, authorities, because the result of each case must depend largely upon the provisions of the will there being considered.

The judgment will be affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and CHADWICK, WEBSTER, and MORRIS, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 458)

MACARIO v. ALASKA GASTINEAU MINING CO. et al. (No. 13886.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 19, 1917.)

1. Mines and Minerals 🔑108 — Process Against Foreign Corporation — "Doing Business in State."

A New York corporation engaged in mining in Alaska is not "doing business" in Washington because maintaining an office there for buying supplies and forwarding them to it in Alaska, so as to enable a Washington court to obtain jurisdiction of it on a cause of action arising in Alaska by service on such purchasing agent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 232.]

2. Appearance 🔑9(6) — General Appearance—Petition for Removal of Cause.

Neither petition for removal of cause nor amendment thereof by leave is a general appearance, so as to give the court jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appearance, Cent. Dig. § 50.]

3. Judgment 🔑137 — Default — Setting Aside on Court's Motion.

The default entered against defendant being void because the summons was without effect and defendant was not subject to suit in the state, the court could set it aside on its own motion.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 262-264.]

4. Master and Servant ⟹243(12)—Injury to Servant — Liability of Superintendent.

The master's superintendent of construction is not liable for injury from explosion to a laborer working under a foreman, where, had his general directions been followed, the accident would not have happened.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 774.]

Holcomb, J., dissenting.

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Ferry County; Mitchell Gilliam and Kenneth Mackintosh, Judges.

Action by James Macario against the Alaska Gastineau Mining Company and another. From an adverse order and judgment, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

John F. Miller, John T. Casey, and R. J. Boryer, all of Seattle, for appellant. R. S. Pierce and Lyons & Orton, all of Seattle, for respondents.

PARKER, J. The plaintiff, Macario, commenced this action in the superior court for King county seeking recovery of damages for personal injuries against the defendants' mining company and O'Neill, which personal injuries he claims to have suffered as the result of the negligence of the defendants while he was employed by the mining company under the direction of O'Neill, its foreman, in its mining operations in Alaska.

The mining company is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of New York and is engaged in mining operations in Alaska, being duly authorized to do business therein under the laws of that territory. It has never complied with our statute relating to the doing of business in this state by foreign corporations. It claims that it never did business in this state of the nature that called for any such compliance on its part, and also that it never did business in this state of such nature that it can lawfully be subjected to the process of our courts. The plaintiff sought to have the superior court for King county acquire jurisdiction over the mining company in this action by service of summons upon Robert Munro as its agent in Seattle. The mining company appeared specially and moved to quash the service of the summons upon the ground that it was not doing business in this state of such nature as to enable our courts to acquire jurisdiction over it in this case. Trial before the court upon the issue of whether it was so doing business in this state resulted in findings and an order quashing the service of summons upon Munro as the company's agent and holding the service for naught. Defendant O'Neill was personally served with summons in Seattle, and the case proceeded to trial upon the merits as against him before the court sitting with a jury, when at the close of the evidence introduced in the plaintiff's behalf counsel for defendant O'Neill moved for a dismissal of the action upon the ground that the evidence introduced was insufficient to support any recovery as against him. This motion was by the court granted, and the jury discharged. The plaintiff has appealed from the order of the court quashing the service of summons upon Munro as agent of the mining company, and also from the judgment of dismissal in favor of defendant O'Neill.

Respondent mining company, while organized under the laws of the state of New York and having its head office in that state, is principally engaged in somewhat extensive mining operations in Alaska. Since the year 1912 Robert Munro, a resident of Seattle, has been its employé upon a regular salary. His title as such employé is "supply and forwarding agent." The mining company maintains an office in Seattle, which has been at all times since 1912 under Munro's charge with two other salaried employés under him. The duty of Munro has been to forward from Seattle supplies to the mining company at its place of operation in Alaska. These supplies would be purchased at different points in the states, shipped by rail to Seattle, some of them also being purchased in Seattle, when Munro, as representative of the mining company there, would attend to their transfer and shipment by boat to the mining company in Alaska. Munro apparently had considerable to do with the purchase of these supplies, especially the portion thereof purchased in Seattle. He had authority to make contracts of purchase at least to some extent, though apparently when purchases in any considerable sum were made he was required to submit the same to officers of the company either in New York or Alaska for approval before the final consummation of such purchases. There were large quantities of supplies thus forwarded from Seattle by Munro to the mining company in Alaska. This constituted the principal work of Munro for the mining company in this state. There were, however, other duties occasionally performed by him for the mining company, such as making hotel and transportation reservations for officers and employés of the company passing through Seattle on their way to and from Alaska. He also on two or three occasions by special direction from the Alaska office made arrangements for the care of injured workmen sent by the company to Seattle from Alaska for treatment, and on one occasion signed and verified an answer for the company in an action pending against it in the United States District court sitting at Seattle, and on another occasion by special direction from the Alaska office made arrangement with one of its injured workmen who was then in Seattle for a compromise of the workman's claim against the mining company. The foregoing summary, we think, constitutes a fair statement of all the business the mining company ever did in this state, and is as favorable to appellant's contentions as the record will admit of.

[1] It was conceded that Munro was the agent of the mining company for the purpose of doing all of the things above noticed, and that, if the doing of these things at Seattle constituted the doing of business in this state by the mining company to the extent that it thereby became subject to the process of the superior court for King county in this action, then the service of the summons upon Munro was an effective service upon the mining company in so far as the question of his agency alone is concerned. So the question here is: Was the mining company doing business in this state to the extent that it became subject to the process of our courts in this action?

Conceding for argument's sake, speaking generally, that this cause of action is transitory, being one which appellant may sue the mining company to recover upon in any court within whose jurisdiction he can find the mining company and procure lawful service of process upon it, let us have in mind that this cause of action arose, if at all, in Alaska, where the mining company is doing its principal business. It may be that, if a cause of action should arise in this state against the mining company growing directly out of an authorized agency act of Munro, the mining company could be sued thereon in the courts of this state, though its doing business in this state be limited to the particular act creating such cause of action, and though it should be held not to be engaged in business generally in this state. We think an examination of the authorities will show that the place of the arising of the cause of action has been generally regarded as of controlling force by the courts in determining the question of a defendant foreign corporation being subject to the process of the court wherein recovery is sought whenever the question of such foreign corporation doing business generally in the state in which it is sought to be sued is one of doubt. 19 Cyc. 1338, 1339.

Our problem then is, as we view it: Was the mining company doing business in this state to that extent which subjected it to the process of our courts as to any and all transitory causes of action maintainable against it? Our inquiry must necessarily take this broad scope, since every possible element of the cause of action here involved arose in Alaska and was wholly unconnected with any act or business transaction of the mining company in this state. So the jurisdiction of the superior court for King county is not aided in the least by the place of the arising of the cause of action as such jurisdiction would be aided had the cause of action arisen in this state.

The opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in Green v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 205 U. S. 530, 27 Sup. Ct. 595, 51 L. Ed. 916, we think, is decisive of this question. That was an action in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, to recover damages for personal injuries occurring in Colorado, which were claimed to have resulted from the negligence of the railway company, an Iowa corporation. The railway company did not operate any railway lines in Pennsylvania, though it did some business there in the way of entering into contracts for transportation of persons and property over its lines west of Chicago, which business, as we view it, bore at least as intimate relation to the general business of the railway company as the business done by Munro in Seattle bore to the general business of respondent mining company. In holding that such business transacted in Pennsylvania by the railway company's agent did not constitute the doing of business by that company in Pennsylvania to the extent of subjecting it to be sued in Pennsylvania upon a cause of action for personal injury occurring in Colorado, Justice Moody, speaking for the court, said:

> "The eastern point of the defendant's line of railroad was at Chicago, whence its tracks extended westward. The business for which it was incorporated was the carriage of freight and passengers, and the construction, maintenance, and operation of a railroad for that purpose. As incidental and collateral to that business it was proper, and, according to the business methods generally pursued, probably essential, that freight and passenger traffic should be solicited in other parts of the country than those through which the defendant's tracks ran. For the purpose of conducting this incidental business the defendant employed Mr. Heller, hired an office for him in Philadelphia, designated him as district freight and passenger agent, and in many ways advertised to the public these facts. The business of the agent was to solicit and procure passengers and freight to be transported over the defendant's line. For conducting this business several clerks and various traveling passenger and freight agents were employed, who reported to the agent and acted under his direction. He sold no tickets and received no payments for transportation of freight. When a prospective passenger desired a ticket, and applied to the agent for one, the agent took the applicant's money and procured from one of the railroads running west from Philadelphia a ticket for Chicago and a prepaid order, which gave to the applicant, upon his arrival at Chicago, the right to receive from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad a ticket over that road. * * *
>
> "The question here is whether service upon the agent was sufficient; and one element of its sufficiency is whether the facts show that the defendant corporation was doing business within the district. It is obvious that the defendant was doing there a considerable business of a certain kind, although there was no carriage of freight or passengers. * * *
>
> "The business shown in this case was, in substance, nothing more than that of solicitation. Without undertaking to formulate any general rule defining what transactions will constitute 'doing business' in the sense that liability to service is incurred, we think that this is not enough to bring the defendant within the district so that process can be served upon it. This view accords with several decisions in the lower federal courts. Maxwell v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. [C. C.] 34 Fed. 286; N. K. Fairbank & Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co.,

4 C. C. A. 403, 9 U. S. App. 212, 54 Fed. 420 [38 L. R. A. 271]; Union Associated Press v. Times-Star Co. [C. C.] 84 Fed. 419; Earle v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. [C. C.] 127 Fed. 235."

We think no decision rendered by this court is so directly in point here as to be of controlling force, though our decisions in the following cases are in harmony with and may be said to lend some support to the view that the mining company did not do business in this state to the extent that it became subject to being sued in our courts upon this alleged personal injury cause of action arising in Alaska: Rich v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 34 Wash. 14, 74 Pac. 1008; Arrow Lumber, etc., Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 53 Wash. 629, 102 Pac. 650; Smith & Co. v. Dickinson, 81 Wash. 465, 142 Pac. 1133. The decision of our federal District Court in Johanson v. Alaska Treadwell, etc., Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 270, also lends support to this conclusion.

Our decision in Lee v. Fidelity Storage, etc., Co., 51 Wash. 208, 98 Pac. 658, and Spokane Merchants' Association v. Clere Clothing Co., 84 Wash. 616, 147 Pac. 414, upon a casual reading may seem to lend some support to appellant's contention, but a critical examination of those cases will show that they both involved causes of action clearly arising in this state and such as the defendant corporations would be liable to be sued upon in this state regardless of whether they were doing business generally therein or not. Our decision in Sievers v. Dalles, etc., Co., 24 Wash. 302, 64 Pac. 539, may also seem to lend some support to appellant's contention. In that case, however, the defendant foreign corporation was held suable in this state by service upon its purser at Vancouver in this state upon the ground that its regularly receiving and discharge of freight and collecting charges therefor at Vancouver constituted the doing of business generally in this state. This, it seems to us, may be likened to a railway company maintaining its lines and a transportation business over them in a state other than the one of its creation. We note that the question apparently most seriously considered by the court in that case was as to the agency of the purser and as to his being such agent of the foreign corporation as could be served with process against it. The question of its doing business in the state such as to render it subject to the process of our courts apparently received but little consideration.

The authorities principally relied upon by counsel for appellant are the decisions of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in International Harvester Co. v. Commonwealth, 147 Ky. 655, 145 S. W. 393, and the Supreme Court of the United States in the same case upon writ of error. International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, 234 U. S. 579, 34 Sup. Ct. 944, 58 L. Ed. 1479, where the decision of the Kentucky Court of Appeals was affirmed, holding that the International Harvester Company was doing business in the state of Kentucky to the extent that it was subject to the process of the courts of Kentucky and suable therein upon the cause of action involved. That was a prosecution upon an indictment against the harvester company, charging it with being a member of a pool or combination with other companies for the purpose of regulating and controlling the price of machinery and to enhance the cost thereof above its reasonable value, in violation of the statutes of Kentucky. The process issued was, in substance, the same as a summons in a civil action requiring the harvester company to appear and defend. It was served upon one Pace as the agent of the company within the jurisdiction of the Kentucky court in which the indictment had been returned. Some of the particular acts complained of in the indictment were charged to have been done by and through Pace as agent of the company, and it is plain that the offense was committed, or the cause of action, if we may call it such, arose in Kentucky. The business of the harvester company in Kentucky was that of selling harvester machinery, and was quite extensive and spread generally throughout the state. In deciding that case Justice Day, speaking for the court at page 586 of 234 U. S., at page 946 of 34 Sup. Ct., 58 L. Ed. 1479, said:

> "It is argued that this conclusion is in direct conflict with the case of Green v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Ry., 205 U. S. 530, 27 Sup. Ct. 595, 51 L. Ed. 916. We have no desire to depart from that decision, which, however, was an extreme case."

It seems to us that, as the railway company's business in the Green Case was by the court differentiated from the harvester company's business in Kentucky, so may the business of respondent mining company in Seattle be differentiated from the harvester company's business in Kentucky. In other words, as the railroad company's business in Pennsylvania was regarded merely as incidental to its business in Colorado, so may the mining company's business in Seattle be regarded as merely incidental to its principal business which is in Alaska. The Harvester Company Case can also be differentiated from the Green and this case in that it was an action seeking to recover a penalty upon a cause of action arising in Kentucky.

The following decisions of the courts, we think, show that the liability of a foreign corporation to be sued in a state other than that of its creation because of its doing business therein, upon any and all transitory causes of action arising against it, and the liability of a foreign corporation to be sued in a state other than that of its creation because of its doing business therein, upon a particular cause of action arising in the state wherein it is sought to be sued, are two different questions; and the decision of the latter question is not necessarily determinative of the former. National Condensed Milk

Co. v. Brandenburgh, 40 N. J. Law, 111; Colorado Iron Works v. Sierra Grande Min. Co., 15 Colo. 499, 25 Pac. 325, 22 Am. St. Rep. 433; Council Bluffs Canning Co. v. Omaha Tinware Mfg. Co., 49 Neb. 537, 68 N. W. 929; Hiller v. Burlington & Mo. R. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 223; Nelson, Morris & Co. v. Rehkopf & Sons (Ky.) 75 S. W. 203; Simon v. So. Ry. Co., 236 U. S. 115, 35 Sup. Ct. 255, 59 L. Ed. 492.

Some contention is made in appellant's behalf that because the mining company had some property in Seattle, consisting principally of office furniture of the value of approximately $500, that fact should be considered in aid of the jurisdiction of the superior court for King county and its power to subject the mining company to its process. The answer to such contention is that this is not a proceeding in rem, but an action to recover a personal judgment against the mining company. We are not here concerned with the question of jurisdiction to render a judgment in rem, but a judgment in personam. Plainly, we think, the fact of the mining company having property in Seattle is of no controlling force whatever in this case.

[2] Some contention is made in appellant's behalf that the mining company in effect entered a general appearance in this case. This contention seems to be rested upon the fact that after the commencement of the action in the superior court for King county the mining company, being a foreign corporation, petitioned for the removal of the case to the federal court, and before such removal was consummated amended its petition in that behalf showing somewhat more certainly than in its original petition that it was a corporation organized under the laws of the state of New York. Upon the approval of the bond for removal to the federal court by the superior court an order was entered containing recitals of some considerable length, among other things reciting that on motion of defendant mining company it was allowed by the court to amend its petition by interlineation. Counsels' contention seems to be that this leave of the superior court to amend the petition constituted a general appearance upon the part of the mining company. We cannot assent to this view. The petition to remove being in effect a challenging of the court's jurisdiction or rather a plea to oust it of jurisdiction, the remarks of the Appellate Court of Illinois in Pooler v. Southwick, 128 Ill. App. 264, seem to effectually answer this contention, as follows:

> "Such a plea to the jurisdiction of the court is amendable, and our liberal statute of amendments applies fully thereto. Midland Pacific Ry. Co. v. McDermid, 91 Ill. 170; Drake v. Drake [83 Ill. 526], supra. Hence a motion for leave to amend such a plea cannot be said to be a general appearance giving the court full jurisdiction. Such a rule would defeat the right to amend; for leave to amend can only be obtained by a motion to the court. It would be a contradiction in principle to hold that one may amend a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, but that if he asks leave to do so he thereby defeats the plea and gives the court full jurisdiction."

In Wabash Western Railway v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 17 Sup. Ct. 126, 41 L. Ed. 431, it was held that a petition in general terms for removal of a cause to a federal court, without specifying or restricting the purpose of the defendant's appearance in the state court, is not, like a general appearance, a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant, and that the filing of a petition for removal is not a general appearance, but a special appearance only. If the filing of a petition for removal is not a general appearance, then manifestly an amendment of such a petition would not be a general appearance. It seems plain to us that the superior court for King county did not acquire jurisdiction over the mining company by virtue of any general appearance of that company. After the case was removed to the federal court it was remanded to the superior court by the federal court, and thereafter the mining company specially appeared and moved to quash the service of the summons, when the motion was disposed of in the superior court.

[3] Further contention is made in appellant's behalf that the trial court erred in setting aside the default entered against the mining company without formal motion in that behalf by the mining company. Since we have arrived at the conclusion that the service of the summons was wholly without effect as against the mining company and because it was not subject to being sued in this action in this state, it follows that the default entered against it was void, and that the trial court did not err in setting it aside upon its own motion, as it is insisted by counsel for appellant the court did. It would seem that such order should follow the setting aside of the service as a matter of course.

We are of the opinion that the order quashing the service of summons upon Munro as agent for the mining company must be affirmed. It is so ordered.

[4] It is contended in appellant's behalf that the trial court erred in dismissing the case for want of sufficient evidence to support any award of damages as against the defendant O'Neill. This disposition of the case upon the merits in favor of O'Neill seems to us so plainly correct that it calls for but little discussion. Respondent O'Neill was the salaried superintendent for the mining company in the construction of the tunnel in which appellant was injured by an explosion of a dynamite charge. The foreman, Miller, working under O'Neill, was in charge of the particular work in which appellant was one of the employés at work at the time he was injured. The injury occurred by the explosion of a dynamite charge during the work of a night shift. O'Neill was at that time in bed asleep; and evidently had been for several hours. He was not present and knew nothing of what was being done there for some time preceding the occurring of the accident. We are unable to find in the record before us anything that points to any act of O'Neill as the proximate cause of the injury to appellant. It is true O'Neill was the superintendent and had given certain general directions concerning the performance of the work; but the evidence wholly fails to show that the accident was the result of following O'Neill's directions. Indeed, it is conclusively proven that the accident would not have happened had his directions been followed. We think this branch of the case needs no further discussion.

The judgment of dismissal in favor of O'Neill is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT and FULLERTON, JJ., concur.

HOLCOMB, J. I am unable to concur with the majority in the affirmance of the quashing of service of process upon the respondent mining company. It seems clear to me that the facts show that the agent Munro performed much of the corporation's necessary general business in this state. As to that part of the decision, I dissent.

(96 Wash. 415)

JACKMAN et al. v. GERMAIN et al.

(No. 13835.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. ADVERSE POSSESSION 🔑108 — SURVEY — LOST CORNER.

Whether a quarter section corner was a lost corner is immaterial, where defendant and his predecessors have held adversely up to that point for the statutory period.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 624–628.]

2. BOUNDARIES 🔑53—ESTABLISHMENT—SURVEY.

A survey under Rem. Code 1915, § 3984, providing that landowners after notice to interested parties may employ a surveyor to locate section lines, etc., is not binding upon persons not participating, especially as Rem. Code 1915, c. 7, § 945 et seq., provides the method of establishing boundaries where the parties cannot agree.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Cent. Dig. §§ 264–267.]

3. BOUNDARIES 🔑37(5) — ESTABLISHMENT — AGREEMENT.

In suit to quiet title, evidence that defendant agreed to the relocation of a boundary line fence, if plaintiff secured consent of a tenant, held not to establish a boundary line agreement where it does not appear that the tenant's consent was secured.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Cent. Dig. §§ 186–189, 193.]

4. BOUNDARIES 🔑33—ESTABLISHMENT—BURDEN OF PROOF.

In suit to quiet title, plaintiff, alleging a boundary line agreement, has the burden of proving it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Boundaries, Cent. Dig. §§ 146–152.]

5. ADVERSE POSSESSION 🔑50—ESTOPPEL.

In suit to quiet title, defendants are not estopped to claim title by adverse possession because they acquiesced in a change of a boundary line fence for several years while such dividing line was in litigation and where such change of location did not prejudice plaintiffs.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 255–261.]

6. ADVERSE POSSESSION 🔑27 — SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Evidence that defendant built a fence, cleared the land up to it, and for over ten years maintained such fence, establishes title by adverse possession.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Adverse Possession, Cent. Dig. §§ 121, 122, 652, 664, 684.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Whatcom County; Guy C. Alston, Judge.

Action to quiet title by Stephen T. Jackman and Mary Jackman and Wallace Ackley and Mary Ackley against Walter T. Germain and Rose M. Germain, his wife, and John Botta. From a decree quieting title in plaintiffs Ackley and defendants Germain, the plaintiffs Jackman appeal. Affirmed.

Bixley & Nightingale, of Bellingham, for appellants. Hurlbut Neal, of Bellingham, for respondents.

MOUNT, J. This action was brought to quiet title in the plaintiffs to a strip of land about 250 feet wide, alleged to belong to the plaintiffs, as a part of the northwest quarter of section 13, township 40, range 2 east W. M., in Whatcom county. On a trial of the case, the court found that the defendants and their predecessors in interest had held the exclusive, open, and notorious possession of a part of the strip for a period of more than ten years, and for that reason quieted title to that part in the defendants, and to the balance of the strip in Ackley and wife. The plaintiff Jackman and wife have appealed from that part of the decree quieting title in the defendant Germain. It appears from the record that Jackman and defendant Botta located in section 13 in about the year 1883. They were the first settlers in that locality. The Jackmans located on the northwest quarter of section 13, and Botta on the southwest quarter of that section. Soon after they located upon the land, they employed one Judson, who was then a surveyor, to point out the lines and show them the corners. The land at that time was uncleared. It was covered with brush and timber. The section was an irregular section. The lines, as originally surveyed by the government surveyors, could be traced by blazes upon trees. Mr. Judson was unable to find any of the corners of the section. He traced out the west line of the section to a point about midway between the northwest and southwest corners. He found what was supposed to be a bearing tree, which indicated the quarter corner post. According to the field notes, the quarter corner post was located a distance of 2.64 feet from this tree. After that time, this tree was destroyed, and Mr. Botta planted a stone at the point, and claimed that this stone marked his northwest corner. This stone was afterwards known as the "Botta stone." After the section corners were found, Mr. Jackman insisted that the quarter corner stone set by Mr. Botta was not in the right place. Mr. Botta, however, maintained that it marked the corner. In the winter of 1900 and 1901, Mr. Botta built a fence, beginning at what he claimed was his northeast corner, and running thence west a distance of about 80 rods. He cleared his land up to this fence, and later extended the fence westward to what is commonly known as the "Botta corner." In the year 1911, Mr. Lyle a deputy county surveyor, was employed by some of the residents in the section to run out all the lines. Neither Mr. Botta nor his grantees took any part in this survey. Mr. Lyle ran the lines according to the government field notes, as he maintains, and located the quarter on the west line of the section, 249.7 feet south of the stone set by Mr. Botta. The defendant Germain at that time had purchased Mr. Botta's interest in the southwest quarter, and some negotiations were had between the Jackmans and Mr. Germain as to the removal of the fence, which had been there since 1900. Mr. Jackman desired the fence moved south to the line run by Mr. Lyle. Mr. Jackman claims that Mr. Germain agreed that the fence might be moved. Mr. Germain testified that he did not agree that the fence might be moved. He testified, however, that he agreed that, if Mr. Jackman would move the fence at his own cost, and would satisfy a tenant of Mr. Germain's, he would consent to the removal of the fence. He also testified that the tenant would not consent, and that he did not consent, to the removal of the fence. Mr. Jackman removed the fence, and placed it upon the line determined by the Lyle survey. A year or two later, parties in section 14 brought an action to establish the quarter corner post on the section line between sections 13 and 14. The parties to this action were not parties to that action. The action resulted in a judgment of the superior court of that county, determining that the Botta stone was the correct location of the quarter corner. Thereafter Mr. Germain tore down the fence on the Lyle survey, and moved it back to where it originally was. This action was then begun to quiet title to the land in dispute. The trial court found as follows:

> "That at all times between the latter part of 1900 and March, 1911, the said Botta and his grantees cultivated the east half of the land in dispute and were in the open, notorious and exclusive possession of same under claim that the same was a part of the land which had been granted by the United States government to said John Botta"

—and, for that reason, concluded that the plaintiff Jackman was not entitled to the east half of the strip. The appellants make four contentions upon the brief, to the effect: First, that the quarter corner on the west line of the section is a lost corner, and was legally established by the Lyle survey, and that the center line of that section was also established by that survey; second, that the Lyle survey was an official survey in substantial compliance with the provisions of section 3984, Rem. Code; third, that the Lyle boundary line was an agreed boundary between the parties; fourth, that the respondents were estopped to deny the title and right of possession in appellants, and that there was no adverse holding by the respondents.

[1] We shall briefly notice these contentions. Upon the first contention, appellants argue that the quarter corner on the west line of the section is a lost corner. The respondents claim that the corner is not lost, but was established when the line was run by Mr. Judson in the year 1883. The respondents further contend that, even if the corner was a lost corner, it was established by a judgment of the court between other parties. We think the question whether this corner was a lost corner or not is of no importance in the case if, as a matter of fact, Mr. Botta and his successors in interest have maintained it as the true corner and have held adversely to that line for a period of ten years or more. We shall notice that question later.

[2] It is next argued by the appellants that the survey made by Mr. Lyle in the year 1911 is an official survey by the county engineer, under section 3984, Rem. Code, and establishes the lines and corners. That section of the Code does not purport to be for the establishment of lost corners or lines, where such corners or lines are in dispute. It simply provides that the owners of any section of land in this state, after having given ten days' notice to all persons interested, may employ a surveyor to establish and relocate or perpetuate lines and corners of a section of land, and it provides the method of payment by such persons. But it does not purport to provide that such surveys are binding between persons who do not take part therein where corners or lines are in dispute. Chapter 7 of the Code, beginning at section 947, provides the method of establishing lines, corners, and boundaries of lands, where the parties cannot agree thereon. It is not claimed in this case that the provisions of that chapter were followed. In fact, they were not followed.

[3, 4] It is next argued that the boundary line between the adjoining lands of the appellants and respondents was established by agreement of the parties according to the Lyle survey. This was a disputed question of fact. The trial court, in commenting upon the evidence, made this statement:

> "Shortly after the survey Jackman consulted Germain, the then owner of the Botta tract, about the removal of the fence from the Judson survey to the Lyle survey. They had certain negotiations in that connection which finally culminated in Germain agreeing that if Jackman would remove the fence to the Lyle survey at his own expense and satisfy Germain's tenant, who then had a lease for a term of years on the said southwest quarter, it would be satisfactory to Germain. The fence was thereupon placed on the boundary between the northwest and southwest quarters as established by the Lyle survey."

But the court did not find that Mr. Jackman did satisfy the tenant of Mr. Germain at that time, or at all, and we find no evidence in the record to the effect that he satisfied the tenant. Mr. Germain testified that they did not reach an agreement, and that when Mr. Jackman removed the fence upon the Lyle survey, it was without his knowledge or consent, and that he allowed it to remain there simply because a lawsuit was pending to determine the quarter corner post upon that section line, between other parties, and he awaited the result of that decision. After that decision was filed, he then tore down the fence, which he claims was wrongfully placed upon the Lyle survey by the appellants.

From a careful reading of the record, we are not disposed to hold that there was an agreement for the establishment of the boundary line. If there had been an agreement, then, under the authorities, that agreement would, no doubt, be good. Rose v. Fletcher, 83 Wash. 623, 145 Pac. 989, and cases there cited. But the burden was upon the appellants to establish that agreement, which, we think, has not been done.

[5] The appellants argue next that the respondents were estopped to deny the title and right of possession in the appellants, because they acquiesced for two or three years after the appellants had moved the fence. We think there is no room for estoppel, because appellants were not permitted to do anything to their disadvantage after having moved the fence upon the land now in controversy. The dividing line was in dispute. The appellants were claiming the land, and the respondents were also claiming it. The appellants, without knowledge of the respondents, tore down the fence and rebuilt it upon what they claimed to be the line. There was then a case pending which would determine the true boundary line. The respondents waited until a decision of that case was rendered, and when that case was decided, it fixed the line at where respondents claimed it was. We think, under these facts, there is no room for estoppel.

[6] Appellants lastly argue that there was no adverse possession, and for that reason the court erred in finding adverse possession. There is little or no dispute in the record that Mr. Botta, who owned the land at that time, maintained that the stone set by him, about the year 1885, was at the true quarter corner. In the year 1900 he built a fence, and cleared the land up to that line, and for more than ten years maintained the fence upon that line. He maintained the fence openly and notoriously, in opposition to the wishes of the appellants. His successors in interest afterwards claimed the land. One party was claiming the line was at a given place. The other party was claiming that it was another place, so it is apparent that there was an adverse holding on the part of the respondents, from the time the fence was erected, in 1900, until after 1911. This court has held that adverse possession for the statutory time, under a mistaken belief that a fence inclosing the land was on the true boundary line, with claim of ownership during such period, ripens into title by adverse possession. Wissinger v. Reed, 69 Wash. 684, 125 Pac. 1030. We are of the opinion that the trial court properly found that there was an adverse holding for a period of ten years.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, PARKER, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 336)

HALLORAN v. GERMAN-AMERICAN MERCANTILE BANK. (No. 13722.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Brokers 🔑76—Right to Recover Payment to Owner as Consideration for Option Contract.

Where a real estate brokerage corporation paid the amount of a first payment received from a prospective purchaser for an option on the property to the owner to secure the execution of a contract by the owner giving the purchaser a right to consummate the sale, neither the corporation nor its assignee can recover such payment from the owner, as it would destroy the consideration which makes the contract binding upon the owner; the agreement between the broker and purchaser being immaterial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. § 63.]

2. Brokers 🔑85(7)—Documentary Evidence—Earnest Money Receipt.

In an action by assignee of real estate broker to recover payment received from purchaser and paid by broker to owner as consideration for a contract giving purchaser the right to consummate the sale, the earnest money receipt given by the owner to the broker is material evidence, as tending to show that the payment was made by the broker as consideration for the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. § 112.]

Holcomb, J., dissenting.

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; John M. Ralston, Judge.

Action by William Halloran against the German-American Mercantile Bank. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Peterson & Macbride, of Seattle, for appellant. Flick & Frater, of Seattle, for respondent.

PARKER, J. The plaintiff, William Halloran, as assignee of John Davis & Co., a real estate brokerage corporation, seeks recovery from the defendant, German-American Mercantile Bank, of the sum of $1,000, which he claims is held in trust for him by that bank. The defendant claims the $1,000 as a forfeited payment of earnest money made upon a prospective purchase by F. H. Brownell of the property owned by it, hereinafter described. The defendant also insists that the plaintiff's claim is in substance a commission claim for the sale of the property, rested upon a void contract, because not sufficiently evidenced in writing, as required by section 5289, Rem. Code. Trial in the superior court without a jury resulted in findings and judgment in favor of the defendant, denying the plaintiff any recovery, from which he has appealed to this court.

The following earnest money receipt, while appearing to be dated December 4, 1915, and evidently signed by John Davis & Co. on that date, was not signed by respondent until December 6, 1915.

"Seattle, Wash., Dec. 4, 1915.

"Received of F. H. Brownell one thousand dollars as earnest money, and in part payment for the purchase of certain real estate in King county, state of Washington, and particularly described as follows, to wit: Lot twelve, block five, of the Heirs of S. A. Bell's First addition to the city of Seattle, together with all improvements thereon, which we have this day sold to the said F. H. Brownell for the total purchase price of thirty-four thousand dollars, on the following terms, to wit: One thousand dollars as herein above receipted for and balance of thirty-three thousand dollars to be paid on or before January 15, 1916. * * * If * * * the purchaser refuses or neglects to comply with any of the conditions of this sale, then the earnest money herein receipted for shall be forfeited to John Davis & Co. to the amount of their regular commission, and balance, if any, to the owner of the property as liquidated damages. The property is to be conveyed by warranty deed free and clear of all incumbrances of every nature whatsoever, to the said purchaser or his assigns. Time is the essence of this contract.

"John Davis & Company,
"By B. J. Perkinson, Agents.

"I hereby agree to purchase the property on the above terms.

"————, Purchaser.

"We, the owners of the above-mentioned property, approve the above sale.

"German-American Mercantile Bank,
"By Ernest Carstens, Pres."

It will be noticed that this writing was not signed by the prospective purchaser, Brownell, though prepared in such form as to evidently contemplate that he was to sign it, if he contemplated being bound to purchase the property to any greater extent than as upon a mere option. We also note that the evidence fails to inform us whether or not Brownell ever received or accepted this writing as evidencing any contract on his part looking to the purchase of the property by him. We assume, however, for argument's sake, that he did pay to John Davis & Co. the $1,000 mentioned therein for the purpose stated, and in that manner became a party to the contract evidenced by the writing, to the extent of its thereby becoming at least an optional contract on his part. Looking to the whole of the writing, including the sentence following the signature of John Davis & Co. and the following blank line, manifestly provided for the signature of the purchaser, it may well be argued, as counsel for appellant do, that the writing evidences nothing more than an option contract on the part of Brownell, imposing no obligation on him to consummate the purchase, and subjecting him only to the liability of forfeiting the $1,000, should he fail to pay the balance of the purchase price on or before January 15, 1916. On December 6, 1915, John Davis & Co. paid to respondent $1,000, which we assume was this same $1,000, and received from respondent a receipt therefor reading as follows:

"Seattle, Wn., Dec. 6, 1915.

"Received of John Davis & Co. one thousand 00/100 dollars earnest money on 12 Block 5 (8th & Olive) of Heirs of S. A. Bell's First Add. to Seattle. Balance of $33,000 to be pd. by Jan. 15, 1916.

"$1,000.
German-American Mercantile Bank,
"By Ernest Carstens, Pres.'

Respondent refused to sign either of these earnest money receipts until it was actually paid this sum as earnest money looking to the purchase of the property by Brownell. Thereafter Brownell failed to make any further payments, and, the time for the payment of the balance of the purchase price having expired, all parties proceeded upon the assumption that Brownell had forfeited all right to make the purchase and to the $1,000 paid by him. Thereafter appellant acquired by assignment from John Davis & Co. all its rights under the earnest money receipt given to it by Brownell, and thereafter this action was instituted by appellant, resulting in judgment denying him recovery from respondent as above noticed.

Counsel for appellant proceed upon what is in substance a trust theory in claiming repayment of all of the $1,000 from respondent. This theory is rested upon the language of the earnest money receipt given to Brownell by John Davis & Co. that, "if the purchaser refuses or neglects to comply with any of the conditions of this sale, then the earnest money herein receipted for shall be forfeited to John Davis & Co. to the amount of their regular commission, and balance, if any, to the owner of the property as liquidated damages," together with the testimony concededly showing that the regular commission on a $34,000 sale would be $1,100. It is worthy of note in this connection that the earnest money receipt given by John Davis & Co. to Brownell is upon a printed form, in which the last above-quoted language therefrom appears in print. This fact seems to account for the language, which provides for forfeiture of the surplus of the $1,000 to the owner, which language is manifestly of no effect, in view of the conceded fact that there could in no event be any surplus over the commission. It is insisted that this testimony as to the amount of the regular commission on such a sale is not for the purpose of proving a commission liability on the part of respondent, but only to show the extent of the interest of appellant in the $1,000. This manifestly is for the purpose of avoiding the effect of § 5289, Rem. Code, requiring a commission contract to be in writing, which section, as we have held, means that the amount of the commission, as well as the other elements of the contract, must be evidenced in writing. Forland v. Boyum, 53 Wash. 421, 102 Pac. 34; Engleson v. Port Crescent Shingle Co., 74 Wash. 424, 133 Pac. 1030; Goodrich v. Rogers, 75 Wash. 212, 134 Pac. 947; Cushing v. Monarch Timber Co., 75 Wash. 678, 135 Pac. 660, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 1239. As further evidencing this theory of counsel for appellant, we find in their brief the following:

> "Respondent did not bind itself to pay a commission, and did not in any way promise or agree to pay a commission. Appellant could not recover a commission unless it effected a sale; procuring an option merely does not entitle it to a commission."

[1] Now we may concede that, if this were a controversy betwen Brownell and John Davis & Co., the language of the earnest money receipt given to Brownell by John Davis & Co. would preclude him from recovering from John Davis & Co. the $1,000, since Brownell agreed to forfeit the earnest money so paid by him upon his failure to consummate the purchase. But whether the $1,000 shall be forfeited to and repaid to appellant, John Davis & Co.'s assignee, as against respondent, after having been voluntarily paid to respondent by John Davis & Co. to secure the execution of the contract by respondent, is quite a different question. To say that respondent shall return the $1,000 paid to it by John Davis & Co. in consideration of respondent entering into this contract, which counsel for appellant insists is only an option contract in favor of Brownell to purchase the land, would be to destroy the very consideration which makes the contract binding and effective as against respondent.

[2] It may be that the earnest money receipt given by respondent to John Davis & Co., would entitle John Davis & Co., to compel conveyance of the property to itself upon paying the balance of the purchase price as therein stated, but that is not asked for here. Indeed, that earnest money receipt is not assigned to this appellant who is here seeking relief. It is, however, material evidence in this controversy as showing, with other evidence, that the $1,000 was paid to respondent by John Davis & Co., as the consideration which rendered the contract binding upon respondent.

There is evidence in this record which seems to plainly show that John Davis & Co. was acting as the agent of Brownell in seeking the purchase of this property from respondent, and that Brownell agreed to pay John Davis & Co. a commission of $1,000 therefor upon completion of the purchase at the price of $34,000. This fact is not noticed here as a suggestion that John Davis & Co., was attempting to collect compensation from both Brownell and respondent. But it emphasizes the untenable position here taken by counsel for appellant.

We are of the opinion that under no view of the controversy can it be held that respondent is required to repay to appellant, as assignee of John Davis & Co., the $1,000 which was received by it in consideration of its entering into the contract giving Brownell the right to consummate the sale.

The judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON and MOUNT, JJ., concur.

HOLCOMB, J. (dissenting). I am of the opinion that, the written agreement having been signed by respondent, according to its specific terms, upon the default of the option purchaser, the earnest money was, as stated in the agreement, "forfeited to John Davis & Co. * * * as liquidated damages."

Appellant, as assignee of the cause of action, should therefore recover. I therefore dissent.

(96 Wash. 317)

KUCHER v. SCOTT et al. (No. 13584.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. ESTOPPEL 🔑72—PERSON MAKING DAMAGE POSSIBLE.

Where one of two or more innocent persons must suffer by the acts of another, he who has placed it in the power of that other person to occasion the loss must sustain it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estoppel, Cent. Dig. § 188.]

2. ESTOPPEL 🔑72—PERSON MAKING DAMAGE POSSIBLE.

Where the owner of realty, when the secretary of a mortgage brokerage house approached him with reference to renewal of the mortgage thereon, executed a note and mortgage made payable to the brokerage house, and delivered them to the secretary, who sold them to a purchaser who did not forward his check until the note properly indorsed had been received, the owner and mortgagor of the property, having placed it in the power of the secretary to commit wrong, was the one who should bear the loss rather than the purchaser of the second note and mortgage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estoppel, Cent. Dig. § 188.]

3. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑105(8)—AUTHORITY TO COLLECT MORTGAGE NOTE—COLLECTION OF INTEREST.

The mere fact that a mortgage brokerage house had collected the interest due on a mortgage for one of its clients as it became due from time to time did not authorize the company, unless it had possession of the note, to collect the principal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. § 374; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 838.]

4. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑105(7)—AUTHORITY TO COLLECT MORTGAGE NOTE—COLLECTION OF INTEREST.

The fact that a mortgage recited that it was payable at the office of a mortgage brokerage house did not authorize the company to collect the principal without possession of the note.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. § 374; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 838.]

5. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑105(8)—AUTHORITY TO COLLECT MORTGAGE.

A letter from a client of a mortgage brokerage house, inclosing the coupon for the last payment of interest on a mortgage, which became due before the letter was dated, which letter assumed that since the mortgage had become due "it had been closed," following the statement with a direction to remit with draft on New York, could not be construed as an authorization to the brokerage house to collect the principal; the brokerage house having been advised that the note would be sent to a bank for collection.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. § 374; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 838.]

6. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT 🔑105(5)—AGENT TO COLLECT MORTGAGE.

A mortgage brokerage house, which had authority from its client to collect the principal indebtedness on a mortgage when it became due, was not its client's agent for the purpose of making collection prior to the due date of the note and mortgage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. § 374; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 838.]

7. ESTOPPEL 🔑72—PERSON WHO RENDERED DAMAGE POSSIBLE.

Where the mortgagor of land, the note and mortgage falling due in October, in September executed a new mortgage and note, intended for renewal, and delivered them to the secretary of the mortgage brokerage house which had negotiated both mortgages, and the secretary received a check in payment from the person to whom the renewal note and mortgage were to be assigned, but did not enter it on the books of the house, as a credit on the account of the assignee of the prior mortgage, as against such assignee the owner and mortgagor must sustain the loss caused by the dishonest practices of the secretary of the brokerage house.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Estoppel, Cent. Dig. § 188.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Boyd J. Tallman, Judge.

Action by C. W. Kucher and another, against Richard M. Scott and Duncan W. Campbell. From a judgment for defendants, the named plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Roney & Loveless and Brightman & Tennant, all of Seattle, for appellant. Ralph E. Moody, of Portland, Or., and Wilson R. Gay and Douglas, Lane & Douglas, all of Seattle, for respondents.

MAIN, J. The plaintiffs, being the owners of certain real property in the city of Seattle which was covered by two mortgages, claiming that one of the mortgages was invalid, but not knowing which one, brought this action for the purpose of securing the cancellation of the void mortgage, whichever one it might be. The defendants are respectively the owners of the two mortgages. The trial resulted in a judgment adverse to the plaintiffs' contention. From this judgment, the appeal is prosecuted.

The facts which gave rise to the litigation are substantially these: For many years, A. Robinson & Co., had been engaged in the real estate, loan, and insurance business in the city of Seattle. All the transactions here involved were handled by this company, through its secretary, Wilbur S. Lewis, who, on March 9, 1915, committed suicide. On January 30, 1912, the appellant purchased from F. C. Riley and wife a dwelling house, and the lot, or lots, which it occupied. At this time, the property was subject to a mortgage held by one John Benson, in the sum of $4,000. This mortgage, and the note which it was given to secure, were made payable to A. Robinson & Co., and by it transferred to Benson. It was the custom of that company, when making loans, to have the note and mortgage made payable to it, and then indorse the note and assign the mortgage to the person advancing the money. The Benson mortgage was due three years after date, or on October 13, 1914. On September 9, 1912, this mortgage was purchased by Richard M. Scott, one of the respondents, and thereupon the note was indorsed to him, and the proper assignment of mortgage placed of record. The interest upon the mortgage was paid every six months, as it became due, to A. Robinson & Co., after the appellant had received a statement for the interest from that company. When the interest was paid, it was either sent by the company to Scott, or deposited to his credit in the State Bank of Seattle. Some months prior to the 13th day of October, 1914, the appellant was approached by Lewis with reference to a renewal, and, after some negotiation, on September 1, 1914, the appellant and wife executed a note and mortgage, payable to A. Robinson & Co., and delivered the same to Lewis. At this time, Lewis had informed the appellant that he was getting the money from a man who resided in Portland, Or., but the name was not disclosed. After the note and mortgage were received by Lewis, the note was indorsed and forwarded to Portland, Or., to the respondent, Campbell. Thereafter, and on the 5th day of September, Campbell drew a check payable to the order of A. Robinson & Co., and forwarded the same to it. Lewis apparently appropriated the money which had been received from Campbell, and, in the course of a few months, committed suicide. Subsequent investigation disclosed the relation of the company as affects the three parties involved in this litigation.

[1] This is one of those unfortunate cases in which one of three persons, all of whom acted in the utmost good faith, must sustain a loss in the sum of $4,000. It is an old and settled maxim of the law that, where one of two or more innocent persons must suffer by the acts of another, he who has placed it in the power of that other person to occasion the loss must sustain it. Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 19 L. Ed. 1008; Parker v. Hill, 68 Wash. 134, 122 Pac. 618; Wiswell v. Beck, 92 Wash. 208, 158 Pac. 976.

[2] With this principle of law in mind, the case, so far as it involves the appellant and Campbell, will be first considered. The appellant executed the note and mortgage made payable to A. Robinson & Co., and delivered the same into the possession of Lewis, as secretary of that company. Campbell was requested by Lewis to forward his check before he received the note of the appellant, but this was not done. The check was not forwarded until the note, properly indorsed, had been received. Campbell had done no act by which he placed it within the power of Lewis to occasion the loss. On the other hand, the appellant had delivered to him the note and mortgage drawn in such form he could use them in any manner he saw fit. The appellant having placed it in the power of Lewis to commit the wrong is the one that should bear the loss, rather than Campbell.

There is much discussion in the briefs relative to the previous transactions of Campbell with A. Robinson & Co. It is true that, for a number of years, that company had either sold him securities, or, from time to time, had made loans for him. There is no evidence, however, that would justify the inference that A. Robinson & Co. was the general agent of Campbell for the purpose of making investments. Each transaction was considered separately, and was approved by Campbell.

There is also a somewhat extended discussion in the briefs over the question whether the note which Campbell received was a negotiable or a nonnegotiable instrument, but this question does not seem to us to be material. The case is ruled by the principle of law above stated.

[3] We will now consider the case of the appellant and respondent Scott. The latter was an army officer, and, at different times, stationed in the Philippines, and in various parts of the United States. Dating from about the year 1909, A. Robinson & Co. had handled a number of transactions for him, but in each case the particular transaction was submitted to Scott, and he either approved or disapproved of it. If he had money coming in to loan at times, he would write A. Robinson & Co., and ask relative to that company's investing or loaning the same for him. If he had money coming to him of which A. Robinson & Co. was cognizant, that company, at times, would write and suggest another loan or investment. At the time the appellant delivered to A. Robinson & Co. the note and mortgage which were dated September 1, 1914, that company did not have possession of the Scott note. In the month of August, prior to the time of the due date of the note, Scott wrote A. Robinson & Co. that, if the mortgage was to be taken up on October 13th when it became due, he would send the note to the State Bank of Seattle for collection. A. Robinson & Co. did not have possession of the note, the right to release the mortgage, or the possession of a release signed by Scott. The money received from Campbell was credited upon the books of the company to him, and not to Scott. There was no act of Scott which placed it in the power of Lewis to cause the loss, unless: (a) A. Robinson & Co. was Scott's general fiscal agent; (b) the right to collect and remit the interest authorized the collection of the principal; or (c) the fact that it was payable at the office of the company was sufficient authorization for its collection. The evidence will not sustain a contention that A. Robinson & Co. was the general agent of Scott for the purpose of making investments. As already stated, every transaction was submitted to Scott for his approval or disapproval. For some months prior to the time when the note and mortgage became due, there had been no transaction between him and the company. The mere fact that A. Robinson & Co. had collected the interest from time to time, as it became due, would not authorize that company, unless it had possession of the note to collect the principal. Jones on Mortgages, § 964; Dwight v. Lenz, 75 Minn. 78, 77 N. W. 546; Chandler v. Pyott, 53 Neb. 786, 74 N. W. 263; White v. Meeker County Bank, 78 Minn. 286, 80 N. W. 1125.

[4] The fact that the mortgage recited that it was payable at the office of A. Robinson & Co. would not authorize that company to collect the principal thereof without the possession of the note. Ward v. Smith, 7 Wall. 447, 19 L. Ed. 207; Stansbury v. Embrey, 128 Tenn. 103, 158 S. W. 991, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 980; Hollinshead v. John Stuart & Co., 8 N. D. 35, 77 N. W. 89, 42 L. R. A. 659.

[5, 6] Attention has been especially directed to a letter written October 22, 1914, from Ft. Du Pont, Del., which bears Scott's name, but which was not signed by him. In this letter, the coupon for the last payment on the mortgage, which became due on the 13th of that month, was inclosed. The letter assumed that, since the mortgage became due on the 13th, "the same has been closed." Following this was a direction to remit with draft on New York, but that letter cannot be construed as an authorization to collect the principal, since A. Robinson & Co. had been advised that the note would be sent to the State Bank of Seattle for collection, and it was subsequently sent to that bank. But if it be assumed that A. Robinson & Co. had authority to collect the principal indebtedness, when it became due, this would not constitute that company the agent of Scott for the purpose of making collection prior to the due date of the note and mortgage. Lester v. Snyder, 12 Colo. App. 351, 55 Pac. 613; Jones on Mortgages (7th Ed.) § 964; Park v. Cross, 76 Minn. 187, 78 N. W. 1107, 77 Am. St. Rep. 630.

[7] From the facts stated, it appears that the note and mortgage became due on the 13th day of October, 1914. The new mortgage and note were executed and delivered to A. Robinson & Co. on the 1st day of September, 1914, and the $4,000 check was received from Campbell on the 8th day of that month. A. Robinson & Co., after receipt of the check from Campbell, did not enter it on their books as a credit upon Scott's account. It follows, therefore, that as against Scott, the appellant must sustain the loss.

Referring again to the question of agency, it is doubtless true that A. Robinson & Co. was the agent of each of the three parties for certain purposes. The only commission paid was by the appellant. Scott and Campbell were rather regarded by the company as customers, to whom securities might be sold, or from whom money could be obtained in making a loan; the commission, if any, in each instance coming from the person securing the loan, or the extension of a loan. The company had been the agent of Scott for a number of specific transactions, and for the purpose of collecting interest upon the $4,000 note, as well as other notes. It was not his agent for the purpose of releasing mortgages, or receiving payment of the principal indebtedness. The company, so far as the appellant and Campbell are concerned, was undoubtedly the agent of both for the purpose of completing a transaction such as filing a mortgage for record, seeing that the Scott mortgage was released, and returning the papers to the parties respectively entitled thereto, or retaining the same for safe-keeping.

The record in this case has been given careful attention; the greater portion of it having been read a second time. While it is regrettable that an innocent party must suffer a considerable loss, yet, under the law and the facts, this is a burden which must be borne by the appellant in this case.

The judgment will be affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, CHADWICK, and MORRIS, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 324)

GARDNER v. FREDERICK et al.

(No. 13623.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. CONTRACTS 🔑94(1)—FRAUD—FAILURE TO PERFORM FUTURE PROMISE.

Where the promisor undertakes to do something in the future, failure to perform the promise is not fraudulent, unless there was an intention at the time of making it not to perform.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 420, 428, 430, 1160.]

2. DEEDS 🔑165—CONDITIONS—SUPPORT OF GRANTOR.

Where an aged parent conveys property to a son or daughter or other person in consideration of future support and care, and there is a willful and wrongful withholding of such support and care, in equity the contract may be rescinded, or, if rescission cannot be had, an action for damages will lie, though when the promise was made there was no intention not to perform it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 521.]

3. DEEDS 🔑162—CONDITIONS—SUPPORT OF GRANTOR.

Where an aged parent conveys land to her children in consideration of support and care, she is entitled to more than necessary physical comforts, the respectful and considerate treatment naturally prompted by the filial affection of a child.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. § 519.]

4. TRIAL 🔑105(1)—INSTRUCTIONS—SUBMISSION OF ERRONEOUS THEORY OF DAMAGES.

Where evidence as to damages went in without objection that it did not tend to prove the correct measure, and defendants met the evidence by counter evidence of the same character, it was not error to submit the question of damages to the jury on the theory of damages adopted by the parties, though not the correct legal theory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 260, 261, 266.]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑999(1)—REVIEW — VERDICT.

Where the cause was tried to a jury, its verdict must control on appeal as to the facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3912-3915, 3917-3921.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Spokane County; Bruce Blake, Judge.

Action by Sarah Elizabeth Gardner against Minnie Alice Frederick and Albert E. Frederick, husband and wife. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

See, also, 160 Pac. 754.

Clyde H. Belknap and Fred M. Williams, both of Spokane, for appellants. John M. Gleeson, of Spokane, for respondent.

MAIN, J. This action grew out of the alleged failure of the defendants to support and care for the plaintiff, in accordance with the terms of a contract made between the parties for that purpose. The cause was tried to the court and a jury, and resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $4,000. Motion for a new trial being made and overruled, a judgment was entered upon the verdict. From this judgment, the appeal is prosecuted.

The facts necessary to an understanding of the questions presented are substantially as follows: For many years prior to the year 1909 the respondent and her husband owned and occupied a tract of land in Spokane county, consisting of approximately 100 acres. During the year 1909 Mr. Gardner died. The land mentioned was community property. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner had eight children, all of whom were grown and married at the time of their father's decease. After the death of Mr. Gardner, the mother and the children mutually entered into an arrangement whereby a mortgage in the sum of $6,000 was placed upon the farm, and the money distributed to the children. On the 27th day of March, 1913, the farm was conveyed to the appellants, the purchase price being $9,500. Of this purchase price $6,000 consisted in the assumption of the mortgage, $1,500 was distributed to the children, and $2,000 was paid to the respondent or her agent. On or about April 1, 1913, the respondent loaned to the appellants $1,500 of the $2,000 mentioned, and took a note therefor, due ten years after date, with 8 per cent. interest, payable semiannually. A written contract was also made at this time providing for the support and care of the respondent by the appellants during her lifetime. The consideration mentioned in this contract for such care and support was the release in whole or in part from the liability upon the note, depending upon the time of the death of the respective parties. Soon after the conveyance of the farm the appellants took possession thereof, and during the latter part of the month of July the respondent began making her home with them. This relation continued for a period of four or five months, when, the respondent being dissatisfied, the written contract above mentioned was canceled by mutual consent, as well as the will which had been made in aid thereof. After leaving the home of the appellants, the respondent lived about with her other children, and some time during the year 1915 the present action was instituted.

[1, 2] It is first claimed that the trial court should have taken the case from the jury upon the motion made by the appellants, because the complaint does not allege and the evidence does not show that at the time the contract for care and support was made there was then a preconceived intention on the part of the appellants not to perform it. The performance of the contract with reference to care and support was, of course, to take place in the future. It is doubtless a general rule that, where the promisor undertakes to do something in the future, the failure to perform the promise is not fraudulent, unless there was an intention at the time of making it not to perform. That rule, however, is not applicable to cases of this kind. The rule in this state, as well as the great weight of authority, is to the effect that, where an aged parent conveys property to a son or daughter, or other person, in consideration of future support and care, and there is a willful and wrongful withholding of such support and care, in equity the contract may be rescinded, or, if rescission cannot be had, an action for damages will lie. Payette v. Ferrier, 20 Wash. 479, 55 Pac. 629; Gustin v. Crockett, 51 Wash. 67, 97 Pac. 1091; Hewett v. Dole, 69 Wash. 163, 124 Pac. 374; Patterson v. Patterson, 81 Iowa, 626, 47 N. W. 768; Bogie v. Bogie, 41 Wis. 209; Davis v. Davis, 135 Ga. 116, 69 S. E. 172; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 66 Hun (N. Y.) 177, 20 N. Y. Supp. 928; Shover, Administrator, et al. v. Myrick, 4 Ind. App. 7, 30 N. E. 207.

In this case rescission could not be had, because a portion of the land prior to the institution of the action had been sold and conveyed by the appellants to a third person. Under the authorities cited the action for damages could be maintained, if there was a willful and wrongful refusal to provide the care and support contracted for, even though at the time the promise was made there was not then, in the minds of the appellants, an intention not to perform it.

It is contended further that the evidence was not sufficient to take the case to the jury upon the question as to whether there had been a willful and wrongful failure on the part of the appellants to perform the contract. The respondent at the time the contract was made was approximately 72 years of age. The appellants were husband and wife, and Mrs. Frederick was the daughter of the respondent.

[3] It may be that there is no substantial evidence that the appellants failed to furnish the respondent, during the time that she resided with them, the necessary physical comforts, but in contracts of this character the law contemplates more than physical comfort. The aged parent is entitled to respectful and considerate treatment, such as would naturally be prompted by the filial affection of a child. Without setting out in detail here the testimony involving an apparently somewhat bitter controversy between near relatives, it may be said that the evidence was sufficient to justify the jury in believing that the appellants did not show to the respondent, during the time that she resided with them, that respectful and kindly consideration to which she was entitled. There is some evidence that there was a deliberate attempt to withhold from her that gentle sympathy which not only would be prompted by filial affection, but which the law, in cases of this character, demands.

It is also claimed that the contract for support was separate and distinct from the sale and transfer of the land. It is true that the contract for support deals only with the note, and does not refer to the land. There was, however, an abundance of evidence, to support the verdict of the jury, which went in without objection, to the effect that the care and support of the respondent during her lifetime was a part of the consideration for the conveyance of the farm. Whether this oral testimony was admissible, under the rule that does not permit a written contract to be varied by parol, is not here for consideration, and we express no opinion thereon. Had the testimony been objected to, the question would have been squarely presented.

Complaint is also made of the instruction given by the trial court, defining the measure of damages. If we correctly understand the objection to this instruction, it is that the court did not take into consideration the value of the benefits the contract and will conferred on the appellants, but the evidence shows without conflict that the written contract and will were canceled by mutual consent. The instruction correctly submitted to the jury the theory of the measure of damages upon which the case was tried.

[4] The evidence offered by the respondent as to the damages was not objected to, because it did not tend to prove the correct measure of damages. The evidence having gone in without objection, and the appellants having met this evidence by counter evidence of the same character, it was not error to submit the question to the jury upon the theory of damages adopted by the parties, even though it may not have been the correct legal theory.

As to whether the rule of damages, in cases of this character, is the difference between the market value of the land and the price paid, or the reasonable cost of the support and care of the aged person, during the life expectancy, no opinion is here expressed. That question was not raised in the trial court, and is not presented here.

[5] There are other assignments of error, but we think what has been already said covers all the questions in the case. It must not be forgotten that the cause was tried to a jury, and, even though, upon the record, we might be of a different opinion upon the facts, the verdict of the jury must control.

The judgment will be affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, CHADWICK, and MORRIS, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 386)

TALKINGTON v. WASHINGTON WATER POWER CO. (No. 13793.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. ELECTRICITY 🔑19(7)—INJURY TO INFANT—NEGLIGENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

For the jury is the question of negligence of an electric company, which maintained a highly charged uninsulated wire 34 feet above the ground, only a few inches above the comb of the roof of a large grain warehouse with a lean-to, the roof of the main part having slope of 32 degrees, and that of the lean-to extending to within 8 feet of the ground, and accessible from the top of cars on a side track, having a slope of only 16 degrees, boys of the town having in some degree been in the habit of playing on the roof, and a boy of ten, playing with others thereon, having like them taken off his stockings, and climbed to the top of roof, and taken hold of the wire, thinking, as he said, that it was a telephone wire.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 11.]

2. ELECTRICITY 🔑19(12)—INJURY TO INFANT—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

The question of the contributory negligence of the boy is also for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Electricity, Cent. Dig. § 11.]

3. DAMAGES 🔑132(8)—PERSONAL INJURY—EXCESSIVE VERDICT.

A verdict for $5,500 for injury to a boy ten years old, by grasping a high power electric wire, both hands being severely burned, from which he suffered great pain for two months, requiring dressing by a physician 43 times, and leaving them deformed and their usefulness permanently impaired to a considerable extent, cannot be said to be so excessive as to show prejudice and passion of jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. § 379.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Lincoln County; Joseph Sessions, Judge.

Action by J. A. Talkington, guardian ad litem for Willard Talkington, a minor, against the Washington Water Power Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

See, also, 160 Pac. 754.

Post, Russell, Carey & Higgins, of Spokane, for appellant. Merritt, Lantry & Merritt, of Spokane, for respondent.

PARKER, J. The plaintiff seeks recovery of damages for personal injuries for his ward, Willard Talkington, a minor ten years old, claimed as the result of the negligence of the defendant power company in maintaining the highly charged uninsulated wires of its electric power line at a place where children would be likely to come in contact therewith, and where Willard Talkington did come in contact therewith and received serious injury. Trial in the superior court for Lincoln county resulted in verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiff, awarding damages against the defendant in the sum of $5,500, from which it has appealed to this court.

At the time in question appellant maintained in the town of Harrington an electric power line carrying about 2,300 volts. This line was supported on poles in the usual manner, except where it passed over the comb of the roof of a grain warehouse belonging to a milling company some 34 feet above the ground in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction, the comb of the roof running east and west. The line passed over the comb near the center of the building. It descended somewhat from the poles to a point 15 inches above the comb of the roof, where it was attached to a bracket as upon the poles, the warehouse and bracket thus serving the purpose of a pole. The warehouse with its lean-to was about 60 feet wide and some 200 feet long. The lean-to ran the entire length of the south side of the building, and was some 12 feet wide. The roof on the main portion of the building had a slope of 32 degrees, while the roof of the lean-to had a slope of only 16 degrees. The eaves of the lean-to at the southwest corner were only 8 feet above the ground, while at the southeast corner they were about the height of an ordinary box car above the ground. This was because of the contour of the ground along the south side of the building. A spur track of the Great Northern Railway ran along parallel to and near the east end of the building, so that when a box car was standing on this track opposite the end of the lean-to its top was nearly level with the lower part of the roof and only 32 inches therefrom. Because of this one could easily step from the roof of the car onto the roof of the lean-to. Boys of the town had been in some degree in the habit of playing on the roof of the lean-to and also on the roof of the main building on that side for some time previous to the time Willard Talkington received his injuries and previous to the time when appellant attached its line to the comb of the building. It is not very plain as to how frequently boys played upon the roof of the building, but in any event it occurred several times during the period two or three years previous to the accident here involved, according to the testimony of several witnesses. The boys would gain access to the roof by climbing onto freight cars standing at the end of the lean-to and easily stepping therefrom onto the roof, it being a common occurrence for box cars to stand there. The boys would also sometimes gain access to the roof by leaning a plank from the ground up onto the eaves of the lean-to at the southwest corner, where the eaves were only 8 feet from the ground. There is no direct evidence in the record showing that appellant or any of its agents had any actual knowledge of the fact that boys played upon the roof, though plainly appellant was charged with knowledge of the surrounding physical facts relative to the accessibility of the roof. There is some evidence that boys had been directed to keep away from the warehouse by the milling company's agents. Yet a number of the boys who played upon the roof seemed to have never been so ordered to keep away. While the warehouse was not the property of appellant, it apparently was maintaining its wires upon the roof by consent of the owner. One of the things the boys did in playing upon the roof was to take off their shoes while on the comparatively flat lean-to roof and climb up the steeper portion of the roof to the comb. This apparently could be done with comparative ease by a boy using both his hands and feet. Yet there would be somewhat of a spirit of competition between them as to who could walk up the steeper roof without using his hands. We are not advised as to how often this occurred, but apparently about as often as boys went upon the roof to play. At the time Willard Talkington was injured several boys, including himself, climbed upon the roof over a box car standing at the end of the lean-to. Some had climbed up the steeper part of the roof to the comb, including Willard Talkington. He reached the comb near appellant's power line wires, and evidently while standing he took hold of one or possibly two of the wires to steady himself, when he received a severe shock, grievously burning both his hands, falling unconscious, and rolling down the roof, where he was caught by another boy on the roof of the lean-to. There is some testimony indicating that Willard Talkington was warned to keep away from the wires, but there is room for argument that this warning was given him at the very instant he did so. He himself testified upon the trial that he thought they were telephone wires. What his belief was in this respect must be viewed, of course, in the light of his being only ten years old.

[1, 2] It is contended by counsel for appellant that in the light of these facts it should be absolved from negligence, and that Willard Talkington should be held guilty of contributory negligence, and that the trial court erred in declining to so rule as a matter of law upon appellant's motions, which were timely made in that behalf. The question of appellant's negligence and Willard Talkington's contributory negligence are so intimately related that it is necessary to consider them together. It may be that appellant would be held free from negligence as a matter of law, viewed as affecting its liability to mature persons, and yet its negligence be such as would call for the leaving of that question to the jury for decision as affecting its liability to minors of tender years. The same, in substance, may be said relative to the question of contributory negligence of a mature person as compared with the question of contributory negligence of a minor of tender years.

We are to remember that, while this power line was maintained at a place where it might be well argued mature persons would not be expected to go so as to come in contact with it, and also that its appearance would in some degree suggest danger to mature persons, it was nevertheless a very dangerous, silent, and even deadly agency, and one which did not display its dangers and make them so readily discernible as running machinery, high places unprotected by railings, or other similarly apparent dangers. These suggestions show the wisdom of the rule that the degree of care required of the owner of a power line highly charged with electricity to so place it that it will not come in contact with people is greater than in the placing and using of machinery and appliances which readily suggest their dangers. In Card v. Wenatchee Valley Gas & Elec. Co., 77 Wash. 564, 567, 137 Pac. 1047, 1048, we quoted with approval from Croswell on the Law Relating to Electricity, at section 234, as follows:

> "The amount of care necessary varies with the danger which is incurred by negligence, for a prudent and reasonable man increases his care with the increase of danger. If but little danger is incurred, as, for instance, when the wires carry only a harmless electric current, such, for instance, as the telegraph or telephone current, only ordinary care may be required. While if the wires carry a strong and dangerous current of electricity, so that negligence will be likely to result in serious accidents, and perhaps death, or if a harmless wire is in dangerous proximity to a high tension wire, a very high degree of care, indeed, the highest that human prudence is equal to, is necessary. This is particularly true of electric light and electric railway wires, which carry a high tension current often of great danger. The rule is thus stated in a case in Massachusetts: 'The vigilance and attention required must conform to the nature of the emergency and the danger to which others may be exposed, and is always to be judged of according to the subject-matter, the danger and force of the material under the defendant's charge.'"

Having this general rule in mind, together with the fact of the tender age of Willard Talkington, the accessibility of this roof as a place for boys to play, the attractiveness of it as a place for boys to play, and the proximity to the roof of appellant's highly charged power line, we cannot escape the conclusion that there is room for reasonable minds to reach different conclusions both as to appellant's negligence in placing its power line wires there and Willard Talkington's contributory negligence in going there, even though he be technically a trespasser as against the milling company, the owner of the warehouse.

Our decision in Sweeten v. Pacific Power & Light Co., 88 Wash. 679, 153 Pac. 1054, we think, lends support to this conclusion though that case may be differentiated somewhat from this case. The situation there involved was as follows: The light company's highly charged power line passed along a public alley about 27 feet from the ground, supported upon poles in the usual way. There was a cottonwood tree growing in the alley, so that its branches came in contact with the power line wires and wore off the insulation. Boys were accustomed to play in the alley and about the tree and also to climb the tree. The light company was regarded as being charged with knowledge of this fact. A boy climbing the tree in play came in contact with the wires, was injured, and the light company was held liable. It seems to have been the duty of the light company under its ordinance to cause its wires to be insulated. In holding the light company liable, Judge Ellis, speaking for the court, said:

> "The appellant's negligence was established beyond a reasonable doubt. It permitted a highly charged wire, passing through a tree in a public alley where it knew children were wont to play, to become uninsulated and so remain for weeks and, as the evidence shows, possibly for years. It was not only charged with knowledge of the fact that the insulation was worn, since the undisputed evidence shows that any sort of inspection would develop that fact, but it also had actual notice of that fact, and had been warned of the incident danger. It took no steps to remedy the situation."

While this court was not there deciding the question as a matter of law, this quotation from the opinion indicates its views of how conclusive the proof was showing the light company's negligence. It seems to us that this view of the court touching the situation in that case is quite in harmony with and lends support to the view that the facts in this case are at least such as to make the question here presented one of fact for the jury to decide.

Counsel for appellant cite and place reliance upon the decision of this court in Graves v. Washington Water Power Co., 44 Wash. 675, 87 Pac. 956, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 452. In that case a boy was injured by a highly charged electric wire of the company attached to the framework of a bridge some 35 feet above the ground. He was climbing up the latticed iron pier after some birds' nests, which were up under the bridge above the wire. Coming in contact with the wire, he was injured by the electric current. While there is evidence in that case showing that boys had played to some extent around the foot of the bridge piers, apparently none had ever been known to climb up there. We also think it was somewhat more difficult for boys to climb up where the injured boy did climb than for boys to go upon the roof of this warehouse, and that it was somewhat more unlikely that boys would climb up the bridge pier than that they would go upon the roof of this warehouse to play.

In a note to Temple v. McComb City Elec. Light & Power Co., 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 449, the learned editors, having there collected and reviewed a number of decisions touching this question, observed:

> "As to the duty to guard against danger to children in placing electric wires, no rule can be enunciated that would be accepted by all courts. As in the 'turntable' cases and those involving other 'attractive nuisances,' the authorities are in irreconcilable conflict. It would seem, however, that reason and humanity alike support the rule laid down in the above case, that those dealing with such an extremely dangerous agency as electricity should, in stringing their wires in places where it is reasonably probable that children will go, be charged 'with the very highest degree of skill and care' to protect the children from injury while in the vicinity of such places, even though they may be trespassers."

There are a great many decisions of the courts dealing with this question from which it could be well argued both that the situation here involved presents a question of law and that it presents a question of fact. We have carefully examined all of them cited by counsel for appellant and also others coming to our attention, and as we view them they all depend upon their own peculiar facts, and that it is next to impossible to formulate any general rule that can become a trustworthy guide in cases which are very close to the line between questions of law and fact, other than the rule that to become a question of law it must be one in the deciding of which all reasonable minds must necessarily agree. We cannot see our way clear to hold that this is such a case. We are of the opinion that the trial court correctly left the questions of defendant's negligence and of Willard Talkington's contributory negligence to the jury.

[3] It is contended that the verdict is excessive to the extent of showing prejudice and passion on the part of the jury. We are unable to so decide from the record before us. Both of Willard Talkington's hands were severely burned, from which he suffered great pain for a period of some two months. The wounds required dressing by a physician 43 times. Both hands were left deformed, and their usefulness permanently impaired to a considerable extent. We cannot see the hands. They were exhibited to the court and the jury upon the trial, and the impairment of their use exhibited to the court and jury by his efforts at picking up and taking hold of articles.

Contentions made relative to instructions given and refused we think are not well founded. What we have already said, we think, answers these contentions.

The judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and HOLCOMB and FULLERTON, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 284)

GARRISON et ux. v. NEWTON et ux.

(No. 13679.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 16, 1917.)

1. Appeal and Error 🔑1041(3)—Harmless Error.

In action to rescind a land purchase contract for delay in perfecting title, amendment of defendants' answer to allege that defendants had been busily engaged in perfecting title to the land, etc., and asking judgment against plaintiffs by way of cross-complaint, objected to because of surprise, and involving a new issue, was not prejudicial error, where plaintiffs were offered continuance on terms, but preferred to go to trial; the amendment being germane to the issues in the case.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4108.]

2. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑144(2)—Perfecting Title—Reasonable Time.

Where a contract of sale of land does not make time of its essence, the vendor is entitled to reasonable time in which to perform his contract as to perfecting title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 272–274.]

3. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑144(2) — Action by Vendee to Rescind—Evidence.

In action by vendee to rescind because of delay by vendors in perfecting title, evidence held to show that the delay of 2½ months complained of was warranted by consent of vendees to vendors' efforts to perfect such title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 272–274.]

4. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑101—Time for Complying with Contract.

After a vendor has waived the essence clause of a contract, the purchaser will not be in default until after a demand has been made upon him for compliance with his contract and a reasonable time has elapsed in which to comply with the demand.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 170–174.]

5. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑114—Perfecting Title—Waiver of Delay.

A vendee, having encouraged vendors' efforts to perfect title, and having acquiesced in delay in perfecting title, may not assert a breach of the contract on vendors' part in failing to convey at the time agreed on.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 202–204.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Kenneth Mackintosh, Judge.

Action by Harry B. Garrison and wife against William Newton and wife. From judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

William L. Waters, of Seattle, for appellants. John H. Perry, of New York City, and Dan Landon, of Seattle, for respondents.

FULLERTON, J. On November 29, 1912, William Newton and Katherine S. Newton, his wife, as vendors, entered into an executory contract with Harry B. Garrison and Katherine S. Garrison, his wife, as purchasers, for the sale of—

"the following described lands and premises, situated in Wasco county, state of Oregon, to wit: The east 25 acres of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 21 in township 1 north, range 13 east."

The terms and conditions agreed upon were as follows:

"The consideration therefor is the sum of $2,000.00, of which $500.00 has been paid in cash, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, $500.00 shall be paid on or before one year after the date hereof, $500.00 shall be paid on or before two years after the date hereof and $500.00 shall be paid on or before three years after the date hereof, said deferred payments to bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable annually, principal and interest to be paid at the bank of French & Co. in Dalles City, Oregon.

"In addition to the conveyance of said property from the first parties to the second parties, the first parties further agree to sell and convey, and do hereby sell and convey unto said second parties for said consideration above mentioned a right of way for a road from the northeast corner of said premises across property belonging to the first parties and described as the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 15, township 1 north, range 13 east, which said right of way shall be along the west line of said land last described, and shall be 16 feet in width, and the first parties shall put the same in passable condition for traffic without expense to the second parties, provided, always, that in case the right of way along the west line of said land should not be practical or satisfactory to the second parties, then said right of way shall be located across said premises along a practical and satisfactory route to be determined by said parties. Otherwise the third man to be selected.

"The first parties hereby covenant and agree to and with the second parties that upon payment of the sums of money hereinbefore mentioned that they will execute and deliver to said second parties, their heirs or assigns, or any one designated by them, a good and sufficient warranty deed for said premises above mentioned, and a deed for a right of way for a road as above provided, which said deed shall warrant the said premises free and clear from all incumbrances whatsoever, and the first parties agree to furnish to said second parties without additional compensation an abstract of title for said premises showing the same to be the property of the first party free and clear from incumbrances thereon.

"The second parties for themselves, their heirs and assigns, agree to and with the first parties to pay the sums of money above mentioned at the times and places hereinbefore stated."

The plaintiffs promptly met all payments falling due, until final payment of $500, with interest, falling due November 29, 1915, which sum they deposited in escrow on that date in the banking house of French & Co., and made demand for their deed and abstract of title. A deed from defendants to plaintiffs and an abstract of title were transmitted by defendants to the bank. Examination of the deed showed that it had been drawn upon a form used in the state of Washington, and was inadequate under the Oregon laws. An examination of the abstract disclosed that there was outstanding against the property a mortgage for $1,000, that the land had been sold for the delinquent taxes of 1912, and of the subsequent taxes none except those for the year 1913 had been paid. The vendors were notified of the defects in the title, and demand was made that the title be cleared and a quitclaim deed executed for the right of way for a road provided for by the contract. At the same time a proper form of deed for the state of Oregon and a quitclaim deed for the right of way were prepared and forwarded to the defendants for execution. The deeds were executed by defendants and returned to the bank, but defendants insisted the mortgage was only a technical matter, and they would have it removed just as soon as they were in a position to do so. Finally plaintiffs, on January 18, 1916, about 50 days after they had deposited their final payment in escrow, notified defendants that, in view of their failure to perform, plaintiffs had determined to rescind the contract, and this action for rescission was instituted on February 10, 1916. The court found that plaintiffs were not entitled to a rescission, and gave judgment against them for the final payment due under the contract. The plaintiffs appeal.

[1] Appellants assign as error the action of the court in permitting respondents to amend their answer on the trial by setting up an allegation that respondents had, from November 29, 1915, to February 16, 1916, with the full knowledge and consent of appellants, been busily engaged in perfecting title to the land in controversy, and that they had been delayed by reason of the dilatoriness of the attorney who represented both the mortgagee and the appellants; and by way of cross-complaint asked judgment against appellants for the sum of $535. The amendment was objected to on the ground of surprise and that it involved a new issue after the issues had been fully settled. The court offered to grant a continuance, on terms, to abide the final outcome. The appellants, in view of the ruling as to terms, preferred to go to trial. We think there was no prejudicial error committed. The amendment was germane to the issues in the case, and its allowance does not show any abuse of the discretion reposed in trial judges in such matters. Moreover, the plaintiffs proceeded with the trial without taking advantage of a continuance offered them by the court.

The only other error assigned is the granting of a nonsuit against appellants. This involves a consideration of the evidence, which is made up in large part of the correspondence passing between the parties and their attorneys, and necessitates a frequent recurrence to dates. The evidence shows that at the time of entering into the contract in 1912, respondents were the owners of some 68 acres of land in Wasco county, Or., upon which there was a mortgage of $1,000 to the Oregon State Land Board. In selling appellants 25 acres of this land the contract provided for a right of way 16 feet wide across the remaining 40, since otherwise appellants would have no outlet to the public highway. In June, 1915, respondents conveyed the 40-acre tract to one Payne, subject to the mortgage to the Oregon State Land Board and subject to his agreement with the appellants for a right of way across this tract. Payne gave respondents a purchase-money mortgage for $4,200 on the land thus conveyed to him. Some time in November, 1915, prior to the maturity of the contract between appellants and respondents, the latter, by letter, began efforts to secure the release of the 25-acre tract from the State Land Board mortgage. On November 30, 1915, the board responded as follows:

"Replying to yours of the 27th inst., in order to secure release of 25 acres from your mortgage, it will be necessary for you to take the matter up with W. H. Wilson, of The Dalles, attorney for the board in Wasco county, and when his recommendation is received as to the amount necessary to be paid, the matter will be submitted to the board for consideration."

On the same date as the letter from the board to respondents, Wilson, as the attorney employed by appellants to examine the title, wrote respondents as follows:

"Yesterday Henry B. Garrison was here to close up his contract with you. * * * He deposited the balance due from him, namely, $535.00, in the bank of French & Co., with directions to the bank to pay the money over to you upon the receipt of a deed for the land and a quitclaim for the right of way for a road and an abstract for the 25 acres showing clear title. This morning French & Co. advised me that they had received the deed. I have examined the deed and I find that it is on a Washington blank, and that it is not good in this state. I have, therefore, prepared a new deed on an Oregon form, which I am sending herewith. Will you and Mrs. Newton please kindly execute this deed * * * and forward it to French & Co. I have also prepared a quitclaim deed for the right of way for a road mentioned in your contract. * * * The 25-acre tract is covered by the state mortgage for $1,000, and before Mrs. Garrison can accept the deed from you the 25 acres must be released from the state mortgage. I do not know what the state land board will require as a payment in order to release this tract, but a payment of some kind will have to be made. I imagine that it will not be less than $250.00, probably more than that amount."

On December 3d, respondents replied as follows:

"I have received your deeds and complied with your request. Now, regarding the state mortgage. The parties now owning the land object to me paying off the mortgage, as they bought the land subject to the state loan. So you can see my position, while I am willing to do anything I can to satisfy Mrs. Garrison. I understand the state of Oregon does not want their money, as long as the security is ample, and in this case there is no question as to the amount of security. Now, Mr. Wilson, I hope you will see your way clear to either release the 25 acres or accept the abstract without any payment on mortgage, as the abstract is good except a technical point."

This letter was answered by Wilson on December 9th, to the effect that the board would not release the 25 acres without a payment of some kind, and suggesting that respondents pay off the whole mortgage of $1,000 to the state and protect themselves by taking an additional mortgage for that sum from Payne. Respondents replied on December 11th, as follows:

"In reply to yours of recent date will say in answering your suggestion of paying off part of the mortgage, it seems as it would complicate matters considerably and I hope there will be some way found that we can get around this matter. As to paying the full amount of the mortgage, I am not in a position to do that at present, as you know money matters are a little close with all of us and as you know records show I sold that 40 acres subject to this mortgage to Mr. Payne, it would be very unjust to Mr. Payne for me to foreclose this mortgage, which I could not do. Now, Mr. Wilson, would you accept a contract from me guaranteeing and protecting Mr. Garrison in regard to the loan until I can pay off this mortgage, which I will do just as soon as I get payments from Mr. Payne. You know, I am holding a $4,000.00 second mortgage on that place. This contract can be made A1. Or if I will have the 40 acres reappraised by some of the best citizens and farmers of your community and their reappraisement shows ample security for the thousand dollars will you release the 25 acres, as we understand the matter is now up to you? Of course, this will be extra expense to me, but I am willing to bear this extra expense in order to adjust matters, providing Mr. Garrison will not accept the contract above mentioned.

"Hoping one of the above suggestions will meet with your approval, I am."

On December 16th Wilson wrote respondents that the land board would not release the 25 acres without some kind of a payment, and on the following day again wrote them as follows:

"Mr. Garrison objects to the title of the 25 acres which you sold to him because it is covered by the mortgage held by the state land board for $1,000, and also the property was sold for delinquent taxes for 1912, amounting to $14.60. Of course, these objections can be overcome by your procuring a release of the 25 acres from the state land board mortgage and by redeeming from the tax sale. Mr. Garrison objects to the right of way because the 40 acres across which the right of way runs is covered by the mortgage of the state land board for $1,000; also the second mortgage to you for $4,000, and it has not been opened up to travel as required by the agreement. As I understand Mr. Garrison, he refuses to accept either the deed for the 25 acres or the deed for the right of way for the road for the reasons stated above."

Nothing further was done by respondent William Newton until after his return to Seattle from a business trip to Spokane, when on January 10, 1916, he wrote Wilson as follows:

"I have just returned to the city and would now be very glad to have this matter straightened up. Now, Mr. Wilson, what is the least payment you will accept on the state mortgage or what will the state take in cash for the release of the 25 acres and right of way, leaving the mortgage as it is, as a foreclosure is possible this fall, and I would rather deposit a certain amount of cash to the state credit than effect the mortgage on Mr. Payne's account. I hope you will be as lenient as possible."

Wilson answered that the least payment he could recommend for the board to accept for a release would be $250. On January 14th, respondent Newton wrote Garrison as follows:

"Now, in regard to that abstract: I want to ask you if you will not accept the abstract as it is for the present, as it is absolutely good with only a technical point of law to cloud it, and that will be removed and everything clear just as soon as I am in a position to lift the $1,000.00 mortgage. You understand Mr. Payne assumed the full $1,000.00 state mortgage, when he bought the 40 acres, and which is on record at The Dalles, showing that the 40 acres is held for the $1,000.00 state loan. I hold a $4,000.00 as second mortgage, so am also responsible. There is absolutely no danger to you. Or, to convince you of my honest efforts, I will be willing for you to hold back $50.00 or $100.00 until I can lift the mortgage. Now, Mr. Garrison, there is nothing gained for you or me by holding out on these trivial points; we could both work to better advantage if we are friends and understand one another. I will do anything within reason that you may suggest, to show that I want to do what is right, but Mr. Garrison, I am not in a position just now to lift that mortgage, and I do want to get this matter straightened out satisfactory to both of us. Please let me hear from you at your earliest convenience regarding this matter."

In response to this letter appellant Garrison sent the following reply and notice of rescission:

"You evidently now wish me to pay the money and accept your deed with the $1,000.00 mortgage unpaid, or the land released from the mortgage, without the right of way being either selected or improved, with the $4,000.00 second mortgage against the right of way. In other words, to take the property practically as it is and look to Mr. Payne to pay off the mortgage and improve the right of way. * * * In the meantime, on Dec. 6, 1916, I had an opportunity to lease this property and again on Jan. 4, 1916; * * * to those people I have been unable to give any reply on account of the uncertainty about closing the deal. * * * In fact, you say that you are 'not in a position just now to lift that mortgage.' * * * In view of this admission on your part and your failure to say anything about the right of way, its selection or improvement, or the delinquent taxes still unpaid, I think it is useless for us to go any further. It seems that I have waited in vain since November 29, 1915, and kept my check good at bank since 29th of Nov. for you to get busy on. I have waited in vain. * * * We have accordingly, in view of all these facts, concluded to and do hereby give you notice that we have rescinded the contract."

On receipt of this notice of rescission respondents at once made application through Wilson, the local attorney for the board, for a release of the 25 acres, but the application was held up until early in February because of the failure of respondents to inclose a remittance of the amount tendered for a release. The board agreed to the release for the sum of $500, which sum was forwarded by respondents upon notification, and a release duly executed on February 16, 1916. The delinquent tax sale against the property was redeemed by respondents on February 28, 1916.

Respecting the right of way for a road over the Payne 40, there was in evidence a contract between Payne and appellants, executed on November 29, 1915, making provision therefor to the satisfaction of the latter. The appellants, however, claimed that Payne's mortgage of $4,200 to respondents created an incumbrance upon this right of way. To obviate this respondents executed a release of their mortgage as to the right of way agreed upon by Payne and appellants, and this release was recorded in Wasco county on February 16, 1916. The abstract of title was brought down to date and certified on March 3, 1916, showing clear title to the property in respondents.

[2] It will be observed that the title was not perfected until subsequent to the commencement of this action for rescission, but that the respondents in their answer tendered a sufficient warranty deed and abstract, showing clear title, and brought the same into court. It appears from the evidence that respondents were making an effort, beginning at a date prior to the maturity of the contract, to get their title in a shape to be satisfactory to the appellants. They did not understand in the beginning that more would be required of them than the securing of the release of the mortgage to the land board, and they were in good faith endeavoring to accomplish that. Learning that appellants insisted that respondents' mortgage from Payne was an incumbrance on appellants' right of way, and that the 1912 taxes were a lien against the land at the date of the contract, respondents promptly took measures to release their mortgage as against the right of way and to redeem from the lien of the 1912 taxes. They had completely cleared the title within 2½ months of the date on which appellants were entitled to a good and sufficient deed. The contract did not make time of its essence, and it is the rule of law in such cases that a vendor is entitled to a reasonable time in which to perform his contract. Whether or not the 2½ months taken by respondents to perfect their title was a reasonable time it is unnecessary to decide in view of the attitude of the parties. The appellants did not promptly rescind at the time when they were entitled to performance, but waived such right by their acquiescence in the efforts of respondents to effect a release of the mortgage incumbering the land. It is true the appellants asked respondents to pay off the blanket mortgage covering another tract in addition to that contracted for by appellants, and that, on being informed that this could not be done, they gave notice of rescission. But respondents were endeavoring all the time to get the 25-acre tract of appellants released from the mortgage at the smallest outlay possible for themselves, and, when they found that could not be done for less than a payment of $500 on the mortgage debt, they promptly paid that sum. That appellants were willing to grant time appears from the cross-examination of Mr. Garrison:

> "Q. After you learned there was a mortgage of $1,000 did you or did you not consent and approve of Mr. Newton's proceeding to get a release from that mortgage as to that 25 acres of land? A. Yes, I did. I wanted him to."

After allowing the respondents a month and a half in which to clear title, and just as arrangements to accomplish that object were being brought to a head, notice of intended rescission was given. Following closely upon the filing of the complaint, respondents were able to tender a perfect title so far as the incumbrances were concerned. Their legal title had always been perfect.

[3-5] We think there was sufficient showing of consent to delay in performance to warrant the time taken in which to perfect the title. There was no showing of injury to the appellants other than their statement in one of their letters that they would have been able to lease the land if they had had perfect title. The land had never been occupied or cultivated by appellants, but had evidently been bought for speculative purposes and allowed to lie idle. There was no proof of depreciation in value between the date for performance and the time of trial. The principle of law applicable to the state of facts existing in this case is expressed in Opsjon v. Engebo, 73 Wash. 324, 131 Pac. 1146, as follows:

> "The rule is well settled in this state that, after a vendor has waived the essence clause of a contract, the purchaser will not be in default until after a demand has been made upon him for a compliance with his contract and a reasonable time has elapsed in which to comply with the demand. Whiting v. Doughton, 31 Wash. 327, 71 Pac. 1026; Douglas v. Hanbury, 56 Wash. 63, 104 Pac. 1110, 134 Am. St. Rep. 1096; Walker v. McMurchie, 61 Wash. 489, 112 Pac. 500. We have also held that the time in which to perform a written contract may be waived as well as extended by parol. Whiting v. Doughton, supra. The appellant, having encouraged the prosecution of the suit to quiet title to the lot, and having acquiesced in the delay in tendering the deed and abstract of title, was not in a position to assert a breach of the contract upon the part of respondents in failing to convey the lot at the time agreed upon. Colpe v. Lindblom, 57 Wash. 106, 106 Pac. 634; Hawes v. Swanzey, 123 Iowa, 51, 98 N. W. 586; Bales v. Williamson, 128 Iowa, 127, 103 N. W. 150."

Respondents had a cross-complaint in the action, asking for judgment for $535, the amount of final payment and interest due on the contract. The appellants conceded that sum was due from them if the contract should be enforced.

We think the findings and conclusions of the court are supported by the evidence. The judgment based thereon is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, PARKER, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 313)

CLARK-LLOYD LUMBER CO. v. PUGET SOUND & CASCADE RY. CO.

(No. 13393.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Trial 🔑252(20)—Instructions—Sustaining Evidence.

In an action against a railroad for injury to a shore line, with consequential damages to plaintiff's mill site, an instruction going to the minimization of damages, or the cost of removing the cause of the injury, was improperly given in the absence of testimony to sustain it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 610.]

2. Damages 🔑163(4)—Evidence—Injury to Banks of Stream — Avoidable Consequences.

In an action by a lumber company against a railroad for injury to a shore line, with consequential damages to a boom site and a mill site, by dumping material along the shore in constructing the railroad, it is incumbent upon the lumber company, if it sustains the issue tendered by the road that the cause of the injury was removable, to show that the contour of the shore cannot be restored, and the amount of damages resulting to its property by reason of the road's interference with its boom site.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. § 459.]

3. Damages 🔑110—Measure of Damages—Injuries to Shore Line.

If the shore line of a stream usable by a lumber company as a boom and mill site cannot be restored by removal of waste matter dumped there by a railroad in building its road, and by the putting in of a "dead man," the lumber company's measure of damages is the difference in the value of the property before and after the work was done.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 273–278.]

4. Damages 🔑217 — Instructions—Injury to Shore Line.

In a lumber company's action against a railroad for damages to a shore line and consequential damages to boom and mill site, by dumping material along the shore, in considering the issue of damages, the jury should be cautioned to treat the property as a mill site and boom site, and not as an operating property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 556–559.]

5. Damages 🔑174(3)—Evidence—Injury to Shore Line.

In a lumber company's action against a railroad for injuries to a shore line, and consequential injuries to a mill site and boom site, by dumping material along the shore, to meet the issue whether plaintiff should have removed the cause of the injury the road may show the practicability of restoring the contour of the shore and the cost of restoration, including the cost of installing a "dead man."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 464, 467.]

6. Damages 🔑110—Measure of Damages—Avoidable Consequences.

If a lumber company whose shore line was injured by a railroad, a boom site, and mill site, suffering consequential injuries, could have removed the cause of the injury, the dumping of material along the shore, the measure of the lumber company's damage is the reasonable cost of doing the work.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Damages, Cent. Dig. §§ 273–278.]

En Banc. Appeal from Superior Court, Skagit County; Augustus Brawley, Judge.

On rehearing. Former opinion reversed, and judgment reversed and remanded for new trial.

For former opinion, see 159 Pac. 774.

Kerr & McCord, of Seattle, for appellant.
Ryan & Desmond, of Seattle, for respondent.

CHADWICK, J. Both parties to this action petitioned for a rehearing. Respondent contending for its judgment, and appellant contending that the question of the cost of removing the débris from the cove had not in fact been litigated and in reality had been expressly excluded by the court. We were possibly misled by what we conceived to be the position of appellant when the case came on for argument, but, be that as it may, we are convinced, after reargument and a re-examination of the record, that our final holding is not to be justified. The writer of the opinion fell into error.

However, we adhere to our former opinion, 159 Pac. 774, in so far as it construes the contract, and holds that respondent has a right of action which is not barred by the statute of limitations. We also hold to our ruling that the mill and boom are a part of one property, and that, if the value of the mill site is impaired by a destruction of the boom, it is a proper subject for a jury to inquire into.

From the beginning respondent and appellant have pursued their respective contentions upon widely divergent theories—the one that its property had been practically destroyed, and that the loss was incurable except by way of money damages; and the other that the contract gave it a right to construct its road even to the destruction of respondent's boom site; that the boom and mill were separate properties; that no damage had resulted, and if these defenses were not well sustained, the action was barred by the statute of limitations.

It is respondent's contention that the testimony amply sustains its assertion that its property has been all but destroyed, and that the true measure of damage is the difference in its value before and after appellant completed its work.

At the former hearing counsel for appellant argued that such was not the true measure of damages. Admitting the general rule, it was urged that it does not pertain if there is testimony tending to show that the cause of the injury is removable, in which event the law works an exception to the general rule, and will allow no more than the reasonable cost of removing the cause.

Counsel for respondent argues that all of the rights of appellant were saved by the trial judge, who instructed the jury on the issue of employing artificial means to restore the anchorage, as follows:

> "In considering the damage or injury, if any, sustained by the plaintiff in the removal of said stump or stumps, you will take into consideration whether or not another anchorage can be found or created which will furnish a firm and secure anchorage for said fin boom at a place which will serve as efficient as said stump or stumps and the cost of finding or creating such new anchorage and attaching said boom thereto."
>
> "In considering the question of whether or not the plaintiff has sustained any damage by the deposit of waste material in the indenture or cove in which the head of said boom was held, you will take into consideration the fact of whether or not the deposit of such waste material has affected or destroyed the efficiency of said indenture or cove as a protection for said fin boom and whether or not the same can by artificial means be made to furnish secure protection for said boom, and, if such can be done, the cost of constructing such artificial work."

But we hardly think this instruction goes to the possibility of removing the waste of rock and earth. Nor will it operate to save to respondent the right to insist upon its verdict. There are two all-sufficient reasons: First, There was no testimony to sustain it; and, second, the court, by an express ruling made in the course of the trial, withheld that issue from the jury. A witness was asked:

> "Q. What would be the expense per cubic yard to remove rock or earth from that location by scow? A. Well, the loose rock would be loaded on the scow for about 65 cents a yard, put on the scow. Q. Would there be any additional expense in unloading or depositing it from the scow?
>
> "By Mr. McCord: What rock are you referring to?
>
> "By Mr. Ryan: Any rock that might be necessary to remove from that vicinity. There is testimony that the cove was filled up.
>
> "By Mr. McCord: I object to all of this testimony as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial; not proper rebuttal testimony; not the proper measure of damages; not the proper measure of determination."

Whereupon the court ruled:

> "It is not the theory the plaintiff has prosecuted the action upon."

Counsel for respondent abandoned his inquiry, saying:

> "It is not but the defendant has offered some testimony to show conditions, it could be made in a state it was before for a nominal amount. If the court considers it not material in the light of the present case, we don't care to introduce it."

[1] Although the court afterwards permitted the witness to answer, the subject seems to have been dropped by counsel. As we now understand, counsel on both sides insist that this testimony did not go to the question whether the waste and débris could be removed, but was intended to show that appellant could have removed the waste material, when constructing its roadbed, by loading it upon a scow and hauling it away instead of dumping it over the bank, and into the river. With this understanding we feel no hesitation in overruling our former directions, and the judgment will be reversed upon the ground that there was no testimony to sustain the instruction going to the minimization of damages or the cost of removing the cause of the injury.

[2-4] It will be incumbent upon respondent, if it sustains the issue tendered, to show that the contour of the shore cannot be restored and the amount of damage resulting to its property by reason of appellant's interference with its boom site. If it be shown that the property cannot be restored by removal of the waste and the putting in of a "dead man," the measure of damage would be the difference in the value of the property before and after the work was done. In considering this issue, the jury should be cautioned to treat the property as a mill site and boom site, and not as an operating property; the mill which formerly occupied the ground having been burned before appellant constructed its road.

[5] To meet this issue, appellant may show, in addition to meeting the general issue, the practicability of restoring the contour of the shore and the cost of such restoration, including the cost of installing a "dead man."

[6] If the jury finds for the appellant upon this issue, the measure of damage will be the reasonable cost of doing the work.

Reversed, and remanded for a new trial.

ELLIS, C. J., and HOLCOMB, MOUNT, MAIN, WEBSTER, MORRIS, and PARKER, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 342)

HAYES v. OSBORN. (No. 13728.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER 🔑5—TENANT'S RIGHT TO RELIEF—STATUTE.

To entitle a tenant to relief by action under the forcible detainer statute (Rem. Code 1915, § 811), the dispossession or interference with the tenant's enjoyment of the premises by the landlord or one claiming under him need not be total; it being enough if the tenant is dispossessed of some material part of the premises.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Forcible Entry and Detainer, Cent. Dig. §§ 23-28.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑1008(2)—REVIEW—QUESTION OF FACT.

Whether the partial dispossession of a tenant by the employé of the grantee of the landlord was so material as to entitle the tenant to relief in his action under the forcible detainer statute (Rem. Code 1915, § 811) was a question of fact for the trial court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3957, 3964.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Grant County; R. S. Steiner, Judge.

Action by John F. Hayes against L. A. Osborn. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

David Herman, of Spokane, and C. G. Jeffers, of Ephrata, for appellant. Daniel T. Cross, of Ephrata, for respondent.

PARKER, J. This is an action wherein the plaintiff, Hayes, seeks restoration of the possession of premises from the defendant, Osborn, under our forcible detainer statute (section 811, Rem. Code), alleging that the defendant, during the temporary absence of the plaintiff from the premises and without right so to do, entered upon the premises, and took and retained possession thereof. Trial in the superior court for Grant county without a jury resulted in findings and judgment in favor of the plaintiff, from which the defendant has appealed to this court.

Respondent was in possession of the premises under a lease containing the following:

> "The first party [owner], her assignees, grantees, or heirs, have the right to go upon said premises at any time and perform such work thereon as she or they may deem advisable which does not prevent the second party from carrying out this lease."

The provisions of the lease seem to plainly give respondent the right to the possession of all the land and buildings thereon, subject only to this reserved right in the owner. Appellant claims to have gone upon the land as an employé of the grantee of the owner for the purpose of doing work thereon for him. Appellant took with him upon the land, stock, farm, implements, and household goods, and proceeded to occupy a vacant house and outbuildings upon the land, which house and outbuildings were not then being used by respondent, but which he had the right to use under the lease. Appellant also proceeded to plow up some of the pasture land which respondent had the right to use under the lease.

[1] The principal contention made in appellant's behalf is that appellant's acts were not such a material dispossession of respondent or not such an interference with his right of enjoyment of the premises as support the maintenance of this action in view of the terms of the lease. As to what extent of interference by a landlord with his tenant's enjoyment of the leased premises will support an action of this nature is sometimes quite difficult of determination, but we think the law is that the dispossession or interference with the tenant's enjoyment of the premises need not be a dispossession of all the premises to entitle the tenant to relief by this kind of an action. It is enough if the tenant is dispossessed of some material part of the premises. Jones, Landlord and Tenant, §§ 354, 355.

[2] The question here is one of fact. We do not see our way clear to interfere with the trial court's conclusion.

The judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, FULLERTON, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 309)

KALIVAS v. NORTHERN PAC. RY. CO.

(No. 13837.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 17, 1917.)

1. EVIDENCE 🔑594—TESTIMONY OF INTERESTED PARTY—BINDING FORCE.

Courts trying cases without juries are not bound by the uncontradicted testimony of an interested party; the court being authorized to weigh the evidence and to determine the facts the same as a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 2431.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑1012(1)—REVIEW—FINDINGS.

The findings of the trial court, which tried the case without a jury, will not be disturbed on a review de novo, unless the evidence preponderates against such findings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3990-3992.]

3. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑278(18)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—NEGLIGENCE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to its section hand, injured while riding on a gasoline propelled hand car when a wrench fell off the car and derailed it, evidence held insufficient to show defendant's negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 969, 971.]

4. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑210(2)—INJURIES TO SERVANT—ASSUMPTION OF RISK.

A railroad's section hand riding on a gasoline driven hand car in front on the lookout for trains assumed the risk of being injured when a wrench somehow fell off the front of the car and derailed it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 554.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Spokane County; Henry L. Kennan, Judge.

Action by George Kalivas against the Northern Pacific Railway Company, a corporation. From a judgment dismissing the case, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Hibschman, Dill & White, of Spokane, for appellant. Cannon & Ferris, of Spokane, for respondent.

MOUNT, J. Action for personal injuries. The case was tried to the court without a jury. At the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, and upon defendant's challenge to the sufficiency thereof, the trial court found that the defendant had not been guilty of negligence, that the plaintiff had assumed the risk, and, for those reasons, dismissed the case. The plaintiff has appealed.

It appears that on August 5, 1915, the appellant was in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, as a section hand. Part of his duties were to inspect the tracks upon the section, and to keep the lights and the section of the railway in order. On that date the appellant and the section foreman were proceeding over the section on a hand car equipped with a gasoline motor. The gasoline motor was contained in a box which ran the length of the car and through the center of it. On each side of the box was a trough, or rack, for the purpose of holding tools which were necessary to be carried upon the car. This car was the usual and customary car used on inspection trips. The tools carried upon it were a crowbar, a spike maul, a track wrench, and shovels. On the day of the accident, while upon an inspection trip, the appellant and the foreman of the section crew were riding upon the motorcar. The foreman was sitting about the middle of the car on the box covering the motor, engaged in operating the motor, while the appellant was sitting on the opposite side, on the front end of the car, with his feet hanging down in front. While the car was traveling at about ten miles an hour, on a slightly up grade, the track wrench which was upon the car fell off the front end of the car, derailing the car, and injuring the appellant. The evidence does not show upon which side of the motorcar the track wrench was placed. It does not show who placed the wrench upon the car.

[1, 2] It is argued by the appellant that it was the duty of the foreman to see that tools were properly placed upon the car, and that it was the foreman's duty to see that the tools did not fall off the car. We find no evidence in the record to show whose duty it was, upon this occasion, to see that this tool did not fall off the car. All that is shown is that the tool was on the car, that, in some unaccountable way, it fell off in front, when the car was going up grade, and that it derailed the car. Appellant contends that it was the duty of the foreman to look out for the safety of the appellant, and that, when it was shown that the wrench fell off the car and derailed the car, sufficient negligence was shown to warrant a finding in favor of the appellant. This argument is based upon the assumption that sufficient facts were shown to warrant the court in submitting the case to a jury. Conceding this to be so, if the case had been tried to a jury, it does not follow that, when the case is tried to the court without a jury, the court is bound to find as a jury might have found, because it is a well-established principle of law that courts are not bound by the uncontradicted testimony of an interested party. Gosline v. Dryfoos, 45 Wash. 396, 88 Pac. 634. The court is authorized to weigh the evidence, and to determine the facts the same as a jury, and the findings of the trial court will not be disturbed upon a review de novo, unless the evidence preponderates against such findings.

In the case of Andy Jim v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., 160 Pac. 295, in referring to this question, we said:

> "We are to be reminded that this is not a question of nonsuit at the close of plaintiff's evidence upon a jury trial; hence our problem is not whether the evidence was sufficient to carry the case to the jury, had it been tried before a jury, but whether or not the trial court correctly decided the case upon the merits as a question of fact; for the court's decision was, in effect, a decision upon the merits of appellant's entire case, though made in response to a motion for judgment against appellant made at the close of the evidence introduced in his behalf."

In Lambuth v. Stetson & Post Mill Co., 14 Wash. 187, 44 Pac. 148, this court said:

> "When the trial is before a jury, the court cannot weigh the testimony upon a motion for a nonsuit, for the reason that it cannot weigh it at any time; but when the trial is without a jury, the court must eventually weigh the testimony for the purpose of determining where the preponderance is, and there is no reason why it should not so weigh it at the earliest possible time when the rights of the plaintiff will not be cut off by its so doing; and when the plaintiff has introduced all of his proof and rested, no right of his will be cut off if the court then determines what has been proven. It cannot be presumed that plaintiff's case will be strengthened by the evidence put in by the defendant. If, when plaintiff had submitted his evidence, the defendant had rested without putting in any proof, it is clear that the court would have had to determine the questions of fact made by the pleadings upon a preponderance of the testimony. Hence, under the rule contended for by the appellant, the court might be put in the anomalous position of denying the motion for a nonsuit and immediately thereafter, upon the refusal of the defendant to put in any proof, deciding the case in his favor."

After carefully reading the record in this case, we are of the opinion that no negligence was shown on the part of the respondent. The car was the usual car used in such work, and operated as usual. The tools were the usual tools carried on such trips. They were loaded and carried as usual, and no tools had ever before fallen off under such conditions. It was not shown that it was the duty of the section foreman to guard the track wrench, and see that it did not fall off from the car. The section foreman was engaged in operating the little gasoline engine which ran the car. The appellant's position was on the front of the car, where he was required to look out for on-coming trains, and it was, no doubt, as much his duty to watch the wrench as it was the duty of the foreman. So far as the record shows, the fault, if any, in not observing the wrench, when it was about to fall, was that of the appellant, rather than of the section foreman.

[3, 4] We conclude, therefore, that the trial court did not err in finding that there was no negligence proven against the respondent, and that the appellant assumed whatever risk there was in riding on the car.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and PARKER, HOLCOMB, and FULLERTON, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 372)

DELLER v. LONG et ux. (No. 13771.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑671(3) — RECORD — QUESTION PRESENTED.

Where the record on appeal did not purport to contain all of the evidence, nor to be an agreed statement of facts, but stated that it merely contained plaintiff's evidence, the only question presented was whether the findings supported the judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2869.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Spokane County; Wm. A. Huneke, Judge.

Action by L. K. Deller against A. C. Long and wife. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Louis A. Dyar, of Spokane, for appellants. Harry M. Morey, of Spokane, for respondent.

WEBSTER, J. The single issue presented to the superior court in this case was whether the defendants by verbal contracts expressly guaranteed to pay plaintiff's assignors a fixed and stipulated net price for a number of boxes of apples which had been delivered to the defendants. It was the contention of the defendants that the apples had been received by them as commission brokers in the usual course of business, and that no guaranty of price had been made. The issue was purely one of fact. The trial court made findings to the effect that the contracts actually entered into between the parties were as alleged by the plaintiff, namely, that the defendants guaranteed a fixed net price for the apples. Defendants appeal.

The certificate to the statement of facts recited:

> "The above and foregoing statement of facts contains all of the material facts, matters and proceedings heretofore occurring in the plaintiff's case only in said cause, and not already a part of the record therein, and contains all of the plaintiff's evidence oral and written therein."

The record does not purport to contain all of the evidence produced upon the trial, nor does it appear from the certificate that such portion of the record as is brought here contains all of the material facts, matters, and proceedings occurring at the trial and not already a part of the record, nor that it contains such thereof as the parties have agreed to be all that are material. Under such a certificate, it must be presumed that the statement does not include all of the material facts. Taylor v. Andres, 83 Wash. 684, 145 Pac. 991; State ex rel. Miller v. Seattle, 45 Wash. 691, 89 Pac. 152; Kirby v. Collins, 6 Wash. 297, 32 Pac. 1060.

In this condition of the record, it is impossible to try the case de novo on the facts. The findings clearly support the judgment, and this is the only question we are at liberty to review. Pack v. Peabody, 58 Wash. 76, 107 Pac. 839; Lohman v. Claussen, 55 Wash. 408, 104 Pac. 624.

We conclude that the judgment must be affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MORRIS, MAIN, and CHADWICK, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 394)

LAUER v. FREUDENTHAL. (No. 13796.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. COURTS 🔑475(5) — COMITY—PENDING ACTION IN ANOTHER STATE.

In an action alleging a decree and stipulation for the appointment of a receiver and settlement of property rights in a divorce action in Montana and praying for a judgment for one-half the value of property alleged to have been concealed by the defendant, it not being alleged that any of the property so secreted was or ever had been in the state of Washington, and no effort having been made to reach any specific property belonging to defendant in the state of Washington, and it appearing that the divorce action was still pending in Montana, and that by express provision in the decree plaintiff is given permission to apply to that court to secure her rights in any property which defendant may have fraudulently concealed when the property settlement was made, and that the identical matter attempted to be litigated in this state had already been considered by the court in Montana, and that no property belonging to respondent had been discovered since the entry of the Montana decree which had not been accounted for in the property settlement, the court under the doctrine of comity properly refused to entertain the action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 1236, 1237, 1250–1257, 1259.]

2. WORDS AND PHRASES—"COMITY."

Although comity is not a rule of law, but of practice, convenience and expediency, it is more than mere courtesy, which implies only deference to the opinion of others, as it has a substantial value in securing uniformity of decision and in discouraging repeated litigation of the same question.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Comity.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Spokane County; Walter M. French, Judge.

Action by Lily F. Lauer against I. L. Freudenthal. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Noffsinger & Walchli, of Kalispell, Mont., and Samuel R. Stern, of Spokane, for appellant. J. E. Erickson, of Kalispell, Mont., and Harry L. Cohn, of Spokane, for respondent.

WEBSTER, J. In June, 1915, respondent and appellant were husband and wife and resided in the city of Whitefish, Mont. On June, 13, 1915, in the district court for the eleventh district of Montana holding terms in Flathead county, appellant commenced an action against respondent for a divorce and a division of property. On June 28, 1915, respondent filed his answer in the action and entered into a stipulation with appellant providing for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of all the property and effects of the parties. The receiver was duly appointed. The case was immediately heard, and a divorce was granted appellant as she prayed.

The decree, among other things, contained the following provisions:

> "That said plaintiff may apply to this court at any time hereafter for such order or relief as to the court may seem proper, for the purpose of discovering property improperly or fraudulently transferred or concealed, and for the purpose of reaching any property which might properly belong in whole or in part to the plaintiff."

It was further provided in the decree that the receivership should be continued in force for the purpose of collecting and distributing the property of the parties in accordance with their stipulation. Later, appellant applied to the court for permission to examine respondent touching his property holdings, it being claimed that he had not made a full, fair, and complete disclosure to appellant of all of his property. The application was granted, and respondent appeared and was examined at length concerning the property owned by him. On the following day a stipulation was entered into by the terms of which respondent agreed to pay appellant $3,500, and to pay her counsel the sum of $750 for his services in the case. No further steps were taken in the cause, and the record is silent as to whether the receivership had been closed.

[1] In September, 1915, respondent, while sojourning in the city of Spokane, was served with the summons and complaint in this action. Appellant, after setting forth in the complaint the divorce action in Montana, the stipulations entered into between the parties, and the decree entered in the cause, alleged in substance that respondent, prior to and at the time of the settlement of the property rights of the parties, had fraudulently secreted and withheld from appellant property of the value of at least $20,000, that appellant was entitled to one-half of this amount, and prayed judgment for the sum of $10,000. It was not alleged that any of the property claimed to have been secreted by respondent was or ever had been in this state, and no effort was made to reach or subject any specific property belonging to respondent alleged to be in the state of Washington. At the trial in the superior court, it affirmatively appeared from the evidence offered by appellant that all of the matters and things sought to be litigated in this jurisdiction had been fully inquired into and carefully investigated by the district court of Montana, and the evidence sought to be introduced in appellant's behalf was the identical evidence which had theretofore been submitted to the district court of Montana. No evidence was offered tending to prove that any property belonging to respondent had been discovered since the entry of the decree in the divorce action, which had not been disclosed to the receiver and to the court. At the conclusion of appellant's case, the court, on motion, directed a verdict in favor of respondent. Appellant brings the case here.

It appearing that the divorce action was still pending in the district court of Montana, and that by express provision in the decree appellant is given permission to apply to that court for the purpose of securing her rights in and to any property which respondent may have fraudulently concealed from her at the time the property settlement was made, and that the identical matter attempted to be litigated in this state had already been submitted to and considered by the district court of Montana, and that no property of any character belonging to respondent had been discovered since the entry of the decree which had not been accounted for in the property settlement, we are of the opinion that the disposition made of the case in the lower court was correct. In the circumstances disclosed by this record, it would seem that the doctrine of comity between states calls for the refusal on the part of the courts of this state to entertain the action. To do otherwise would be for the courts of this state to review a portion of the proceedings had in the district court of a sister state in a cause still pending in that court.

[2] "Comity is not a rule of law, but one of practice, convenience, and expediency. It is something more than mere courtesy, which implies only deference to the opinion of others, since it has a substantial value in securing uniformity of decision, and discouraging repeated litigation of the same question." Mast, Foos & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co., 177 U. S. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. 708, 44 L. Ed. 856.

ELLIS, C. J., and MORRIS, MAIN, and CHADWICK, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 397)

ALLEN v. WALLA WALLA VALLEY RY. CO. (No. 13799.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

JUDGMENT ⟹239—SEVERAL DEFENDANTS.

Where, in consolidated actions against a railway company for personal injuries due to the horse driven by one plaintiff becoming frightened and running away and colliding with defendant's street car, it appeared that the other plaintiff was merely riding in the buggy at the time of the accident and was not in a position to exercise authority or control over the driver, and did not appear that he failed to exercise such care to protect himself as the attending circumstances demanded, a verdict against the driver because of contributory negligence did not preclude the other plaintiff from recovering.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 417.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Walla Walla County; Edward C Mills, Judge.

Consolidated actions by Bert Allen and another against the Walla Walla Valley Railway Company, a corporation. From judgment for the plaintiff named, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Sharpstein, Pedigo, Smith & Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, and John A. Laing, of Portland, Or., for appellant. Homer I. Watts, of Athena, Or., and W. H. Fouts, of Asotin, for respondent.

WEBSTER, J. This is an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Respondent at the time of the accident was riding in a buggy with his stepson Mike Pierce. The horse which was being driven by Pierce became frightened, ran away, and collided with one of appellant's street cars. Respondent and Pierce were both injured, and each brought an action for damages against appellant. By stipulation of the parties the actions were consolidated for the purpose of trial. The jury returned a verdict in favor of respondent for the sum of $1,000, but in the case in which Pierce was plaintiff found in favor of the railway company. Appellant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict being denied and judgment having been entered upon the verdict, it brings the case here.

No errors are assigned based upon the admission or rejection of evidence, instructions given or refused by the court, or the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict. Counsel for appellant, on page 3 of their opening brief, make this statement:

> "Intending to present to this court the question only as to whether or not, when a verdict has been rendered and judgment based thereon entered in the consolidated cases upon the same testimony at the same trial and by the same jury in favor of the appellant company, the appellant company was not also entitled to a judgment in its favor notwithstanding the verdict, against the defendant and appellant here, we do not deem it necessary to burden this brief with as much of the record of the case as we would otherwise do."

The concluding paragraph of the brief is as follows:

> "We therefore respectfully submit that, the verdict and judgment having been rendered in these consolidated actions in favor of the defendant street railway company and against the plaintiff Pierce, the motion made by the defendant company for judgment in its favor as against the plaintiff Allen notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the plaintiff Allen should have been granted, and that the judgment appealed from should be reversed, with instructions to the lower court to enter judgment in favor of the appellant and against the respondent."

Again, in the reply brief counsel for appellant say:

> "On page 3 of our opening brief, we stated that we intended to present to this court only one question, and stated the question. * * * We claimed in that brief, and now assign as error, that the lower court erred in not granting our motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, in our favor and against respondent, because of the fact that the same jury, impaneled and sworn to try both cases consolidated for that purpose, had, on the same trial and same evidence, decided against plaintiff Pierce."

Later in the reply brief it is said:

> "Respondent contends that the principle of the Doremus Case does not control, and we contend that it does, and this is the whole question involved in this appeal."

Thus, it will be seen that appellant's sole contention is that, inasmuch as the jury trying the consolidated cases returned a verdict against Pierce, the driver of the horse, respondent, who was riding with him in the buggy at the time of the accident, is thereby precluded from recovering in this case; and that the court should so hold as a matter of law. This position is palpably unsound and untenable. Doremus v. Root, 23 Wash. 710, 63 Pac. 572, 54 L. R. A. 649, referred to in appellant's briefs, was a case where the plaintiff brought an action aginst the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and Samuel Root, to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused solely by the negligence of Root while acting as conductor on one of the defendant railroad company's freight trains. It was alleged in the complaint that Root by virtue of his employment had charge and control of the train on which he was acting as conductor, and that he negligently, carelessly, and recklessly permitted the train to run past a siding, well knowing that by so doing the train was likely to collide with the train on which the plaintiff was employed as fireman, and that by reason of this negligence on the part of Root the injuries complained of by plaintiff were suffered. The sole negligence relied upon by plaintiff was that of the defendant Root, and the railroad company was sought to be held liable on the doctrine of respondeat superior. The jury returned a verdict against the railroad company only, and the trial court ruled that the verdict in that form should be considered as a verdict in favor of the defendant Root. Judgment was entered in favor of Root against the plaintiff for the amount of the former's costs, and a judgment was entered against the railroad company in favor of the plaintiff for the amount of the verdict returned against it. The railroad company appealed. This court held that the defendants were in no sense joint tort-feasors, and that their liability to the plaintiff rested upon entirely different grounds, the employé being sought to be held because he committed the act which caused the injury, while the liability attempted to be imposed upon the employer, the railroad company, rested upon the doctrine of respondeat superior; that, the gravamen of the action being the alleged negligence of the employé Root, no recovery could be had against the railroad company unless it was established and found by the jury that Root was guilty of negligence; that, the jury by its verdict having exonerated Root of the negligence charged in the complaint, the company was by that very fact also absolved from liability. In other words, the holding was to the effect that the liability of the railroad company depended upon the negligence of Root, and, if he was found to be free from fault, the company of necessity was also blameless. See Sterick v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 39 Wash. 501, 81 Pac. 999.

In the case now under consideration, the question of whether the contributory negligence of Pierce is to be attributed and imputed to Allen depends entirely upon the relationship in which they stood to each other at the time of the accident. The rule adopted by this court and the one sustained by the weight of authority is to the effect that, where one is riding in a vehicle with another as his guest or companion and is injured by the negligence of a third person, the contributory negligence of the driver is not imputable to the injured person, unless the latter at the time of the injury was in a position to exercise authority or control over the driver, or failed to exercise such care to protect himself as under the attending circumstances was incumbent upon him. In the latter instance, it is hardly proper to say that the doctrine of imputed negligence is involved. Where one fails to exercise reasonable care and prudence for his own protection and safety and this failure contributes in an appreciable degree to causing the injury of which he complains, he is, strictly speaking, answerable for his own negligence. So that the doctrine of imputed negligence is based upon the single question of whether the occupant of the vehicle was in a position to exercise authority or control over the driver in respect to the matter in which the driver was negligent. The basic thought upon which the doctrine or principle of imputed negligence rests is that the relationship of master and servant or principal and agent must exist between the driver and the occupant at the time of the injury. In the absence of such a relationship, the negligence of the one will not be attributed to the other. Beach v. Seattle, 85 Wash. 379, 148 Pac. 39; McCanna v. Silke, 75 Wash. 383, 134 Pac. 1063; Field v. Spokane, Portland, etc., R. Co., 64 Wash. 445, 117 Pac. 228; Cathey v. Seattle Elec. Co., 58 Wash. 176, 108 Pac. 443; Wilson v. Puget Sound Elec. Co., 52 Wash. 522, 101 Pac. 50, 132 Am. St. Rep. 1044; Shearer v. Buckley, 31 Wash. 370, 72 Pac. 76; Brabon v. Seattle, 29 Wash. 6, 69 Pac. 365.

The trial court, by instructions of which no complaint is made, submitted to the jury the question of the relationship existing between Pierce and Allen at the time of the accident, and whether the negligence of the former was under the evidence in the case to be attributed to the latter. The verdict of the jury in favor of the respondent must therefore be considered as a finding by the jury that he did not possess any authority or control over Pierce with reference to the matter wherein the jury evidently found that he was guilty of contributory negligence. Consequently, the two verdicts rendered in the action are in no sense inconsistent, nor does the fact of Pierce's contributory negligence necessarily preclude a recovery on the part of the respondent. If Pierce was guilty of negligence contributing to his injury, clearly he was not entitled to recover. But unless this negligence on his part was, under the circumstances of the case, imputable to Allen, and the jury found that appellant was guilty of negligence as charged in the complaint, Allen was equally clearly entitled to a recovery. The naked fact, therefore, that the jury returned a verdict against Pierce, evidently upon the ground of contributory negligence on his part, does not carry with it the conclusion as a matter of law that the respondent was not entitled to recover in his case. For these reasons the principle announced in the Doremus Case is not applicable to this case.

This seems to dispose of the only question presented for our consideration.

The judgment is affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and MORRIS, MAIN, and CHADWICK, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 282)

COLVIN et al. v. CLARK. (No. 12038.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 14, 1917.)

1. Appeal and Error 🔑533(1)—Record—Memorandum Opinion.

In an action at law, a memorandum opinion of the trial judge is not properly a part of the transcript, and cannot be considered as findings of fact or conclusions of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2339.]

2. Trial 🔑404(5)—Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law.

Under Rem. Code 1915, § 367, requiring the court to make findings and conclusions in all actions at law, such findings have the same legal effect as the verdict of a jury, and are treated as such.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 961.]

3. Trial 🔑393(1)—Findings of Fact.

The intent of Rem. Code 1915, § 367, requiring findings of fact, etc., is that such findings shall be formal, so that exceptions can be made, and the attention of the trial judge called specifically to a wrong finding or an unsupported conclusion, this giving him the opportunity to correct any patent errors; exceptions in such cases being the counterpart of a motion for new trial, where cases are tried to a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 920.]

4. Trial 🔑388(2)—Findings—Suits in Equity.

In suits for equitable relief, findings of fact and conclusions of law are not essential, however helpful they may be to the appellate court, for the case is tried de novo, without reference to the opinion or conclusions of the trial judge.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 909.]

5. COSTS ⟹234, 236—ON APPEAL.

Costs on appeal follow a reversal or substantial modification.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Costs, Cent. Dig. §§ 892-905, 907.]

On recall of remittitur. Prior decision affirmed.

For prior decision, see 83 Wash. 376, 145 Pac. 419.

PER CURIAM. The remittitur in this case was recalled upon petition of the respondent, in which it was suggested that the court had overlooked certain motions which were made a part of the petition, and which should not have been decided without some affirmative expression of the court. The motions were: (1) For leave to file a supplemental transcript, showing the complete record in the court below; (2) that the judgment of this court be suspended, pending the making of findings of fact and conclusions of law by the trial judge; (3) for a rehearing on the merits; and (4) for a retaxation of costs.

The thing sought to be done is to supply a memorandum opinion rendered by the trial judge, and to have the same considered as a finding of fact and a conclusion of law. The memorandum opinion was filed with the petition. The attention of the court is directed to the case of Mallory v. Olympia, 75 Wash. 245, 134 Pac. 914, where it is said:

> "The court not making findings, but sustaining the contention of the city in a memorandum decision in which it was said: * * * This decision, while not made as a finding, is in the nature of a finding of fact and conclusion of law upon the issues submitted to the lower court, and will be here treated as such."

[1-3] Since the case of King County v. Hill, 1 Wash. 63, 23 Pac. 926, the rule has been that a memorandum opinion of a trial judge was not properly a part of the transcript, and would not be considered as findings or conclusions. The necessity for findings of fact and conclusions of law is found in the statutes of the state (Rem. Code, § 367), which provides that in all actions at law the court shall make findings and conclusions. Such findings have the same legal effect as the verdict of a jury, and are treated as such. It is the intent of the statute, also, that such findings shall be formal, so that exceptions can be made, and the attention of the trial judge called specifically to a wrong finding or an unsupported conclusion, this giving him the opportunity to correct any patent error; exceptions in such cases being counterpart of a motion for a new trial, where cases are tried to a jury. In this case, appellant requested findings, so that proper exceptions could be entered. To now hold that the memorandum opinion of the trial judge is a finding of fact and conclusion of law would leave us in the situation of denying the right of appellant to try out the merit of his case on appeal, for no exceptions were filed by him, and our only duty, under a long line of cases, would be to affirm the judgment on the finding. In Gould v. McCormick, 75 Wash. 61, 134 Pac. 676, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 710, and in Gust v. Gust, 70 Wash. 695, 127 Pac. 292, the court held that such a memorandum could not be considered as findings of fact and conclusions of law.

[4] The remark of the court in the Mallory Case, supra, was inadvertent, as well as unnecessary, for the suit was for equitable relief. In such cases findings of fact and conclusions of law are not essential, however helpful they may be to the appellate court, for the case is tried de novo, without reference to the opinion or conclusions of the trial judge. Slyfield v. Willard, 43 Wash. 179, 86 Pac. 392; White Crest Canning Co. v. Sims, 30 Wash. 374, 70 Pac. 1003; Knowles v. Rogers, 27 Wash. 211, 67 Pac. 572; Wintermute v. Carner, 8 Wash. 585, 36 Pac. 490; Enos v. Wilcox, 3 Wash. 44, 28 Pac. 364; Kilroy v. Mitchell, 2 Wash. 407, 26 Pac. 865.

[5] It follows that our opinion as rendered in Colvin v. Clark, 83 Wash. 376, 145 Pac. 419, must stand. This disposition of the case makes it unnecessary to pass upon the question of costs, for, under the settled practice, costs follow a reversal or a substantial modification.

(96 Wash. 333)

GRANGER TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH CO. v. SLOANE BROS., Inc.

(No. 13718.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. EMINENT DOMAIN ⟹2(6) — DAMAGE TO PROPERTY.

The right of a telephone and telegraph company under its franchise to maintain poles in a highway is qualified by the paramount right of the county authorities to keep the highway in reasonable condition for ordinary use by the public, and the damage which necessarily follows to such licensee from an improvement of the highway without negligence by the county authorities would not be a taking or damaging of property within the meaning of Const. art. 1, § 16, which provides that no private property shall be taken or damaged for public or private use without just compensation having been made.

2. COUNTIES ⟹93—DAMAGE TO PROPERTY.

It follows that if the county is not liable, the contractor, who was the agent of the county in doing the work and had agreed to do the work in accordance with the plans and specifications of its contract with the county, and under the direction and superintendence of the county engineer, would not be liable, in the absence of negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. § 121.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Boyd J. Tallman, Judge.

Action by the Granger Telephone & Telegraph Company against Sloane Bros., Incorporated. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

B. L. Hubbell, of Kelso, for appellant.
Turner, Hartge & Turner, of Seattle, for respondent.

MOUNT, J. The facts in this case are not in dispute. They may be briefly stated as follows: The appellant had a general franchise from Wahkiakum county to erect and maintain telephone and telegraph lines on the county roads of that county. Appellant erected certain telephone lines over one of the county roads by setting poles in the highway and placing thereon its telephone and telegraph lines. After this had been done, the county decided to improve the highway, and did so, by letting a contract to the respondent to do the work. The respondent, under the direction of the county engineer, as provided for in the contract, and without any negligence, proceeded to improve the road in accordance with the county plan. In doing this work some of the appellant's telephone poles were caused to fall by necessary excavations. The appellant, in order to replace the poles, expended the sum of $711.34. The appellant then brought this action to recover damages in that sum from the contractor. Upon these facts the trial court denied a recovery, and the plaintiff has appealed.

[1] The appellant argues that its property was placed upon the highway where it had a right to be; that, under the provisions of section 16 of article 1 of the Constitution, which provides that no private property shall be taken or damaged for public or private use without just compensation having been made, it is entitled to recover in this action. The argument proceeds upon the theory that, being rightfully in the highway with its telephone poles, the county had no right to damage these poles without just compensation being made therefor. It is true that the appellant had a right in the highway, by reason of the franchise, but that right is necessarily a qualified right. It cannot be reasonably argued that the county authorities may grant the right to a public service corporation to occupy a highway to the exclusion of the public, or the exclusion of the right of the county authorities to improve the highway so that it may be used by the public. A franchise granted upon a highway such as this would necessarily be qualified by these rights. Where the right is such qualified right, it follows that the county authorities, in the discharge of their duties to control the highway, may keep it in reasonable condition for ordinary use by the public, and the damage which necessarily follows to a licensee from an improvement of the highway would not be a taking or damaging of property within the meaning of the constitutional provision above quoted. The rule is stated in 13 R. C. L. at section 82 as follows:

"It is almost uniformly held that a gas or water company laying its mains and service pipes under the streets of a municipality acquires no vested right to an undisturbed location, but holds subject to the paramount right of the public to make such changes in the surface and subsoil of the street as may be required by the public interest; and hence any damage inflicted without negligence on the owner of the mains and pipes in the prosecution of a public improvement under the direction of the proper authorities is, in the absence of a statute or an express contract allowing recovery, damnum absque injuria. This is equally true though the statute or ordinance under which the work is done provides for compensation to abutting owners, and though in making the improvement the municipality exercises its right of eminent domain. And a municipal contractor constructing such a public improvement is not liable for unavoidable injuries so inflicted. Moreover, a city has no right directly or indirectly to burden itself or its citizens with the cost of removing and replacing of the waterpipes, gas pipes, telegraph, telephone and electric light poles, drains or conduits, or railway tracks that may necessarily be interfered with in laying its sewers in the streets."

And at section 87 the rule is stated:

"Public service corporations occupying a street under a franchise are held to have acquired their rights on the condition, implied where not expressed, that the city reserves the full and unconditional power to make any reasonable change of grade or other improvement in its streets. Hence, in the absence of negligence or wantonness on the part of the city, such a corporation cannot maintain an action for damages occasioned by the necessity of taking up and relaying its pipes, tracks, or other appliances, in order to accommodate them to the new grade. So the power of the municipality to change the grade of its streets whenever and as often as the public needs and convenience require is not affected by the fact that a street is occupied by a railroad company under a franchise. Ordinarily, also, the obligation rests on a railway company so situated to make its tracks conform to the established or changed grade of the street. But these ordinary powers and obligations may be enlarged or restricted by legislation or agreement, and this will be determined by the statutes and contracts having application to the case in hand."

Many authorities are cited to support this text. See, also, Columbus Gas Light & Coke Co. v. Columbus, 50 Ohio St. 65, 33 N. E. 292, 19 L. R. A. 510, 40 Am. St. Rep. 648, and Scranton Gas & Water Co. v. Scranton, 214 Pa. 586, 64 Atl. 84, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1033, 6 Ann. Cas. 388, and note on page 390.

[2] It follows, of course, that if the county itself is not liable, the contractor, which was the agent of the county for doing the work and had agreed to do the work in accordance with the plans and specifications of its contract with the county, and under the direction and superintendence of the county engineer, and where no negligence occurred in doing the work, would not be liable. Kaler v. Puget Sound Bridge & Dredging Co., 72 Wash. 497, 130 Pac. 894.

We conclude, therefore, that the constitutional provision has no reference to this character of damages, and the trial court was right in dismissing the action.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, PARKER, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 422)

FRAZEY v. CASEY. (No. 13885.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Mortgages 🔑292(2) — Assumption by Purchaser—Personal Liability.

Under Rem. Code, § 3409, as to negotiable instruments, providing that no person is liable on the instrument whose signature does not appear thereon, one who has orally contracted to assume a mortgage as part of the purchase price of land is not liable in action at law on the note secured by such mortgage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 766, 790.]

2. Mortgages 🔑280(3)—Assumption by Purchaser—Validity of Oral Agreement.

A verbal promise of a purchaser of mortgaged property to assume and pay the mortgage debt will be enforced in equity at the instance of either the grantor or the holder of the mortgage, and such assumption need not be in writing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 742, 744.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Mitchell Gilliam, Judge.

Action by Charles J. Frazey against Louis Gilbert and others. From a judgment, defendant J. T. Casey appeals. Reversed.

Heber McHugh, C. J. Smith, John T. Casey, and Tucker & Hyland, all of Seattle, for appellant. Myers & Johnstone, of Seattle, for respondent.

MOUNT, J. This is an action at law upon a promissory note. The plaintiff had judgment below against each of the defendants. The defendant Casey has appealed.

The facts are as follows: On March 13, 1911, the defendants Louis Gilbert and Catherine Gilbert, his wife, executed and delivered their promissory note to respondent for $850, with interest at 8 per cent. On the same date, a mortgage upon tract 20, Rainier Beach Garden Tracts, in King county, was given by Gilbert and wife to secure the payment of the note to respondent Frazey. Thereafter, on June 20, 1913, Gilbert and wife sold the mortgaged land to appellant, John T. Casey, for $3,300. Mr. Casey assumed, as part of the purchase price, the note for $850 due to respondent Frazey, also another note for $1,000, which was secured by a first mortgage, and paid $500 in cash. He gave a third mortgage to Gilbert and wife for $950. The deed from Gilbert and wife to Casey did not mention the mortgages, but a contract was prepared by Gilbert and wife, and delivered to Casey to be signed. The contract provided for the assumption by Casey of all the obligations against the property. Mr. Casey did not sign the contract, but accepted the deed, which did not mention the mortgages. The contract of assumption was oral. On the trial of the case Mr. Casey testified that he purchased only the equity of Gilbert and wife in and to the real estate, but we are satisfied, from the evidence, that he agreed to purchase for $3,300, which was to be paid as follows: $500 in cash; $950 secured by a third mortgage; and he assumed the obligations against the property, being two mortgages, one for $1,000, in favor of Mr. Cole, and the other for $850, the latter securing the note sued on in this case. The complaint, which is in the ordinary form upon a promissory note, does not mention the fact that a mortgage was given to secure the note. It makes Mr. Casey a party by the following allegation:

> "That after the execution of said promissory note, and, to wit, on the 19th day of January, A. D. 1914, the defendant John T. Casey purchased certain real estate from the other defendants, and as part of the purchase price of said property said Casey assumed and agreed to pay the said promissory note."

In answer to the complaint, Casey denied that allegation. It is apparent that the action is at law upon the promissory note. Section 3409, Rem. Code, provides:

> "No person is liable on the instrument whose signature does not appear thereon, except as herein otherwise expressly provided. But one who signs in a trade or assumed name will be liable to the same extent as if he had signed his own name."

[1, 2] Under this section of the statute, Mr. Casey's signature must appear upon the note before he may be held liable thereon. Mr. Casey was not a maker of the note. He did not indorse it, and, if this section means what it says, it is difficult to understand how Mr. Casey may be held liable in an action at law upon the note, which he did not sign or indorse. The court below was of the opinion that the holder of the note could maintain an action at law against Mr. Casey upon his oral assumption, because Mr. Casey assumed the mortgages upon the property when he purchased it from the defendants Gilbert and wife. The respondent, Frazey, relies upon the rule in equity that, where a purchaser of mortgaged property assumes and agrees to pay the mortgage debt, equity will enforce payment, either at the instance of the grantor or the holder of the mortgage. There is no doubt of that rule in this state. In Ordway v. Downey, 18 Wash. 412, 51 Pac. 1047, 52 Pac. 228, 63 Am. St. Rep. 892, quoting from Devlin on Deeds, this court stated the rule as follows:

> "It is not necessary that the promise of the grantee to assume the payment of an incumbrance as a part of the consideration for which the deed is made should be in writing. A verbal promise to do so is valid, and equity will enforce it either at the instance of the grantor or the holder of the mortgage."

To the same effect see Solicitors' Loan & Trust Co. v. Robins, 14 Wash. 507, 45 Pac. 39, and Ordway v. Downey, supra, and cases there cited. But those were cases in equity, where the mortgagee was foreclosing the mortgage. In such cases the mortgagee has a right to pursue his remedy against the mortgaged property, and against those who have agreed to pay the debt, but no case is cited to us where, in an action at law upon a promissory note, a person not a maker or an indorser may be held liable under a statute like ours.

Upon the face of the statute we see no escape from the conclusion that where the holder of a note secured by a mortgage waives the mortgage, and brings an action at law upon the note, he may not enforce payment against a person who has not signed the note, either as maker or indorser.

We have no doubt of the right of the defendants Gilbert and wife, under the facts stated, to proceed against Mr. Casey for the full purchase price of the property. The contract between them is an independent contract, which is not available to the respondent in an action at law upon the note, because Casey did not sign or indorse the note. Mr. Casey, by not signing or indorsing the note, had a right to assume that the mortgages would be foreclosed, and the property sold, and the proceeds thereof applied upon the mortgage, before he could be held personally liable.

The judgment, as to appellant Casey, is therefore reversed.

ELLIS, C. J., and PARKER, FULLERTON, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 403)

CITY OF SPOKANE v. KNIGHT.

(No. 13809.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Criminal Law ⇨564(3)—Venue—Circumstantial Evidence.

In criminal cases, venue may be established by circumstantial evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1279.]

2. Criminal Law ⇨564(3)—Sufficiency of Evidence—Venue.

In a prosecution for automobile speeding, testimony that the offense occurred on certain streets, "in the city," etc., held circumstantially to prove the venue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1279.]

3. Municipal Corporations ⇨707 — Jury Question—Speed of Auto.

A motorcycle policeman's testimony regarding the speed of defendant's automobile as determined by a tested speedometer attached to his motorcycle held to sustain a conviction for automobile speeding.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Municipal Corporations, Cent. Dig. § 1518.]

4. Criminal Law ⇨304(12)—Judicial Notice—Municipal Ordinance.

In a prosecution for automobile speeding, the Spokane municipal court takes judicial notice of an ordinance pleaded in the information by number and title, and the superior court, having appellate jurisdiction of such a case will also judicially notice it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 708, 2951½.]

5. Criminal Law ⇨656(9) — Trial — Comment of Court.

In a prosecution for automobile speeding, the court's explanatory statement, comparing a motorcycle policeman's speedometer with weighing scales, when refusing to strike out testimony regarding the readings of such speedometer on a motorcycle of a traffic policeman, held not such a comment on the evidence as requires reversal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1533.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Spokane County; O. M. Easterday, Judge.

Prosecution by the City of Spokane against J. M. Knight for automobile speeding. From a conviction defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Carl W. Swanson, of Spokane, for appellant. J. M. Geraghty, Alex M. Winston, and Arthur L. Hooper, all of Spokane, for respondent.

MOUNT, J. The appellant was convicted upon a charge of exceeding the speed limit in the city of Spokane, in violation of Ordinance No. C 1832 of that city. He was tried upon the charge, first, in the police court of that city, and was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs. He appealed from that judgment to the superior court of Spokane county, and, after a mistrial, was again convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs. Upon this appeal, he makes several contentions, which will be noticed in their order.

[1, 2] It is first contended that the venue was not sufficiently proved, by reason of the fact that no witness testified that appellant traveled with his automobile at a speed faster than 20 miles per hour in the city of Spokane. It is true no witness made the direct statement that, at the time appellant was driving his automobile, he was in the city of Spokane, but a number of witnesses testified that he was in "the city" and upon certain streets, naming them, all of which are city streets of the city of Spokane. This court has held, in a number of cases, that venue, like any other fact, may be found upon circumstantial evidence. State v. Fetterly, 33 Wash. 599, 74 Pac. 810; State v. Gilluly, 50 Wash. 1, 96 Pac. 512; State v. Kincaid, 69 Wash. 273, 124 Pac. 684; State v. Chin Sam, 76 Wash. 612, 136 Pac. 1146; State v. Dooley, 82 Wash. 483, 144 Pac. 654; State v. Libby, 89 Wash. 27, 153 Pac. 1058, 155 Pac. 746.

In State v. Kincaid, supra, we said:

> "There was no direct statement by any witness that the crime was committed in Whatcom county. The rule, however, is established by overwhelming authority that venue, like any other fact, may be found upon circumstantial evidence; and that, where it may be reasonably inferred from the evidence that the crime was committed in the county designated in the information, the venue is sufficiently established."

From the record in this case, it may not be reasonably inferred that the crime was committed in any other place than in the city of Spokane. The witnesses all assumed that the act was committed within the city of Spokane and there can be no doubt upon that question.

[3] Appellant next argues that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the verdict, because it does not show that the appellant operated his automobile more than 20 miles per hour. An officer of the city testified, in substance, that he took the speed of the appellant by means of a motorcycle, to which was attached a tested speedometer; that he he took appellant's speed from Garfield street to Sherman street, a distance of more than a thousand feet, maintaining an equal speed at a constant distance of about 50 feet behind the appellant, and his speedometer registered 30 miles an hour; that, between two other streets, upon the same occasion, he took his speed, and the speedometer on his motorcycle registered 27 miles per hour. This same witness testified that his speedometer had been tested as often as three times a week, and was found to be correct. The appellant testified that he had a speedometer on his automobile, which he testified was correct, and which showed that he was traveling at less than 20 miles per hour. There was some evidence that speedometers are not accurate, and get out of order, and it is argued by the appellant that the officer's speedometer may have been out of order, and did not register the speed correctly; but that was a question for the jury. Speedometers, like other machines, may get out of order; but, where they are tested regularly, they may be relied upon with reasonable certainty to determine accurately the rate of speed at which a machine is driven. It cannot be said therefore that, because speedometers may be out of order, rates of speed may not be measured by instruments manufactured for that purpose, and which usually give approximately correct rates of speed. The question was one for the jury.

[4] Appellant next argues that the court erred in taking judicial notice of the ordinance. The ordinance was pleaded in the information by number and title. The case was brought in the municipal court in the city of Spokane. That court was required to take notice of the ordinance, and the superior court, being a court of appellate jurisdiction in this particular case, was also required to take notice of the ordinance. Seattle v. Pearson, 15 Wash. 575, 46 Pac. 1053; Spokane v. Griffith, 49 Wash. 293, 95 Pac. 84.

[5] It is next argued that the court erred in commenting upon the facts. After the evidence relating to speed and the speedometer had been introduced, appellant made a motion to strike this evidence, and, after an argument thereon in the presence of the jury, the court said:

> "If I want to take something and put it on scales down here, and the scales indicated a certain weight, I would say that that was the weight. Now, of course, I do not verify that. I simply say by the scales. The scales are not always right we know. We know that scales are not always made with accuracy, and some scales are more accurate than others. I will deny the motion."

It is contended by the appellant that this was a comment upon the evidence. The court, when it made this statement, was giving a reason for denying the motion. It was not intending to say that the speedometer was accurate, but was comparing speedometers with weighing scales as an illustration of the court's holding upon the question of the admissibility of the evidence relating to speed as measured by the speedometer. What the court meant here is evident, and that is, that the weight of an article, as shown by scales, is evidence of the fact of weight and that, as applied to this case, the rate of speed measured by the speedometer is evidence of that fact. It is not conclusive, but is sufficient to go to the jury. We think the statement made was not such a comment upon the facts as would warrant a reversal of the case, even though made in the presence of the jury. The court was not instructing the jury at the time the statement was made. It was simply giving counsel its views upon the question which had been argued by counsel for both appellant and respondent.

We find no error in the record.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, PARKER, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 407)

HARTLEY v. LASATER et ux. (No. 13823.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Highways 🔑177—Action for Injuries—Proximate Cause.

In an action for injuries sustained when plaintiff on motorcycle was struck by defendants' automobile on attempting to pass in front of it to go upon an intersecting street, aside from other questions, if defendants were driving their automobile at an excessive rate of speed, and such was the proximate cause of the accident, plaintiff would have a right to recover.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. § 466.]

2. Negligence 🔑83—Action for Injuries—Last Clear Chance.

As the doctrine of last clear chance implies thought, appreciation, mental direction, and the lapse of sufficient time to effectually act upon the impulse to save another from injury, or the proof of circumstances which will put the one charged to implied notice of the situation, and to invoke the doctrine the court must grant the negligence of plaintiff and find that his negligence "had terminated or culminated in a situation of peril from which the exercise of ordinary care on his part would not thereafter extricate him," that appellants knew and appreciated his danger and could, in the exercise of reasonable care, have avoided injuring him, the doctrine does not apply where the contributory negligence began and culminated without the lapse of appreciable time or where the negligence of both parties was concurrent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 115.]

3. NEGLIGENCE 🔑141(9)—ACTION FOR INJURIES — LAST CLEAR CHANCE — QUESTION FOR JURY.

Whether an instruction upon the doctrine of last clear chance should be given is a matter of law for the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 392.]

4. HIGHWAYS 🔑172(1) — ACTION FOR INJURIES—LAST CLEAR CHANCE.

Although the doctrine of last clear chance is applicable in actions for injuries caused by the negligent operation of automobiles, persons driving and riding upon the highways are in the exercise of lawful and equal rights, and the law puts no greater burden upon them than that of ordinary care not to injure one another, having regard for the dangerous character of the machinery and locality.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 459, 460.]

5. HIGHWAYS 🔑176—NEGLIGENCE PER SE —VIOLATION OF RULES OF THE ROAD—STATUTE.

Although Rem. & Bal. Code, § 5569, provided that a vehicle passing another going in the same direction should pass to the right, it is not negligence per se to drive on the wrong side of the road in passing another vehicle.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. § 465.]

6. HIGHWAYS 🔑184(2)—NEGLIGENCE PER SE —VIOLATION OF RULES OF THE ROAD—STATUTE.

One who violates the law of the road by driving on the wrong side assumes the risk of such an experiment and is required to use greater care than if he had kept on the right side of the road, and, if a collision takes place under such circumstances, the presumption is against the party who was on the wrong side, but the presumption is prima facie, and has the effect only of casting the burden of justifying his position upon the man who was on the wrong side.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 472, 473½.]

7. HIGHWAYS 🔑177—ACTION FOR INJURIES—PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Although an automobile may be traveling at a rate of speed prohibited by law, unless the excessive speed of the car was the proximate cause of an injury the driver is not liable for such negligence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. § 466.]

8. HIGHWAYS 🔑184(3)—ACTION FOR INJURIES—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action for injuries sustained when plaintiff on motorcycle was struck by defendants' automobile on attempting to pass in front of it to go upon an intersecting street, whether the plaintiff exercised due care for his own safety when he turned across the path of the automobile without looking or without giving any warning sign held for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 473, 473½.]

9. NEGLIGENCE 🔑12—ACTION FOR INJURIES —DEGREE OF CARE REQUIRED IN EMERGENCIES.

Men who act in emergencies are not to be held to that strict accountability that the law demands of those who act deliberately, nor are they to be penalized because they did not do what, in the light of subsequent events, or in theory, would have avoided the accident; but the law may under such circumstances excuse an act which, if done deliberately or after a lapse of time sufficient for reflection, would make the actor answerable as for a willful tort.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. § 14.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Walla Walla County; Edward C. Mills, Judge.

Action by Roy Hartley against Harry Lasater and wife. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appeal. Reversed and remanded for new trial.

Will H. Fouts, of Asotin, and Reynolds & Bond and Gose & Crowe, all of Walla Walla, for appellants. Sharpstein, Pedigo, Smith & Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, for respondent.

CHADWICK, J. This action was brought to recover damages for injuries sustained in an accident upon a highway. Respondent's case shows that he was riding south on a motorcycle. Appellants were riding in an automobile in the same direction, and a short distance behind. Respondent was just to the right of the center of the road. Appellants were to the left of the center. The presence of appellants was unknown to respondent, who suddenly cut across the road in front of their machine. Respondent alleges that he was going at about twelve miles an hour. It is alleged, and circumstances are relied on to prove, that appellants were going at an excessive rate of speed. It was respondent's intention to leave the main highway, and go onto a road intersecting at an angle of about 25 degrees. The machines collided at the intersection of the roads. All parties suffered some shock and injury. Respondent brought this suit to recover damages. Each party alleges the fault to be in the other. From a verdict and judgment in favor of respondent, appellants have appealed.

Many errors are assigned. Most of them go directly to, or are predicated upon, the contention that the facts proven are insufficient to sustain a verdict and judgment, or that they conclusively show negligence on the part of respondent, and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury.

[1] Inasmuch as we have concluded to send the case back for a new trial, we feel that discussion, further than to say that we think the case was for the jury, is unnecessary. Aside from all other questions, if appellants were driving their automobile at an excessive rate of speed, and such was the proximate cause of the accident, respondent would have a right to recover.

The court instructed the jury upon the doctrine of the last clear chance as follows:

> "If you find that the plaintiff had negligently placed himself in a perilous situation, and that the driver of the defendants' automobile, by the exercise of reasonable care, could have seen and should have seen the perilous situation of the plaintiff in time to have avoided injuring him, by the exercise of reasonable care on the part of the driver of the automobile, then such negligence on the part of the plaintiff will not defeat his right to recover, if the negligence of the plaintiff had terminated or culminated in a situation of peril from which the exercise of ordinary care on his part would not thereafter extricate him.
>
> "But if you find that the plaintiff negligently placed himself in a dangerous situation, and that the driver of the automobile could not, and should not, in the exercise of reasonable care, have seen his perilous situation in time to have avoided injuring him, or if you find that the plaintiff's negligence, if any, had not terminated or culminated in a situation of peril from which the exercise of reasonable care on his part would not thereafter extricate him, but that he could have, by the exercise of ordinary care, extricated himself from the perilous situation, but failed to exercise such care, then the plaintiff cannot recover."

[2] In the abstract, no objection could be urged to these instructions; but we think there is no testimony to sustain them. It is true that appellants knew of respondent's presence and position; but it does not follow that they are to be charged with a knowledge of his intent, suddenly, and without warning, to turn across the path of their automobile. We have given attention to the whole evidence and are convinced that the accident happened so quickly that there was neither time nor opportunity for appellants to act upon the last clear chance. Last clear chance implies thought, appreciation, mental direction, and the lapse of sufficient time to effectually act upon the impulse to save another from injury, or the proof of circumstances which will put the one charged to implied notice of the situation.

There was no duty upon appellants to slow down, or to take such care as the doctrine of the last clear chance demands, until they were put to the hazard of choice by some act of respondent. When respondent changed his position, he relieved appellants, unless the facts would warrant the court and jury in saying that there was sufficient time between his act and the impact for appellants to realize his peril and to avoid it. To invoke the doctrine of the last clear chance, we must grant the negligence of respondent, and find that his negligence "had terminated or culminated in a situation of peril from which the exercise of ordinary care on his part would not thereafter extricate him"; that appellants knew and appreciated his danger and could, in the exercise of reasonable care have avoided injuring him. A mere statement of the rule reveals its inapplicability to a case where the contributory negligence began and culminated without the lapse of appreciable time. The doctrine is not applied where the negligence is concurrent. Scharf v. Spokane & Inland Empire R. Co., 92 Wash. 561, 159 Pac. 797

> "The doctrine [last clear chance] is recognized in this state, but this case does not fall within its limits. That doctrine, speaking in a broad way, applies when one negligently gets himself into a dangerous situation, or a trap, as it were, from which he cannot extricate himself, and, being there, another negligently runs upon, collides with, or in some other manner injures him. It does not apply when, as in this case, the injured party's negligence is progressive, and actively continues up to the point of collision. In such case, the negligence of the other party is not subsequent to and independent of the injured party's contributory negligence. It is contemporaneous with it to the last instant. It operates to produce the result in connection with the other negligence, and not independently of it." Moran v. Smith, 114 Me. 55, 95 Atl. 272, 273.

[3] Whether an instruction upon the last clear chance is proper to be given is a matter of law for the court. Dotta v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 36 Wash. 506, 79 Pac. 32.

[4] Although a new branch of the law, it is held as frequently as the cases arise that the doctrine of the last clear chance is applicable in actions brought to recover for injuries caused by the negligent operation of automobiles. Berry, Automobiles (2d Ed.) § 146; Chase v. Seattle Taxicab & Transfer Co., 78 Wash. 537, 139 Pac. 499; Mosso v. Stanton, 75 Wash. 220, 134 Pac. 941, L. R. A. 1916A, 943; Hillebrant v. Manz, 71 Wash. 250, 128 Pac. 892; Stephenson v. Parton, 89 Wash. 653, 155 Pac. 147. But it is as universally held that persons driving and riding upon the highways are in the exercise of lawful and equal rights, and the law puts no greater burden upon them than that of taking ordinary care not to injure one another, having regard for the dangerous character of the machine and the locality. Therefore, unless it be shown that the one charged knew, or, having consideration of all the circumstances, ought to have known, of the peril of another in time to avoid the injury, he is not to be held under the doctrine of the last clear chance. To say that one ought to have known of the peril of another is but a restatement of the rule of implied notice. The doctrine is sufficiently elaborated in the cases referred to. We know of none charging a defendant where he did not, and could not from the nature of things, appreciate the danger in time to avoid the accident, or where the circumstances were insufficient to charge him with notice.

While it is not intended that one person may kill another simply because he is negligent, it is likewise not intended to hold one for an injury unless he can be charged with knowledge, in fact or in law, sufficiently prior in time to have given him, in the exercise of ordinary care, time to avoid the accident. In a case where a warning was given by the waving of a handkerchief, the court, having in mind the facts of the case, said:

> "After that he had to take in the situation, coordinate his muscles, and stop the car, going at 10 miles an hour, in the time it took the automobile to go half its own length. This is too short a time. Human beings cannot be expected to act with the speed of electricity. Nor will it avail anything to attempt to lengthen the time in which the motorman had to act by claiming the automobile was or may have been going very slow. The slower it went, the greater reason the motorman would have for thinking it was going to stop before it entered upon the track." Lewis v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 181 Mo. App. 421, 168 S. W. 833.

[5] Appellants contend that they intended to pass respondent at about the point where the roads intersected. Since the case is to be remanded, we feel warranted in saying that although the law, as it was when the accident occurred, provided that a vehicle passing another vehicle going in the same direction should pass to the right (Rem. & Bal. Code, § 5569), we have held that it is not necessarily negligence per se to drive on the wrong side of the road; for, aside from the universal custom of passing a vehicle going in the same direction on the left-hand side of the road, it is now provided by statute that it shall be done. Whether an automobile is rightfully or wrongfully on either side of the road is a relative question to be decided with reference to the facts of the particular case.

[6] Granting that appellants were not in the act of passing respondent, the rule is:

> "One who violates the law of the road by driving on the wrong side assumes the risk of such an experiment and is required to use greater care than if he had kept on the right side of the road. If a collision takes place under such circumstances, the presumption is against the party who was on the wrong side. But the presumption is prima facie, and has the effect only of casting the burden of justifying his position upon the man who was on the wrong side." Berry, Automobiles (2d Ed.) § 171, citing Segerstrom v. Lawrence, 64 Wash. 245, 116 Pac. 876.

[7] It is also held that, although an automobile may be traveling at a rate of speed prohibited by law, unless the excessive speed of the car was the proximate cause of an injury the driver is not liable for such negligence. Berry, Automobiles (2d Ed.) § 145.

[8] Whether the respondent exercised due care for his own safety when he turned across the path of the automobile without looking or without giving any warning sign is a question for the jury. Hillebrant v. Manz, supra; Ludwigs v. Dumas, 72 Wash. 68, 129 Pac. 903; Lewis v. Seattle Taxicab Co., 72 Wash. 320, 130 Pac. 341.

We have said that respondent tried his case upon the theory of excessive speed. To sustain the instructions upon the last clear chance, resort is made to the testimony of the appellant wife, who says that she was driving not to exceed 22 miles an hour. It is then argued that, being behind respondent, as he says, and not abreast of him, as she and the three other occupants of the automobile say they were, she had ample time to stop her car, slacken the speed, or sound the horn; that, if any one of these things had been done, the accident would not have occurred; and that in the doing of one of these things lay her last clear chance. Resort to the same source reveals testimony that the driver did take her chance. If the testimony of the appellants and their witnesses be true, the brakes were put on and the car was suddenly swerved to the left when the danger became apparent.

[9] Men who act in emergencies are not to be held to that strict accountability that the law demands of those who act deliberately. Nor are they to be penalized because they did not do what, in the light of subsequent events, or in theory, would have avoided the accident. The instinct of self-preservation and the instinct to refrain from harming others are always present in emergent situations affecting personal security. These impulses prompt that which is done, and what is done is usually that which should have been done, or all that could have been done. Hence the law will excuse an act which, if done deliberately or after a lapse of time sufficient for reflection, would make the actor answerable as for a willful tort.

As we view this case, the only question is that of proximate cause. Respondent's case was tried out on the theory that appellants were driving their car at an excessive rate of speed, and that such was the proximate cause of the injury. Appellants contend that they were driving at about 20 miles an hour, and that respondent turned with no care for his own safety and is himself to blame. The issue is proximate cause.

Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

ELLIS, C. J., and MORRIS, MAIN, and WEBSTER, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 425)

CITY OF SEATTLE v. GIBSON. (No. 13913.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. DRUGGISTS 🔑1—POWER TO REGULATE.

The state or other proper authorities, under police power, may regulate or prohibit the sale of liquors or poisons, or articles that may be deleterious to the health of a community, and may prescribe the qualifications of persons who may deal therein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Druggists, Cent. Dig. § 1.]

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW 🔑209—PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.

Persons equally qualified are entitled to the same privileges under the law, and a statute or ordinance is void which interferes with or abridges the privileges and immunities of citizens who are equally entitled to the protection of the law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 678.]

3. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW 🔑240(1)—DRUGGISTS 🔑2—EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAW—CITY ORDINANCE—VALIDITY.

In view of Rem. Code 1915, §§ 8445, 8452, 8459, 8462, 8463, as to registered pharmacists and their licenses, and Const. art. 1, § 12, prohibiting laws granting special privileges and immunities, an ordinance licensing drug stores, under which application for license to act as druggists was referable to a license committee, which in its discretion might investigate and report either favorably or unfavorably to the council, which had discretion whether or not to pass an ordinance granting a license, was illegal, as providing for a discretion purely arbitrary as to who should be granted a license to conduct a drug store; such business not being in itself an unlawful business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 688, 693, 697, 698; Druggists, Cent. Dig. § 1.]

Parker and Holcomb, JJ., dissenting in part.

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; John S. Jurey, Judge.

H. F. Gibson was convicted of violating an ordinance of the City of Seattle, and appeals. Reversed, and prosecution ordered dismissed.

Peterson & Macbride, of Seattle, for appellant. Hugh M. Caldwell and Thomas J. L. Kennedy, both of Seattle, for respondent. Preston & Thorgrimson, of Seattle, amici curiæ.

MOUNT, J. The appellant was convicted upon a charge of conducting a drug store and pharmacy in the city of Seattle, in violation of an ordinance of that city. He has appealed from a judgment imposing a fine.

There is no dispute in the facts. The appellant was conducting a drug store and pharmacy in the city of Seattle. He was qualified to operate and conduct a drug store and pharmacy under the laws of this state. He held a certificate issued by the state pharmacy board. Prior to his arrest, he had paid $10 to the city, and made a demand for a license, but without complying with the ordinance providing therefor. The contention of the appellant in the lower court, and in this court, is that the ordinance is void, being in contravention of section 1, Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The ordinance in question is an ordinance relating to the licensing of drug stores and pharmacies in the city of Seattle, and the revocation of such licenses, and providing penalties for violation of the ordinance. Section 1 of the ordinance defines the word "person," as used in the ordinance. Section 2 provides that it shall be unlawful for any person within the city of Seattle to carry on, conduct, or operate a drug store or pharmacy without first procuring a license to do so, and also provides that the fee for such license shall be fixed at $10 per annum, payable in advance. Section 3 of the ordinance is as follows:

"Every 'drug store and pharmacy license' shall be granted by ordinance of the city council, and no license shall be granted unless the applicant therefor shall have filed with the city comptroller a petition in writing, addressed to the city council, signed by the applicant, and setting forth the name in full of the applicant, and in case of a corporation, the names of the officers of such corporation, the street name and number of all entrances to the place of business, the name under which said business is to be carried on, whether the applicant is the owner or the lessee of the premises, the length of time the applicant has been a resident of the city, and in the case of an individual the place of residence of such applicant, and in the case of a corporation, the location of the principal office or place of business of such corporation, which said petition shall be made on a blank form to be furnished by the city comptroller.

"The city comptroller shall report the petition to the city council, which shall refer the same to the license committee, which committee shall consider such petition and may, in its discretion, investigate any of the matters set forth therein, and report its findings and recommendations thereon to the city council, and if said committee recommends that said petition be granted shall accompany such recommendation with a proposed ordinance granting the license petitioned for.

"Upon the taking effect of any ordinance granting such license, the city comptroller shall, upon the presentation to him of the receipt of the city treasurer showing payment of the license fee herein required, issue to the petitioner the license granted by said ordinance.

"Any license issued under authority of the city council as herein provided shall be kept posted in a conspicuous place in the room in which the licensee carries on or conducts his business, and alongside of the certificate of registration of the licensed pharmacist in charge thereof."

Section 4 provides that no license issued under the authority of the ordinance shall be transferable or assignable, and no rebate or refund of money paid for a license shall be made. Section 5 provides that the city council may at any time revoke any license issued under authority of the ordinance, but before such revocation the person holding such license shall be notified in writing of the intention of the city council to revoke the same, and may be heard in opposition to such revocation, if he so desires; that any person whose license has been revoked shall not be again licensed to carry on or conduct a drug store or pharmacy in the city of Seattle for a period of one year The city council is authorized, after a proper hearing, to suspend any license issued under authority of the ordinance for a period of not exceeding 60 days. Section 6 provides that any person violating or failing to comply with the provisions of the ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, fined, in any sum not exceeding $100, or imprisoned in the city jail for a term not exceeding 30 days, or both fine and imprisonment. Section 7 provides when the ordinance shall take effect.

The ordinance was passed by the city council on the 31st day of July, 1916, approved on the 4th day of August, 1916, and became effective 30 days thereafter. It will be noticed that this ordinance provides that an applicant for a license to do business as a druggist and pharmacist must file a petition with the city comptroller, and that:

"The city comptroller shall report the petition to the city council, which shall refer the same to the license committee, which committee shall consider such petition and may, in its discretion, investigate any of the matters set forth therein, and report its findings and recommendations thereon to the city council, and if said committee recommends that said petition be granted shall accompany such recommendation with a proposed ordinance granting the license petitioned for."

It is plain from this provision of the ordinance that the license committee is vested with discretion to report either favorably or unfavorably to the city council. If this discretion is exercised favorably, and a recommendation that a license be issued is made by the license committee, it shall report an ordinance granting the license petitioned for. The ordinance also provides that every license shall be granted by ordinance of the city; that is, before an applicant for a license may receive the same, a special ordinance must be passed, granting a special privilege, and the passage of such ordinance rests wholly in the discretion of the city council.

The ordinance in question here makes no provision for determining the qualifications of an applicant. It does not require the license committee, to whom the petition is referred, to investigate any of the facts stated in the petition of the applicant. The committee may investigate, or not, as its discretion dictates. In short, the ordinance leaves to the license committee the authority arbitrarily to grant or reject a petition for a license to operate or conduct a drug store and pharmacy. This discretion is purely arbitrary under the ordinance, because no standard of qualification, nor rule, is fixed upon which an investigation may be made. The ordinance recites that the committee may, in its discretion, investigate any of the matters set forth in the petition, and, if it may investigate these matters in its discretion, it may not investigate them at all, and may report according to its desire.

In the case of Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 6 Sup. Ct. 1064, 30 L. Ed. 220, where an ordinance of the city of San Francisco made it unlawful for any person or persons to carry on a laundry within the corporate limits of the city and county of San Francisco, without first having obtained the consent of the board of supervisors, except the same be located in a building constructed either of brick or stone, the Supreme Court of the United States held that such an ordinance was void, because it was purely arbitrary, and acknowledged neither guidance nor restraint. That court there said:

"There is nothing in the ordinances which points to such a regulation of the business of keeping and conducting laundries. They seem intended to confer, and actually do confer, not a discretion to be exercised upon a consideration of the circumstances of each case, but a naked and arbitrary power to give or withhold consent, not only as to places, but as to persons. So that, if an applicant for such consent, being in every way a competent and qualified person, and having complied with every reasonable condition demanded by any public interest, should, failing to obtain the requisite consent of the supervisors to the prosecution of his business, apply for redress by the judicial process of mandamus, to require the supervisors to consider and act upon his case, it would be a sufficient answer for them to say that the law had conferred upon them authority to withhold their assent, without reason and without responsibility. The power given to them is not confided to their discretion in the legal sense of that term, but is granted to their mere will."

In the case of Los Angeles County v. Hollywood Cemetery Ass'n, 124 Cal. 344, 57 Pac. 153, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, where an ordinance prohibited cemeteries in the city and county of Los Angeles, and provided that no one could establish a cemetery without the permission of the county supervisors, it was held that the ordinance was void. The court there said:

"It would hardly be contended that an ordinance declaring it to be unlawful to engage in the business of farming or merchandising in the county without the permission of the supervisors would be a reasonable exercise of legislative power, or could reasonably be said to be exercising the power to regulate. The supervisors may impose a license, the payment of which shall be a condition to the enjoyment of the privilege of engaging in lawful occupations; they may regulate the manner of conducting the business, if it be of a character tending to be injurious; but if the business be lawful, and having no injurious tendency, they cannot say who shall and who shall not exercise the right itself. Under the guise of regulating a business, the municipality cannot make prohibition possible by committing to the officers of the municipality the arbitrary power to deny permission to engage in that business. We do not think it was ever intended by the people in ordaining the section of the Constitution referred to, or of the Legislature in the statutory enactment, to include, in the power to make and enforce regulations, a power purely personal and arbitrary."

In State v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 South. 480, where an ordinance was passed by the city of New Orleans relating to the keeping of cows, the ordinance vested arbitrary power in the city council. The Supreme Court of Louisiana said:

"The discretion vested by the ordinance in the city council is in no way regulated or controlled. There are no conditons prescribed upon which the permit may be granted. It is within the power of the city council to grant the privilege to some, to deny it to others. The discretion vested in the council is purely arbitrary. It may be exercised in the interest of a favored few. It may be controlled by partisan considerations and race prejudices, or by personal animosities. It lays down no rules by which its impartial execution can be secured, or partiality and oppression prevented."

[1-3] Counsel for the city argue that the city council has power to control occupations which are perhaps useful, but which may be evil to the public, such as the selling of liquor, trading stamps, dispensing of poison, etc., and that such occupations may not be engaged in as a matter of common right, and may be regulated, or may be entirely prohibited. There can be no doubt that the state, or other proper authorities, under police power, may regulate or prohibit the sale of liquors or poisons, or articles that may be deleterious to the health of a community, and may prescribe the qualifications of persons who may deal therein; but it does not follow that the state or a municipal corporation may say that one person may, and that another person, equally qualified, may not, engage in a lawful business, because that would be to discriminate, and not to regulate or prohibit. We have no doubt of the right of the city to require certain qualifications of applicants, not inconsistent with state law, and to provide how those qualifications may be determined; but it may not say by special act that one person, or set of persons, may engage in any particular lawful calling, to the exclusion of all other persons. Persons equally qualified are entitled to the same privileges under the law, and a statute, or an ordinance, is void, which interferes with or abridges the privileges and immunities of citizens who are equally entitled to the protection of the law. There can be no reasonable escape from the conclusion that this ordinance provides for a discretion which is purely arbitrary, and therefore an illegal method of determining who shall and who shall not be granted a license to conduct a drug store or pharmacy.

It cannot be reasonably contended that the business of conducting a pharmacy or drug store is in itself an unlawful business. The keeping of a pharmacy or drug store has always been regarded as a legitimate business, and persons engaged therein are engaged in a legitimate enterprise. Some of the articles they deal in are, no doubt, poisons. The selling of such articles may be regulated, or prohibited; but to say, without qualification, who shall and who shall not engage in the drug business, is not a regulation of the business itself. The statute of the state, at section 8445, Rem. Code, authorizes any person who is a registered pharmacist to engage in the drug business. In the case of a druggist, the applicant for a license must show to the board of pharmacy the possession of certain qualifications. Section 8452 requires the state board of pharmacy to supervise the practice of pharmacy in the state. Section 8459 requires druggists to keep a record of the sales of poisons and spirituous or malt liquors. Section 8462 provides that any license under the act may be revoked for cause, upon a sworn complaint, upon notice to the licensee and upon a hearing. Section 8463 provides for appeal from an order revoking a license. So it is plain that the business of conducting a pharmacy or drug store in this state is a lawful business, under the laws of the state, and therefore neither state nor city, under the guise of regulation, may delegate to any person, or set of persons, the right to arbitrarily designate one who may enter the business, and, in their discretion, reject another, equally qualified, who may desire to enter the business, because neither may grant privileges which, upon the same terms, may not equally belong to all citizens. Section 12, art. 1, state Constitution.

An ordinance like this, which provides for a special privilege dependent upon the arbitrary discretion of a city council, or a committee of that body, is, as was said in State ex rel. Garrabad v. Dering, 84 Wis. 585, 54 N. W. 1104, 19 L. R. A. 858, 36 Am. St. Rep. 948, "entirely un-American and in conflict with the principles of our institutions and all modern ideas of civil liberty. It is susceptible of being applied to offensive and improper uses, made subversive of the rights of private citizens, and it interferes with and abridges their privileges and immunities, and denies them the equal protection of the laws in the exercise and enjoyment of their undoubted rights." We are satisfied, upon both reason and authority, that this ordinance is void.

The judgment appealed from is therefore reversed, and the cause ordered dismissed.

ELLIS, C. J., and FULLERTON, J., concur.

PARKER, J. (dissenting in part). I concur in the result reached in the foregoing opinion, but dissent from the view seemingly expressed therein that a city has power to determine the qualifications, moral or otherwise, of persons who may conduct a drug store, or determine the qualifications of persons who may practice pharmacy. The state has enacted laws for the determination of the qualifications of pharmacists, and when it issues a license to one it has determined is so qualified, the city plainly cannot curtail the right which the license confers. Aside from the strict practice of pharmacy, the conducting of a drug store, being as the opinion states a lawful business, is no different than the conducting of a grocery or dry goods store, in so far as is concerned the city's power to say who may or who may not own or conduct it. It may be that a city can levy a license tax upon such a business for the purpose of raising revenue, and it is possible that a city may in some measure regulate the manner in which it shall be conducted; but, however this may be, I am firmly convinced that the city cannot say who may or who may not own or conduct a drug store or a pharmacy any more than it can say who may or who may not own or conduct a grocery or dry goods store. That the city cannot do the latter is to my mind too self-evident to admit of argument. I want to reverse the judgment of conviction rendered by the superior court because, as I view it, the city has by enacting this ordinance arrogated to itself the power to determine who are privileged to follow this lawful business. To say that this is a flagrant usurpation of power is to my mind stating the case none too strongly against the city.

HOLCOMB, J. I concur with the opinion of Judge PARKER.

(96 Wash. 344)

In re NORTHLAKE AVE.

WAYLAND et al. v. CITY OF SEATTLE.

(No. 13736.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Eminent Domain 🔑202(6)—Evidence—Admissibility—Assessment Rolls.

In condemnation proceedings under the rule that tax rolls are not competent evidence of the value of property in actions not pertaining to the question of taxation, where value is the sole issue sought to be proved, assessment rolls, showing the value of property sought to be condemned, were not rendered admissible and independent evidence as declarations against interest because the city condemning the land had a part in making up the assessment rolls thereon, although perhaps admissible if necessary to contradict assessing officers called as witnesses by either side.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 541.]

2. Evidence 🔑48—Judicial Notice—Common Knowledge—Valuation for Taxation.

It is a matter of common knowledge, of which the courts take judicial notice, that the valuations placed on property by assessors for purposes of taxation are relative rather than actual, and that the functions of the board of equalization are not to correct insufficient or excessive valuations as a whole, but are to correct erroneous valuations as applied to an individual or a community of individuals, so that the individual or the community of individuals are not called upon to bear either more or less than their just proportion of the burden of taxation.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 70.]

3. Eminent Domain 🔑202(6)—Secondary Evidence—Assessment Rolls.

In condemnation proceedings on sole issue of market value, tax assessment rolls are inadmissible because they are, at best, but secondary evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 541.]

4. Eminent Domain 🔑202(1)—Evidence—Admissibility.

In condemnation proceedings under the rule that only the land physically invaded can be considered in assessing damages or benefits, the court properly refused evidence to show that land condemned had additional value because of shore lands separated from the land in question by a street, and not used in common with such land.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 541.]

5. Eminent Domain 🔑202(2, 3)—Review—Issue of Market Value.

In condemnation proceedings on issue of market value of property condemned, the admissibility of evidence of price paid for land in the same vicinity is largely in the discretion of the trial court, and will be reviewed only for manifest abuse.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 541.]

6. Eminent Domain 🔑202(1)—Evidence—Return of Appraisement in Probate Court.

In condemnation proceedings on the issue of market value of land condemned, the return showing the appraisement of the value of such land in probate proceedings, which were res inter alios acta and not binding on those not parties to them, was properly excluded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 541.]

7. Eminent Domain 🔑203(1)—Evidence—Admissibility—Specific Damage.

In condemnation proceedings, on the issue of market value, while the property owners were entitled to show that the land taken bordered on an improved street as tending to enhance its value, and with reference to the land not taken, among other elements of damage, the fact that, by the segregation of the part sought to be condemned, the remaining land would be left without a paved or graded street, they could not show as an element of specific damage the amount their property had been assessed for the improvement of the existing street, where the work was done by the municipality, as they recover this sum in the enhanced market value of the property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 542.]

8. Eminent Domain 🔑203(1)—Evidence—Admissibility—Specific Damage.

The property owners could not show the probable cost of new grade and paving as a specific element of damage to the land remaining, as the duty to make such improvement is a municipal duty, and its cost cannot be imposed upon private property beyond the amount of benefit, so that the property owner does not therefore contribute to the expense from his own resources; he but refunds to the city in one kind of property that which the city has, from the necessities of the case, conferred upon him in property of another kind.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 542.]

9. Eminent Domain 🔑203(1)—Measure of Damages—Future Improvement Assessments.

The cost of grading and paving a street that may thereafter be assessed upon abutting property is too uncertain, remote, and contingent to be recovered as damages in a condemnation proceeding brought to condemn land for the creation of the street.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Eminent Domain, Cent. Dig. § 542.]

10. Appeal and Error 🔑1058(1)—Review—Reversible Error.

In condemnation proceedings, where the relation of land to a railway was sufficiently shown and it was evident that the land could be connected with the railway track by a spur running in any one of a number of different directions, as a map showing the manner by which the property could be connected with the existing railway by the construction of a spur track was of no special probative value and merely cumulative, its exclusion was not reversible error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4195, 4200.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Boyd J. Tallman, Judge.

Condemnation proceedings by the City of Seattle, opposed by Margaret Wayland and others. From the judgment the named defendant and others appeal. Judgment affirmed.

Carkeek & McDonald, of Seattle, for appellants. Hugh M. Caldwell, Walter F. Meier, and Howard A. Hanson, all of Seattle, for respondent.

FULLERTON, J. The city of Seattle by ordinance provided for widening and extending a street situated within its boundaries known in the record as Northlake avenue. The work required taking and damaging certain tracts of land owned in severalty by a number of persons. This action was brought to condemn the necessary land and to ascertain the just compensation required to be paid to the several owners. Among the tracts of land taken and damaged were tracts belonging to the appellants in this action, who appeal because dissatisfied with the award made them. The errors assigned all relate to rulings of the court excluding evidence offered to show the value of the property taken.

[1] The appellants, Wayland, Monks, and Magnesia Asbestos Supply Company, in presenting their case to the jury offered in evidence the assessment roll of King county, showing the values placed on their properties by the county assessor, and the values upon which they had paid taxes, for some five years immediately prior to the trial. The rejection of this proffered testimony is the first error assigned. The appellants concede the general rule, that tax rolls are not competent evidence of the value of property in actions not pertaining to the question of taxation, where value is the sole issue sought to be proved, but they contend for an exception to the general rule. They rely on the fact that it is the city of Seattle which is condemning, and that the city has had a part in making up these assessment rolls, in that it has had a representative on the county board of equalization during the period of time covered by the proffered rolls. In other words, it is contended that the rolls were admissible as declarations against interest. There are cases, from jurisdictions where the property holder is required by law to file with the assessor a sworn statement showing the character of the property owned by him with an estimate of its value, which hold that such sworn statement is competent evidence, in an action between the owner and a stranger when the value of the property is an issue, to contradict the owner and as a declaration against interest; but the cases on the question, even as thus limited, are by no means uniform. However, we think the rule, if conceded, could have no application to the question here presented. The city as the representative of the public performs many functions, more or less widely related, acting through separate and independent officers, and it may be questioned, we think, whether the acts and declarations of its officers in the performance of one of such functions could, in any case, be evidence against it while in the performance of another. But clearly it cannot be so when the functions are so distinct that its acts in the one in no manner stultify or annul its acts in another. Had the city in the present instance called its assessing officers as witnesses, and had they testified in contradiction of the assessment rolls, doubtless the appellants could have questioned them concerning their former representations, and, had they remained obstinate, could have introduced the rolls to contradict them, or they could have made their own witnesses and taken their opinions as to the values of the property. But the assessment rolls were not independent evidence of the values of the property on the issue as here presented.

[2] Again in this jurisdiction the assessor places his own values on real property for the purposes of taxation. It is a matter of common knowledge, of which the courts can take judicial notice, that the valuations placed thereon by such officers for such purposes are relative rather than actual, that the functions of the board of equalization are not to correct insufficient or excessive valuations as a whole, but are to correct erroneous valuations as applied to an individual or a community of individuals, so that the individual or the community of individuals are not called upon to bear either more or less than their just proportion of the burden of taxation.

[3] For these reasons, and for the further reason that the evidence is at best but secondary, the courts maintain the rule that assessment rolls are not independent evidence of the market value of real property in cases where such market value is the sole question at issue. The principles apply to the present case, and the court did not err in its rulings.

[4] The appellant Magnesia Asbestos Supply Company makes the further contention that the court erred in refusing to permit it to show that its land had an additional value by reason of the fact that it owned adjacent shore lands abutting upon Lake Union which gave the land a water outlet. This land was separated from the lands a part of which was taken by a street and was not included as lands taken or damaged in the petition to condemn. The tracts were not used in common, and the most that could be said concerning them is that they could be so used by making use of the intervening street. The general rule is that it is only the tract of land physically invaded that can be considered in assessing either damages or benefits. In re Queen Anne Boulevard, 77 Wash. 91, 137 Pac. 435, and we are clear that there was no such relation between the two tracts as to require the jury to consider the one in estimating damages to the other. See, also, Seattle v. Dexter Horton Tr. & Sav Bank, 90 Wash. 661, 156 Pac. 844.

[5] A witness called to testify as to the value of the property of the last-named appellant was at first permitted to state the price he had paid for lands in the same vicinity, although some distance from the land in question. Afterwards, on motion of the city, the testimony was withdrawn from the consideration of the jury, and error is assigned thereon. The trial court was of the opinion that the properties were not sufficiently similar in character, and were too widely separated to render the evidence of probative value. These are matters on which no general rules can be laid down, and when and when not such evidence is admissible must rest largely in the discretion of the trial court, to be reviewed only for manifest abuse. We find no error in the ruling.

[6] The appellant Wayland offered to show that the property taken in which she was interested had recently been administered upon in the probate court; that in the course of administration it had been appraised by the three disinterested competent persons appointed by the court as appraisers, and that an inheritance tax had been paid to the state, based on the values shown by the appraisment—and proffered the return showing the appraisement as evidence of the value of the property. The trial court rejected the offered proofs, we think rightly. Many of the reasons for the rejection of the tax rolls are applicable to this return, but in addition the probate proceedings with reference to this proceeding fall within the maxim of res inter alios acta, and can in no way be binding upon or be evidence against those who were not parties to them.

[7] The appellants Quinn, Rominger, and Shelton, assign error upon the rulings of the court refusing to permit them to show as an element of damages (we quote the language of their brief)—

> "that the streets in front of their property were already graded, and that in case of a change of grade they would have to pay another assessment for the regrading of the street, and that the cost of the first grade was a proper element to be allowed them as gross damages."

With reference to the land taken the appellants were entitled to its fair market value. To establish such value they were entitled to bring before the jury every fact and circumstance relating to the land which would fairly and reasonably tend to enlighten them as to such value, and if the land so taken had bordering upon it a graded and paved street, undoubtedly they were entitled to show this fact as an element tending to enhance its value. So with reference to the land not taken, they were entitled to show, among other elements of damage, the fact that, by the segregation of the part sought to be condemned, the remaining land would be left without a paved or graded street. But as we read the record, the court did not deny them these privileges. What it did deny them was the privilege of showing as specific elements of damage the amount their property had been assessed for paving the existing street and the amount their property would probably be assessed for paving the new street. We think it clear that neither of these was the element of specific damage. If the appellants had graded and paved the streets at their own cost, such cost might have been shown on the principle which permits the price at which the land was bought to be shown, namely, as a circumstance tending to show the market value of the land. But the appellants neither graded nor paved the street at their own cost. The work was done by the municipality, and the appellants paid according to the benefits the work conferred upon their property. This sum they recover in the enhanced market value of the property, and to permit them to recover the amount paid as a specific element of damage would be to permit a double recovery for the same injury. In re Harrison Street, 74 Wash. 187, 133 Pac. 8.

[8, 9] The probable cost of a new grade and new paving is not recoverable for two reasons: In the first place, the duty to grade and pave a street in this jurisdiction is a municipal duty. The cost cannot be imposed upon private property except in those cases where the property is benefited by the work, and then only in an amount which does not exceed the benefits. The property owner does not therefore contribute to the expense from his own resources; he but refunds to the city in one kind of property that which the city has from the necessities of the case conferred upon him in property of another kind. In the second place, the cost of grading and paving a street that may thereafter be assessed upon abutting property is too uncertain, remote, and contingent to be recovered as damages in a condemnation proceeding brought to condemn land for the creation of the street. The city may or may not cause the street to be graded or paved, or, if it does, it has a wide choice of methods; it may establish the grade upon one line or another, and may order it paved to one width or another, and with any one of a variety of materials the cost of which will vary with the character of grade and materials chosen. Unless these are known in advance, which was not the case here, there is no basis upon which the jury can estimate the cost. City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454, 42 N. W. 986, 4 L. R. A. 813.

[10] The appellants Eason and Eayson own land adjacent to the track of a railway company. They introduced evidence tending to show that their property was available for manufacturing purposes, and its location with reference to the railway company's track, and tendered in evidence a map on which was delineated a line showing the manner by which the property could be connected with the existing railway by the construction of a spur track. The court refused to permit the map to go to the jury, and the appellants excepted. The map could properly have been submitted to the jury, but we think the refusal of the court to admit it was nevertheless not reversible error.

The surroundings were shown and, from the position of the land relative to the existing railway track, it is evident that the land could be connected with the railway track by a spur running in any one of a number of different directions. The map, therefore, had no special probative value, and it is impossible to conceive that the verdict of the jury would have been different had the map been submitted to them. The material inquiry was the relation of the land to the railway, and, as this was sufficiently shown by other evidence in the record, the evidence offered was merely cumulative. This we have held is not necessarily a ground for reversal, and, considering its slight probative value, we cannot so hold in this instance. Warren v. Kearney, 63 Wash. 369, 115 Pac. 739; Klodek v. May Creek Logging Co., 71 Wash. 573, 129 Pac. 99.

Our conclusion is that the judgment should be affirmed. It is so ordered.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, PARKER, and HOLCOMB, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 295)

SARUSAL v. SEUNG et ux. (No. 13635.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 17, 1917.)

1. Master and Servant 🔑6—Contracts of Hiring—Period—Presumption.

In contracts of hiring the fact that wages are to be paid by the day, or other given period, is a mere evidential circumstance, which, standing alone, tends to prove that there was a hiring for that period, but the presumption so raised is not absolute, and, if there are other circumstances impairing its weight, the circumstance has little probative force.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. § 6.]

2. Master and Servant 🔑8(1)—Contract of Employment—Hiring for Job.

Where a Chinaman employed to salvage damaged canned salmon went to a Filipino and employed him to secure Filipino laborers for the job, agreeing to pay the laborers $1.90 a day, and to pay the Filipino 10 cents a day for each laborer, the Filipino to furnish his own timekeeper and foreman, the size of the job being such that it would probably take 50 days with from 260 to 300 men to finish it, the Filipino was employed for the duration of the job, and the Chinaman had no right arbitrarily to terminate the contract at the end of the third week, as he attempted to do, and, by paying for past service, to avoid liability for the rest of the time contemplated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Master and Servant, Cent. Dig. §§ 8, 17.]

3. Contracts 🔑319(1)—Partial Performance.

Where a Chinaman employed a Filipino to secure laborers at certain wages for a job, the fact that the Filipino was not permitted fully to perform his contract by furnishing laborers till the job was done was no good reason why he should not recover to the extent he was permitted to and did perform it, and to the extent the benefit of such partial performance was accepted and retained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 1493, 1493½.]

4. Contracts 🔑322(3)—Sufficiency of Evidence.

In an action by a Filipino against a Chinaman for breach of contract, whereby the Filipino was to secure laborers at $1.90 a day for the Chinaman, evidence held insufficient to sustain the court's finding that some of the men secured by the Filipino were paid by him less than $1.90 a day.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 1534.]

Department 1. Appeal from Superior Court, King County; Kenneth Mackintosh, Judge.

Action by V. N. Sarusal against John Seung and Mrs. John Seung, doing business as Ah Seung. From a judgment for plaintiff, defendants appeal. Cause remanded, with direction to modify the judgment.

Turner, Hartge & Turner, of Seattle, for appellants. J. Kalina, of Seattle, for respondent.

ELLIS, C. J. This is an action to recover for services claimed by plaintiff to have been performed by him for defendants in pursuance of an oral contract.

It is alleged, in substance, that about October 1, 1915, plaintiff agreed to furnish to defendants about 260 men for a period of about 50 working days to clean salmon cans, the men to receive $1.90 a day, the work to commence about October 18, 1915; that it was understood that plaintiff should have complete charge of the men, should keep books showing the actual work done and number of men employed, should employ a timekeeper at his own expense, and keep a correct schedule of the time put in by the men so hired; that it was further agreed that plaintiff should have for his services in the premises 10 cents a day for each man so engaged for a period of about 50 days during which time the job lasted. It is then alleged that in performance of this contract plaintiff secured the services of 263 men at $1.90 a day each for about 50 days, took charge of these men, acted as superintendent, employed a timekeeper, and paid him from his own funds, and that defendants accepted these services until December 6, 1915; that plaintiff so earned $1,315 under the contract, but defendants have paid him only $552.30, leaving a balance of $762.70 due and unpaid, for which balance, with interest, judgment is prayed.

The cause was tried to the court without a jury. The court found the contract substantially as alleged, and specifically, that it was to continue for a period of about 50 days, or for as long as would be required to complete the job of cleaning cans, and that plaintiff was to receive for his services 10 cents a day for each man so engaged during the time the job lasted. The court further found that plaintiff has performed the contract, secured the services of more than 263 men at $1.90 a day each, some of the men being paid a less rate per day; that he has spent much time and money in securing men, has acted as superintendent, and put in a timekeeper; that the work commenced about October 18, and continued to December 9, 1915; that the work was accepted by defendants; that plaintiff has received for his service $183.50; and that there is a balance due him of $500. Judgment was rendered for plaintiff for that sum and costs. Defendants appeal.

The dominant claim of appellants is that the contract was for an indefinite time at daily wages, hence terminable at will by either party; that it was terminated by appellants after three weeks; and that payment was then made in full. A brief review of the evidence touching the purpose and terms of the contract is necessary. Respondent is a Filipino. Appellants are Chinese. Nearly all of the witnesses belonged to one or the other of these races. The real meaning intended to be conveyed by many of them is difficult to gather. It sufficiently appears, however, that one Horner was employed by a steamship company and insurance companies to save as much as possible of certain damaged canned salmon. He in turn employed appellant John Seung to procure men for the work. Appellant Seung was to have the management of the men through his own foreman and timekeeper, though Horner had the right to discharge the men as he saw fit. Seung employed a large number of Chinese, but, needing more men, applied to respondent to secure for the work as many Filipinos as possible. It seems clear that Seung at the beginning thought he could attain the best results by keeping the laborers of the two races separate under the direct management of foremen of their own respective kind. The only intelligible evidence as to what the actual contract here involved was is found in respondent's testimony, and is as follows:

"On October 17, 1915, Mr. John Seung came to my place down at 655 Weller street, and he came inside to my store and said, 'Hello, Sarusal.' 'Hello, Mr. Seung,' I said. He said, 'I was here yesterday, but the boy said you are not here.' He said, 'You are working?' I said, 'Yes, sir.' I asked him, 'What you want to see me about, Mr. Seung?' Mr. Seung said, 'I come to see you because I want some boys going to work.' I asked him, 'What kind of work, Mr. Seung?' He said, 'Just cleaning salmon cans; can you get me somebody?' I said, 'Yes, sir.' 'Well, how much you going to pay the boys wages, Mr. Seung?' I said; and I said, 'You pay by the day or your pay by the month?' He said, 'I pay by the day; I could not pay by the month, because this job I think will not last much longer.' Well, I said, 'How much you going to pay the boys wages by the day?' Mr. Seung said, 'I pay the boys wages of $1.90 per day, and I give you 10 cents per day for each man,' he said, 'but you are to put your own foreman and your timekeeper to carry all of your men, because I want to put my own foreman and timekeeper to carry my men.' 'They are all Chinamen,' he says, 'because I don't want it mixed up, because then it is too much trouble,' he says. I said, 'All right, Mr. Seung, I am satisfied, but can you make me some agreement, Mr. Seung?' Mr. Seung explained to me, he said, 'Well, Sarusal, this kind of job is much different from Alaska, because in Alaska the boys are working by the season, and they give you agreement for the boys there in Alaska that are working by the season, but this job pay by the day, and I think agreement is no use.' Mr. Seung say that. 'That about the only thing I want,' I said. And Mr. Seung said, 'I keep my promise on what I said because my word is more good than an agreement.' Mr. Seung said that. And from that time I engaged to give him men at that time, and I told him, 'Everything you said, Mr. Seung, I am satisfied, but I want to know when the boys going to start to work.' Mr. Seung said, 'I come again and let you know when they are going to start to work, but anyhow,' he said, Mr. Seung said, 'you get the boys as much as you can; Mr. Seung say that."

He further testified Seung then told him from 260 to 300 men would be required to finish the job in about 50 days. Though Seung denied that he made any contract with respondent, and insisted that he contracted with another Filipino named Morano, he did not claim that the agreement, with whomsoever made, was materially different from that above imported.

Counsel for appellants plant themselves squarely upon the ground that this was a hiring without any agreement as to duration, with wages payable by the day; that it was therefore a hiring by the day, hence terminable by either party at the end of any day. We shall consume no space by an analysis of the many authorities cited, since, if the premises are sound, the conclusion within certain limits may be conceded. But it seems to us that in stating the premises counsel have confused the terms upon which respondent was authorized to employ the men with the terms upon which respondent himself was employed. Respondent was only authorized to hire men by the day. They were to be paid by the day. In actual practice the men were paid at the end of each week; the money for the purpose being furnished to respondent by Seung. Seung himself could only hire men by the day, since Horner had reserved the right to discharge any man hired, and in fact, as the evidence shows, did discharge men at the rate of 40 to 50 a day. It is undisputed that men were daily leaving and others were daily taken on.

[1] In contracts of this character the fact that wages are to be paid by the day, or other given period, is a mere evidential circumstance which, standing alone, tends to prove that there was a hiring for that period. But the presumption so raised is by no means absolute. If there are other circumstances impairing its weight, that circumstance has little probative force and readily yields.

Cronemillar v. Duluth-Superior Milling Co., 134 Wis. 248, 114 N. W. 432. Here the very nature of the service undertaken by respondent—the intention of the parties to be gathered from the terms and purpose of the agreement—indicates that as long as any of the men furnished by him remained on the job respondent was to receive for his services in securing and overseeing them pay at the rate of 10 cents a day for each man while so employed. He was not to be paid a fixed sum by the day as were the men, but was to be paid for each man, and his pay as to each man was to be determined by the number of days that man worked. All this is demonstrated by the stipulations that he was to employ his own foreman and his own timekeeper at his own expense, and carry his own men on a separate pay roll—stipulations wholly inconsistent with the idea of an employment from day to day or by the day. Respondent sent men to Tacoma, Bremerton, and Port Blakely to secure men. He employed a foreman and a timekeeper. It is hardly conceivable that he would have gone to this trouble and expense had he understood that his employment was from day to day and terminable at the end of any day. The whole conversation above quoted shows that neither party had any such intention.

[2] The very nature of the service undertaken and the mode of computing his pay so as to make it commensurate with the service rendered show an employment of respondent for the duration of the job. It follows that appellant had no right arbitrarily to terminate the contract at the end of the third week, as he attempted to do, and by paying respondent for past service avoid liability for the rest of the time contemplated while retaining men secured by respondent. Respondent, so far as the evidence shows, was ready, able, and willing to continue their superintendence through his own foreman and timekeeper, and at his own expense. Appellant could not, merely for his own convenience, relieve respondent from these duties, and thus avoid payment for services, the fruits of which he still retained.

[3] But appellants urge that respondent is not suing as an employment agent. This is true, but a part of his service was to secure men. Had he been permitted to fully perform his contract, it is obvious that he might have secured all of the Filipinos at any time employed on the job from beginning to end. He would thus have earned and could have recovered on the basis of all the men he could secure as contemplated in the agreement. The fact that he was not permitted to fully perform his contract is no good reason why he should not recover to the extent he was permitted to and did perform it, and to the extent the benefit of that performance was accepted and retained.

It is next contended that there was no evidence that any of the men secured by respondent remained on the job till it was completed, and no evidence as to how long any of them remained. The evidence on this point is far from satisfactory. It is admitted that at the end of the first three weeks Seung took over the men, placed them under his own foreman and timekeeper, and thereafter carried them on his own pay roll. Morano, who for the first three weeks acted as respondent's foreman, and thereafter remained as a common laborer for Seung, testified that all of these men and more remained to the end. But the evidence is overwhelming that throughout the whole work many men, as high as 40 and 50 every day, were discharged and others hired. Morano either did not mean what he seems to have said or his testimony in this regard is incredible. Ah Fong, appellants' foreman who had charge of the men after the first three weeks, and who must have had more accurate knowledge than any other witness, referring to Sarusal's men, testified:

> "Q. Did most of them come back or most not come back? A. Some of them come back. Lot of them get another job. Q. Do you know how many of them came back? A. I don't know; about 30 or 40 men. Q. And about how many right along every day? A. Yes, sir; some they work a half day to two or three days. No good. Just take them off the job. All lazy men take off. One day Mr. Horner take a whole bunch off, about 80 or 90 men."

He was appellants' witness, and plainly appellants' partisan. It seems to us that he meant to convey the idea that only 30 or 40 of Sarusal's men remained throughout the work. One Wadsworth, who was employed by Seung as a sort of watchman on Saturdays, when the men were paid off during the last four or five weeks of the work, testified that about 150 of Sarusal's men returned after the first three weeks, but most of them worked but a short time, and that the men were continually changing. Though his testimony is almost as unintelligible as that of the Chinese, it is evident that he did not mean to imply that all of the 150 who returned remained on the work. It seems to us that the only tangible evidence as to the number of men who remained to the end of the work was that of Ah Fong, and that the respondent should only have been allowed pay after the first three weeks on the basis of 40 men.

Appellants next contend that the contract was made with Morano, not with respondent, and that Morano by acquiescing in the taking over of the men by Seung and thereafter continuing in Seung's employment as a common laborer consented to the termination of the contract. We shall not discuss the evidence on this point further than to say that it strongly preponderates in favor of the court's finding that the contract was made with respondent. Morano was respondent's foreman. There is no evidence that he was respondent's agent in making the contract or that he had any authority to consent to its termination.

[4] Appellants also claim that respondent himself breached the contract by paying to some of the men less than the agreed price per day of $1.90, and that appellant was thus justified in terminating the employment. The evidence that some of the men were paid less than the specified amount was mainly hearsay. On the other hand, respondent, his foreman, and his timekeeper all testified positively that every man was paid the full $1.90 a day. The court's finding that some of the men were paid less seems to us contrary to the preponderance of the evidence.

Upon the whole record we are satisfied that respondent is entitled to recover an amount equal to 10 cents a day for each of the 40 men who remained on the work for a period of 29 days during which it appears the work continued after the first three weeks. This would amount to $116.

The cause is remanded, with direction to so modify the judgment. Appellants may recover their costs on this appeal.

MORRIS, CHADWICK, MAIN, and MOUNT, JJ., concur.

(96 Wash. 352)

In re ENNIS' ESTATE.

LOVE, WARREN & MONROE CO. et al. v. ENNIS et al.

(No. 13761.)

(Supreme Court of Washington. May 18, 1917.)

1. Executors and Administrators 🔑256(5)—Allowance of Claims—Appeal—Claims for Less than Supreme Court's Jurisdictional Amount—Constitution.

Under Const. art. 4, § 4, denying appellate jurisdiction to the Supreme Court in civil actions for the recovery of money or personalty when the original amount in controversy does not exceed $200, none of the claimants against a decedent's estate for sums under $200 could prosecute an independent appeal from the judgment disallowing all claims filed with the administratrix, and they did not have an appealable interest, and therefore appeal of such other claimants was not subject to dismissal for failure to serve notice of the appeal on the claimants for less than $200, since service of notice is required on those only who, in addition to appearing in the action, have some right of appeal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 854–856, 915–917.]

2. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(2)—Authority to Carry on Business.

An executor, under powers conferred by will, may carry on the business of his testator, if such testamentary power is conferred in distinct and positive terms.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

3. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1)—Continuance of Intestate's Business—Parol Direction.

Intestate's parol direction that his son be intrusted with the carrying on of his business, and that, on settlement of the estate, the son be paid $1,000 over and above his distributive share, was not legally sufficient justification for the personal representative to continue the business, under management of the son, for the benefit of the family or estate, since a personal representative has no power to continue the business of a decedent unless expressly authorized by will, statute, or order of the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

4. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1)—Authority to Continue Business.

Where the superior court, pursuant to an administratrix's petition showing the consent of all the heirs, under Rem. Code 1915, § 1497, made an order authorizing and empowering her to sell the stock of goods in decedent's store at private sale in such manner as might seem best to her, such order merely authorized the disposal of the stock, and did not authorize continuance of the business to the extent of replenishing the stock.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

5. Principal and Agent 🔑100(6)—Agent for Administratrix — Management of Intestate's Store.

Intestate's son, managing his store after intestate's death in accordance with intestate's parol wish and the agreement of the heirs, was merely the agent of intestate's administratrix, who was bound by his acts within the apparent scope of his authority.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. § 272.]

6. Principal and Agent 🔑137(1)—Agency by Estoppel.

Where intestate's administratrix, employed in intestate's store when goods ordered by intestate's son, the manager of the store, were coming in, and who, after admitted knowledge of the claims for the goods, did not repudiate them, but promised that they should be paid, and subsequently obtained an order of court permitting a reduction sale of the goods over the counter, and on the sale disposed of the goods, payment for which she seeks to resist on the ground that the son made the purchases without her knowledge or consent, is estopped to assert that she was not bound by the acts of the son, her agent managing the store.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Principal and Agent, Cent. Dig. §§ 492, 494.]

7. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1)—Continuance of Business.

The general rule that a personal representative cannot continue a decedent's business has some limitations, as where the executor is the residuary legatee, etc.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

8. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1)—Temporary Continuance of Business—Power of Court—Statute.

Under Rem. Code 1915, § 1497, providing that if it be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that it will be for the interest of the estate to allow the executor or administrator to sell some or the whole of the personal estate at private sale, the court may so order, the courts of Washington have power to authorize the temporary continuance of a decedent's business by his personal representative, the order authorizing payment of costs of sale as a part of the expenses of administration, but an order of sale does not justify the purchase of additional merchandise to the extent of keeping the stock intact, or more than is necessary to enable the administrator to sell the remaining stock to best advantage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

9. Executors and Administrators 🔑271—Continuance of Business — Rights of Creditors.

Trade creditors who furnish decedent's business with merchandise in violation of the rule that a personal representative cannot purchase additional merchandise to keep the stock intact, though authorized to continue the business temporarily to close it out, are restricted to that part of the estate assets embarked in the business to which they contributed, unless their rights against the general assets have been enlarged by estoppel depriving the heirs and general creditors of the right to assert their prior claims against the general assets.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 1044–1051.]

10. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) — Carrying on Business — Governing Principle.

The authority of a personal representative to carry on decedent's business under order of the court is governed by the same principles which apply in case of conducting a business under testamentary powers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

11. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) — Consent of Heirs and Creditors to Conduct Business—Estoppel.

The consent of adult heirs that the administrator may carry on decedent's business estops them to enforce personal liability against the administrator for losses incurred by him in such business, a rule which extends to general creditors, who, as beneficiaries of the estate, expressly consent that the administrator may carry on the business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

12. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) —Consent to Carry on Business—Liability to Trade Creditors—Estoppel.

Where the heirs and general creditors of decedent consent that his business may be carried on by the administrator as a business venture, they are estopped to dispute the liability of the trade assets of the estate for debts incurred therein by the administrator, the sole extent to which trade creditors are entitled to take advantage of the principle of estoppel.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

13. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) —Continuance of Decedent's Business—Acquiescence of General Creditor—Estoppel as to Trade Creditors.

Where the holder of a substantial general claim against decedent's estate must have been cognizant that his business was being conducted by his son and administratrix as a going business, its failure to take any action to assert its right estopped it from claiming, as against trade creditors who sold goods to the business, though it never expressly consented to a continuance of the business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

14. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) —Carrying on Decedent's Business—Liability of General Assets to Trade Creditors.

Though the fact that decedent's business was carried on after his death with the consent of the heirs and administratrix was sufficient to estop them from disputing the prior rights of trade creditors in the trade assets, it did not estop them to deny the liability of the general assets to the trade creditors, who had no right to be placed on an equality with those existing at decedent's death, and entitled to share in the estate as it then existed, since they contracted with the administratrix chargeable with notice as to any limitation on her powers to bind the estate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

15. Executors and Administrators 🔑93(1) — Conduct of Decedent's Business — Rights of Trade Creditors.

Trade creditors, who, after decedent's death, deal with his personal representative carrying on his business, are chargeable with notice as to any limitation on the representative's powers to bind the estate, dealing with the representative on his personal credit and on the credit of the business conducted by him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 407, 408.]

Department 2. Appeal from Superior Court, Grays Harbor County; Geo. D. Abel, Judge.

In the matter of the Estate of A. C. Ennis, deceased, Love, Warren & Monroe Company, Western Dry Goods Company, Bauer Bros., and others presented claims for allowance to Emma C. Ennis, administratrix, Hayes & Hayes, Bankers, general creditors, resisting. From a judgment disallowing and rejecting the claims, the named claimants appeal. Reversed, with directions to allow the claims as preferred claims against moneys in the hands of the administratrix derived from sale of a stock of merchandise.

Wettrick, Anderson & Wettrick, of Seattle, and W. W. Keyes, of Tacoma, for appellants. Hogan & Graham and E. E. Boner, all of Aberdeen, for respondents.

FULLERTON, J. A. C. Ennis died intestate on January 23, 1911, leaving surviving him his widow, Emma C. Ennis, and four adult children. His estate consisted of a stock of general merchandise at Elma, Wash., appraised at $4,000, and realty in the cities of Spokane and Centralia appraised at $11,250. The widow was appointed administratrix of the estate on March 11, 1911, and made weekly publication of her notice to creditors from April 7 to May 5, 1911. Aside from about $800 of indebtedness for goods in the store, which was taken care of by the widow's advancement of personal funds and by the proceeds of sales of merchandise from the store, the only indebtedness existing at the time of the death of A. C. Ennis was a note for $2,000, with accrued interest, executed to Hayes & Hayes, Bankers, and a claim for $400 due the son Mark Ennis for money loaned to the deceased. All the heirs, following the death of A. C. Ennis, agreed among themselves that:

> "Donald Ennis might operate the dry goods store at Elma, Wash., in the same manner as if he owned the same, and that, when it came to final distribution of the estate, the store or stock of merchandise should go to the said Donald Ennis and be distributed to him at the appraised value, said Ennis to be allowed in the distribution an extra $1,000 over and above the amount to which he was legally entitled, and if after the allowance of such $1,000 extra to the said Donald Ennis, the said stock of goods would be in excess of what the said Donald Ennis was entitled to under said arrangement, then the said Donald Ennis would pay the other heirs pro rata such excess."

On February 23, 1912, after the store had been conducted by Donald Ennis for more than a year without an order of court, the administratrix and all the heirs presented a petition for an order of private sale of the merchandise containing the following recitals:

> "That by an agreement among the heirs it was thought advisable to keep said store running during the administration of the estate, with a view to making some profit to the estate to aid in paying of any debts against the estate and the expenses of administration; but that, owing to the continued depression in business, it has been impossible to realize anything in the way of profit from the business, and it is not thought by us advisable to continue said business. * * * Wherefore we, your petitioners, being all the heirs of above-entitled estate, pray an order of this [court] permitting and empowering the administratrix of said estate to sell said stock of goods at private sale in such manner as may seem to her for the best interests of this estate."

Upon this petition the court, on March 4, 1912, made its order:

> "* * * That said administratrix Emma O. Ennis be and she is hereby authorized and empowered to sell said stock of goods at private sale in such manner as may to her seem best, and of her actions make due report to this court."

The business as conducted by Donald Ennis not proving profitable at Elma, it was shifted to Centralia in the month of August, 1913, and in the period between October and December of that year Donald incurred debts in the sum of $3,824.82 for merchandise placed in stock at the Centralia store. Donald Ennis was taken ill in December, 1913, and died January 16, 1914. In February, 1914, the administratrix and all the remaining heirs presented to the court a petition for authority to sell off the stock at a reduction sale over the counter, upon which the court made the following order:

> "It now appears that the administratrix in the above-entitled matter has petitioned the court for an order to sell at reduction sale, over the counter, under a sales manager, the stock of dry goods belonging to said estate at Centralia, Wash., and pay said sales manager 10 per cent. of the gross receipts of said sale and the incidental expenses necessary for putting on such sale, and that when said sale has been completed, the remaining goods be sold in the lump sum at the best price obtainable, to which petition all of the heirs and persons interested in said estate have signified their assent in writing. It is therefore ordered that the administratrix put on said reduction sale over the counter, under a sales manager, and that she is authorized to pay the said sales manager 10 per cent. of the gross receipts and the necessary advertising, labor, and incidentals necessarily incurred in said sale; that when said sale has run its course in the opinion of the administratrix, then she is hereby authorized to sell whatever goods are remaining in the lump sum at private sale for the best price obtainable."

A sale was had under this order, and the net amount of $650.85 realized after the payment of expenses of sale, according to the findings made by the court. The report of the administratrix, however, shows $879.90 as net proceeds of sale after payment of expenses for conducting the sale in the sum of $650.85. The various creditors who had sold goods to the Ennis store during the latter part of its operation at Centralia presented to the administratrix for allowance their claims, totaling $3,824.82. On January 2, 1915, the administratrix filed a report, disavowing liability, and petitioned the court for the issuance of a citation against such claimants to show cause why their claims should not be disallowed. A show-cause order for that purpose was entered, directing the claimants to appear before the court on November 19, 1915, and after hearing thereon a judgment was entered, disallowing and rejecting the claims. From that judgment the creditors appeal to this court.

The respondents interpose a motion to dismiss the appeal on the ground of failure to serve notice on all the parties appearing before the court. On the petition of the administratrix some 28 claimants were cited to appear before the superior court of Grays Harbor county to show cause why their claims should not be disallowed. A hearing was had on November 19, 1915, and judgment subsequently rendered, disallowing and rejecting all the claims. These claims were in various amounts, ranging from $923.98 to $13.27, all except three of them being below the sum of $200. On July 5, 1916, the three claimants for sums in excess of $200 served and filed their notice of appeal. Service was made only on the prevailing parties to the judgment, who were the administratrix and a general creditor who had resisted the claims. No service was made on the coparties appearing in the cause whose claims were under $200 in amount. Motion is made by the prevailing parties to dismiss the appeal for failure to serve notice upon all the parties appearing in the action.

[1] The motion is resisted by the appellants on the ground that their coparties below had no appealable interest, because their respective claims were each below the amount of $200, and hence unappealable under Const. art. 4, § 4, which denies appellate jurisdiction to the Supreme Court in civil actions for the recovery of money or personal property when the original amount in controversy does not exceed $200. Rem. Code, § 1719, prescribes the service of written notice of appeal on the prevailing party. Section 1720, provides that all parties similarly affected by the judgment may join in the notice of appeal. Parties not joining have the right to serve an independent notice of appeal within ten days after the giving or service upon them of the original notice, or may join in the appeal already taken, and any "party who does not so join shall not derive any benefit from the appeal unless from the necessity of the case." Under our holdings as to the necessity of service of notice of appeal upon all parties appearing in the action, the appeal herein is subject to dismissal, unless service of notice upon the omitted parties is unnecessary by reason of the fact that they had no right of appeal. It is plain that under our Constitution none of the claimants for sums under $200 could prosecute an independent appeal, and hence they would have no right of appeal. Nor would they have such an appealable interest as would justify their joinder in the appeal by others with whom they were similarly affected. We have held on numerous occasions that service of notice is required on those only who, in addition to appearing in the action, had some right of appeal. Carstens & Earles v. Seattle, 84 Wash. 88, 146 Pac. 381, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 1070; Sipes v. Puget Sound Elec. R. Co., 50 Wash. 585, 97 Pac. 723; Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786; Soderberg v. McRae, 67 Wash. 104, 120 Pac. 878.

The situation here is aptly expressed in Robertson Mtg. Co. v. Thomas, 60 Wash. 514, 111 Pac. 795:

> "We can look no further than to determine (1) whether he was a party to the action appearing in the case; and (2) whether he is entitled to an appeal. If these two conditions concur, it must be presumed that he is affected by the judgment; whether wrongfully affected must be determined on the appeal."

The other grounds for dismissal are without merit. The motion to dismiss the appeal is denied.

[2] Passing to the merits of the appeal, it is settled law that an executor under powers conferred by will may carry on the business of a decedent if such testamentary power is conferred in distinct and positive terms. Eufaula Nat. Bank v. Manassas, 124 Ala. 379, 27 South. 258; Willis v. Sharp, 113 N. Y. 588, 21 N. E. 705, 4 L. R. A. 493.

[3] In the present case A. C. Ennis died intestate, but prior to his death had expressed a wish that his son Donald be intrusted with the carrying on of his business, and that, on settlement of the estate, Donald should be paid $1,000 over and above his distributive share. Such a parol direction prior to death is not, however, recognized in law as a sufficient justification for a personal representative to continue the business for the benefit of the family or estate. Raynes v. Raynes, 54 N. H. 201; In re McCollum, 80 App. Div. 362, 80 N. Y. Supp. 755. The general rule is that a personal representative has no power to continue the business of a decedent unless expressly authorized by will, by statute, or by an order of the court. The only statute we have on the subject is Rem. Code, § 1497, which provides:

> "If it be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that it will be for the interest of the estate to allow the executor or administrator to sell some or the whole of the personal estate at private sale, the court may so order."

[4] Under the sanction of this statute the superior court, pursuant to petition of the administratrix showing the consent of all the heirs, made an order authorizing and empowering her "to sell said stock of goods at private sale in such manner as may to her seem best, and of her actions make due report to this court." This order goes no further than to authorize the disposal of the stock of goods. It does not authorize the continuance of the business to the extent of replenishing the stock of goods. In fact, the petition upon which it was based recited that the store had been running during the administration of the estate, "but that owing to the continued depression in business, it has been impossible to realize anything in the way of profit from the business, and it is not thought by us advisable to continue said business." Notwithstanding this representation to the court on which its order of private sale was procured, the administratrix continued to operate the business under the management of her son Donald Ennis for nearly two years subsequent to the date of the order. During this period her son bought new goods to place in the stock, for which he incurred the indebtedness of $3,824.82, now before us for allowance or rejection.

[5, 6] The administratrix claims that these purchases were made without her knowledge or consent and neither the estate nor herself is liable. We hold, however, that Donald Ennis, as manager of the store, was merely the agent of the administratrix, and that she would be bound by his acts within the apparent scope of his authority. The evidence shows that the administratrix was employed in the store at the time the goods were coming in, and at least had an opportunity to know the condition of the business. Moreover, after admitted knowledge of these claims, she did not repudiate them, but promised through her attorney that they should be paid. Subsequently she obtained an order of court permitting a reduction sale of the goods over the counter, and on this sale disposed of the goods, payment for which she is now disputing. She is clearly estopped to assert that she is not bound by the acts of her agent, which she charges were in excess of his authority.

[7] In resisting the claims of appellants, counsel for the administratrix maintains that she had no authority to carry on the mercantile business even under the order of the court, inasmuch as no statute confers that power on the court. There are two lines of decision in this country upon that question; one upholding the jurisdiction of probate and chancery courts to authorize a personal representative or trustee to continue a decedent's business, the other denying such power. The general rule, under which a personal representative is denied the power of continuing a decedent's business, has some limitations, which are stated in 18 Cyc. 242, as follows:

> "Good discretion, however, may require some latitude in closing out the decedent's business, and this a probate court will duly consider when passing upon the representative's accounts. The personal representative may be justified in continuing the business of the decedent so far as is necessary for the purpose of winding up the same and converting the assets into money or carrying out existing contracts of decedent. * * * The rule is also subject to some limitations where the executor is also the residuary legatee or the business has been specifically bequeathed to him. And it has been held that the consent of all persons interested may authorize the personal representative to carry on the business of the decedent in good faith so as fairly to be allowed for all assets so consumed."

In Gordon-Tiger Co. v. Loomer, 50 Colo. 409, 115 Pac. 717, a case where an administrator carried on a secondhand store for over four years, the court said:

> "Generally speaking, an administrator may not continue the business of the decedent, nor use the assets of the estate for business purposes. To this rule, however, there are exceptions; as where the decedent was engaged in the mercantile or manufacturing business, his representative may, under order of court, carry on the business for a sufficient time to close it up. The administrator, if properly authorized, could continue the business for the purpose of disposing of the stock to advantage, and might purchase necessary merchandise to make the property more salable. Such purchases would constitute a proper claim of the second class [expenses of administration] in the settlement of the estate. A person from whom he bought goods could present the claim to the court for allowance, and the statute of nonclaims, from the very nature of the transaction, would not apply."

Fleming v. Kelly, 18 Colo. App. 23, 69 Pac. 272, was a case in which an administratrix, under order of the court, carried on the business of carriage manufacture for three years after the decedent's death, purchasing goods to be used in the business, payment for which was resisted by a subsequent administrator. The court said:

> "From the necessities of the case, neither the Legislature nor the constitutional convention could anticipate every business contingency which might arise in the settlement of an estate, and provide by statute specifically the powers to be exercised by the court in every instance. Primarily, its duty is to see that the assets of the estate are collected and, if debts exist, converted into money as speedily as possible, consistent with the exercise of proper business discretion so as to prevent a sacrifice, in order that the claims of creditors may be satisfied, and the remainder, if any, be distributed among the heirs at law. It logically and reasonably follows that in furtherance of this general power, the court must have also such powers as may be incidental to it, and necessary to carry it out and effectuate the purpose. * * * Among such incidental powers must, of necessity, be included, in a proper case, the power to order the continuance of the business by the administrator, temporarily at least, so as to dispose of the stock on hand to the best advantage. The power may be especially necessary and required in case of a manufactory, where it has on hand a large amount of raw material and partly manufactured articles, a sale of which in their then condition would be impossible without a sacrifice. It follows also that in order to carry out the power in such case that it may be absolutely necessary to purchase some other material, and where such purchase is made under such circumstances, we cannot see how it can be other than an expense incurred in the settlement of the estate."

In line with the foregoing authorities, see, also: State v. Jones, 89 Mo. 470, 1 S. W. 355; Starling v. Wyatt (Miss.) 27 South. 526; In re Hodges, 1 Irish R. (1899) 480; In re Osburn, 36 Or. 8, 58 Pac. 521.

[8] We think the rule that accords to probate courts discretion to authorize the temporary continuance of a decedent's business by his personal representative is a salutary one, and that, under Rem. Code, § 1497, our courts have power to make an order of that nature which would authorize payment of costs of sale as a part of the expenses of administration. But, as held in some of the cases cited supra, an order of sale would not justify the purchase of additional merchandise to the extent of keeping the stock intact, or more than is necessary to enable the administrator to sell the remaining stock to the best advantage.

[9] With reference to the rights of the trade creditors, those who have furnished the business with merchandise in violation of the rule as above stated, while there is a disagreement among the authorities, we think the better rule is that they are restricted to that part of the estate assets which were embarked in the business to which such creditors contributed, unless their rights against the general assets may have been enlarged by some principle of estoppel depriving the heirs and general creditors of the right to assert their prior claims against the general assets. The rule is succinctly stated in Frey v. Eisenhardt, 116 Mich. 160, 74 N. W. 501, as follows:

> "We understand the rule is that where an administrator or executor, instead of closing out a business, continues it, even when authorized by will to do so, the trade debts will reach only the trade assets; that is, the property that was employed in the business or that was the result of doing the business. Laible v. Ferry, 32 N. J. Eq. 791. See, also, Altheimer v. Hunter, 56 Ark. 159 [19 S. W. 496]; Lucht v. Behrens, 28 Ohio St. 231 [22 Am. Rep. 378]."

In Altheimer v. Hunter, 56 Ark. 159, 19 S. W. 496, it is said:

> "The order of the probate court directing the administrator to continue the mercantile business of the intestate created no greater power in the administrator than if it had been made upon directions to that effect to an executor by the terms of a will. But in the latter case the authorities are uniform to the effect that neither the executor nor his trade creditors can resort to the general assets of the estate for the purpose of reimbursement or payment, unless it is clear that the testator intended to make them liable for the debts contracted by the executor. In such a case advances are made by the administrator, and credit extended by those who give him credit, upon the faith of the assets embarked in the trade or business, and their remedies are confined to such assets. 2 Woerner, Administration, § 328, p. 689, note 5; Jones v. Walker, 103 U. S. 444 [26 L. Ed. 404]; Ex parte Garland, 10 Ves. Jr. 110; Laible v. Ferry, 32 N. J. Eq. 791."

[10] The authority to carry on business under order of the court is governed by the same principles which apply in case of conducting a business under testamentary powers. The rule in the latter case is thus stated in 18 Cyc. 244:

> "Where the representative is authorized to carry on the decedent's business after his death, only such assets of the estate as are invested in the business at the time of the decedent's death can be considered as trade assets; and, in the absence of some clear authority in the will, the other property of the estate cannot be subjected to the risks of trade, or be made liable for debts contracted by the representative in carrying on the business."

In further support of the foregoing rule, see: Willis v. Sharp, 113 N. Y. 586, 21 N. E. 705, 4 L. R. A. 493; In re Sharp, 5 Dem. (N. Y.) 516; Furst v. Armstrong, 202 Pa. 348, 51 Atl. 996, 90 Am. St. Rep. 653; Davis v. Christian, 15 Grat. (Va.) 11; Smith v. Ayer, 101 U. S. 320, 25 L. Ed. 955.

[11] The principle of estoppel is invoked in this case by the trade creditors for the purpose of subjecting the general assets of the estate, otherwise beyond their reach, to the lien of their claims. The weight of authority undoubtedly is that the consent of the adult heirs that the administrator may carry on the business conducted by the decedent will estop them from enforcing any personal liability against the administrator for losses incurred by him in such business. Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561, 131 N. W. 68, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 201.

[12] This rule is also extended to general creditors, who as beneficiaries of the estate expressly consent that the administrator may carry on such business. It will be seen, however, that this rule does not aid the trade creditors, who stand on a different footing from that of the heirs and the creditors of the decedent, in that they never had an interest in the general assets. It is otherwise, however, in regard to the assets embarked in trade. Where the heirs and general creditors consent that that portion of the estate may be carried on as a business venture, they are estopped to dispute the liability of the trade assets of the estate for debts incurred therein by the administrator. We think to this extent only are the trade creditors entitled to take advantage of the principle of estoppel.

The evidence shows that all the heirs and the widow of the intestate agreed among themselves that Donald Ennis should conduct the business carried on by A. C. Ennis in his lifetime, and this private arrangement was followed for a year before bringing it to the attention of the probate court. Finally resort was had to the court for authority to the administratrix to sell the stock of goods "in such manner as may seem to her for the best interests of the estate." The petition to the court was signed by the administratrix and all the heirs. Donald Ennis was continued in charge of the business under this order until his final sickness and death nearly two years later. During this time, while acting under the order of the court as granted to the administratrix, the indebtedness for new goods here in question was incurred. The administratrix and the heirs claim that they had not authorized the purchase of fresh stock and did not know it was done, but we think their participation in the affairs of the estate was sufficient to charge them with notice, whether they had actual notice or not.

[13] The general creditor Hayes & Hayes, Bankers, never expressly consented to the course of conduct here outlined; but, as the holder of a substantial claim, it must have been cognizant that this business was being conducted as a going business, and its failure to take any action to assert its rights estops it from now claiming as against the trade creditors.

[14] But while the fact that the business was carried on with the consent of the heirs and the administratrix was sufficient to estop them from disputing the prior rights of the appellants in the trade assets, it does not estop them from denying liability as to the general assets. Trade creditors have no right to be placed on an equality with those existing at the date of decedent's death, and who are entitled to share in the estate as it then existed.

[15] They contract with the personal representative, chargeable with notice as to any limitation on his powers to bind the estate. They are not in any sense creditors of the decedent. They deal with the administrator on his personal credit and on the credit of the business conducted by him. The primary idea of administration is to preserve the estate for the benefit of those interested in it at the time of the owner's death, and courts should be slow to adopt a rule involving a departure from that idea. The intent of the law originally, in permitting a personal representative to conduct a going business, was that he should wind it up without unnecessary sacrifices. But it has become quite common for administrators to continue a business as if it was to be maintained intact as a going concern. Such a course is unwarranted either by the statute or by general law.

The net proceeds arising from the business conducted by the administratrix were, as alleged in her petition, $879, and, as found by the court, $650.85. Whatever the amount may be, it was derived in part from the sale of goods bought from the appellants, and they are entitled to have such proceeds applied on their claims. Their claims are allowed to that extent.

The rule here announced must be understood as going no farther than the issue presented upon the allowance or rejection of the claims. Whatever rights the appellants may have against the administratrix, while raised in the briefs of counsel, are not properly before us for consideration, and hence will not be passed upon at this time.

The judgment of the superior court will be reversed, with directions to allow the claims of appellants as preferred claims against moneys in the hands of the administratrix derived from the sale of the stock of merchandise.

ELLIS, C. J., and MOUNT, HOLCOMB, and PARKER, JJ., concur.

BAKER & LOCKWOOD MFG. CO. v. VOORHEES et al. (No. 8529.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR ⚷568—CASE-MADE—NOTICE.

Where plaintiff in error has prepared and served a case-made, and has given the prescribed notice of the time and place that same will be presented to the trial judge for settlement and signature, and the trial judge is absent at such time and place, said notice becomes functus officio, and before such case-made can be legally settled and signed another notice of the time and place of settling and signing must be served upon the opposite party.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2523-2529.]

Error from County Court, Okmulgee County; Mark L. Bozarth, Judge.

Action by the Baker & Lockwood Manufacturing Company against Lee A. Voorhees and others. Judgment for defendants, motion for new trial sustained as to defendant Greenwalt, and overruled as to defendant Voorhees, and plaintiff brings error. Appeal dismissed.

Swain & Griffith, of Okmulgee, and William W. Shelley, of Kansas City, Mo., for plaintiff in error. Cochran & Ellison, of Okmulgee, for defendants in error.

HARDY, J. Plaintiff in error commenced this action against defendants in error on an alleged contract of guaranty. The parties will be referred to as they appeared in the trial court.

Richards having died, and his death being suggested, the action as to him was dismissed, and was also dismissed as to the trustees of L. O. O. M. Trial resulted in judgment for defendants. Plaintiff filed motion for new trial, which was sustained as to defendant Greenwalt, and overruled as to the defendant Voorhees. Time was granted in which to prepare and serve case-made, which was duly prepared and served by plaintiff, and suggestion of amendments by defendant Voorhees was duly served upon plaintiff. Notice was thereafter served by plaintiff that the case-made would be presented to the trial judge on July 6, 1916, for settling and signing. On that day the trial judge was absent, and the case-made could not be presented to him, but on the succeeding day, July 7, 1916, in the absence of defendants in error or any one representing them, and without additional notice, the case-made was settled and signed by the judge, without incorporating therein the amendments suggested by defendants, which had been served upon plaintiff. Motion is made to dismiss the appeal, because same was signed and settled upon a day subsequent to that fixed in the notice, in the absence of defendants, without incorporating in the case-made the amendments suggested.

The motion must be sustained. It is now the established rule in this court that where the plaintiff in error has prepared and served a case-made, and has given the prescribed notice of the time and place that the trial judge will be asked to settle and sign the same, and the trial judge is absent at the time and place named in such notice, such notice becomes functus officio, and before such case-made can be legally settled and signed another notice of the time and place of settling and signing must be served upon the opposite parties. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Going, 150 Pac. 488; Sand Springs Ry. Co. v. Oliphant, 157 Pac. 284; Wood v. King, 151 Pac. 685.

The motion is sustained, and the case dismissed. All the Justices concur.

(47 Okl. 26)

ATCHISON, T. & S. F. RY. CO. v. STATE. (No. 2347.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Sept. 30, 1913.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CARRIERS ⚷18(1)—ORDER OF CORPORATION COMMISSION — VIOLATION OF ORDER — EVIDENCE.

Evidence examined, and held sufficient to sustain the finding of the Corporation Commission that one of its orders had been violated.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 16-18, 20, 24.]

2. CARRIERS ⚷18(1)—CORPORATION COMMISSION—VIOLATION OF ORDER—CONTEMPT.

Sections 1192 and 1193, Rev. Laws 1910, empowers the state Corporation Commission to punish as for contempt any railway company violating any of the rules or requirements of the Commission, but places a limitation upon such power and the discretion of the Commission as to the kind of punishment and amount of fine that may be imposed by the Commission, by specifying the maximum penalty the Commission may assess against a violator of any of its orders; and so long as the Commission does not exceed this limitation, specifically imposed by the statute, where there have been no errors in the proceeding prejudicial to defendant, this court is without power to disturb the judgment of the Commission fixing the amount of the penalty.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 16-18, 20, 24.]

Appeal from Order of Corporation Commission.

Proceeding by the State against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company, charging the violation of an order of the Corporation Commission. From an order of the Commission adjudging the road in contempt, it appeals. Judgment of Commission affirmed.

Cottingham & Bledsoe, of Oklahoma City, for appellant. Chas. West, Atty. Gen., and Chas. L. Moore, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

HAYES, C. J. [1, 2] This appeal is prosecuted from an order of the Corporation Commission, adjudging appellant guilty of contempt for having violated what is known as Commission Order No. 4 of the state Corporation Commission. Said order, among other things, provides that it shall be the duty of every railway or railroad company to open its waiting rooms, ticket windows, and baggagerooms one hour before schedule time of arrival of trains. This proceeding was begun before the Commission by one G. R. Fields filing his complaint, wherein he charges that appellant, through its agent in the town of Avard, Okl., on the night of the 9th of March, 1910, violated said order of the Commission by failing to open its ticket windows at said station until 10 minutes prior to the time of arrival of its passenger train, which was due at that station at 12:20 a. m. By reason of which he alleges that he and other passengers were compelled to pay three cents a mile for transportation instead of two cents per mile, because at 12 o'clock on that night a new schedule of rates to that effect became effective upon appellant's line of road. No appeal seems to have been taken from the action of the Commission in promulgating said Commission's order No. 4, herein alleged to have been violated. The power of the Commission to make said order and its validity is not questioned in this proceeding. By section 1 of an act of the Legislature, approved May 29, 1908, entitled "An act providing for the punishment of any corporation, person or firm for contempt for the violation of any order or requirement of the Corporation Commission," etc., it is provided that any corporation, person, or firm may be fined by the Commission not exceeding $500, as the Commission may deem proper, for the violation of any of its rules or requirements, and each day's continuance of said violation is made to constitute a separate offense. Section 2 of the act provides that the Commission may punish such corporation, for violation of its order, as for contempt, and prescribes the procedure by which such prosecution may be made. Sess. Laws 1907-08, p. 228; sections 1192, 1193, Rev. Laws. A general demurrer of appellant's to the complaint was overruled. Whereupon, after answer was filed by appellant and demand for jury overruled, a trial before the Commission was had, resulting in findings and an order by the Commission, adjudging appellant guilty and assessing a fine against it in the sum of $500.

There is evidence to establish that the town of Avard is the junction point of appellant's line of railway and a line of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway; that on the night of March 9, 1910, plaintiff arrived in said town on the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway and went at about the hour of 11 o'clock to appellant's depot for the purpose of embarking upon one of appellant's trains going southwest, which was due to arrive at Avard at 12:10. The evidence also establishes that there were a number of other passengers who went to appellant's station at about the same time for similar purposes. The ticket window of the station was not opened, according to the testimony of the prosecution, until five minutes before the schedule time for arrival of the train, and, according to the testimony of defendant, the window was not opened until 12 minutes before such time. Defendant, both by its answer and its evidence, admits the violation of the order, but seeks to purge itself of contempt or to justify or excuse its action by showing that the train was approximately one hour late, and that the agent of appellant at that point was engaged, during the hour immediately preceding the schedule arrival of the train, in performing other services which he was required to perform by the company, to wit, assorting mail packages that were to be placed upon said train, and that the window was opened for an hour immediately before the departure of the train, though not an hour before the schedule time for its arrival. The Commission took the view that the evidence of appellant was not sufficient to purge it of contempt for the violation of the order; and we have not been convinced by the presentation of the case, made by appellant, that the Commission committed reversible error in this conclusion. The purpose of the order violated is not only to afford the traveling public an opportunity to obtain at each station of a railway company information regarding its trains and the procuring of tickets and the checking of baggage before a train arrives upon which any such passenger intends to depart, but also that the patronizing public may know at what times during the day it can have access to the ticket office of any such company to transact such business. While it is shown that during a part of the time the window should have been opened appellant's agent was busy with other work, it is not shown that such work could not have been postponed until after the services required by the order had been rendered; nor does the record show that he was the only person to render such service. The most the record shows in this respect is that during the time the rule prescribed by the Commission required the ticket window to be opened for the accommodation of the traveling public, it was not open, and that the agent was doing something else.

It is asserted in the brief of counsel for appellant that, if the order of the Commission is to be construed, as it has been construed by the Commission, to require that the ticket window at every station shall be open continuously for the period of one hour before the schedule time for arrival of each train at all the stations, regardless of the amount of business that may be done at such station, the order is void, because unreasonable and unjust. It may be that the application of the order to some stations of appellant in the state, or to some stations of other railway companies in the state, may place an unreasonable and unjust burden upon the railway company, where the volume of business is exceedingly small, and where there are but few passengers who depart from such stations, and where the revenue received from the business of such station will not justify or require the employment of more than one person to transact the business of the railway company at such a station, and yet the other duties and work imposed upon him to transact the business of said company would not permit him to attend to the ticket window and the baggageroom for the period of one hour before arrival of any trains, as required by this order. But the evidence in this case does not show that such a state of facts exists as to the station here involved.

It is also contended that the amount of the fine assessed by the Commission is unreasonable and unjust, and that the order should be reversed upon this ground. This contention, we think, also is without merit. The statute empowers the Commission, when it finds in any proceeding brought before it for that purpose that any railway company has violated one of its orders, to assess a fine against such company for any sum not to exceed $500 for such offense. The statute has placed a limitation upon the power and discretion of the Commission as to the kind of punishment and amount of the fine that may be imposed by the Commission; and, so long as the Commission does not exceed this limitation, specifically imposed by the statute, where there have been no errors in the proceeding prejudicial to defendant, we think the court is without power to disturb the judgment of the Commission, assessing the penalty.

The judgment of the Commission is affirmed. All the Justices, except LOOFBOURROW and TURNER, JJ., not participating, concur.

STATE ex rel. MILLER v. DUDLEY, District Judge. (No. 8693.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. April 24, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR ⟹1202—MANDAMUS ⟹58—REMAND—GROUNDS—ENTRY OF JUDGMENT WITHOUT RETRIAL.

F. sued M. in the district court for cancellation of a deed executed by F. to M. on the ground of fraud and mental incapacity. Judgment was rendered in favor of F. canceling the deed. Upon appeal to the Supreme Court the cause was "reversed and remanded for a new trial." After the mandate had been issued and spread of record in the district court, M. filed his motion for judgment on the opinion and mandate. F., by leave of court, then filed his amended petition. M. filed his motion to strike the amended petition. The court overruled both the motion for judgment and the motion to strike. In an action by M. for writ of mandamus against the district judge to compel him to enter judgment on the mandate and opinion of the Supreme Court held, that it was the duty of the trial court to grant a new trial; that, the proceedings thus far taken in a retrial of the case being interlocutory and reviewable on a second appeal after a retrial, mandamus will not lie to compel the district judge to enter judgment without a retrial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 4669; Mandamus, Cent. Dig. § 121.]

Original mandamus by the State, on relation of C. W. Miller, against C. E. Dudley, Judge of the District Court of Choctaw County. Writ denied.

I. L. Strange, of Hugo, for plaintiff. McPherren & Cochran, of Durant, for defendant.

TURNER, J. On October 20, 1916, the state of Oklahoma, on relation of C. W. Miller, filed its petition in this court praying for a writ of mandamus against C. E. Dudley, judge of the district court of Choctaw county. The facts out of which this proceeding grew are substantially as follows: On May 8, 1913, Grover C. Folsom sued C. W. Miller, relator herein, in the district court of Choctaw county, to set aside a warranty deed executed by Folsom to Miller on May 5, 1913, for his allotment of land, upon the ground of fraud in its procurement and mental incapacity to contract. Judgment was rendered in that court canceling and setting aside said deed, upon the ground of mental incapacity only of Folsom to execute the same. Upon appeal by Miller to this court (Miller v. Folsom, 149 Pac. 1185), after considering the errors assigned, and holding that the evidence did not tend to show mental incapacity on the part of the plaintiff sufficient to set aside the deed, the court, in summing up, said:

> "We are therefore of opinion that the court did wrong to set aside the deed complained of, and for that reason the cause is reversed and remanded for a new trial."

After the mandate had issued to the district court of said county, and the same had been spread of record, defendant in said action (relator here) filed his motion for judgment on the opinion and mandate of this court. Folsom, the plaintiff in said action, filed his amended petition, alleging practically the same grounds why the deed should be set aside as were considered by this court in said cause on appeal. Miller then filed his motion to strike the amended petition, upon the ground that he was entitled to judgment upon the mandate issued by this court. Upon a hearing of said motion for judgment, the court overruled the same and granted leave to plaintiff to file his amended petition. The court also overruled the motion of defendant to strike said amended petition from the files. Plaintiff prays that a writ of mandamus be allowed by this court, requiring said respondent as such district judge to render a judgment in said action on the opinion and mandate of this court, without a retrial of the case in said court.

The court did not err in refusing to enter judgment in favor of relator; this for the reason that it was the duty of the trial court to proceed with a new trial in accordance with the judgment of this court reversing and remanding the case. The district court was bound by the decree as the law of the case, and must carry it into execution according to the mandate of this court. Gilliland v. Bilby (Okl.) 156 Pac. 299. The district court was about to proceed to a new trial of the case pursuant to the directions of this court, by permitting plaintiff to amend his petition, and such amendment was permissible. Ball v. Rankin, 23 Okl. 801, 101 Pac. 1105. But, if the case should proceed to a new trial as directed by the judgment of this court, and the facts and questions of law presented are, in effect, the same as presented in the former appeal in said case, of course it would then be the duty of the court to render judgment in favor of defendant Miller, as before. St. L. & S. F. R. Co. v. Clark, 42 Okl. 638, 142 Pac. 396; Metropolitan Ry. Co. v. Fonville, 36 Okl. 76, 125 Pac. 1125. But the proceedings thus far taken in a retrial of the case are interlocutory, and, such proceedings being reviewable on appeal after a retrial, mandamus will not lie to review the action of the judge in proceeding to carry out the mandate and judgment of this court. 26 Cyc. 202, states the rule as follows:

> "The rule is almost universal that mandamus will not lie to correct or review interlocutory proceedings, even though no immediate appeal is given; such proceedings being reviewable on appeal or error from final judgment or decree. A very great portion of such proceedings involve judgment and discretion, and could not in any event be corrected by mandamus; and the delay, vexation, and expense attending interference with trial courts in interlocutory matters would be burdensome."

For the reasons stated, the petition for writ of mandamus will be denied. All the Justices concur.

WATTS et al. v. HOUSTON et al.

(No. 8007.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INFANTS 🔑50 — "NECESSARIES" — ATTORNEY'S FEES—DISAFFIRMANCE.

Attorney's fees on account of services rendered in behalf of the estate of a minor are not "necessaries" under section 886, Rev. Laws 1910, and a claim therefor may be disaffirmed by the minor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Infants, Cent. Dig. §§ 114, 115, 117-126.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Necessaries.]

2. INFANTS 🔑49—ATTORNEY'S FEES—RIGHT OF ACTION.

An action at law by an attorney to recover upon quantum meruit for the value of services rendered the estate of a minor, in the absence of a showing of express authorization by the county court prior to the rendition of the services, or a subsequent allowance therefor, cannot be maintained against the minor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Infants, Cent. Dig. §§ 112, 113.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 2. Error to County Court, McIntosh County; Jas. W. Robertson, Judge.

Action by Jess W. Watts, Charles G. Watts, and Charles A. Cook against Lucien Houston and others. There was judgment for the defendants, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

Jess W. Watts, of Wagoner, for plaintiffs in error. C. H. Tully, of Eufaula, for defendants in error.

GALBRAITH, C. This appeal presents one question only, namely: Can an action at law be maintained against a minor by an attorney to recover fees for services rendered the estate of the minor without specific authorization of the probate court prior to the rendition of such services? The trial court answered the question in the negative. The claimants appealed. The testimony taken at the trial is not brought up in the record. The trial court, however, made findings of fact and conclusions of law. The plaintiff moved for judgment upon these findings, and excepted to the denial of such motion. The facts found, briefly stated, are as follows: That the ancestor made a will by which his estate, consisting principally of real estate, was devised to a trustee for the purpose of establishing a charitable institution, and devising to certain of his heirs $1 only and to the defendants in error nothing. The heirs mentioned in the will were dissatisfied with the disposition of the estate, and employed plaintiffs in error, as attorneys at law, to contest the probate of it, agreeing to pay them as a fee for their services three-sevenths of whatever amount might be secured as a result of the contest. The defendants in error, although heirs, were not named in the contest proceeding, and had no part in employing the attorneys to resist the probate of the will. The will was presented for probate by the executor named therein, and the counsel employed by the heirs, in pursuance to the above contract, appeared and resisted the probate. At the hearing the court found that the will was not the last will and testament of the ancestor, and refused probate to the same. The estate was therefore cast to the heirs of the ancestor under the law. Those employing the plaintiffs in error as attorneys paid the agreed compensation out of their respective shares of the estate. The defendants appeared in the probate proceedings and asserted their claim to heirship and their right to participate in the distribution of the estate. Their claim was established, and they received from the estate their portion thereof, amounting to $678.26, but refused to pay the attorney's fee. This action was brought against them for three-sevenths of the amount received by them, which the attorneys claimed would be reasonable compensation for the services rendered by them; that the minors accepted their part of the estate with the knowledge that it was through the services rendered by the plaintiffs in error that this amount was secured to them. The court found as a fact that the services rendered by the attorneys were not necessary, for the reason that the minors had another attorney employed by the year whose duty it was to attend to all legal matters pertaining to their estate.

The court found as conclusion of law from these facts that the claim for attorney's fees could not be classed as "necessaries" as defined by the statute, and therefore the minors were not bound, and rendered judgment for the defendants in error for costs.

It is not contended by the plaintiff in error that there was any contract with the minors or their guardian, approved by the county court, or that an allowance was made them by that court, but they insist "that they are entitled to recover, independent of any contract, whether express or implied, upon the ground that the law creates an obligation in behalf of reason and justice, but, for the sake of finding a remedy, classifies said obligation as a quasi contract," and "that it appears from the entire findings of the court, construed together, that the services of these plaintiffs were necessarily and essentially rendered for the benefit of said heirs at law, including these minors."

[1] Whatever may be the law in other jurisdictions in regard to the liability of minors in actions at law for attorney's fees on account of services rendered to the estates of minors, the law is settled in this jurisdiction that claims for such services cannot be classified as "necessaries" and may be avoided by the minors.

In Grissom et al. v. Beidleman et al., 35 Okl. 343, 129 Pac. 853, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 411, Ann. Cas. 1914D, 599, in an elaborate opinion, the court reviews the authorities on this question in other jurisdictions, and announces its conclusion as follows:

> "We believe that the rule in New Hampshire, followed in Massachusetts and other states, should prevail here; that is, where the services pertain to the defense of the liberty or person of the minor, or the prosecution of action for an injury thereto, that the same should be classed as a 'necessary,' and an action lie against the minor for a reasonable recovery for attorney's fees; but where the legal services are rendered in behalf of the minor in relation to his property, without the intervention of a legal guardian, no recovery for such services should be had in an action at law. As to whether a court of equity or probate court may allow for legal services at the instance of the minor in the administration of the estate or fund or property in such chancery or probate court, without the party having first obtained the approval of the court to render such service, that question is not involved in this case."

And again the court say:

> "When it comes to a question as to which line of authorities we will follow, that which permits the next friend, who is often an irresponsible person, to engage counsel for a minor to prosecute a suit at law in his behalf relative to his land, often occasioning an action at law against such minor, thereby affecting his estate, or that which requires first the approval of the probate court, we feel that we should incline to the old rule, as announced by the Supreme Court of New Hampshire, when it was composed of Chief Justice Parker and Justices Upham, Wilcox, Gilchrist, and Woods, and afterwards reaffirmed by the same court, when Chief Justice Sargent and Justice Doe were members of it."

[2] The proposition is not affected by the fact that the attorneys rendered valuable services to the estate of the minors, and actually increased the same in the amount of almost $700, and that the minors accepted this benefit with full knowledge that this sum had been secured by the efforts of the attorneys, and that in equity and good conscience they ought to pay the attorneys reasonable compensation for such services. The minors were denied capacity to make a contract for the payment for such services on account of their minority. No contract by implication, either express or implied, quasi or otherwise, was created for them by the law. Under the facts found the minors were not bound, and their estate could not be held for the payment for such services, in the absence of express authority given therefor by the county court, prior to the rendition of such services, or by an express allowance therefor after the same were rendered. Donnell v. Dansby, 159 Pac. 317; J. H. Cox Co. v. Fisher, 161 Pac. 171; Lee v. Tonsor, 161 Pac. 804; Marx v. Hefner, 46 Okl. 453, 149 Pac. 207.

Wherefore it appears that the action of the trial court was right, and the judgment appealed from should be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

ST. LOUIS & S. F. RY. CO. et al. v. RAY.
(No. 7010.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Dec. 19, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEGLIGENCE ⟹38, 136(20)—CONDITION OF LAND—PUBLIC TRAVEL — QUESTION FOR JURY.

Where a cause of danger to public travel exists on private land adjoining a public highway, the liability of the owner of the land for the injury from it depends on its dangerous character with reference to public travel, rather than to its exact location. The question whether it endangers public travel is as a general rule one of fact and not of law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 54, 321.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR ⟹1001(1) — NEGLIGENCE ⟹38, 136(25) — OPEN, UNGUARDED PIT — QUESTION FOR JURY — PROXIMATE CAUSE—CONCLUSIVENESS OF FINDINGS.

Where a railroad company leases a part of its right of way that is open and unfenced, adjoining a public street in a city, for the purpose of a grain elevator, and the tenant in erecting the elevator excavates a pit, 15 by 30 feet and 6 to 12 feet in depth, and the elevator is destroyed by fire, and the pit is allowed to remain unguarded, and the railroad company makes use of the leased ground adjoining the pit for the purpose of loading and unloading freight from its cars, and the teams and wagons in moving the freight make a plain and distinct roadway leading from the public street over onto the right of way, and near the pit, and while the pit is open and unguarded the railroad company executes a second lease to the tenant for the same purpose as the first, and the plaintiff, a stranger in the city, passing along the public street upon a dark night, is misled by the roadway leading therefrom onto the right of way, and following the same, without fault on his part, falls into the pit and is injured, held, that both the railroad company and its tenant were negligent in allowing the pit to remain open and unguarded, and whether or not this negligence was the proximate cause of the injury complained of was a question of fact for the jury, and its finding, being supported by the evidence, is conclusive on this appeal.

⟹For other cases see same topic and KEY-NUMBER in all Key-Numbered Digests and Indexes

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3928-3933; Negligence, Cent. Dig. §§ 54, 326-332; Railroads, Cent. Dig. § 1745.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 2. Error from District Court, Noble County; A. H. Huston, Judge.

Action by John W. Ray against the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company and E. J. Miller. Judgment for the plaintiff, and defendants bring error. Affirmed.

W. F. Evans, of St. Louis, Mo., and R. A. Kleinschmidt and E. H. Foster, both of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error Railway Co. P. W. Cress, of Perry, for plaintiff in error Miller. Henry S. Johnston, of Perry, and Horace Speed, of Tulsa, for defendant in error.

GALBRAITH, C. This action was for damages on account of personal injuries received by the defendant in error, John W. Ray, by falling into a pit on the land of the railway company, made by its tenant, Miller. There was a trial to the court and a jury, and a verdict returned for the plaintiff against both of the defendants, upon which judgment was rendered, and from which both the railway company and its tenant appeal.

It appears that: The St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company built into the city of Perry, after the city was located and established, and that the company building the road acquired as a part of its right of way the property in block 14 of the city, and that at the intersection of Fifth and D streets, the property of the railroad company extended to Fifth street. There was no sidewalk or fence along the east side of Fifth street marking the line between the street and the company's property, and the right of way at that point remained open and unfenced. In 1904 the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company leased a portion of its right of way in block 14 to E. J. Miller for the purpose of erecting a grain elevator thereon. In the construction of the elevator a deep pit was dug on the lots some 30 feet in length by 15 feet in width and varying in depth from 6 to 12 feet, walled with stone, and unevenly paved at the bottom with stone and cement. That in 1908 the elevator erected on this lot was entirely destroyed by fire, and from that time to November 22, 1911, the date of the accident, this pit remained exposed and unguarded. In 1909 Miller's lease expired, and the railroad company executed a new lease for the same purposes and for a term of five years. A switch had been constructed by the railroad company along the side of the elevator, and remained after the elevator was destroyed, and was used by the railroad company and its patrons for receiving and discharging freight. There was a board culvert over the gutter on the north side of D street, where it was intersected by Fifth street, and a plain wagon track passing from the culvert in a northerly direction from Fifth street over to the railroad property and near the switch, circling around to within 6 or 10 feet of this excavation and then led back to the culvert on Fifth and D streets.

John W. Ray, the defendant in error, was a citizen of Guthrie, Okl. One of his daughters resided at Perry on Fifth street, about a block and a half from the Santa Fé Railroad Company's passenger station. On the night of November 22, 1911, Ray, returning from Kansas, stopped at Perry to visit his daughter. He was an old man near 80 years of age. He had two hand grips, and undertook to walk from the station to his daughter's house. He passed up D street until he came to Fifth and turned up Fifth street, passed over the culvert, and, thinking he was proceeding up Fifth street, followed the track made by wagons hauling freight to and from the cars on the switch of the railroad company, and followed the track until it turned from the pit toward Fifth street. There he stopped and set down his grips, and, seeing a light across in a northerly direction, which he thought was an electric light in front of his daughter's house at the corner of Fifth and E streets, advanced toward it, taking three or four steps, fell into this pit, and was injured.

It was the theory of the plaintiff that both the railroad company and its tenant, Miller, were guilty of negligence in permitting this pit or excavation to remain open and unguarded, and that the path or roadway leading from the street to the property was an invitation or lure to the plaintiff, or any other traveler on the street, to pass upon this property, and in so doing they were liable to fall into the pit and be injured, and that such an accident was liable to happen, and ought to have been contemplated by the railroad company and Miller, and that it was negligence not to do so, and such negligence was the proximate cause of his injury. Both the railroad company and Miller denied liability, and maintained that this was private property, and that they had a right to dig the pit thereon and maintain it as they pleased, and that Ray was a trespasser on the property, and that they were in no way liable for his injury. The railroad company as well as Miller interposed a demurrer to the petition, and again demurred to the plaintiff's evidence. These were overruled by the court, and the ruling was assigned as error by each of them.

It seems that the petition stated the necessary elements of actionable negligence against each of the defendants. It charged that Miller made this pit or excavation on this lot, and left it unguarded and exposed, and that the railroad company, by inviting its patrons to use the lot for the purpose of receiving and loading freight into the cars upon its switch thereon, made the roadway from Fifth street over and across the lots, and by reason of this roadway, Ray, as a traveler on the street, mistook it for the street, and in so doing fell into the unguarded pit and was injured, setting out the extent of his injuries in detail. He charged the defendants owed him the duty to have put up a fence or a guard around this excavation, and that they each failed to discharge this duty, and that his injuries proximately resulted therefrom.

The evidence of Ray as to how he happened to be injured is corroborated by other witnesses and supports the allegations of the petition. After testifying that it was late at night and very dark when he left the Santa Fé train at the passenger station, he testified as follows:

> "Q. Now, how did you, how could you locate yourself then as to what you—how you were going? A. The only way was feeling my way in the road with my feet. Q. Feeling your way with your feet? A. With my feet; I was walking, and the only way—I couldn't see the ground. Q. How far did you continue up D street? A. Up to Fifth street. Q. Then what did you do? A. Crossed over on the bridge; I could feel when I crossed the culvert. Q. Could you feel the difference between the dirt— A. And the plank. Q. Wait a minute; could you feel with your feet the difference between the dirt road— A. I could feel the plank. (Objected to as leading. Overruled.) Q. Did you feel with your feet the difference between the dirt road and the bridge? A. Yes, sir. Q. Then after you crossed the bridge over D street and Fifth street, then where did you go? Then what did you do? A. I thought I was going right up Fifth street one block to where Mr. McCormick lived, I had got there within a block of it. Q. Now you started, as you thought, in that direction; what did you do from that time on? A. I went along in the road; went along in the road. Q. How did you know that you were in the road? A. From the way it felt under my feet and there was no weeds. Q. You can tell the jury how you knew that you were in the road. * * * A. I went that way I expect 75 feet or 80 feet perhaps, I thought I was on Fifth street; at that point I saw a light; there was a barn, it might have been before, a hay barn, right ahead of me, but when I came out the other side I could see a light in a house, a candle light or a lamp light or something of that kind, and there is an arc light on the corner of E and Fifth streets, but it didn't burn any; it wasn't alight at all that night. Q. There was no light that night? A. No, sir. Q. You say you saw a light in the house? A. A light in the house. By this time I was getting pretty tired with these grips, and set them down for about a minute, and picked them up again and started, on the left of that a little, because I knew that wasn't my son-in-law's light, and I made three or four or five steps, and I fell right into the pit. Q. You can tell the jury now as to what you did after taking up the grips as to the feeling of the ground with your feet. * * * A. It felt like I was in the road. I felt like I was traveling in the road. I thought I was in Fifth street then."

[1] The rule determining the liability of the landowner and its tenant is well stated by the Supreme Court of Connecticut in Crogan v. Schiele, 53 Conn. 186, 1 Atl. 899, 5 Atl. 673, 55 Am. Rep. 88:

> "Where a cause of danger to public travel exists on private land adjoining a public highway, the liability of the owner of the land for an injury from it depends on its dangerous character with reference to public travel, rather than its exact location. The question whether it endangers public travel is, as a general rule, one of fact and not of law."

Again in the course of the opinion the court said:

> "The rule laid down in City of Norwich v. Breed, 30 Conn. 535, was stated after an examination of the Massachusetts case and English cases cited above, was declared upon full consideration, and places the liability upon true grounds, and has been cited in other jurisdictions with approval. An extract * * * from that case will suffice. 'We think that in making the defendant's liability to depend upon the dangerous condition in which the excavation was left by the defendant rather than upon its distance from the street, the judge adopted the true criterion. It is the dangerous character rather than the exact location of the excavation that determines the duty and consequent liability of the defendant in this respect. * * * Whether the excavation could, with a due regard to the rights of passengers on the street, be left unguarded, or could not, depended upon the question whether, being unguarded, it endangered the travel or not; if it did not, no matter how near it was to the line of way; if it did, no matter how far it was removed.' It is plain that there was a duty upon the defendant in reference to the public use of that public way."

In Beck v. Carter, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 607, the rule is announced as follows:

> "To authorize an owner of land adjoining a highway to require travelers lawfully passing along it to keep within the limits of it, as laid out or dedicated, he must indicate, in some proper way, where the boundaries are, and when that is done he is relieved from liability for injuries sustained outside such limits. To hold a traveler, a stranger to the locality, bound to keep within the limits of a lane or alley in the night as well as in the day, and that the owner of adjoining land may dig pits in his land 5 or 6 or 7 feet from one of the margins of the street, and if the traveler falls into it, and is injured, he is without remedy against the owner of the land on which such pit is dug, is so monstrous, so unjust, and so unreasonable that it needs but to be stated to be repudiated."

[2] The facts in the above case disclose that the defendant for a long time had allowed a portion of his lot adjoining a street to be used by the public as a part of the highway; that he made an excavation on his lot about 10 feet from the line of the street, and the plaintiff, while passing over the lot, fell into the excavation and was thereby injured. In Graves v. Thomas, 95 Ind. 361, 48 Am. Rep. 727, the Supreme Court of Indiana announced the rule as follows:

> "When the public have by permission traveled on foot for years over an open city lot, it is the duty of the owner, upon making an excavation in the pathway, with a view to erecting a building, to put some guard or warning for public protection, and a failure to do so gives a right of action to one who, without fault, is injured thereby."

In Young v. Harvey, 16 Ind. 314, the defendant dug and left exposed a pit on his uninclosed lot near the street. The plaintiff's horse fell into the pit and was killed. In holding the owner of the lot liable, the court said:

> "If the probability" that such an accident might happen from thus leaving the pit exposed "was so strong as to make it the duty of the owner of the lot, as a member of the community, to guard that community from the danger to which the pit exposed its members, in person and property, he is liable to an action for loss occurring through his neglect to perform that duty."

In Wharton on Negligence, § 349, it is said:

> "Nor am I justified in making excavations either in the path which I have permitted other persons to traverse, or so near a public road that travelers in the ordinary aberrations or casualties of travel may stray or be driven over the line and be injured by falling into the excavations."

From these authorities it is plain that the court did not err in overruling the demurrer to the petition, and for the same reason overruling the demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence was not error, and the denial of a peremptory instruction, also complained of in the assignments of error of the railroad company.

The fifth assignment of error is as to the admission of incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial evidence on behalf of the plaintiff. It does not appear from the assignments what the evidence was, and we are therefore not able to determine whether the assignment is well taken or not. For the same reason the sixth assignment of error presents no question for review.

Complaint is made by the railroad company to instruction No. 5, which the court gave to the jury. That instruction is as follows:

> "If you find from a preponderance of the evidence that the pit or excavation was permitted to remain by the defendants upon the premises described in such relation to the public street and in such proximity to the excavation that the defendants could reasonably have foreseen that a person traveling on the public street in the exercise of due care himself would be injured, and that the plaintiff, while traveling along the public street in the exercise of due care, was allured by the condition of the premises from the public street and into the pit and sustained the injuries complained of, then your verdict should be for the plaintiff. But before you can so find you must first find that the situation regarding the pit and driveway was one from which it could reasonably have been foreseen by the defendants that the injury might occur to a person traveling carefully on the highway."

Under the authorities heretofore set out it seems that the instruction embraced a full and fair statement of the law applicable to the facts disclosed by the record.

It is also complained by the railroad company that there is no proof that it was the owner of this property. The evidence is that Miller formerly owned the lots, and that he sold them to C. G. Jones, who constructed the railroad into the city of Perry under the name of the Arkansas Valley & Western Railway Company, and that the title to the lots was made to that company. However, the evidence is undisputed that the Frisco Railroad Company leased the property to Miller in 1904, and again renewed the lease in 1909, and that it used the property as a place for loading and unloading freight from its cars, and in so doing made the roadway leading from the street to the property, and which was the lure that led Ray from the street to the pit. There is no dispute in the evidence that the Frisco Company exercised dominion over this property, and its ownership sufficiently appears to establish its responsibility for the condition of the property. The evidence is not disputed that Miller made this excavation on the property, and that it was there open and unprotected when the lease was renewed in 1909, and so remained until the time of the accident, November 22, 1911. Under the authorities both the landlord and tenant, under the circumstances above recited, were liable for the negligence. Taylor on Landlord & Tenant, § 195; Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 28, 17 Am. Rep. 295; Bueschlng v. St. L. Gas Co., 73 Mo. 219, 39 Am. Rep. 503.

The contention is made on behalf of Miller that he was not a tenant, but a mere licensee; that his dominion over this property was for the special purpose of erecting and maintaining a grain elevator thereon. We fail to see that that makes any difference in his responsibility. In Hanson v. Spokane Valley Land & Water Co., 58 Wash. 6, 107 Pac. 863, the Supreme Court of Washington announces the rule in the seventh paragraph of the syllabus as follows:

> "Where one made a dangerous excavation in a public way over private land, where he knew the public were invited and accustomed to travel, he was liable for injuries to a person who fell into the excavation while using the way, although he was not the owner of the land."

The same court, in Collins v. Hazel Lumber Co., 54 Wash. 524, 103 Pac. 798, in a case where a person obstructed a public highway and went on adjoining lands, which he did not own, and constructed a way around the obstruction and the person taking this way across the private land was injured, and sued the party who made the private way, said:

> "The way itself was, of course, an implied invitation to use it. The mere fact that the appellant was a trespasser as to the owner of the land or that persons traveling over the way were trespassers as to the true owner, did not make such persons trespassers as to the appellant. As between the appellant and persons lawfully upon the highway, the appellant, under the conditions shown, was clearly liable to his invitees as though it owned the land. This proposition is elementary."

We do not consider that it makes any difference in Miller's liability whether he was a tenant or a licensee, that his liability is in no way affected by this fact, and for that reason it was not error in the court to refuse to submit this issue to the jury in the special instruction requested by Miller.

Another assignment made by Miller is misconduct of counsel for the prevailing party in his argument to the jury. Complaint is first made of this in the motion for a new trial, where the alleged misconduct is set out, this motion being supported by affidavit. The record fails to show that objection was made at the time, and an exception saved to the action of the trial court in ruling thereon. In the absence of an affirmative showing in the record that objection was made to the conduct complained of at the time and exception saved to the ruling of the court thereon, no question is brought up for review by this assignment, and for that reason this assignment is not well taken.

A great many authorities from other jurisdictions are cited in the brief of the counsel for the plaintiffs in error, but none of these cases, so far as we have been able to discover, announce the controlling principle in the instant case.

It is contended on behalf of the railroad company that Faurot v. Oklahoma Wholesale Grocery Co., 21 Okl. 104, 95 Pac. 463, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 136, announces the controlling principle, and its application relieves the company from liability in this case. We do not so read that decision. The rule announced in that case does not apply to the facts in the instant case. It does, however, seem that the rule announced and applied in St. L. & S. F. R. Co. v. Bell, 159 Pac. 336, L. R. A. 1917A, 543, is applicable and controlling in this case, and establishes the liability of the railroad company as well as its tenant. In the Bell Case running water caused the pit upon the railroad company's right of way near the highway, and the railroad company negligently permitted weeds to grow up around it so as to obstruct the view of the traveler on the highway, and he thereby ran into the pit, while in the instant case Miller, the tenant, made the pit on the right of way, and neither he nor the company did anything to give warning of the danger it invited by reason of its proximity to the public street and the roadway leading therefrom near to it. The railroad company leased this land with the unguarded pit upon it, and continued to use the property in the discharge of its own business, and in so doing made the roadway from the highway, which roadway became the lure that caused the traveler to wander from the highway onto the private property, and to fall into the unguarded pit thereon.

In the instant case the questions were largely questions of fact. These were properly submitted to the jury by the court in its instructions, and the jury found that both the railroad company and Miller were responsible for the maintenance of this pit on this vacant property, and that they were negligent in not inclosing it by a fence or something that would warn travelers and prevent them from falling therein, and that this negligence was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries, and should have been foreseen and guarded against, and for not doing so the liability of each of them was established.

There is evidence in the record to support these findings. We fail to find any prejudicial error in the proceedings, and therefore conclude that the judgment appealed from should be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

MILLER et al. v. GRAYSON et al.
(No. 6856.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 23, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE ⟹7(4) — DEEDS—VALIDITY BETWEEN PARTIES.

A conveyance of land made in contravention of the provisions of section 2260, Rev. Laws 1910, by the rightful owner, is utterly void as against the person holding adversely, claiming to be the owner thereof under color of title, but as between the parties and all the rest of the world it is good, and passes the grantor's title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Champerty and Maintenance, Cent. Dig. § 65.]

2. CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE ⟹7(5)— CONVEYANCE—GRANTEE'S ACTION AGAINST ADVERSE POSSESSOR.

Where land in the adverse possession of another is conveyed, the grantee may maintain an action in the name of his grantor to recover from the adverse holder.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Champerty and Maintenance, Cent. Dig. §§ 57–64.]

3. CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE ⟹7(5) — CONVEYANCE — TITLE — PURCHASE BY ADVERSE POSSESSOR.

Where the holder of the legal title to real estate who is out of possession conveys such title to a third person who is not in possession, in contemplation of law, as between the grantor, grantee, and the person in possession, holding adversely, claiming to be the owner thereof, the title remains in the grantor or original proprietor, and the person in possession has a right to purchase in such title during the pendency of an action commenced against him for possession by this grantor for the benefit of the champertous grantee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Champerty and Maintenance, Cent. Dig. §§ 57–64.]

Error from District Court, Jefferson County; Frank M. Bailey, Judge.

Suit by Daniel Miller and Charlico Emer against N. B. Grayson and J. M. Bound. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

W. Y. Dilley, of Waurika, for plaintiffs in error. Guy Green, of Waurika, for defendants in error.

KANE, C. J. This is a controversy between two sets of grantees of Daniel Miller and Charlico Emer, each set claiming to deraign their title to the interest of said Miller and Emer in said land through separate lines of conveyances. The first line of conveyances was executed by Miller and Emer to Grayson and Bound, the defendants in error herein. Immediately upon the execution of these conveyances, Grayson and Bound entered into possession of the land and were holding adverse possession thereof at the time the second line of conveyances was executed.

Counsel for plaintiff in error concede in their brief that, under the holdings of this court in a long line of cases construing our champerty statute (section 2260, Rev. Laws Okl. 1910), the second line of conveyances, through which his client claims, is void as against the defendants in adverse possession, and that his client could not, in his own name, commence this action to recover the said land, or to make any other recovery based upon the champertous deeds. For this reason, the present action was commenced by Miller and Emer, "for the use and benefit of F. A. Watkins" (the real party in interest), against the defendants, N. B. Grayson and J. M. Bound. On the other hand, it is conceded by counsel for the defendants in error that, where lands in the adverse possession of another are conveyed, the grantee may maintain an action in the name of his grantor to recover from the adverse holder; but, to avoid the force of the decisions holding to this effect, they call attention to the fact that, shortly after the commencement of this action, the nominal plaintiffs therein, viz. Miller and Emer, executed another conveyance to Grayson and Bound, which it is conceded would be good if not affected by the transactions hereinbefore set out. The court below decided the cause in favor of the defendants, and it is to reverse this action that this proceeding in error was commenced.

[1, 2] In Huston v. Scott, 20 Okl. 142, 94 Pac. 512, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 721, and many other cases in this jurisdiction, it has been held that a conveyance of land made in contravention of the provisions of section 2260, Rev. Laws 1910, by the rightful owner, is utterly void as against the person holding adversely, claiming to be the owner thereof under color of title, but as between the parties and all the rest of the world it is good, and passes the grantor's title. And it also has been held by this court that, where land in the adverse possession of another is conveyed, the grantee may maintain an action in the name of his grantor to recover from the adverse holder. Gannon v. Johnson, 40 Okl. 695, 140 Pac. 430, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 522.

[3] The only unsettled question then, necessary to notice, is whether the last deed made by the original owners of the land, after the commencement of this action, to the parties in possession holding adversely, was effectual to perfect their title and bar the further prosecution of the suit. This question must be answered in the affirmative here, as it was in the court below. Chancellor Kent, in Jackson et al. v. Givens et al., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 137, 5 Am. Dec. 328, in discussing the general rule, says:

> "The defendants have a right to protect themselves under their title, equally as if they had themselves purchased it in the first instance. Why not? The party in possession may always purchase in an outstanding title; and Atkinson and those under him had a right, by the purchase under Williams, to connect themselves with the patentee. The prohibition from purchasing pretended title was intended for the benefit of the party at the time in possession, and it ought not to be used as a weapon as against such party. This would be defeating the very object and policy of the rule. * * * There is no reason that the rule making the purchaser of a pretended title void should be applied to a purchase set up by the very party in possession at the time. The title so set up cannot be to the prejudice of any person. It is not within the mischief of maintenance."

Other cases to the same effect are Jackson v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 406; Dever v. Hagerty et al., 169 N. Y. 481, 62 N. E. 586; Burke v. Scharf, 19 N. D. 227, 124 N. W. 79; Galbraith v. Payne, 12 N. D. 164, 96 N. W. 258; Everenden v. Beaumont, 7 Mass. 76; Betsey v. Torrance, 34 Miss. 132. So, we take it to be an established rule of law that a party in possession may purchase in all outstanding titles in order to protect his possession. Therefore, unless the fact that the outstanding title, which, in contemplation of law, was in the nominal plaintiffs, as between the champertous grantee and the parties in possession, was purchased after the commencement of this action, forms an exception to the general rule, the authorities hereinbefore cited must govern. Livingston v. Proseus, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 526; Coogler v. Rogers, 25 Fla. 853, 7 South. 391.

Conceding the general rule to be sound, there is no statute, and we know of no principle of law, which would prohibit the party in possession from taking the conveyance of an outstanding title merely because he is defending his possession in a legal proceeding instituted against him for possession for the benefit of a champertous grantee. Adams v. Buford, 36 Ky. 406.

Having reached this conclusion, it is not necessary to note any other assignment of error presented by counsel for plaintiffs in error.

For the reason stated, the judgment of the court below must be affirmed. All the Justices concur.

CUSHING v. WHALEY et al. (No. 6578.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Jan. 9, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INDIANS 🔑15(2) — DEED OF INHERITED LANDS—APPROVAL OF SECRETARY OF INTERIOR—VALIDITY.

Section 22 of the Act of Congress of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. 137, c. 1876), giving to the adult heirs of any deceased Indian of either of the Five Civilized Tribes, whose selection has been made or to whom a deed or patent has been issued for his or her share of the land of the tribe to which he or she belongs or belonged, authority to sell and convey the lands inherited from such decedent, but which also provides that "all conveyances made under this provision by heirs who are full-blood Indians are to be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe," renders void a deed to inherited lands, whether surplus or homestead, allotted during the lifetime of a deceased full-blood Chickasaw, who died prior to the date of the passage of the act, where the heirs, adult full-blood Chickasaws, attempted to convey by deeds dated, respectively, May 8 and June 7, 1907, without obtaining the approval of the Secretary of the Interior to such conveyances.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indians, Cent. Dig. § 39.]

2. INDIANS 🔑2, 15(2)—GUARDIANSHIP—AUTHORITY OF CONGRESS—APPROVAL OF CONVEYANCES.

Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional authority, and in pursuance of a long-established governmental policy, has the right to determine for itself when the guardianship, which the government has maintained over full-blood Indians, shall cease. While such guardianship continues, it may by legislation constitutionally impose restrictions on full-blood Indian heirs, requiring that conveyances by them of inherited allotted lands be approved by the Secretary of the Interior: and this notwithstanding the fact that restrictions imposed by prior legislation have expired by limitation, or by the death of the allottee.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indians, Cent. Dig. §§ 2, 3, 39.]

Hardy, J., dissenting.

Error from District Court, Pontotoc County; Tom D. McKeown, Judge.

Action by Francis J. Cushing against John H. Whaley, Mary E. Whaley, the American Trust Company, and J. A. Wooley, in which Jinsey Carney, Margrette Carney, and Billy Killcrease, Simon Killcrease, and Raymond Killcrease, by their legal guardian, John H. Cox, filed their plea of intervention, as did Johnson Carney, by a separate plea. From the judgment decreeing the title to the lands in controversy to be in the interveners, Jinsey Carney, Margrette Carney, and Billy Killcrease, Simon Killcrease, and Raymond Killcrease, the plaintiff brings error. Pending the appeal, the said Francis J. Cushing died, and said proceedings in error was on July 27, 1915, revived in the name of Ada T. Cushing, administratrix of the estate of Francis J. Cushing, deceased. Affirmed.

Tibbetts & Green, of Guthrie, for plaintiff in error. B. C. King, of Ada, for defendants in error.

SHARP, J. This case involves the title to the northwest quarter of section 27, township 4 north, range 7 east of the Indian Meridian, situate in Pontotoc county and allotted during life to Sampson Carney, a full-blood Chickasaw Indian, who died March 21, 1906. As we understand the record, Jinsey Carney was the surviving wife of Sampson Carney; Margrette Carney the surviving wife of Tom Carney, a son of Sampson; and Harriet Killcrease, née Carney, the daughter of said Sampson. Prior to the filing of the plea of intervention, Harriet Killcrease, née Carney, the daughter, died, leaving, as her sole and only heirs at law, her children, Billy, Simon, and Raymond Killcrease. After the death of Sampson, by deeds dated, respectively, May 8, 1907, and June 7, 1907, his heirs attempted to convey the title inherited by them to one W. C. Kandt. Thereafter conveyances were made by Kandt to the American Trust Company and by the trust company to John H. Whaley, who, joined by his wife, executed the mortgage sought to be foreclosed by the assignee thereof, July 5, 1907.

[1] Like himself, the heirs at law of Sampson Carney were each full-blood Chickasaw Indians. Their deeds to Kandt to the quarter section of land involved were not approved as provided by the act of Congress of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, c. 1876). The sole question for our consideration is the right of the heirs, who are full-blood Indians, to sell and convey the lands inherited from their deceased ancestor, without having the conveyance approved by the Secretary of the Interior, as provided in section 22 of the Act of April 26, 1906. The exact question was involved, and after full consideration decided, in the case of Brader v. James, 154 Pac. 560, where it was held that section 22 of the Act of Congress of April 26, 1906, giving to the adult heirs of any deceased Indian of either of the Five Civilized Tribes, whose selection has been made, or to whom a deed or patent has been issued for his or her share of the lands of the tribe to which he or she belongs or belonged, authority to sell and convey the lands inherited from such decedent, but which further provides that "All conveyances made under this provision by heirs who are full-blood Indians are to be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe," rendered void a deed to inherited lands, whether surplus or homestead, allotted during the lifetime of a deceased full-blood Choctaw, who died prior to the date of the passage of the act, where the heir, an adult full-blood Choctaw, attempted to convey by deed, on August 17, 1907, without obtaining the approval of the Secretary of the Interior to such conveyance. There, as here, the death of the full-blood allottee occurred prior to the passage of the act of Congress of April 26, 1906; but the conveyance was not made until after the date on which said act became a law. As recognized in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error, the case is ruled by the decision in Brader v. James, if that opinion is adhered to.

In support of the views by us expressed in the opinion in Brader v. James may be added the following opinions of the Supreme Court of the United States, decided or published since the above opinion was handed down: Williams et al. v. Johnson, 239 U. S. 414, 36 Sup. Ct. 150, 60 L. Ed. 358; Levindale Lead & Zinc Mining Co. et al. v. Coleman, 241 U. S. 432, 36 Sup. Ct. 644, 60 L. Ed. 1080; United States v. Nice, 241 U. S. 591, 36 Sup. Ct. 696, 60 L. Ed. 1192. In the opinion in Brader v. James, attention was called to the fact that the Supreme Court, in Choate et al. v. Trapp, 224 U. S. 665, 32 Sup. Ct. 565, 56 L. Ed. 941, expressly recognized a distinction between the right to exemption from taxation, based on a sufficient consideration, and the power of Congress to impose a limitation on alienation. This view of the law finds support in Williams et al. v. Johnson, supra, where, as here, the opinion in Choate v. Trapp was urged as an authority, authorizing a contrary conclusion. In that case it was said:

> "It has often been decided that the Indians are wards of the nation, and that Congress has plenary control over tribal relations and property, and that this power continues after the Indians are made citizens, and may be exercised as to restrictions upon alienation. Marchie Tiger v. Western Invest. Co., supra. Against this ruling, Choate v. Trapp does not militate. In the latter case it was decided that taxation could not be imposed upon allotted land a patent to which was issued under an act of Congress containing a provision 'that the land should be nontaxable' for a limited time; and, excluding the application of the Marchie Tiger Case, it was said that exemption from taxation 'and nonalienability were two separate and distinct objects.' And further, 'one conveyed a right and the other imposed a limitation.' The power to do the latter was declared, and it was said: 'The right to remove the restriction (limitation upon alienation) was in pursuance of the power under which Congress could legislate as to the status of the ward, and lengthen or shorten the period of disability. But the provision that the land should be nontaxable was a property right, which Congress undoubtedly had the power to grant.'"

The opinion fully sustains our former construction of the decision in Choate v. Trapp, and, besides, removes any doubt as to the limitations that should be given that decision.

[2] Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional authority, and while the guardianship relation over full-blood Indians continues, may impose restrictions on full-blood heirs, requiring that conveyances by them of inherited allotted lands be approved by the Secretary of the Interior; and this notwithstanding the restrictions imposed by prior legislation have expired by limitation, or by the death of the allottee. Section 22 of the Act of April 26, 1906, as said in Levindale Lead & Zinc Mining Co. et al. v. Coleman, supra, "evinced the continuance, to this extent at least, of the guardianship which the United States had exercised from the beginning." And as said in United States v. Nice, supra:

> "Of course, when the Indians are prepared to exercise the privileges and bear the burdens of one sui juris, the tribal relation may be dissolved and the national guardianship brought to an end; but it rests with Congress to determine when and how this shall be done, and whether the emancipation shall at first be complete or only partial. Citizenship is not incompatible with tribal existence or continued guardianship, and so may be conferred without completely emancipating the Indians, or placing them beyond the reach of congressional regulations adopted for their protection."

The latter opinion is noteworthy, in that it expressly overrules the former opinion of that court in Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 25 Sup. Ct. 506, 49 L. Ed. 848, long considered a leading authority upon the power of Congress to deal with the individual Indian.

We think section 22 of the act of April 26, 1906, being for the protection and benefit of full-blood Indian heirs, in making conveyances of inherited allotted lands, should be taken literally, and without any implied exception in favor of those whose ancestors died subsequent to allotment, but prior to the passage of said act. Strained construction should not be given the language used, but, instead, the statute should be construed in the light of the policy it was obviously intended to execute; a policy relating to the welfare of Indians, wards of the general government.

The deeds not having been approved, Kandt took no title, and hence Whaley, through mesne conveyances, acquired no interest in the land, the subject of a mortgage.

The judgment of the trial court is affirmed. All the Justices concur, except HARDY, J., dissenting.

O K BUS & BAGGAGE CO. v. O K TRANSFER & STORAGE CO. (No. 7099.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Oct. 10, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. TRADE-MARKS AND TRADE-NAMES ⚿3(1)—PARTICULAR BUSINESS—EXCLUSIVE USE.

One who produces or deals in a particular thing or conducts a particular business may appropriate to his exclusive use as a trade mark or name some symbol or name which has not been so appropriated by another, to designate the origin or ownership thereof; but he cannot exclusively appropriate any designation or part of a designation which relates only to the name, quality, or description of the thing or business, or the place where the thing is produced or the business carried on.

2. Trade-Marks and Trade-Names 🔑57 — Unfair Competition—Confusing Identity of Business.

All practices between business rivals which tend to engender unfair competition are odious to the law and will be restrained by the courts. No man will be permitted to make use of signs or tokens which serve to confuse the identity of his business with that of another so as to mislead the public and divert business from his competitor to himself.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trade-Marks and Trade-Names, Cent. Dig. § 65.]

3. Trade-Marks and Trade-Names 🔑84 — Unfair Competition—Action to Enjoin—Defenses.

The existence of business concerns doing business under names of which the letters "O K" constitute a part, which refer to lines of business other than that in which plaintiff is engaged, cannot be urged as a defense to unfair competition engaged in by defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trade-Marks and Trade-Names, Cent. Dig. §§ 93, 97.]

4. Trade-Marks and Trade-Names 🔑92 — Unfair Competition — Action — Counterclaim.

In an action to restrain unfair competition, a counterclaim for damages by the defendant that plaintiff has wrongfully used the trade-name of defendant, and asking that plaintiff be restrained from the use thereof and required to pay damages for the infringement of defendant's rights, is proper, and, if the allegations thereof are sustained, defendant is entitled to the relief sought.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trade-Marks and Trade-Names, Cent. Dig. §§ 102, 103.]

Error from District Court, Oklahoma County; John J. Carney, Judge.

Action by the O K Transfer & Storage Company against the O K Bus & Baggage Company to enjoin alleged unfair competition. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Blake, Boys & Shear, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. Warren K. Snyder, of Oklahoma City, for defendant in error.

HARDY, J. The "O K Transfer & Storage Company" instituted this action against the "O K Bus & Baggage Company" to enjoin it from certain alleged unfair competition with plaintiff in the transfer and storage business. The parties will be referred to as they appeared in the trial court. The petition alleges that during its corporate existence plaintiff had been engaged in Oklahoma City in the transfer and storage business, and conducting a business of warehouseman; that it was not engaged in any bus or baggage business; that the defendant, O K Bus & Baggage Company, was using for advertising purposes the name and style of "O K Bus & Baggage Company"; that recently it had engaged in the transfer and storage business in Oklahoma City, and that the advertisements used by them were very similar to the designation, style, and name of advertising plaintiff uses; that plaintiff was located at 336 West First street, and defendant's place of business was 300 West First street; that plaintiff had spent large sums of money in advertising, and its trade-name was extensively used and brought to the knowledge of the public, and plaintiff had acquired a valuable property interest in and to said trade-name, and its use and enjoyment by plaintiff was of great pecuniary value; that the defendant, well knowing the facts and the rights and privileges of plaintiff, secured by the use and adoption of its said trade-name, and with the intent upon the part of the defendant to appropriate to itself the profits, benefits, and advantages thereof, has engaged in a similar line of mercantile business in close proximity to the established place of business of the plaintiff, and is wrongfully and deceitfully and unlawfully using and applying its name and style of business to defendant's transfer and storage business, and by advertising the same concerning defendant's said business, consisting of signs, newspaper, telephone advertising, etc., or such approximations and simulations thereof as are calculated to deceive and do deceive patrons and customers of plaintiff, to a very large extent, and to plaintiff's great injury and damage. The defendant, "O K Bus & Baggage Company," answered admitting its incorporation, and its engagement in the bus and baggage business, and further alleged that the name "O K Bus & Baggage Company" is the name which relates to the description of the business conducted by defendant, and that plaintiff had never used said name for any designation of its origin or ownership, and has no rights in or to such name and no right to appropriate the same to its exclusive use, and no grounds upon which to claim infringement by defendant upon the name, designation, or advertising of plaintiff; and alleged that the name "O K Bus & Baggage Company" does not designate the origin or ownership of said defendant corporation.

After hearing the evidence, the court, being of the opinion that plaintiff had failed to sustain its allegation of money damages, withdrew the case from the jury, and, upon consideration, granted a perpetual injunction restraining defendant from the use of the letters "O K" in connection with its sign or signs, upon its warehouse, its place of business, and other places, and also upon the vehicles used by it in its business, and from its advertising; it being stated in the order that it was not intended to enjoin the defendant from advertising or conducting its business in a lawful manner, but only to enjoin the defendant from the use of the letters "O K" in connection with its business and advertising. Exceptions were duly saved, and defendant appealed.

In its judgment the court found:

> "That plaintiff had sustained by the evidence all the material allegations of its petition with relation to the equitable features and injunction prayed for."

Defendant relies upon section 6741, Revised Laws 1910, which is as follows:

> "One who produces or deals in a particular thing, or conducts a particular business, may appropriate to his exclusive use, as a trade-mark, any form, symbol or name which has not been so appropriated by another, to designate the origin or ownership thereof; but he cannot exclusively appropriate any designation, or part of a designation, which relates only to the name, quality, or the description of the thing or business, or the place where the thing is produced, or the business is carried on."

And counsel contend that the letters "O K" have no relation either to the origin or ownership of the plaintiff's business, and therefore, under the section of the statute above quoted, plaintiff has no exclusive right to the use thereof; that said letters are applied to almost every class of business, and defendant has an equal right to the use thereof.

[1] The general doctrine of law as to trade-marks and symbols or signs which may be used in the prosecution of one's business, and the protection which the courts will afford to those who originally appropriate them, do not appear to be questioned. Every one is at liberty to affix to a product of his own manufacture any symbol or device not previously appropriated, which will distinguish the article from others of the same general nature, and thus to secure the benefits of increased sales which may accrue by reason of any particular excellence he may have given to the article so designated. The symbol or device thus becomes a sign to the public of the origin of the goods to which it is attached, and an assurance that they are the genuine article of the person first appropriating the symbol; and the use thereof often becomes of great value in preventing the sale of a different or inferior article for the original product. It thus becomes his trade-mark, and he is entitled to protection in its exclusive use by the imposition of damages for its wrongful appropriation by another, or by restraining others from applying it to their goods, and requiring them to account for profits made by the sale of goods marked with it. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. David Trainer et al., 101 U. S. 51, 25 L. Ed. 993. However, under this rule, one cannot claim protection for the exclusive use of a trade-name which would give him a monopoly in the sale of any goods other than those of his own. Neither can a generic name or a name descriptive of an article of trade, of its qualities, ingredients, or characteristics, be employed as a trade-mark, and the exclusive use of it be entitled to legal protection. Canal Co. v. Clark, 13 Wall. 311, 20 L. Ed. 581; Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Trainer et al., supra.

The plaintiff's petition seeks protection for plaintiff in its business on the ground that the letters "O K" constitute a trade-name, and that the defendant has been guilty of an infringement thereof; and also upon the ground that defendant has been guilty of unfair competition.

It may be conceded that under the evidence plaintiff is not entitled to the exclusive use of the letters "O K" as a trade-mark within the law of that subject, and that it has no proprietary interest in the use thereof in connection with its business.

There would still remain the question as to whether defendant under the findings of the court should be restrained from continuing that kind of competition which is denominated as unfair and condemned by the courts.

Plaintiff's place of business was located at 336 West First street, while defendant's place of business was in the same block at 300 West First street. The plaintiff upon its building had painted its name in large letters, of which the letters "O K" formed a conspicuous part, and upon its vans and other vehicles had likewise displayed said letters, and had used the same in its advertising upon the curtains of theaters, in newspapers, telephone directories, bills, and stationery. The defendant had used the same letters in connection with its name displayed in similar manner upon its place of business, and in different advertising mediums, and its advertisements were calculated to deceive an ordinarily unsuspecting person. The court found that defendant had simulated and was using a form of advertising closely resembling that of plaintiff, for the purpose of deceiving plaintiff's customers, depriving it of its business and profits, and that said advertising had so deceived customers of plaintiff.

The leading English case (Lee v. Haley, 5 Chancery App. 155) held that the "Guinae Coal Company," which had carried on for some years at Pall Mall a large business and had acquired a considerable reputation, was entitled to enjoin the defendant, who had formerly been their manager and set up a rival business at another place under the name of the "Pall Mall Guinae Coal Company," and afterwards removed to Pall Mall, from the use of its name. In the opinion it is said:

> "I quite agree that they have no property in the name, but the principle upon which cases upon this subject proceed is not that there is any property in the word, but that it is a fraud on a person who has established a trade and carries it on under a given name that some other person should assume the same name, or the same name with a slight alteration, in such a use as to induce persons to deal with him under the belief that they are dealing with the person who has given a reputation to the name. * * * That it is a fraud on the part of a defendant to set up a business under such a name as is calculated to lead and does lead other people to suppose that his business is the business of another person."

In Wotherspoon v. Curry, 5 L. R. (5 H. L.) 508, defendant was enjoined from using the word "Glenfield" in connection with a starch manufactured by him; the House of Lords holding that putting the word "Glenfield" upon his labels fraudulently and with the intention of making out that his starch was the starch of plaintiff who had by use acquired the right to the use of the name "Glenfield" on his starch, was a fraud upon the plaintiff; and in Thompson v. Montgomery, L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 35, although it was held that plaintiff was not entitled to register the words "Stone Ale" as a trade-mark, under the act of Parliament in that behalf, yet they had acquired by user the right to the use of the words, and, the conduct of the defendant being in the opinion of the court calculated to deceive the public into supposing that his ales were brewed by plaintiff, he was enjoined from the use of said words.

The rule announced by the Supreme Court of the United States, which has generally been followed in this country, is stated in Lawrence Mfg. Co. v. Tennessee Mfg. Co., 138 U. S. 537, 11 Sup. Ct. 396, 34 L. Ed. 997, as follows:

> "Undoubtedly an unfair and fraudulent competition against the business of the plaintiff—conducted with the intent, on the part of the defendant, to avail itself of the reputation of the plaintiff to palm off its goods as plaintiff's—would, in a proper case, constitute ground for relief."

And again, in McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245, 24 L. Ed. 828, discussing what facts were necessary to constitute an infringement of a trade-mark, it was said:

> "Much must depend, in every case, upon the appearance and special characteristics of the entire device; but it is safe to declare, as a general rule, that exact similitude is not required to constitute an infringement or to entitle the complaining party to protection. If the form, marks, contents, words, or the special arrangement of the same, or the general appearance of the infringer's device, is such as would be likely to mislead one in the ordinary course of purchasing the goods, and induce him to suppose that he was purchasing the genuine article, then the similitude is such as entitles the injured party to equitable protection, if he takes seasonable measures to assert his rights and to prevent their continued invasion."

In Coats v. Merrick Thread Co., 149 U. S. 562, 13 Sup. Ct. 966, 37 L. Ed. 847, it was said:

> "There can be no question of the soundness of the plaintiffs' proposition that, irrespective of the technical question of trade-mark, the defendants have no right to dress their goods up in such a manner as to deceive an intending purchaser, and induce him to believe he is buying those of the plaintiffs. Rival manufacturers may lawfully compete for the patronage of the public in the quality and price of their goods, in the beauty and tastefulness of their enclosing packages, in the extent of their advertising, and in the employment of agents; but they have no right, by imitative devices, to beguile the public into buying their wares under the impression they are buying those of their rivals."

In Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Cellonite Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 32 Fed. 94, the court enjoined the use of the word "Cellonite" by the defendant, because the similarity of that word to the word "Celluloid" used by plaintiff representing an article manufactured by both was sufficient under the circumstances to mislead the ordinarily unsuspecting purchaser. In the opinion it was said:

> "The defendant's name was of its own choosing, and, if an unlawful imitation of the complainant's, is subject to the same rules of law as if it were the name of an unincorporated firm or company. It is not identical with the complainant's name. That would be too gross an invasion of the complainant's rights. Similarity, not identity, is the usual recourse when one party seeks to benefit himself by the good name of another. What similarity is sufficient to effect the object has to be determined in each case by its own circumstances."

Shaver v. Heller & Merz Co., 108 Fed. 821, 48 C. C. A. 48, 65 L. R. A. 878, is a well-considered case on this subject, supporting the foregoing rule, and reviews the authorities at great length in an able opinion by Sanborn, Judge.

The unfair competition complained of in this case is similarity in its advertising, which, according to the findings of the court, so closely resembled that used by plaintiff as to deceive and mislead plaintiff's customers.

In Knott v. Morgan, 48 Eng. Rep. (Reprint) 610, the Rolls Court granted an injunction restraining the defendant from using upon its omnibus the words "Conveyance Company," or "London Conveyance Company," or any device used by plaintiffs for the purpose of distinguishing their property, and thereby depriving them of the profits of their business by attracting custom on a false representation that carriages really the defendant's belonged to and were under the management of the plaintiffs.

In the case of N. Y. Cab Co. v. Mooney, cited by Browne on Trade-Marks, at page 573, defendants were enjoined from using cabs painted and lettered to create the impression that they belonged to the plaintiff.

In American Brewing Co. v. St. Louis Brewing Co., 47 Mo. App. 14, it was held that:

> "Even where there may be no exclusive right to the use of a word, * * * as a trade-mark, a person who uses signs and devices, containing the word, for the purpose of advertising the sale of goods of his manufacture, will be entitled to protection against the fraudulent imitation of such signs and devices by others for the purpose of representing their goods as those of his manufacture."

In Johnson v. Hitchcock, 3 N. Y. Supp. 680, a real estate auctioneer, who for many years had sold suburban property on the installment plan and had always used in his business and for several years had printed in connection with his advertisements a representation of a flag with stars on the upper and lower borders, was awarded an injunction against the use of a like arrangement of stars upon the representation of a flag used in the advertisement of another real estate auctioneer who sold suburban property on the installment plan.

The case of Weinstock Lubin & Co. v. Marks, 109 Cal. 529, 42 Pac. 142, 30 L. R. A. 182, 50 Am. St. Rep. 57, further illustrates this principle. Plaintiffs had adopted the name "Mechanics Store," for their place of business, and in the management and conduct of their business fixed a price upon each and every article, marked the same in plain figures thereon, and sold such articles at the prices so marked, and never deviated therefrom. By extensive advertising throughout the entire Pacific Coast, their method of doing business became widely known, and plaintiffs acquired a wide and honorable reputation. Plaintiffs' place of business was located in a building of peculiar architecture. Defendant erected a building of similar architecture, adjoining that of plaintiffs, and, for the purpose of deceiving customers of such firm, adopted the name "Mechanical Store," and refrained from using any sign about the building to designate the proprietor. The court held that equity could not compel the defendant to designate who was the proprietor of his store, but required him to distinguish his place of business from the other in some way that would be a sufficient indication to the public that his store was a different place of business from that of the other.

Many other authorities could be cited announcing the same rule under similar circumstances, but the foregoing appears to be sufficient to indicate the state of the law on this subject.

[2] The rule may be summed up thus: That all practices between business rivals which tend to engender unfair competition are odious to the law and will be restrained by the courts, for no man will be permitted to make use of signs or tokens which serve to confuse the identity of his business with that of another so as to mislead the public and divert business from his competitor to himself. Where a person intentionally uses signs or advertising or other devices or symbols in imitation of those theretofore adopted by a business rival, for the purpose of deceiving the public and obtaining for himself the benefits properly belonging to his competitor, by reason of adoption of such sign, symbol, or advertising, the use of such imitation will be restrained. Paul on Trade-Marks, § 223; Browne on Trade-Marks, § 43; Lawrence v. Tennessee, supra.

[3] The defendant urges as an additional matter of defense that various other business enterprises were being conducted under names of which the letters "O K" formed a part, and that by reason thereof plaintiff has no right to complain of such use by the defendant. It is obvious, however, that such letters in connection with the other business enterprises were not used in such a way as to interfere with plaintiff's business or to create the impression in the mind of a person dealing with any of such concerns that they were dealing with plaintiff, because the line of business in which they were engaged is wholly unlike that of plaintiff.

Particular reference is made to the "Phillips O K Bus, Baggage & Carriage Company;" but it appears that this concern is not engaged in the transfer and storage business, as is the defendant, and that a working arrangement exists between plaintiff and said "Phillips O K Bus, Baggage & Carriage Company," whereby the transfer and storage business that may come to it will be delivered to plaintiff, and there is therefore no competition between the two.

A similar question was involved in Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Cellonite Mfg. Co., supra, where Mr. Justice Bradley of the United States Supreme Court delivered the opinion, and said:

> "But it is obvious that such special names, indicating confinement to a particular branch of the trade, are wholly unlike complainant's general name of 'Celluloid Manufacturing Company.' Besides this, it is altogether probable, as we gather from one of the affidavits, that these branch companies are mostly licensees of the complainant, and very properly use the word 'Celluloid' in their names. We think that this defense cannot justly prevail."

The same rule applies in this case under the facts disclosed by the evidence, and defendant cannot urge these matters as a defense herein.

Neither can the question of laches enter into this case, for it appears from the allegations of the petition, and from the evidence, that only within a very recent time had defendant engaged in the transfer and storage business in competition with plaintiff, and that plaintiff promptly brought this action upon learning of the unfair methods of competition indulged in by defendant. Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Cellonite Mfg. Co., supra.

[4] At the trial defendant offered to prove that plaintiff, through its agents and employés, had represented themselves as being in the service of defendant, and by such unfair means had succeeded in diverting their patronage to the plaintiff. This offer was excluded, and error is urged. Ordinarily, in an action of this kind, a counterclaim on the part of defendant alleging that he is himself the owner of the name, and that plaintiff has wrongfully used it, and asking that plaintiff be restrained from the use thereof and required to pay damages for the infringement of defendant's rights, is proper, and if the allegations thereof are sustained defendant is entitled to the relief sought. G. & H. Mfg. Co. v. Hall, 61 N. Y. 226, 19 Am. Rep. 278. It appears, however, that defendant only offered to prove a single instance of such conduct, and that the attempt of plaintiff's employé was discovered, and that defendant collected the charge for the services performed by the agent of plaintiff. Had the evidence been admitted, there would have been no proof of actual damages, and its exclusion, if error, was harmless.

The judgment is affirmed. All the Justices concur.

HAMILTON v. BLAKENEY. (No. 6517.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. Executors and Administrators 🔑227(1) —Claim Against Estate—Form—Statute.

The claim required to be presented to the administrator or executor of the estate of a decedent under Rev. Laws 1910, §§ 6338, 6339, need not be in any particular form. If it advises the administrator or executor of the nature of the claim, the amount demanded, and shows enough to bar another action for the same demand, it is sufficient.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. §§ 811, 812, 842.]

2. Executors and Administrators 🔑227(6) —Claim Against Estate — Action — Variance.

The claim presented to the executor in this case examined, and held, that there is no fatal variance between the causes of action sued upon in the petition herein and such claim.

3. Appeal and Error 🔑959(3)—Discretion of Trial Court—Trial Amendment.

The permitting of an amendment to a pleading at any stage of the trial to conform to the proof is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and, in the absence of a showing of an abuse of such discretion, the action of the court will not be disturbed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3830.]

4. Appeal and Error 🔑757(3) — Review — Admission of Evidence.

When plaintiff in error complains of the introduction of evidence over his objection, but fails to set out in his brief the evidence admitted of which he complains, in compliance with rule 25 of this court (137 Pac. xi), the action of the court in admitting such evidence is not presented to this court for review.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3092.]

5. Attorney and Client 🔑158—Services—Recovery upon Quantum Meruit.

Where service has been performed under an entire and indivisible contract and the benefits accepted by the employer, but such contract has not been completely performed, the employé may sue upon a quantum meruit, and recover the reasonable value of the services rendered, subject to set-off for damages for breach of the contract.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. § 361.]

6. Appeal and Error 🔑889(3)—Amendment to Conform to Evidence—Variance—Fact.

Where evidence not within the issues is introduced without objection, if it be a case where an amendment to the petition ought to be allowed to conform to the facts proved, the pleading may be treated as amended so as to conform to the proof, and the judgment will not be reversed on account of variance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 3622.]

7. Trial 🔑141 — Directing Verdict — Evidence.

Evidence being introduced sufficient to prove the case of plaintiff, such evidence being uncontradicted and unimpeached and not inherently improbable, either in itself or taken in connection with the circumstances, the jury are not at liberty to disregard it, and, there being no evidence on behalf of defendant, in conflict therewith or presenting a defense, it is not error for the court to instruct a verdict for the plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 336.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from Superior Court, Pottawatomie County; Geo. C. Abernethy, Judge.

Action by B. B. Blakeney against B. F. Hamilton, as executor of the will of Samuel Bailey, deceased. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

F. H. Reily, of Oklahoma City, and W. S. Pendleton, of Shawnee, for plaintiff in error. J. H. Maxey, Jr., of Muskogee, and Edw. Howell, of Shawnee, for defendant in error.

RUMMONS, C. This action was commenced in the superior court of Pottawatomie county by the defendant in error against the plaintiff in error, to recover upon three causes of action. The parties will be designated in this opinion as they were in the court below. Plaintiff's first and second causes of action sought recovery for attorney's fees under written contracts with Samuel Bailey, now deceased, defendant's testator. The third cause of action set out in the petition of plaintiff sought to recover for attorney's fees, upon a quantum meruit, upon an implied contract between plaintiff and said Samuel Bailey. The first cause of action was dismissed at the trial by plaintiff, and needs no further consideration. The defendant answered each count of the petition, denying generally the allegations of each count and denying that plaintiff ever rendered any services to the said Samuel Bailey, deceased, or to the defendant, or that the defendant ever employed plaintiff, and denies that plaintiff ever tendered his services to the defendant. As to the second cause of action, the defendant says that for the best interests of the estate of said Samuel Bailey, deceased, he caused the lawsuits covered by the contract set up by plaintiff to be dismissed by his duly employed attorneys.

Upon the trial of the cause at the conclusion of the evidence of plaintiff the defendant demurred to the evidence, and moved the court to instruct the jury to return a verdict for defendant. This demurrer and the motion to instruct were overruled by the court, to which ruling the defendant excepted. The defendant rested, without introducing evidence, and the court then instructed the jury to return a verdict in favor of plaintiff for the full amount sued for in the second count of plaintiff's petition, and instructed the jury as to the third count to return a verdict for the plaintiff for such an amount as they found to be reasonable from all the evidence in the case, not exceeding $50. There was a verdict and judgment in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $750 upon the second count and upon the third count for $25. The defendant, having excepted to the overruling of his motion for new trial, prosecutes this proceeding in error to reverse the judgment of the court below.

[1, 2] Defendant's first assignment of error complains that:

> "The court erred in not sustaining the motion of the defendant, at the close of plaintiff's testimony, to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant, for the reason that the petition did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against defendant, and the further reason that there is such a material difference between the claim filed with the executor and the petition and causes of action in this case that the plaintiff could not recover."

Under this assignment of error the defendant argues that there is such a material variance between the claim filed by the plaintiff with the defendant, as executor, and the causes of action sued upon by the plaintiff that plaintiff cannot recover upon said causes of action. It was stipulated at the trial that the plaintiff had filed a verified statement as required by law, with the executor, which account was duly presented, filed, and rejected by the administrator, and that this action was commenced within 60 days after presenting said claim.

It will be necessary for the proper consideration of this assignment of error to set out the claim filed with executor by plaintiff, in full. It is as follows:

> "Muskogee, Okl., Oct. 13, 1912.
>
> "Dr. B. F. Hamilton, executor of the Estate of S. F. Bailey, deceased, indebted to B. B. Blakeney:

To attorney's fees in case of Exchange Bank of Wewoka v. Bailey, in Supreme Court	$ 250 00
Bailey v. Exchange Bank et al., district court, Seminole county	500 00
Bert Flesher, Receiver, v. Cutlip et al.	250 00
Bailey v. Tate	50 00
Total	$1050 00

> "State of Oklahoma, Muskogee County—ss.:
>
> "B. B. Blakeney, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that the above and foregoing account is just, true, and correct, and that the items therein charged were furnished under agreement with the said S. F. Bailey and the amounts charged were the amounts agreed by the said Bailey to be paid; that the above and foregoing amount is now due and owing, over and above all offsets and counterclaims, and that no payments have been made thereon.
>
> "B. B. Blakeney.
>
> "Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of December, 1912.
>
> "Hallie Whitaker, Notary Public."

It is claimed on behalf of defendant that this claim is a statement of an open account, and is a claim, upon a quantum meruit, for services rendered, and not upon an express contract, and that therefore, plaintiff having in the second count of his petition declared upon an express contract, such action is a departure from the claim presented to the executor, and cannot be maintained. It is also contended upon behalf of the defendant, inasmuch as plaintiff at the trial, to conform to the proof as to the third count of his petition, amended his petition so as to show that the contract sued upon in said count was entered into by the firm of Blakeney, Maxey & Miley with the said Samuel Bailey, deceased, and that the plaintiff was the assignee of said firm and entitled to recover the amount due on said contract, that the amendment and proof offered thereunder constituted such a departure from the claim presented to the executor that recovery could not be had thereon.

Counsel for defendant rely upon several cases determined by the Supreme Court of California upon this question. We think, however, that an examination of the cases, cited by counsel for defendant, and other authorities upon the same question, discloses that they do not bear out the contentions of defendant in support of his demurrer and motion for an instructed verdict. It is true that in an action against the estate of a decedent, it is necessary for the plaintiff to show that a claim has been properly presented to the administrator or executor of said estate and rejected, and that the recovery must be upon the same causes of action as were set up in the claim. In Ross, Probate Law and Practice, 555, it is said:

> "A creditor cannot come into court and allege and prove another or different contract or cause of action than the one stated in his claim. Of course, not every variance is fatal. The statement of facts in the complaint additional to those set forth in the claim is unobjectionable, when they are merely explanatory of the demand and do not change the cause of action."

In Lichtenberg v. McGlynn, 105 Cal. 45, 38 Pac. 541, the claim presented was as follows:

> "To services rendered by said Wm. Lichtenberg for said deceased, at his special instance, within two years next preceding his death, in and about effecting loans and sales for account of said deceased $15,000.00"

The court says:

> "In order to sustain his claim, it was necessary for the plaintiff to show that he had rendered services for the deceased within two years prior to his death; that these services had been rendered at the special instance of the deceased; that they were of the value of $15,000, or that they were rendered under an agreement, either express or implied, that he should be paid $15,000 for them." Wise v. Outtrim, 139 Iowa, 192, 117 N. W. 264, 130 Am. St. Rep. 301; Belleville Sav. Bank v. Bornman (Ill.) 10 N. E. 552; Hyatt v. Bonham, 19 Ind. App. 256, 49 N. E. 361.

In the Estate of Sulenberger, 72 Cal. 549, 14 Pac. 514, the claim filed was upon a promissory note, the statute of limitations was pleaded against the note, and recovery was sought to be had by the claimant upon another promise tolling the statute of limitations. It was held that the claim should have been upon the other obligation, and not upon the note, and that recovery could not be had, because the claim presented was barred by the statute of limitations. In McGrath v. Carroll, 110 Cal. 79, 42 Pac. 466, the claim was upon a simple money demand. The claim was rejected, and action was brought, and in the complaint it was alleged that the moneys were held and received by deceased in trust for the use and benefit of the plaintiff. It was held that one cannot present a simple money demand, and then maintain an action as the beneficiary of an express trust. In Etchas v. Orena, 127 Cal. 588, 60 Pac. 45, the claim was for services rendered deceased at his request. Upon rejection of the claim recovery was sought to be had upon the ground that services were rendered deceased upon a promise to provide for claimant in decedent's will, which promise has not been performed. It was held that the action was not based upon the claim presented. Section 6339, R. L. 1910, provides:

> "Every claim which is due when presented to the administrator must be supported by the affidavit of the claimant, or some one in his behalf, that the amount is justly due, that no payments have been made thereon which are not credited, and that there are no offsets to the same, to the knowledge of the claimant or affiant. If the claim be not due when presented, or be contingent, the particulars of such claim must be stated. When the affidavit is made by a person other than the claimant, he must set forth, in the affidavit the reason why it is not made by claimant. The executor or administrator may also require satisfactory vouchers or proofs to be produced in support of the claim. If the estate is insolvent, no greater rate of interest shall be allowed upon any claim, after the first publication of notice to creditors, than is allowed by law on judgments obtained in the district court."

It is clear that the cases of Estate of Sulenberger, supra, McGrath v. Carroll, supra, and Etchas v. Orena, supra, are distinguishable from the instant case, as in those cases the actions were predicated upon entirely different causes from those shown in the claims presented. Here plaintiff filed his claim for attorney's fees in the several causes, giving their titles in the claim, and supported it by his affidavit reciting that the items therein charged were furnished under agreement with the said decedent and the amounts charged were agreed by said decedent to be paid the plaintiff. Under our statutes the executor might have required vouchers or proofs of the claim presented to be produced; not having done so, he cannot object to the sufficiency of the claim as a foundation for this action, because a copy of the written contract was not attached thereto.

The claim presented to the defendant showed that the plaintiff claimed that the estate of the decedent was liable to him for attorney's fees in the respective cases described in the claim. The claim against an estate required to be filed by our statutes need not be in any particular form. If it advises the administrator or executor of the nature of the claim and the amount demanded and shows enough to bar another action for the same demand, it is sufficient. Upon the rejection of this claim by the executor, without a demand for further information or of exhibits or vouchers or proof of the claim, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action for the amount of his claim upon a contract with the decedent, either express or implied. Nor does the third cause of action in plaintiff's petition constitute such a variance from the claim presented for the services upon which said third cause of action was based as to defeat plaintiff's right to recover thereon. The claim showed that it was for attorney's fees in the case of Bailey v. Tate, and plaintiff sought recovery as assignee of the firm, of which he was a member, which rendered the services. We do not think the claim presented differs so much from the cause of action sued on, in the absence of demand for more specific information upon the behalf of the executor, as to constitute a fatal variance. We, therefore, hold that defendant's first assignment of error is not well taken.

[3] Defendant's second assignment of error complains that the court erred in permitting plaintiff to amend the third count of his petition over the objection of the defendant. There is no merit in this assignment of error, for the reason that there is no showing that the cause of action of plaintiff was materially changed, or that defendant was so surprised by the amendment as to be unable to proceed to trial. It is well settled in this jurisdiction that the permitting of amendment at or after the trial to conform to the proof is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and that, in the absence of a showing of any abuse of such discretion, the court's action will not be disturbed. Alcorn v. Dennis, 25 Okl. 135, 105 Pac. 1012; Lewis v. Bandy, 45 Okl. 45, 144 Pac. 624.

[4] The defendant next urges that the court erred in permitting evidence to be introduced in said cause over the objection of the defendant. Defendant fails to comply with rule 25 [137 Pac. xi] of this court, in that he fails to set out in his brief the evidence admitted of which he complains, but it may be said that the record discloses that, omitting from consideration the evidence of plaintiff as to the transactions between plaintiff and decedent, there is sufficient competent evidence to establish the execution of the contracts upon which plaintiff seeks to recover, and therefore the defendant could not be prejudiced by any ruling upon plaintiff's evidence.

[5, 6] Defendant's fourth assignment of error complains of the action of the trial court in instructing the jury to return a verdict for plaintiff in the sum of $750 upon his second cause of action. It is contended in support of this assignment of error by the defendant that the plaintiff pleaded and proved an express contract with the decedent to represent the decedent in two cases described in said contract; that said contract was an entire contract for the trial of said two cases; and, it appearing from the evidence that plaintiff never tried either of the cases, but, on the contrary, that they were dismissed before trial on the order of defendant, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover upon the express contract and could only recover upon a quantum meruit, or for damages for being prevented performing the entire contract. This assignment urged by the defendant raised the question of what is the measure of damages for the breach of a contract with a lawyer for the trial of a cause where the lawyer is prevented performing the contract in its entirety by a settlement of the cause by his client or by a wrongful discharge by his client. If it were necessary for us to pass upon this question in the determination of this cause, we have no doubt that the weight of authority, as shown by the decided cases, is in favor of the rule that the measure of damages for a breach of a contract of employment of a lawyer is the fee agreed to be paid, and that contracts retaining a lawyer for the conduct of a litigated case are exceptions as to the measure of damages for the breach of entire contracts for the performance of services, because of the peculiar confidential relationship between client and attorney. On the other hand, there are respectable authorities which fix the measure of damages for the breach of such a contract at the reasonable value of the services actually rendered. Still other authorities fix such measure of damages at the fee agreed to be paid, less the value of such services as the attorney would have been required to render, and such expenses as he would have incurred in completing the contract.

However, upon a careful examination of the record, we do not believe that it is incumbent upon us, in order to determine this cause, to decide to which one of the rules as to the measure of damages for the breach of a contract for the employment of a lawyer to try a cause we should adhere. The record shows that witnesses for the plaintiff testified as to what services were performed by the plaintiff in carrying out his contract, without objection or exception, and that, without objection or exception by defendant, one witness was permitted to qualify himself and testify to the value of the services actually rendered by plaintiff, and that he fixed the value of the services so rendered prior to the dismissal of said attorney, in the two cases for which plaintiff seeks to recover upon his second cause of action, at the sum of $750.

If the contract in this case be construed to be entire and indivisible, and the rule of law that no recovery can be had thereon without proof of complete performance be applied, yet, if services have been performed under such contract and the benefits accepted by the client, the attorney will be entitled to sue upon a quantum meruit and recover the reasonable value of the services rendered. Davidson v. Gaskill, 32 Okl. 40, 121 Pac. 649, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 692. The evidence shows that the plaintiff performed services of which the decedent received the benefit, and shows the reasonable value of such services. The defendant having failed to object to the introduction of this evidence the petition may be treated as amended in this court to conform thereto. In the case of Carson v. Vance, 35 Okl. 584, 130 Pac. 946, this court says:

> "Where, in an action for his commission on a sale of land, plaintiff declared upon an express contract to pay him five per cent. therefor, and evidence is introduced without objection in effect that such commission is usual and customary, held, that the pleading is presumed to be amended so as to conform to the proof that an instruction, submitting to the jury the question of what is a reasonable commission, is proper, and that, the same having been found to be 5 per cent., will not be disturbed." Love v. Kirkbride Drilling Co., 37 Okl. 804, 129 Pac. 858; Roberts v. Markham et al., 26 Okl. 387, 109 Pac. 127.

[7] This evidence being uncontradicted, the witness not even having been cross-examined upon it, and not inherently improbable, either in itself, or when taken in connection with circumstances, the jury were not at liberty to disregard it, and the court did not err in instructing a verdict for plaintiff upon this unimpeached and uncontradicted evidence. It is held by this court in Meadors v. Johnson, 27 Okl. 544, 112 Pac. 1121:

> "Prima facie evidence of a fact is such evidence as in the judgment of the law is sufficient to establish the fact; and, if not rebutted, remains sufficient for that purpose."

The rule is stated in 14 Enc. Ev. 121, as follows:

> "While the fact that the jury are the sole judges of the credibility of the witness is universally recognized (and they are not bound by the mere swearing of witnesses), it is equally well established that they will not be allowed capriciously to disregard the unimpeached and uncontradicted testimony of witnesses." Newton v. Pope, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 109; Engmann v. Estate of Immel, 59 Wis. 249, 18 N. W. 182; Lewis v. N. Y. Ry. Co., 50 Misc. Rep. 535, 99 N. Y. Supp. 462; Kelly v. Jackson, 6 Pet. 622, 8 L. Ed. 523.

It is true that the court submitted to the jury the determination of what was the reasonable value of the services sought to be recovered for in the third cause of action, and the jury by its verdict, in face of the uncontradicted evidence on behalf of plaintiff that the value of said services was $50, found such value to be $25, but of this the plaintiff does not, and the defendant cannot, complain. When plaintiff introduces sufficient evidence to prove his case and defendant's evidence does not conflict therewith, or when the evidence of defendant, together with all legitimate inferences in its favor fails to present a defense, the court should direct a verdict for the plaintiff. Homeland Realty Co. v. Robison, 39 Okl. 591, 136 Pac. 585; Cockrell v. Schmitt, 20 Okl. 207, 94 Pac. 521, 129 Am. St. Rep. 737; Moore v. Leigh-Head Co., 149 Pac. 1129.

The defendant having permitted without objection proof on behalf of the plaintiff that he had performed services under a contract with the decedent, and what the reasonable value of said services was, and the defendant not having offered any evidence to contradict the evidence of the plaintiff or to impeach the witnesses offered on behalf of the plaintiff, the plaintiff was entitled, under the undisputed evidence, to recover the amount found by the jury under the instructions of the court. No prejudicial error was therefore committed by the court in the instruction to the jury complained of in this assignment of error.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh assignments of error urged in the brief of defendant present again the same propositions that have already been discussed in this opinion, and need not be considered at length. It is sufficient to say that no error of the trial court is shown by said assignments.

Finding no prejudicial error in the record, the judgment of the court below should be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

ANDERSON v. ANDERSON et al. (No. 6907.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 16, 1916. On Rehearing, May 29, 1916.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. GUARDIAN AND WARD 🔑65—NEGLIGENCE—SURCHARGING ACCOUNT.

On a hearing of exceptions to a guardian's final account with each of his two wards, the facts bearing on the first exception were: That the wards were equal owners of a fund of $2,500 in the hands of the guardian which he had loaned to a live stock company. The order authorizing him to do so, among other things, as a condition precedent to his right to make the loan, required the guardian to take back from the borrower a note and mortgage on certain live stock to secure the loan and also a policy of insurance on the stock, containing a clause making the same payable to the guardian as his interest may appear, which he failed to do, and, on account of such failure, the loan was lost. Held, that the guardian was negligent, and his accounts were properly surchargeable with the amount of the loan; one-half thereof to each account.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Guardian and Ward, Cent. Dig. § 105.]

2. GUARDIAN AND WARD 🔑65—FINAL SETTLEMENT—LIABILITY—NEGLIGENCE.

A guardian is liable to his ward, on a final settlement, not only for such money and estate as actually came into his hands, but also for such additional money or property, lost by his negligence or failure of duty, as would have been received by him, had he exercised reasonable diligence and ordinary prudence in caring for his ward's estate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Guardian and Ward, Cent. Dig. § 105.]

3. EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS 🔑225(1)—GUARDIAN AND WARD 🔑65—FINAL ACCOUNT—LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE—STATUTE OF NONCLAIM.

On a hearing of exceptions to a guardian's final account with each of his two wards, the facts bearing on the second exception were: That S., as guardian of C., pursuant to an order of the probate court of C. county, made, executed, and delivered to M. an oil and gas lease, which was made and duly approved under the supposition that C. was the sole owner of the demised premises, and the cash consideration paid S. was charged to his account as guardian of C. Thereafter, in the probate court of C. county, in the distribution of the estate of which the demised premises was a part, it was determined that L. and N., minors, were entitled to share equally with C. in the estate. Thereupon, A., as guardian of L. and N., pursuant to an order of the probate court of T. county, joined with S. as guardian of C., in the execution of a new lease of the demised premises to M., without exacting from S. one-half the consideration received for the lease, and which S. thereafter, for more than two years, promised but refused to turn over to A., as guardian of L. and N. on demand. Thereafter, S. died, whereupon his successor in office, as guardian of C., was appointed, and M., his wife, appointed his executrix, who thereupon published notice to creditors to file their claims, which A., as guardian, failed to do for half the consideration due from S. to his wards. Further, evidence examined, and held that, owing to the mutations of business, one-half of said consideration became so intermingled with the property of S. and his ward as to lose its identity and reduce the right thereto as against the estate of S. to a mere claim, which was barred by statute of nonclaim of four months (Comp. Laws 1909, §§ 5274, 5275), and was lost through the negligence of A., as guardian of L. and N., and, being so lost, was properly surchargeable one-half to his final account with each of said wards.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Executors and Administrators, Cent. Dig. § 789; Guardian and Ward, Cent. Dig. § 105.]

Error to District Court, Tulsa County; L. M. Poe, Judge.

Exceptions by Lucy Anderson, née Brown, and others, to the final separate accounts of William Anderson, guardian of Lucy Brown and Nellie Brown, minors. Exceptions sustained, and the guardian surcharged with certain amounts, and he brings error. Affirmed.

Burke & Harrison, of Sapulpa, and W. T. Hutchings, of Muskogee, for plaintiff in error. N. J. Gubser, of Tulsa, and McDougal, Lytle & Allen, of Sapulpa, for defendants in error.

TURNER, J. [1] On June 24, 1912, in the county court of Tulsa county, William Anderson, plaintiff in error, tendered his resignation as the guardian of Lucy Brown and Nellie Brown, minors. On August 27, 1912, he filed separate final accounts, as the guardian of each ward, which were, on January 13, 1913, excepted to on the same grounds by his successors in office appointed and qualified on September 9, 1912; and the same, coming on to be heard, were consolidated, and on April 17, 1913, sustained. In the meantime, Lucy had married Walter Anderson and died, and the cause was revived in the name of Lee Clinton, her administrator. In sustaining the exceptions, the court surcharged each account with $1,250, or one-half of a fund of $2,500 belonging to both wards, which the guardian had loaned to the Limestone Live Stock Company, and which, the court held, the guardian had lost by negligently taking inadequate security. The court further surcharged each account with $4,043.75, which, the court held, was due and unpaid each ward, and which the guardian had negligently permitted to be lost to the estate by his failure to collect. He excepted to the action of the court in so surcharging his accounts, but, on appeal to the district court, the judgment was affirmed, and he brings the case here. He says the court erred in charging him with the loss of the $2,500 loan. The order authorizing the loan was made May 2, 1910, and, after reciting the necessary facts upon which to base it, reads:

> "The court, being fully advised in the premises, is pleased to authorize and order said William Anderson, guardian of Nellie and Lucy Brown, minors, to enter into a contract for the purpose of making a loan to said Limestone Live Stock Company, upon the following conditions, to wit: Provided that said guardian shall take from said company a note signed by said 12 members of said company or any ten of said company, for the sum of $2,500 to run for a period of one year bearing 8 per cent. interest per annum to be further secured by a mortgage properly describing the live stock and animals hereinbefore alluded to, made payable to said guardian, for the use and benefit of said wards.
>
> "It is further ordered and directed by the court that the owners of said animals shall cause said animals to be insured in some reliable insurance company in such sum as may be advisable to be carried by said insurance company, said insurance policy to contain a mortgage clause payable to said guardian as his interest may appear as additional security for payment of said note."

Construing which, the court held, in the light of the admitted fact that the stock was not insured as required thereby and hence the loan was lost, that the guardian was negligent in making it and should be charged with the full amount thereof. The court was right. By the order the guardian was authorized to make the loan only on certain conditions precedent to his right to make it pertaining to security therefor. One of those conditions required the guardian to take a mortgage on certain stock and that the owners of the stock cause it to be insured; the policy to contain a clause making the same payable to the guardian as his interest may appear "as additional security for the payment of said note," i. e., the note evidencing the loan and secured by the mortgage. Which means that the policy of insurance was required to be issued as ordered before the guardian had the right to part with the wards' money. It will not do to say that because, in prescribing the terms of the loan, the order reads, "it is further authorized and directed by the court" that this policy issue "as additional security," such was not a condition precedent to the right to make it, and hence, as no company would insure the stock, the guardian had a right to disregard this requirement and to make the loan without complying with it. This for the reason that, in so further ordering and directing, the court was dealing with conditions precedent to the right to make the loan, and as one of those conditions prescribed a policy of insurance as collateral to the loan; intending thereby that such collateral be executed and delivered before the guardian parted with the money of the ward. If it were true that no company would issue the policy required by the order, it was the duty of the guardian to so report to the court and secure a modification of the order or refuse to make the loan. Having made the loan in violation of the order, he did so at his peril and lost the loan as a result of his negligence, and therefore must respond to the action of the court in surcharging his accounts for the amount thereof. Guardianship of Cardwell, 55 Cal. 137; In re Estate of Mary Schandoney, 133 Cal. 387, 65 Pac. 877; In re Carver, 118 Cal. 73, 50 Pac. 22.

[2, 3] The next question is: Was the court right in surcharging each of his accounts with the further sum of $4,043.75 for his failure to collect twice that amount, or one-half the amount received by Dr. Soliss, as guardian of Lena Coser, as a bonus on her lease to the Mohawk Oil & Gas Company? There is no dispute as to the facts bearing on this exception. They are that, prior to 1907, Nuttetsa Coser died intestate in what is now Creek county, leaving him surviving a daughter, Lena Coser, at the time supposed to be his only heir at law, leaving also a tract of land in that county. Joseph Bruner qualified as administrator of his estate in the United States Court for the Indian Territory, Western District. In 1907, one Dr. Soliss, as guardian of Lena, pursuant to the order of said court, in which he also qualified, executed an oil and gas lease on the land to Mohawk Oil & Gas Company for a consideration of $16,175, which was duly approved by the Secretary of the Interior, also supposing Lena to be the only heir as stated, and, the presumption is, charged himself therewith as guardian of her estate. After that came on to be passed the order of final distribution of the estate of Nuttetsa when the county court of Creek county found that Lucy Brown and Nellie Brown were grandchildren and also heirs at law of said Nuttetsa, and as such were entitled to one-half of the estate; and it was so ordered. On October 8, 1909, the county court of Tulsa county, on petition of plaintiff in error as guardian of Lucy and Nellie, ordered him to join with Soliss in a new lease to the Mohawk Oil & Gas Company, which he did, and the same was approved, without exacting from either Soliss or the company a consideration therefor, or so much as requesting that he be permitted to share in the bonus theretofore received by Soliss as stated. While still the guardian of Lena, with this bonus of $16,175 in his hands as such, on April 12, 1912, Soliss died having promised but failed to turn over to plaintiff in error, as guardian of Lucy and Nellie, one-half of said bonus on demand, pursuant to the order of the county court of Tulsa county dated September 6, 1910. Shortly thereafter, the county court of Creek county appointed Mary, his wife, executrix of his estate, and Joseph

Bruner, his successor in office as guardian of Lena, and the executrix, after publishing notice to creditors, as required by law, proceeded to administer upon the estate; but at no time has plaintiff in error collected or attempted to collect from her one-half the bonus due his wards, as stated, or filed his claim therefor with her as executrix of the estate of her husband. In holding that the accounts of this guardian were surchargeable with the amount in question, the court, in effect, held that Lucy and Nellie were entitled to one-half of the bonus so collected by Soliss; that the guardian was not only negligent in failing to collect the same from Soliss at the time he joined in the lease, but that he was negligent in failing to collect that amount from Soliss for the two years and a half intervening between that time and the death of Soliss, and was also negligent in failing to present a claim therefor to his executrix, and that by reason of all of which the same was barred by the statute of nonclaim of four months (Comp. Laws 1909, §§ 5274, 5275).

Aside from holding that the claim was barred (of which we shall later speak), the court was right. The general rule is, as stated in Roush et al. v. Griffith et al., 65 W. Va. 752, 65 S. E. 168, that:

> "A guardian is liable to his ward, on a final settlement, not only for such money and estate as actually came into his hands, but also for such additional money or property, lost by his negligence or failure of duty, as would have been received by him, had he exercised reasonable diligence and ordinary prudence in caring for his ward's estate."

Or as stated in State ex rel. v. Brown et al., 73 N. C. 81:

> "A guardian is liable, not only for what he receives, but for all he ought to have received of his ward's estate; and, while infallible judgment is not expected of him in the management of his ward's estate, yet ordinary diligence and the highest degree of good faith is expected and required of him in the execution of his trust."

As the right of Lucy and Nellie to share alike in the bonus money is not questioned, it would seem to require no citation of authority to support the proposition that when they, as owners of one-half of the demised premises, joined with their guardian as parties lessor in the lease to the oil company, they were entitled to one-half the bonus paid Soliss, and that the guardian was negligent when he failed to bring suit to recover the same from Soliss, upon his refusal to turn it over to the guardian on demand, and permitted the same, less perhaps his commission, to be administered by Soliss as guardian into the estate of Lena Coser.

In re Kennedy, 120 Cal. 458, 52 Pac. 820, was an appeal by the executor from an order of court, surcharging his final account with a sum certain. The facts were that the executor had sold, by leave of court, an interest of his decedent in real estate belonging in common to the decedent and certain trustees and allowed the trustees to appropriate the money in payment of certain trust obligations, pursuant to certain stipulations and an order of court, in a suit to settle the trust estate in which he was not a party. On this state of facts, it was held that his account was properly surchargeable with the money he should have received from the sale.

Thus, it would seem, from its inception this was nothing more than a claim of one guardian against another, upon which this guardian might have recovered in a suit at law. But, assuming, as we are asked to do, that one-half of this bonus was a trust fund in the hands of Soliss for the benefit of Lucy and Nellie, and that this guardian had a right to come into a court of equity and have it so declared, we are of opinion that the negligence of this guardian, in failing to take the proper steps to reduce it to possession and the mutations of business whereby the fund became so intermingled with the property of Soliss and his ward as to destroy its identity, reduced it to a mere claim against the estate of Soliss which should have been presented by this guardian to the executrix of Soliss within the time prescribed by the statute. We say that, owing to the mutations of business, this fund lost its identity, and hence the right to one-half the bonus money was reduced to a mere claim against the estate of Soliss for the reason that the same has become absorbed in the property of Soliss and that of Lena Coser, as stated, and hence cannot be traced and identified as the property of Soliss in the hands of his executrix. When such is the case, and it is only shown generally, as here, that the estate of Soliss was solvent, without any attempt to show of what it consisted or what of it passed into the hands of his executrix, or that such as passed was a part of the trust fund sought to be traced, much less that any part of that fund entered into it, we repeat the right to payment is reduced to a mere claim against the estate, subject to the bar of the statute.

In Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17, 89 Am. Dec. 141, the facts were that one Griffith was appointed guardian of Augusta Dean, a minor. Thereafter, the plaintiffs were also appointed her guardians. Before they were appointed, Griffith, as guardian, had come into possession of $2,500, derived from the lawful sale of certain real estate which he had previously, pursuant to the order of the probate court which appointed him, invested in the estate of his ward. He never thereafter invested said sum or any part of it for her benefit; nor did he keep the same separate and apart from his private funds, or any account thereof or of the income or expenses therefrom between himself and his ward, but mixed the same with his private funds and used it in his general business expenditures and investments, and never thereafter separated the same so it could be distinguished from his own private property.

Later he died, without rendering any account as guardian, but left a last will and testament in which he attempted to dispose of all his individual property, regardless of any supposed interest his ward might have therein. Thereafter his executor took possession of all the money and other property of which testator died possessed and was engaged in administering upon the estate of testator, regardless of any claim of the minor. Among the assets which came into his hands was the sum of $200. The estate of Griffith was insolvent, and so were the sureties upon his official bond as guardian, and unable to respond from the trust fund so received and held by him. Whether any of his real and personal property was acquired before he came into possession of the trust fund did not appear. Neither did it appear whether any of it was purchased by him with the trust fund or any part of it; and when defendant, his executor, refused to account to the plaintiffs as guardians of Augusta Dean, suit was brought for the purpose of subjecting the entire assets in the hands of defendant to the trust in question, and to pay over the full amount of the trust fund in the hands of his executor to satisfy the claim of the guardians. No claim was ever presented to defendant by plaintiffs as provided by the statute then in force, which is similar to our statute of nonclaim, supra. Plaintiffs prevailed. Whether or not they should have done so turned on the question here involved. In reversing the case and holding that the demand was a mere claim against the estate and was barred by the statute of nonclaim, the court said:

> "Where a trustee, in violation of his trust, invests the trust property or its proceeds in any other property, the cestui que trust may elect to hold the substituted property subject to the trust, or to hold the trustee personally liable to him for the breach of the trust. The former he can do, however, only when he can follow and identify the property, either in its original or substituted form, as we have already seen. If this cannot be done, the right of the cestui que trust to elect is gone, because its exercise has become impossible, and he is therefore forced to rely upon the personal liability of the trustee; and such seems to be the condition of the cestui que trust in the present case. When thus forced to rely upon the personal liability of the trustee, a cestui que trust occupies a position towards the estate of the trustee which is no better, but is identical with that of a simple contract creditor. He has no special lien upon the general estate of the trustee which is superior to that of any other creditor; for the specific property covered by the trust is gone, and nothing is left to the cestui que trust except a naked claim for damages generally, on account of the breach, to be obtained through an action at law, attended by all the incidents of a like action on behalf of one who is not the beneficiary of a trust. * *
>
> "Our conclusion is that the plaintiffs, upon the facts as disclosed by the record, had only a claim against the estate of Griffith, upon which they could have recovered had the same been presented to the defendant as required by the act concerning the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, but that they are not entitled to the relief which they obtained in the court below."

And on rehearing:

> "The defendant cannot be charged and held to account as a trustee, except upon the averment that he has come into the possession of the trust fund or its substitute. If, at the time of his death, the defendant's testator was in the possession of the trust fund, or other property into which he may have converted it, and such fund, or other property had come into the possession of the defendant, he would have held it upon the same terms as his testator held it, and the relation of trustee to the ward of the plaintiffs would have been added to that of executor by virtue of his successorship. Such fund or other property would have constituted no part of the testator's assets, and the defendant would not have held it in his capacity as executor, but in his capacity as succeeding trustee to the plaintiffs' ward, and might have been compelled to account as such. But such is not the case. Neither the trust fund, nor any substitute for it, which can be identified as such, has come into the hands of the defendant. On the contrary, the trust estate is gone, or, which amounts to the same thing, its identity is entirely lost; for it is not shown to be in the hands of the defendant in its primary condition, or that it was converted by the defendant's testator into the property or any part of it now in the defendant's possession as executor. Hence the defendant does not stand in the relation of trustee to the ward of the plaintiffs, beyond the obligations imposed by his office as executor, and she has no remedy against him, except such as belongs to a general creditor of the estate. Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 29, Fed. Cas. No. 14,164; Johnson v. Ames, 11 Pick. 181."

And in the syllabus it is said:

> "A trust assumed by a testator will not be enforced against his executor when the identity of the trust fund is entirely lost, and it is neither shown to be in the hands of the executor in its primary condition, nor that it was converted by his testator into the property or any part of it in the executor's possession."

In Roach v. Caraffa, 85 Cal. 436, 25 Pac. 22, in the syllabus it is said:

> "If a trust fund in the mutations of business has become so mingled with and absorbed into the property belonging to the trustee as to be no longer capable of being traced or identified, the only remedy of the cestui que trust upon the death of the trustee is that of a creditor, and, if he fails to present his claim as required by probate law, he must fail in his action; but if the trust property can still be earmarked, traced, and identified, the cestui que trust may maintain an action against the administrator to enforce the trust, without presenting any claim against the estate of the trustee, since the cestui que trust in such case seeks his own property only, and not to enforce a claim against the estate and property of the decedent."

In Byrne v. McGrath, 130 Cal. 316, 62 Pac. 559, 80 Am. St. Rep. 127, in the syllabus it is said:

> "Where a trust fund held by a deceased person is susceptible of identification, the trust may be enforced without the presentation of a claim against the estate; and it is only where the trust fund cannot be identified that the presentation of a claim against the estate, within the time limited by law, is essential."

We are therefore of opinion that the accounts of this guardian were properly surchargeable with one-half of this bonus of $16,175, that is, one-fourth thereof to the account of Lucy and a like amount to the account of Nellie; and that the judgment of the trial court should be affirmed, that is, if the court was right in holding that the bar of the statute of nonclaim fell at the expiration of four months from the date of the first publication by the executrix of Soliss of notice to creditors to file their claims. This sends us to the statute. Stripped to the point, Comp. Laws 1909 reads:

> "Sec. 5274. Every executor or administrator must, immediately after his appointment, cause to be published in some newspaper in the county, * * * a notice to the creditors of the decedent, requiring all persons having claims against him to exhibit them * * * to the executor or administrator, at the place of his residence or business, to be specified in the notice. * * *
>
> "Sec. 5275. The time expressed in the notice must be six months after its first publication, when the estate exceeds in value the sum of five thousand dollars, and four months when it does not."

These sections were sections 1309 and 1310 of the Statutes of 1893. The former was amended by act approved March 17, 1910 (Sess. Laws 1910, c. 65), and, as amended, was construed with section 1310, unrepealed by that act, in Soliss v. Gen. Elec. Co., 213 Fed. 204, 129 C. C. A. 548, and held to mean that:

> "The time for the presentation of claims against estates of a value in excess of $5,000 remained six months from the date of the notice."

From which we learn that the time for so doing is four months where the estate does not exceed that value. As there is no evidence of its value or claim that the estate of Soliss exceeded that amount and hence the six months' period applied, the court did right in holding as he did, and this, too, although claimants are infants, as the statute in question contains no exemption in favor of such. Morgan et al. v. Hamlet et al., 113 U. S. 449, 5 Sup. Ct. 583, 28 L. Ed. 1043.

Some complaint is made of interest surcharged on certain items in these settlements; but, since counsel fail to make clear what alleged error of law they would have us decide, we decline to speculate.

Finding no merit in the remaining assignments of error, the judgment of the trial court is affirmed. All the Justices concur.

On Rehearing.

TURNER, J. It is urged that there is no evidence reasonably tending to prove that this fund was lost, and hence the court erred in holding that it was. While this does not appear in their assignments of error, counsel for plaintiff in error urge it as though it did, and in their briefs on rehearing again seek to go into that question. They contend that the modern rule is, not as stated in the opinion, but as stated in Lowe v. Jones, 192 Mass. 94, 78 N. E. 402, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 487, 116 Am. St. Rep. 225, 7 Ann. Cas. 551, that:

> "It is now held that, if the proceeds of trust property can be traced into a particular fund, the trust may be established and enforced as a charge upon the fund."

And that (quoting, they say, from Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17, 89 Am. Dec. 141):

> "So long as the fund is greater than the amount of the trust fund, it will, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, be presumed to be held in trust."

And, taking this as the rule, they seek to show us that the one-half of the lease money collected by Soliss, belonging to Lucy and Nellie Brown, can be traced into the assets of his estate or into the fund in the hands of Joseph Bruner, as guardian of Lena Coser, and hence, they say, said fund is not lost; and hence, not being lost, plaintiff in error, as guardian for Lucy and Nellie, cannot be surchargeable therewith. Assuming the correctness of the rule contended for, and still assuming that fund to be a trust fund and that the point is properly before us, we repeat, the fund has been lost in the mutations of business, and that, from the record, it is impossible to tell whether it passed into the hands of the executrix of Soliss and into the assets of his estate, or into the hands of the guardian of Lena Coser as a part of the assets of her estate, or whether it has become absorbed in the estate of both. It cannot be successfully maintained that it can be traced into the estate of Soliss for the reason the record discloses the only evidence on this point to be that, while his estate was solvent, there is no evidence of its value and no claim that it exceeded $5,000. And, besides, no claim that the fund in controversy passed into the assets thereof was made in the trial court. Neither can it be successfully maintained that this fund can be traced into the hands of the guardian of Lena Coser as a part of her estate so as to make it a charge upon that fund. This for the reason the record discloses the only evidence upon that point to be that her estate at the death of Soliss was solvent with "several thousand dollars loaned out at interest," which, together with $4,500 cash on hand, was more than the amount of this fund. As the record fails to disclose, and there was no attempt to prove, that the fund in controversy was traceable into the assets of said estate, we adhere to the opinion that said fund cannot be made a charge upon it.

It follows that the modern doctrine contended for, in effect, that the confusion of trust property wrongfully converted does not destroy the equity entirely, but that, when the funds are traced into the assets of the unfaithful trustee, or one who has knowledge of the character of the funds, they become a charge upon the entire assets with which they are mingled, has no application to the facts in this case.

It is further contended that, on the undisputed facts, plaintiff in error was not a "creditor" with a "claim arising upon a contract" against the estate of Soliss within the contemplation of Rev. Laws 1910, § 6338, which provides:

> "If a claim arising upon a contract heretofore made be not presented within the time limited in the notice, it is barred forever. * * *"

And section 6336, which provides:

> "Every executor or administrator must, immediately after his appointment, give notice to the creditors of the decedent, requiring all persons having claims against said estate to present the same. * * *"

And that the court erred in holding that he was and that the so-called claim was lost and barred because not presented within the four months required by said statute. Not so. When Soliss received the share of this lease money belonging to Lucy and Nellie, inasmuch as he, in equity and good conscience, had no right to retain it, a promise to pay it to plaintiff in error as guardian of Lucy and Nellie arose by implication sufficient to establish between them the relation of debtor and creditor; that is, Soliss was their debtor and they creditors of his estate, after his death, with a claim against it arising upon said implied contract. And, as this contract was sufficient to support an action in the nature of assumpsit for money had and received against him while living, the money thus due them constituted a claim arising upon contract against his estate after his death. Allsman et al. v. Oklahoma City, 21 Okl. 142, 95 Pac. 468, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 511, 17 Ann. Cas. 184, was such an action to recover the unearned portion of a license fee to sell intoxicating liquors which had been revoked on the erection of the state. It was urged that, as assumpsit at common law would not lie except upon a parol or simple contract, plaintiff was not entitled to recover, which we said was true; but, applying the modern rule which we declared to be that, whenever one had the money of another, which he, in equity and good conscience, had no right to retain, the law would imply a promise to pay it over to the person rightfully entitled to it, we held that plaintiff was entitled to recover. In that case we cited Lawson's Ex. v. Lawson, 16 Grat. (Va.) 230, 80 Am. Dec. 702, which was the same kind of an action; the money sought to be recovered being the property of plaintiff's testator in the hands of his wife which he had left with her for safe-keeping only, a short time before his death. In a suit by his executor against her to recover it, the court said that, if it be conceded that upon her refusal to deliver the money to plaintiff on demand trover might be maintained as for a tort, it by no means followed that assumpsit would not lie for the reason that the party aggrieved might waive the tort and sue in assumpsit, which would lie "whenever any one has the money of another which he has no right to retain, but which, ex æquo et bono, he should pay over to that other," and that "the law will imply a promise to pay the amount to the plaintiff" if necessary to support the action.

It follows that Lucy and Nellie were creditors of the Soliss estate with a claim against it, to the amount of said fund, arising upon contract which, not being presented within the time prescribed by law, was lost, owing to the negligence of plaintiff in error and the fall of the bar of the statute, and hence he was properly surchargeable with the amount thereof. All the Justices concur.

FROAGE et al. v. WEBB. (No. 8000.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS 🔑180(2) — DEMURRER—BAR OF LIMITATIONS.

The first paragraph of the syllabus in Fox v. Ziehme et al., 30 Okl. 673, 120 Pac. 285, adopted herein.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. § 671.]

2. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS 🔑180(4), 199(1, 3) — PLEADING — DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE — QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action for damages for breach of an oral contract, where it appears from the face of the petition that the cause of action accrued more than three years prior to the day of commencing the action, and it is not alleged in the petition or established by the testimony that there was "an acknowledgment of an existing liability," in writing, "signed by the parties to be charged," within the three-year statutory period of limitation, held (1) that it was error to overrule the demurrer to the petition; (2) to overrule the demurrer to the evidence; and (3) that the question of whether the action was barred was a question of law for the court, and not a question of fact for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. §§ 673, 727, 729.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 2. Error from County Court, Ellis County; S. A. Miller, Judge.

Action by Harvey W. Webb against Harry Froage and Carl Meyers. There was judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendants bring error. Reversed.

C. B. Leedy, of Arnett, for plaintiffs in error. Frank B. Grant, of Gage, for defendant in error.

GALBRAITH, C. The controlling question presented upon this appeal is whether or not the cause of action sued upon was barred by the statute of limitations at the time of the commencement of the action. The question was raised, first, by demurrer to the petition, second, by answer, and, third, by demurrer to the evidence, and as often as raised was denied by the court, and finally submitted to the jury for decision. The action was based upon a claim for damages, charged to have arisen from the breach of an oral contract. It is charged in the petition that on May 1, 1909, Webb entered into an oral agreement with Froage and Meyers by which they undertook to "put down a good and sufficient well" upon his land, and also agreed "to furnish the casing and all other things necessary to make it a good and sufficient well," and that Webb agreed to pay them 80 cents per foot when the well was finally completed; that they entered upon the performance of this contract, and sunk a well 257 feet, and equipped it with casing and pump, and represented that it was completed according to contract. It is further charged:

> "That this plaintiff paid to these defendants the sum of $205.60 upon the completion of said purported well, and afterwards notified these defendants that they must complete said purported well, and make it a well, as they agreed to do, and these defendants agreed so to do, but utterly failed to fulfill the promises thus made, and after trying for a long time to induce these said defendants to furnish him a well, as they had agreed to do, this plaintiff was compelled to hire, in May, 1914, one Caufmann to complete said well, and to pay the further sum of $80 therefor."

It is further charged that, by failure of the defendants to perform their contract, Webb was forced to complete the well, and in so doing incurred an expense in the sum of $299.35, for which amount judgment was prayed. After the demurrer to the petition had been overruled, and in response to a motion to make more definite and certain, an amendment was filed, setting out that the well was completed on the 19th day of May, 1910, and was accepted and paid for by Webb on the 21st day of May, 1910. Webb testified that when he accepted the well on the 21st day of May, 1910, and paid for it, it was apparently satisfactory, and so continued for 30 days after that time, when it failed to furnish necessary water, and that he then notified the defendants of this fact, and requested that they complete the well and make it satisfactory, as they had agreed to do, and that they promised orally to do so, and repeatedly made such promises between that day and August, 1914, when he arranged with Caufmann to complete the well.

It thus appears from the face of the pleadings, as well as from the testimony, that his cause of action for breach of contract arose 30 days after the 21st day of May, 1910, when Webb discovered that the well had not been completed according to contract. This suit was not commenced until November 5, 1914, 4 years, 4 months, and 14 days after the time the cause of action accrued. Section 4657, Rev. L. 1910, reads in part as follows:

> "Civil actions, other than for the recovery of real property, can only be brought within the following periods, after the cause of action shall have accrued, and not afterwards: First. Within five years: An action upon any contract, agreement or promise in writing. Second. Within three years: An action upon a contract, express or implied, not in writing; an action upon a liability created by statute, other than a forfeiture or penalty."

It appears, both from the allegations of the petition and the testimony of the plaintiff, that the cause of action was barred at the time the suit was commenced, unless something was done by the defendants that would toll the running of the statute. Nothing is alleged in the petition that would have this effect, and the only thing, in the testimony, relied upon to have this effect, is the repeated oral promises to complete the well. At most, these oral promises would amount to an acknowledgment, by the defendants, of an existing liability under the contract. It is not alleged in the petition, nor is it claimed in the testimony, that these promises, or any one of them, were in writing and signed by the defendants, or either of them. Under section 4663, Rev. L. 1910, "an acknowledgment of an existing liability" on an obligation, in order to prevent the running of the statute of limitations, must be "in writing, signed by the party to be charged thereby."

[1] In Fox v. Ziehme et al., 30 Okl. 673, 120 Pac. 285, the rule is announced in the first paragraph of the syllabus as follows:

> "Where the petition shows on its face that the cause of action set out therein is barred by limitation, a demurrer urged specially on that ground should be sustained, and the overruling of which is error."

See, also, Skillern v. Pearcy, 36 Okl. 299, 128 Pac. 239.

[2] It thus appears that the cause of action arose more than three years prior to the date of the filing of suit, and that there was no acknowledgment in writing of "an existing liability" by the defendants, within three years, so as to toll the statute, and that the action was barred. It was therefore error in the court to overrule the demurrer to the petition, as well as that to the evidence, and it was likewise error to submit the question of whether or not the cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations to the jury, inasmuch as that was not a question of fact for the jury, but was one of law for the court.

On account of these errors, the exceptions should be sustained, and judgment reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

(175 Cal. 813)

BANK OF CALIFORNIA, NATIONAL ASS'N, v. RICHARDSON, State Treasurer. (S. F. 8381.)

(Supreme Court of California. June 18, 1917.

In Bank. Appeal from Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco; J. M. Seawell, Judge.

Action by the Bank of California, National Association, against Friend William Richardson, as State Treasurer. From the judgment rendered, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro, of San Francisco, for appellant. U. S. Webb and Raymond Benjamin, both of San Francisco, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. It is stipulated in this case that all of the questions involved in the appeal are identical with those involved and passed upon by this court in the case of Bank of California v. Roberts, as Treasurer, reported in 173 Cal., commencing at page 398, 160 Pac. 225. On the authority of that case the judgment must be affirmed.

The judgment is affirmed.

(34 Cal. App. 65)

JACKSON v. BROWN. (Civ. 1996.)

(District Court of Appeal, First District, California. June 7, 1917.)

Appeal from Superior Court, San Mateo County; Geo. H. Buck, Judge.

Action by B. M. Jackson against D. C. Brown. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

B. M. Jackson, of San Francisco, in pro. per. E. S. Bell, of Napa, J. J. Bullock, of Redwood City, and Michael Brown, of San Mateo, for respondent.

KERRIGAN, J. This is an action brought to recover a balance of an attorney's fee alleged to be due for services rendered by plaintiff to the defendant. The complaint contained several counts. At the trial it was contended by the defendant that, while he had paid part of the fee for which he was being sued, such payment was made as an accommodation to his attorney, who was not entitled to his fee, nor to any part of it, until the judgment in a certain action should be recovered and the amount thereof collected. After practically all the evidence was in, it was suggested that the further trial of the cause be postponed, in order to give the defendant an opportunity to introduce evidence to the effect that a written contract had been entered into by the parties, providing that the plaintiff's fee here sought to be recovered was to be contingent upon a certain event which had not yet happened, whereupon the plaintiff, in order to conclude the matter, proposed that the case be submitted on that portion of his complaint which alleged a cause of action upon an account stated, and that he waive the remaining counts of his complaint. This was agreed to and the cause submitted.

With the trial court we think that the evidence does not sustain the view that there was an account stated. Early in January, 1916, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant a letter, claiming that there was a certain balance due him on account of his fee in a suit conducted by him for the defendant, entitled Brown v. Lee et al. The defendant in a prompt reply neither expressly nor tacitly admitted the indebtedness and in fact turned the matter of the claim over to an attorney for attention and adjustment. This correspondence, and another letter written on behalf of the defendant, together with several conversations, telephonic and otherwise, between the parties, clearly show that the negotiation fell far short of constituting an account stated.

The judgment is affirmed.

We concur: RICHARDS, J.; BEASLY, Judge pro tem.

COX v. BRISBOIS. (No. 9171.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. July 2, 1917.)

En Banc. Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; H. P. Burke, Judge.

Action between Victor M. Cox and Lizzie Brisbois. Judgment for Brisbois, and Cox brings error. Judgment affirmed, and application for supersedeas denied.

Bert Martin, of Denver, for plaintiff in error. John T. Bottom, of Denver, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. Upon a careful examination of the record and briefs of counsel, we are convinced that no prejudicial error was committed in this case, for which reason the application for supersedeas will be denied, and the judgment affirmed.

Supersedeas denied; judgment affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and GARRIGUES, J., not participating.

DE LAN v. AMERICAN SECURITY & TRUST CO. (No. 8559.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. Feb. 5, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 7, 1917.)

En Banc. Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; Harry C. Riddle, Judge.

Action by S. J. De Lan against the American Security & Trust Company, executor of Thomas F. Walsh, deceased. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

John T. Bottom and Wm. H. Gabbert, both of Denver, for plaintiff in error. Thomas, Nye & Malburn, of Denver, for defendant in error.

ALLEN, J. This is an action for the recovery of a commission as a broker for the sale of mining property. The second amended complaint counts upon an express contract of employment and services rendered thereunder.

There was no evidence in the case tending to establish an express contract; there was not sufficient evidence to establish even an implied contract of employment. There was not sufficient evidence in the case upon which a verdict for the plaintiff could reasonably be based. We think the learned judge before whom the cause was tried in directing a verdict for the defendant was right.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

LOPRESTO v. PEOPLE. (No. 9190.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. June 4, 1917.)

Department 1. Error to District Court, Las Animas County; A. Watson McHendrie, Judge.

Antonio Lopresto was convicted of an offense, and he brings error. Supersedeas denied, and judgment affirmed.

Earl Cooley, of Trinidad, for plaintiff in error. Leslie E. Hubbard, Atty. Gen., and Clara Ruth Mozzer, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the People.

PER CURIAM. Finding no error in the record, the supersedeas is denied, and the judgment affirmed.

WALTERS et al. v. WEST et al.
(No. 9224.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. July 2, 1917.)

En Banc. Error to District Court, Pueblo County; James L. Cooper, Judge.

Action by Lulu Walters and others against John T. West and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs bring error, and apply for supersedeas. Supersedeas denied; judgment affirmed.

Adams & Gast, of Pueblo, for plaintiffs in error. John A. Martin, City Atty., Charles M. Rose, Hartman & Ballreich, M. J. Galligan, and J. T. McCorkle, all of Pueblo, for defendants in error. John H. Voorhees, of Pueblo, amicus curiæ.

PER CURIAM. Upon a careful examination of the record and briefs of counsel, eliminating the reasons of the trial court therefor, which we shall not pass upon, we are convinced that no prejudicial error was committed in the rendition of the final judgment dissolving the temporary injunction and dismissing the action, for which reason the application for supersedeas will be denied, and the judgment affirmed.

Supersedeas denied; judgment affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and SCOTT, J., not participating.

TRACY v. SPERRY. (No. 9111.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. July 2, 1917.)

En Banc. Error to District Court, El Paso County; W. S. Morris, Judge.

Action between Cora Tracy and Fred A. Sperry. Judgment for the latter, and the former brings error. Judgment affirmed, and supersedeas denied.

W. N. Ruby and W. D. Lombard, both of Colorado Springs, for plaintiff in error. S. H. Kinsley, of Colorado Springs, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. Upon a careful examination of the record and briefs of counsel, we are convinced that no prejudicial error was committed in this case, for which reason the application for supersedeas will be denied, and the judgment affirmed.

Supersedeas denied, and judgment affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and GARRIGUES, J., not participating.

PRICER et al. v. McDONALD. (No. 9143.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

Department 1. Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; A. Watson McHendrie, Judge.

Suit between D. E. McDonald and R. T. Pricer and Bernis M. Pricer. To review the judgment, the Pricers bring error. Application for supersedeas denied, and judgment affirmed.

Walter I. Lyon and Bert Martin, both of Denver, for plaintiffs in error. Morris & Grant, of Denver, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. Upon examination of the record, we fail to discover any substantial error, and therefore deny the application for a supersedeas, and affirm the judgment.

(13 Okl. Cr. 736)

AKINS v. STATE. (No. A-2588.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. June 9, 1917.)

Appeal from County Court, Woodward County; Clyde H. Wyand, Judge.

George Akins was convicted of petty larceny, and appeals. Affirmed.

W. A. Briggs, of Woodward, for plaintiff in error. R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. The plaintiff in error, George Akins, and T. F. Akins and Everett Brenneman, were jointly informed against and tried upon an information charging the larceny of 20 chickens, of the value of $10, the property of A. J. R. Smith. At the trial the court sustained a motion to advise the jury to acquit the defendants T. F. Akins and Everett Brenneman, and so instructed the jury. The jury by their verdict found the plaintiff in error guilty, and fixed his punishment at confinement in the county jail for a period of 10 days and a fine of $10. From the judgment rendered upon the verdict, an appeal by case-made was perfected.

From a careful consideration of the record we reach the conclusion that there was before the jury sufficient evidence to warrant the verdict rendered, and, finding no error, the judgment of the lower court is affirmed.

Ex parte GORDON and ten other cases. (Nos. A-2591—A-2601.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. July 11, 1917.)

Separate applications by C. E. Gordon, Morgan Offord, D. R. Gallagher, George Wagner, W. Wilson, George Burtch, Edward Hall, J. Reichensperger, John McDonald, W. C. McLean, and C. Yager for writs of habeas corpus. Writs granted and petitioners discharged.

J. J. Carney, of Oklahoma City, for petitioners. B. D. Shear, Municipal Counselor, and Charles Selby, Asst. Co. Atty., both of Oklahoma City, for respondent.

PER CURIAM. On behalf of the above-named petitioners, duly verified petitions for writs of habeas corpus, as filed in the office of the clerk of this court, were presented to the Presiding Judge on December 14, 1915, and writs were issued and made returnable before the court at 2 o'clock p. m. on said day. The petitions, duly verified by the petitioners, are the same; each petitioner alleging that he is illegally restrained of his liberty by the officers of the city of Oklahoma City and by M. C. Binion, sheriff of Oklahoma county, upon the judgment and sentence of the municipal court of said city, entered on the 3d day of December, 1915, and averring facts showing that his conviction and imprisonment was without due process of law, and praying that a writ of habeas corpus issue, that his said imprisonment may be inquired into, and that he may be restored to his liberty and discharged from further custody.

In response to the writs, the official to whom they were directed produced the petitioners in open court, and filed his answer and return under oath to each of the writs issued and served upon him as follows:

> "Return and Answer to the Writ.
>
> "Comes now M. C. Binion, sheriff of Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, and in answer to the writ issued by Hon. Thomas H. Doyle, Presiding Judge of the Criminal Court of Appeals of the state of Oklahoma, commanding him, as sheriff of Oklahoma county, to produce the body of ——— before this court at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. on this 14th day of December, 1915, and to then and there show cause, if any, for his detention of the said named ———, now in his custody, shows to this honorable court that said ——— was heretofore, in the municipal court of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, duly informed against and charged therein with being a vagrant under the ordinances of the city of Oklahoma City, and was, in said court and cause, heretofore duly tried and convicted and found guilty of being a vagrant under the said ordinances of said Oklahoma City, and was, by the judge of said court, in said cause, fined in the sum of $99 and adjudged to serve 90 days in the city jail of Oklahoma City therefor; that thereafter, and on, to wit, the ——— day of December, 1915, by agreement with the commissioners of said Oklahoma City and the board of county commissioners of Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, under the provisions of law authorizing the two said boards to so agree, was delivered by the said city authorities to the county commissioners of Oklahoma county, and to the undersigned sheriff of said county, for the purpose of working upon the roads of said Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, and said named ——— is now held by the undersigned sheriff of Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, in pursuance of and by virtue of said agreement between said city commissioners and the board of county commissioners of Oklahoma county, Oklahoma, for the purpose of public road work upon the public highways of Oklahoma county, in execution and satisfaction of said fine and jail sentence, so imposed by the said municipal court of Oklahoma City; and that said period of jail sentence and fine are yet in force and existence, and the same unsatisfied, and said named party is held for the purpose of paying the same by service upon the public highways of said Oklahoma county.
>
> "Wherefore the undersigned prays that the said prayer of the said petitioner for a writ of habeas corpus may in all things and respects be denied, and for such other relief as may be proper under the facts and the law."

The testimony of the petitioners as witnesses in their own behalf established or tended to establish the following facts: That on the 3d day of December, 1915, they, with others, were arrested without warrants by police officers of Oklahoma City, and were that day taken before the police judge of said city without any written charge, complaint, or information; that their only knowledge of what they were accused of was the statement made by the police judge to the effect that they were each separately charged with being guilty of vagrancy; that each entered a plea of not guilty to said charge; that they were each without counsel, and the said police judge did not inform them, or any of them, of their right to have counsel before being arraigned, nor did he ask them if they desired the aid of counsel; that, when they asked to be heard in their own behalf, he told them to hold up their right hands and be sworn; that after they were sworn he asked their names, and why and for what purposes they were in Oklahoma City; that, without permitting them to be heard further than to answer questions asked by said judge, he pronounced each and all of the petitioners and 11 other prisoners present and separately charged with vagrancy as being guilty as charged, and sentenced each person so charged to be confined at hard labor on the roads of Oklahoma county for the term of 90 days and to pay a fine of $99, and in default of the payment of said fine to be further so confined at hard labor until said fine was satisfied according to law.

It further appears as an undisputed fact that the police officers that testified in the 20 or more separate cases that were heard at that time, including the cases against the petitioner, were only sworn as witnesses when the first case was called, and the fact that the petitioners had arrived at Oklahoma City that day on their way to the oil fields was not disputed. Upon the conclusion of the arguments the decision of the court was announced by the Presiding Judge, who delivered an oral opinion finding that the petitioners were unlawfully restrained of their liberty by the respondent, and that they were entitled to a discharge from the imprisonment of which they complained.

Thereupon writs were allowed, and the petitioners discharged.

(13 Okl. Cr. 736)

AUSTIN et al. v. CITY OF ENID.
(No. A-2760.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma.
July 2, 1917.)

Appeal from County Court, Garfield County; E. L. Swigert, Judge.

Action between W. F. Austin and another and the City of Enid. Judgment for the latter, and the former bring error. Appeal dismissed.

H. J. Sturgis, of Enid, for plaintiffs in error.

PER CURIAM. The plaintiffs in error filed in this court on June 13, 1916, a petition in error with case-made, whereby they appeal from the judgment of the county court of Garfield county, dismissing their appeals from the police court of the city of Enid to said county court. When the case was called for final submission, the plaintiffs in error, by their counsel, moved that said appeal be dismissed.

It is so ordered.

(14 Okl. Cr. 677)

WILLIAMS v. STATE. (No. A-2617.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma.
Aug. 27, 1917.)

Appeal from County Court, Seminole County; A. S. Norvell, Judge.

Willie Williams was convicted on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and appeals. Affirmed.

G. A. Outcelt and Robert Rowlans, both of Tecumseh, for plaintiff in error. R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. The plaintiff in error, Willie Williams, was convicted in the county court of Seminole county on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and his punishment fixed at a fine of $25. A careful examination of the record discloses no prejudicial error.

The judgment of the trial court is therefore affirmed.

(13 Okl. Cr. 735)

YOWELL v. STATE. (No. A-2354.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma.
June 2, 1917.)

Appeal from Superior Court, Oklahoma County; E. D. Oldfield, Judge.

James Yowell was convicted of assault and battery, and appeals. Affirmed.

C. H. Garnett, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. The plaintiff in error, James Yowell, was tried in the superior court of Oklahoma county on a charge of assault with intent to kill, and convicted of assault and battery, and his punishment fixed at a fine of $100 and costs.

A careful examination of the record and briefs discloses the fact that the plaintiff in error had a fair and impartial trial, and escaped with exceedingly light punishment. No prejudicial error is found.

The judgment is affirmed. Mandate ordered forthwith.

STEVENSON v. STATE. (No. A-2652.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. Sept. 23, 1916.)

Appeal from County Court, Garvin County; W. R. Wallace, Judge.

J. S. Stevenson was convicted of a violation of the prohibitory law, and he appeals. Affirmed.

H. M. Carr, of Pauls Valley, for plaintiff in error. R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. On information charging that he did have in his possession intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same, the plaintiff in error J. S. Stevenson was tried and convicted in the county court of Garvin county, and his punishment assessed at confinement in the county jail for 30 days and a fine of $100. From the judgment rendered on the verdict, he appealed, by filing in this court on February 19, 1916, a petition in error with case-made.

No brief has been filed. When the case was called on the assignment for final submission, no appearance was made on behalf of the plaintiff in error, whereupon the Attorney General moved that the judgment be affirmed for failure to prosecute the appeal. A careful examination of the record discloses that the assignments of error are without merit.

The judgment herein is therefore affirmed.

(14 Okl. Cr. 677)

STATE v. RUSSELL. (No. A-2753.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. Aug. 4, 1917.)

Appeal from County Court, Craig County; E. M. Probasco, Judge.

Fred Russell was charged with crime, and from adverse judgment the State appeals. Appeal dismissed.

S. P. Freeling, Atty. Gen., and R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. The Attorney General has filed a motion to dismiss this case, upon the ground that the state has not sufficient evidence upon which to base the charge, or sustain a conviction, should the case be further prosecuted. The county attorney of Craig county, from which this appeal was taken, joins the Attorney General in asking that this case be dismissed.

This prosecution having been abandoned, it is therefore ordered by the court that the same be dismissed.

CHICAGO, R. I. & P. RY. CO. v. GRAY et al.

(No. 7826.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Oct. 17, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 22, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. CARRIERS 🔑218(10)—LIVE STOCK—NOTICE OF LOSS—VALIDITY OF PROVISION.

Where an action is brought to recover damages upon an interstate shipment of live stock under a written contract containing the provision that, as a condition precedent to recovery of damages for any loss or injury to or detention of live stock or delay in transportation thereof, a written notice must be given of such damage to a designated representative of the carrier within a day after delivery of the stock at its destination, such provision being reasonable and valid, the failure to give such notice is a complete bar to such action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 674–696, 947.]

2. CARRIERS 🔑218(10,11)—CARRIAGE OF LIVE STOCK—NOTICE OF LOSS—COMPLIANCE WITH PROVISION—WAIVER.

The provision of said contract requiring notice is a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action, and must be substantially complied with by the shipper before he can maintain a cause of action against the carrier, and the carrier cannot waive the terms of the contract nor ignore those terms applicable to the conduct of the shipper, nor can the shipper hold the carrier to a different responsibility from that fixed by the contract; for a different view would antagonize the policy of the act and open the door to the very abuses which the act was aimed to prevent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 674–696, 947, 948.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division, No. 3. Error from County Court, Kingfisher County; R. F. Shutler, Judge.

Action by L. M. Gray and another against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

K. W. Shartel, of Oklahoma City, C. O. Blake, R. J. Roberts, and W. H. Moore, all of El Reno, and F. L. Boynton, of Kingfisher, for plaintiff in error. W. L. Moore, of Enid, for defendants in error.

HOOKER, C. The defendants in error commenced this action on the 13th day of January, 1914, against the plaintiff in error to recover the sum of $195 damages alleged to have been suffered by them on account of the delay in the shipment of some mules from Dover, Okl., to North Ft. Worth, Tex.; and it is alleged in the bill of particulars filed in this action that on the 10th day of January, 1913, for a reasonable compensation paid to the plaintiff in error, the plaintiff in error agreed to transport from Dover, Okl., to North Ft. Worth, Tex., and there deliver to the defendants in error within a reasonable time after the receipt thereof 26 head of mules, and that 36 hours was then and is now the usual and ordinary time required for the transportation of mules as contemplated by this contract; that the plaintiff in error failed to transport said mules within that time, but, upon the contrary, unreasonably and negligently delayed the delivery of said mules until the 14th day of January, 1913, more than 72 hours after the time when said mules should have been delivered at said destination in the usual and customary course of transportation as aforesaid, and on account thereof defendants in error were damaged as alleged in the petition. It is asserted by the plaintiff in error that the defendants in error are not entitled to recover here, because the shipment in question was made in accordance with a live stock contract entered into between the company and them on the day of shipment, by the terms of which it was provided as follows:

> "That as a condition precedent to claiming or recovering damages for any loss or injury to or detention of live stock, or delay in transportation thereof, covered by this contract, the second party, as soon as he discovers such loss or injury, shall promptly give notice thereof in writing to some general officer, claim agent, or station agent of the first party, or to the agent at destination or to some general officer of the delivering line, before such stock is removed from the point of shipment or from the place of destination, as the case may be, and before such stock is mingled with other stock; and such written notice shall in any event be served within one day after delivery of the stock at its destination, in order that such claim may be fully and fairly investigated. It is agreed that a failure to strictly comply with all the foregoing provisions shall be a bar to the recovery of any and all such claims."

And it is further asserted that under section 15 of said contract:

> "That no suit or action against the first party for the recovery of any claim by virtue of this contract shall be sustainable in this court of law or equity, unless such suit or action be commenced within six months next after the cause of action shall occur; and should any suit or action be commenced against the first party after the expiration of six months, the lapse of time shall be constituted conclusive evidence against the validity of such claim, any statute of limitation to the contrary notwithstanding."

[1] It is admitted by the defendants in error that the only notice given by them to the plaintiff in error was mailed to the general claim agent of the company about the 24th day of January, 1913. The shipment arrived at North Ft. Worth, Tex., on January 14, 1913. This was an interstate shipment, and the rights of the parties under the contract must be construed with reference to the laws applicable thereto. It is the contention of the plaintiff in error that on account of the failure of the defendants in error to give the notice provided by this contract this suit cannot be maintained, while the defendants in error assert that on account of the company refusing to pay this claim when presented upon grounds other than the failure of the defendants in error to file the same within the time given by the contract this constitutes a waiver of the provisions of the contract, and that the company was not now entitled to rely thereon, so as to avoid liability accruing to the defendants in error by virtue of the acts complained of. This contract involved here was made under and pursuant to the Carmack Amendment to the Hepburn Act (Act Cong. June 29, 1906, c. 3591, § 7, pars. 11, 12, 34 Stat. 593 [Comp. St. 1916, §§ 8604a, 8604aa]), and this contract has been held by this court, and by the United States Supreme Court, to be supported by a valuable consideration, and the provisions thereof reasonable and binding upon the parties.

This court, in St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co. v. Wynn, 153 Pac. 1156, said:

> "This action being based upon a contract of interstate shipment, section 9, art. 23, of the Constitution, which provides, 'Any provision of any contract or agreement express or implied, stipulating for notice or demand other than such as may be provided by law, as a condition precedent to establish any claim, demand, or liability, shall be null and void.' is without force, being abrogated under the Carmack Amendment of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 593, c. 3591, § 7, pars. 11 and 12 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1913, § 8592]).
>
> "In St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Zickafoose, 39 Okl. 302, 135 Pac. 406, it is held: 'Under the federal law, which is controlling upon the court in determining questions of liability properly arising out of interstate shipments, a provision in a live stock contract or bill of lading to the effect that, as a condition precedent to a recovery for any damages for delay, loss, or injury to live stock covered by the contract, the shipper will give notice in writing of the claim therefor to some general officer, or the nearest station agent, or to the agent at destination, or some general officer of the delivering line, before said stock is removed from the point of shipment or the place of destination, and before such stock is mingled with other stock, such notice to be served within one day after the delivery of such stock at destination, was valid. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ladd, 33 Okl. 160, 124 Pac. 461.'"

Likewise this court, in C., R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Craig, 157 Pac. 87, said:

> "(1) Where an action is brought to recover damages upon an interstate shipment of live stock, under a written contract containing the provision that as a condition precedent to recovery of damages for any loss or injury to, or detention of live stock or delay in transportation thereof, a written notice must be given of such damage to a designated representative of the carrier, within one day after the delivery of the stock at its destination, such provision being reasonable and valid, the failure to give such notice is a complete bar to such action."

And in the body of the opinion in this case it is held:

> "That the notice required by section 7 of the contract, hereinafter quoted, is a condition precedent to the maintenance of this action is not an open question, having been repeatedly decided by this court and the Supreme Court of the United States, that the same is reasonable and valid when applied to interstate shipments."

See authorities cited at page 88 of this opinion. For further authorities see M., K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Harriman, 227 U. S. 657, 33 Sup. Ct. 397, 57 L. Ed. 690; K. C. S. Ry. Co. v. Carl, 227 U. S. 639, 33 Sup. Ct. 391, 57 L. Ed. 683; Adams Express Co. v. Croninger, 226 U. S. 491, 33 Sup. Ct. 148, 57 L. Ed. 314, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 257.

All the aforementioned authorities uniformly hold that the Carmack Amendment supersedes all state laws, and that interstate shipments be construed and controlled by the federal statutes and the construction placed upon those statutes by the federal courts, and that state statutes and provisions of the Constitution of the states are not applicable to interstate shipments or to contracts governing them.

[2] It is admitted here by the defendants in error that this provision of this contract is valid and enforceable, but it is asserted that the company may waive its provision, and by reason of its own act place itself in a position so that it cannot rely upon the provision of the contract as a bar to a right of recovery on behalf of the defendants in error against it. And it is claimed that the company here has waived the provision of this contract with reference to the filing of its claim for damages by receiving the claim, investigating its merits, and refusing to allow the same for other reasons than that of the claim not being filed within the time specified in the contract.

We are aware that this court has held in several cases that the provisions of this contract may be waived, but yet, since the rendition of the decisions of this court holding that the same may be waived, the Supreme Court of the United States has held adversely thereto, and, this being a construction of a contract for an interstate shipment, we must construe the same with reference to the federal statute and the constructions placed thereon by the federal court.

The Supreme Court of the United States, through Mr. Justice Hughes, in the case of G., F. & A. Ry. Co. v. Blish Milling Co., 241 U. S. 190, 36 Sup. Ct. 541, 60 L. Ed. 948, said:

> "There is, however, a further and controlling consideration. We are dealing with a clause in a bill of lading issued by the initial carrier. The statute casts upon the initial carrier responsibility with respect to the entire transportation. The aim was to establish unity of responsibility, * * * and the words of the statute are comprehensive enough to embrace responsibility for all losses resulting from any failure to discharge a carrier's duty as to any part of the agreed transportation, which, as defined in the federal act, includes delivery. It is not to be doubted that if, in the case of an interstate shipment under a through bill of lading, the terminal carrier makes a misdelivery, the initial carrier is liable: and when it inserts in its bill of lading a provision requiring reasonable notice of claims 'in case of failure to make delivery,' the fair meaning of the stipulation is that it includes all cases of such failure, as well those due to misdelivery as those due to the loss of the goods. But the provision in question is not to be construed in one way with respect to the initial carrier, and in another with respect to the connecting or terminal carrier. As we have said, the latter takes the goods under the bill of lading issued by the initial carrier, and its obligations are measured by its terms; * * * and if the clause must be deemed to cover a case of misdelivery when the action is brought against the initial carrier, it must equally have that effect in the case of the terminal carrier, which, in the contemplation of the parties, was to make the delivery. The clause gave abundant opportunity for presenting claims, and we regard it as both applicable and valid.

"In this view it necessarily follows that the effect of the stipulation could not be escaped by the mere form of the action. The action is in trover, but, as the state court said: 'If we look beyond its technical denomination, the scope and effect of the action is nothing more than that of an action for damages against the delivering carrier.' * * * It is urged, however, that the carrier, in making the misdelivery, converted the flour and thus abandoned the contract. But the parties could not waive the terms of the contract under which the shipment was made pursuant to the federal act; nor could the carrier by its conduct give the shipper the right to ignore these terms which were applicable to that conduct, and hold the carrier to a different responsibility from that fixed by the agreement made under the published tariffs and regulations. A different view would antagonize the plain policy of the act and open the door to the very abuses at which the act was aimed. * * *"

Likewise in the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Phillips v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 236 U. S. 662, 35 Sup. Ct. 444, 59 L. Ed. 774, it is said:

"It is argued, however, that under the Conformity Act [Rev. St. U. S. § 914 (U. S. Comp. St. 1916, § 1537)] the case is to be governed by the Michigan practice, which does not permit a defendant to take advantage of the statute of limitations by a general demurrer to the declaration. But that rule does not apply to a cause of action arising under a statute which indicates its purpose to prevent suits on delayed claims, by the provision that all complaints for damages should be filed within two years, and not after. Under such a statute the lapse of time not only bars the remedy, but destroys the liability (Finn v. United States, 123 U. S. 227, 232 [8 Sup. Ct. 82, 31 L. Ed. 128]), whether complaint is filed with the commission or suit is brought in a court of competent jurisdiction. This will more distinctly appear by considering the requirements of uniformity which in this as in so many other instances must be borne in mind in construing the Commerce Act. The obligation of the carrier to adhere to the legal rate, to refund only what is permitted by law, and to treat all shippers alike would have made it illegal for the carriers, either by silence or by express waiver, to preserve to the Phillips Company a right of action which the statute required should be asserted within a fixed period. To have one period of limitation where the complaint is filed before the commission and the varying periods of limitation of the different states where a suit was brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, or to permit a railroad company to plead the statute of limitations as against some and to waive it as against others, would be to prefer some and discriminate against others in violation of the terms of the Commerce Act which forbids all devices by which such results may be accomplished. The prohibitions of the statute against unjust discrimination relate not only to inequality of charges and inequality of facilities, but also to the giving of preferences by means of consent judgments or the waiver of defenses open to the carrier."

We are therefore of the opinion that it was not within the power or authority of the railroad company to waive the provisions of the contract which required notice of this claim to be presented to it within the time specified therein, and in view of the fact that the contract itself provides that a failure of the defendants in error to comply therewith shall be a bar to their right of recovery herein.

This action was not instituted until the expiration of one year from the date of the delivery of the mules in question at North Ft. Worth, Tex., and therefore the provision of section 15 of the contract which provides the time within which actions of this character might be instituted was not complied with.

We are therefore of the opinion that the defendants in error were not entitled to maintain this cause of action by reason of the failure to give notice as provided in section 7 of the contract, and that the contractual limitation relied upon by the plaintiff in error here as set forth in section 15 of the contract is a complete bar to the right of recovery in this case.

The judgment of the lower court is therefore reversed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

CLEVELAND et al. v. LAMPKIN et al.

(No. 7446.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR ⚿754(3)—ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR—OVERRULING OF MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—REVIEW.

Where the plaintiff in error fails to assign as error the overruling of his motion for a new trial, the Supreme Court has no power to review errors alleged to have occurred during the progress of the trial.

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 3. Error from District Court, Kiowa County; James R. Tolbert, Judge.

Action between A. S. Cleveland and Wm. D. Cleveland, Jr., copartners doing business under the firm name and style of Wm. D. Cleveland & Sons, against W. E. Lampkin and the Home State Bank. Judgment for the latter, and the former bring error. Cause dismissed.

Morse, Standeven & Willingham, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiffs in error. Zink & Cline, of Hobart, for defendants in error.

BLEAKMORE, C. Motion is presented to dismiss this proceeding on the ground that plaintiffs in error have failed to assign as error the overruling of their motion for new trial. The only errors assigned here are those alleged to have occurred during the progress of the trial relative to the giving of instructions and the exclusion of certain evidence. The established rule in this jurisdiction is that:

⚿For other cases see same topic and KEY-NUMBER in all Key-Numbered Digests and Indexes

"Where the plaintiff in error fails to assign as error the overruling of his motion for a new trial, the Supreme Court has no power to review errors alleged to have occurred during the progress of the trial." O'Neil et al. v. James, 40 Okl. 661, 140 Pac. 141.

The motion is sustained, and the cause dismissed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

McBRIDE v. FOOTE. (No. 6757.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑185(3)—AUTHORITY OF TRIAL COURT—OBJECTION FIRST RAISED ON APPEAL.

Where an action is tried before a special judge, both parties announcing ready for trial, and no question is raised in the trial court as to his authority to hear and determine the case, or as to the regularity of his selection, such questions cannot be raised for the first time in this court on appeal.

Appeal from County Court, Harper County; R. H. Nichols, Special Judge.

Action by A. S. McBride against A. E. Foote. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Dickson & Dickson, of Beaver, and Gray & McVay, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. Dick & McKenzie, of Buffalo, for defendant in error.

OWEN, J. This was an action by plaintiff in error against defendant in error. Verdict for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. The cause appears to have been tried before R. H. Nichols, special judge. The petition in error contains 19 assignments. In the brief filed by counsel for plaintiff in error only one question is presented for the consideration of this court. Following an abstract of the record counsel say:

"From the foregoing abstract it would appear that but one question is here presented for consideration, and that is for this court to take judicial notice of who was the lawful county judge of Harper county at the time this cause was tried, and, it not appearing that Hon. R. H. Nichols, before whom same purports to have been tried, was other than a private person, or that he was selected to act as judge, or that he possessed any of the qualifications to act as such prescribed by law, the judgment should be reversed, and the cause remanded for new trial."

This objection is made for the first time in this court. No such objection was made in the lower court. On the contrary, the record (C. M. P. 22) recites:

"The plaintiff appeared in person and by attorneys, and the defendant appeared in person and by attorneys; both parties announced ready for trial, and the jury is drawn and impaneled," etc.

Objection to the authority of a special or substituted judge may be waived by the act or omission of a party. The objection should be made at or before the trial, and cannot be made for the first time in this court. Such objections, not having been made at the trial, are deemed to have been waived. The Constitution of this state (article 7, §§ 12, 197, William's Ann.) provides for a special judge. The statute (section 5813, Rev. Laws 1910) provides the parties to an action may agree on a special judge to try the case. In the 19 assignments of error no mention is made of any lack of qualification of the special judge or irregularity in his selection. Under the great weight of authority, when Constitution and laws recognize a judge pro tempore, and no objections are made at the time of the trial to the authority of such special judge, the objections cannot be made for the first time upon appeal. Kelly v. Roetzel, 165 Pac. 1150, not yet officially reported; 23 Cyc. 616; 15 R. C. L. 516, § 6; Tillman v. State, 58 Fla. 113, 50 South. 675, 138 Am. St. Rep. 100, 19 Ann. Cas. 91; Higby v. Ayres, 14 Kan. 331; Mo. Pac. Ry. Co. v. Preston, 63 Kan. 819, 66 Pac. 1050; 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 793.

In the case of Kelly v. Roetzel, 165 Pac. 1150, not yet officially reported, this court, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Hardy, passed on a similar question, expressly overruling the case of Apple v. Ellis, 150 Pac. 1057, and later decisions following that case, relied upon by plaintiff in error. In that case Justice Hardy said:

"Litigants should not be permitted to try a case without objection before a special judge, taking chances upon the outcome of the trial with the intention of availing themselves of the benefits incident to a favorable result and at the same time be accorded the right to question the validity of such proceedings should an adverse verdict be rendered."

Adhering to the rule as announced in Kelly v. Roetzel, the judgment of the trial court is affirmed. All the Justices concur.

WHITAKER v. CHESTNUT. (No. 7640.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑529(2)—PETITION IN ERROR—ORDER OF COURT REVIEW.

"Order of the court on a motion to vacate a judgment is not a part of the record proper and cannot be reviewed by this court on petition in error and transcript."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2374, 2392, 2393.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Mayes County; Preston S. Davis, Judge.

Action by W. J. Whitaker against H. M. Chestnut. Judgment by default, defendant's motion on his special appearance to vacate and set aside the judgment sustained, and plaintiff files petition in error and transcript. Appeal dismissed.

J. Howard Langley, of Pryor, for plaintiff in error. T. C. Wilson and Irwin Donovan, both of Muskogee, for defendant in error.

STEWART, C. The plaintiff, W. J. Whitaker, obtained a judgment against the defendant, H. M. Chestnut, in the district court of Mayes county by default. Afterwards, by special appearance, the defendant moved the court to vacate and set aside the judgment, which motion was by the court sustained. The plaintiff attempts to appeal to this court by petition in error and transcript.

In Orr v. Fulton, 153 Pac. 149, it is said:

> "A motion to vacate a judgment copied into a transcript constitutes no part of the record, and presents no question for review by the Supreme Court on appeal."

In Menten v. Shuttee, 11 Okl. 381, 67 Pac. 478, the Supreme Court of the territory of Oklahoma says:

> "Motions presented to the trial court, the rulings thereon, and exceptions, are not properly part of the record, and can only be preserved and presented for review on appeal by incorporating the same into a bill of exceptions or case-made."

Such is the uniform holding of this court, as shown by the following authorities: Tribal Developing Company v. White Bros., 28 Okl. 525, 114 Pac. 736; McCoy v. McCoy, 27 Okl. 372, 112 Pac. 1040; Veverka v. Frank et al., 41 Okl. 142, 137 Pac. 682; Grady County v. Schrock et al., 155 Pac. 882.

We have no discretion.

Following the authorities cited, the appeal is dismissed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

(74 Okl. 27)

NATIONAL SURETY CO. v. OKLAHOMA NAT. LIFE INS. CO. (No. 7304.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Jan. 30, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE ⇨181—COPY OF LETTER—PREDICATE.

In order that a copy of a letter may be properly introduced in evidence, it is a condition precedent that a proper predicate be shown for the admission of such secondary evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 600.]

2. EVIDENCE ⇨378(1)—ADMISSION OF LETTER—IDENTIFICATION.

A letter cannot be properly admitted in evidence without being properly identified.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. §§ 1648, 1655.]

3. WITNESSES ⇨321 — IMPEACHING OWN WITNESS.

A party introducing a witness in his behalf cannot impeach the character of such witness for truth and veracity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1094, 1099, 1100.]

4. WITNESSES ⇨344(2)—DISCREDITING OWN WITNESS—EVIDENCE.

Evidence of the particulars of the arrest of a witness for immoral acts with a woman in a rooming house cannot be properly introduced in evidence by the party offering such witness, for the purpose of discrediting such witness.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 1125.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Oklahoma County; John J. Carney, Judge.

Action by the Oklahoma National Life Insurance Company against the National Surety Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Bennett & Pope, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. Ledbetter, Stuart & Bell, of Oklahoma City, for defendant in error.

COLLIER, C. This is an action brought by the Oklahoma National Life Insurance Company, a corporation, hereinafter styled plaintiff, against the National Surety Company, a corporation, hereinafter styled defendant, to recover for a breach of a bond executed by the defendant to the plaintiff to protect the plaintiff against loss on account of larceny or embezzlement by a soliciting agent of the plaintiff, one White.

[1, 2] The evidence is in conflict as to the premiums collected by White as such agent and not properly accounted for to the plaintiff, but the view we take of the case renders it unnecessary to set out such evidence in extenso. Against the objection and exception of the defendant the court permitted to be introduced in evidence what purported to be a copy of a letter written by an officer of the plaintiff to the said White, but no predicate whatever was laid for the introduction of said copy. Said letter reads as follows:

> "May 10, 1911.
>
> "Mr. D. E. White, c/o Regal Hotel, Shawnee, Oklahoma—Dear Sir: I wish to advise that, on account of a quorum of the board of directors not being present, the meeting had been deferred until May 3d, and I shall be compelled to insist upon your cutting down your account by that date, as you promised me on April 30th that by this time you would have cut down your account $300, naming the collection you would get, as the Gregg and Tunston. Now, White, will you not disappoint me, for the simple fact that I may depend upon you to do something as per your promise. Thanking you for your prompt attention, I wish to remain
>
> "Yours very truly, Secretary."

The evidence discloses that no effort was made to locate the original of this letter, no notice is claimed to have been served on the defendant or his attorney, or on White, for the production of the original of this letter, or the loss of said letter in any way accounted for.

There was also introduced in evidence, against the objection and exception of the defendant, without a proper predicate therefor, a copy of a letter written by the Secretary of the plaintiff to Mr. J. A. Galbreath, an officer of the defendant, which reads as follows:

> "July 20, 1911.
>
> "Mr. J. A. Galbreath, 1307–8 Commerce Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.—Dear Sir: Referring to our conversation recently regarding Mr. D. E. White, who is bonded under your schedule bond with us, wish to say that I had a long talk with Mr. White yesterday regarding his account, and will say that his shortage is not as much as I expected, and he has promised to adjust this as early as possible. However, I presume it is necessary that you be notified that he is somewhat behind. In the Reed case I have written all of the parties, but have heard from only one, Ellis Shaffer, and I am herewith inclosing his letter.
>
> "Yours very truly, Secretary."

There was also admitted in evidence, against the objection and exception of defendant, and without proper identification, a letter purported to be in reply to the letter of the secretary of the plaintiff, by an officer of the defendant, which reads as follows:

> "National Surety Company, New York.
>
> "Claim Department. Ausburn M. Birdsall, Assistant General Solicitor, New York. 1307 Bank of Commerce Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., July 24, 1911. Address reply to J. A. Galbreath, Superintendent. Mr. F. E. Beaty, Sec., The Oklahoma National Life Ins. Co., Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.—Dear Sir: I have before me your letter of the 20th, and am glad to note that there is only a small shortage in Mr. White's accounts, which he has promised to adjust as soon as possible. If you see that the discrepancies come within the terms of our bond and settlement is not made at once, please furnish me detailed statement, with all the facts in connection therewith. Kindly notify me what settlement is made.
>
> "Yours very truly, J. A. Galbreath, > Superintendent."

In the admission of said copies and said letter, the fundamental rule of the best evidence being required, and the necessary condition precedent to the admission of secondary evidence, is violated to an extreme degree, and we are at a loss to understand upon what rule of evidence the court permitted said copies and said letter to be introduced, against the objection and exception of the defendant. Certainly it was not the best evidence, nor was a proper predicate laid for the introduction of secondary evidence; and we are of the opinion, and so hold, that the admission of said copies and said letter wrongfully bolstered up the evidence of the plaintiff, were self-serving declarations, and from any standpoint inadmissible, and that the result of the admission of such evidence was highly prejudicial to the defendant, and reversible error.

The error of the court in admission of the copies of said letters, and the letter purported to have been received in reply to the copy of said letter, without being properly identified, are such fundamental errors, that we do not deem it necessary to cite authorities in support of our holding.

[3, 4] As the case must again be tried, we deem it necessary to say that we are unable to understand under what rule of evidence the particulars of the escapade of White, the witness, in connection with a woman in Shawnee, could be regarded as proper evidence in this case.

> "A party cannot impeach his own witness, and this doctrine is an ancient rule of the common law." Jones on Evidence, vol. 5, § 853.

Again, the character of a witness for truth and veracity cannot be impeached by evidence of the particulars of his arrest for wrongfully associating with a female in a rooming house.

> "Inquiry cannot be made of the impeaching witness as to particular facts which tend to discredit the reputation of the person sought to be impeached. The inquiry should be limited to whether the impeaching witness knows the general reputation for truth and veracity of the person in question, among his neighbors—how he stands in general estimation." Jones on Evidence, vol. 5, § 860.

See Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 663, 22 Pac. 26, 131; Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 305; Frye v. Bank of Illinois, 11 Ill. 367; Hansell v. Erickson, 28 Ill. 257; Dimick v. Downs, 82 Ill. 570; Fletcher v. State, 49 Ind. 124, 19 Am. Rep. 673; Farley v. State, 57 Ind. 331; Thruman v. Virgin, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 785; State v. Jackson, 44 La. Ann. 160, 10 South. 600; Phillips v. Kingfield, 19 Me. 375, 36 Am. Dec. 760; Deck v. Baltimore, etc., Ry. Co., 100 Md. 168, 59 Atl. 650, 108 Am. St. Rep. 399; Holbrook v. Dow, 12 Gray (Mass.) 357; People v. Abbott, 97 Mich. 484, 56 N. W. 862, 37 Am. St. Rep. 360; State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65, 41 N. W. 459; Rudsdill v. Slingerland, 18 Minn. 380 (Gil. 342); Moreland v. Lawrence, 23 Minn. 84; Warner v. Lockerby, 31 Minn. 421, 18 N. W. 145, 821; Shaefer v. Railway Co., 98 Mo. App. 455, 72 S. W. 154; State v. Slattery, 74 N. J. Law, 241, 65 Atl. 866; Conley v. Meeker, 85 N. Y. 618; Barton v. Morphes, 13 N. C. 520; Bucklin v. State, 20 Ohio, 18; Wike v. Lightner, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 198; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Houlihan (Tex. Civ. App.) 93 S. W. 495; Crane v. Thayer, 18 Vt. 162, 46 Am. Dec. 142; United States v. Vansickle, 2 McLean, 219, Fed. Cas. No. 16,609; Richards v. State, 154 Pac. 72.

Had objection and exception been made and taken to the admission in evidence of the particulars of the escapade of White, the same would be reversible error, as the only effect of such evidence would be to improperly prejudice the jury against the witness White.

As the prejudicial errors pointed out must work a reversal of this case, we deem it unnecessary to consider any of the other errors assigned.

This cause is reversed and remanded.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

FISHER et al. v. PETTY et al. (No. 7251.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑773(5)—FAILURE OF DEFENDANT IN ERROR TO FILE BRIEF—REVERSAL.

When plaintiff in error, in conformity with the rules of the Supreme Court, has prepared, served, and filed a brief, and no brief is filed, and no reason is given for its absence, on behalf of defendant in error, this court is not required to search the record to find some theory upon which the judgment below may be sustained; but where the brief filed appears reasonably to sustain the assignments of error, the court may reverse the judgment in accordance with the prayer of the petition of the plaintiff in error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3104, 3110.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Roger Mills County; T. P. Clay, Judge.

Action by Mary E. Petty and others against George F. Fisher and others. Judgment for plaintiffs and defendant George F. Fisher brings error. Reversed and remanded.

T. L. Turner, of Cheyenne, for plaintiff in error.

RUMMONS, C. Plaintiff in error duly completed, served, and filed his case-made, with petition in error attached, and in due time, and in conformity with the rules of this court, prepared, served, and filed his brief; but the defendant in error has failed to file his brief, or give an excuse for such failure. The brief of plaintiff in error reasonably sustains the assignments of error made by him. This court, not being required to search the records, in the absence of a brief on behalf of defendant in error, for reasons to sustain the judgment of the trial court, may reverse the case upon the brief of the plaintiff in error.

The judgment of the court below should therefore be reversed, and this cause remanded, with directions to the trial court to grant plaintiff in error a new trial.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

COTTON et al. v. WOODS. (No. 6874.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑796—MOTION TO DISMISS—CONSIDERATION.

A motion to dismiss a case predicated upon a motion of a defendant in error, who recovered in the trial court, and who was an incompetent under guardianship at the time of filing such motion to dismiss, cannot be legally entertained, and such motion will be denied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3146-3148.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Haskell County; W. H. Brown, Judge.

Action by Henrietta Woods, an incompetent, by J. K. McKinney, her guardian, against Fred Cotton and others. Judgment for plaintiff, motion for new trial overruled, and defendants bring error. Motion to dismiss cause denied.

A. L. Beckett, of Stigler, and Rosser & Cochran, of Muskogee, for plaintiffs in error. Clark & Foster, of Stigler, for defendants in error.

COLLIER, C. This action was instituted by the defendants in error against the plaintiffs in error to remove clouds from the title of land described in the petition filed in said cause, and resulted in a judgment in favor of Henrietta Woods, canceling all deeds executed to the defendants, or either of them, by the defendants in error, and enjoining the plaintiffs in error, and all those claiming under them, from commencing any suit or action disturbing plaintiff in the possession and title of said lands in controversy, and from setting up any claim or interest adverse to the interests of said plaintiff, and from disturbing the plaintiff in her peaceable and quiet enjoyment of said lands. Within the time provided by law the defendants moved for a new trial, which was overruled, excepted to, and error brought to this court.

This cause is now submitted upon motion to dismiss the case, said motion being filed by Rosser & Cochran, as attorneys for Fred Cotton, one of the defendants in said cause, based upon a motion made by said Henrietta Woods, upon the grounds:

> "That the lands in controversy had been legally sold; that she was persuaded to bring this suit, but that she did not bring it of her own free will; that since it was brought she has executed a deed to the said Fred Cotton, and received from said Fred Cotton at the time of making the deed the sum of $50 in addition to the amount paid her guardian; and that she does not think it right and just to prosecute this matter further, and therefore moves the court to dismiss this case."

This motion to dismiss the case is resisted by the guardian of Henrietta Woods, an incompetent, and in support of said resistance there is attached thereto a duly certified transcript of the proceedings of the county court of Haskell county, showing that on the 2d day of March, A. D. 1914, said Henrietta Woods was declared to be an incompetent, that J. L. McKinney was duly appointed her guardian, and that said guardianship is still in force.

The motion under consideration was filed July 10, 1916, at which time Henrietta Woods was an incompetent, and therefore the motion to dismiss the case is without legal force and without the slightest merit; and the said motion to dismiss the case is hereby denied.

It is hereby ordered that the plaintiff in error be given 20 days in which to file a brief on the merits of the appeal, and that the defendants in error be given 20 days thereafter in which to file answer brief.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

OKLAHOMA CITY et al. v. PAGE.

(No. 3735.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑773(2) — FAILURE TO FILE BRIEF—DISMISSAL.

"Where the plaintiff in error fails to file a brief, as required by the rules of the Supreme Court, and offers no excuse for such failure, the appeal will be dismissed."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3104, 3108.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Appeal from Superior Court, Oklahoma County; Edward Dewes Oldfield, Judge.

Action by Albert Page against the City of Oklahoma City and others. Temporary injunction granted, and defendants appeal. Dismissed.

J. W. Johnson, Geo. A. Matlack, and Warren K. Snyder, all of Oklahoma City, for plaintiffs in error.

COLLIER, C. This is an action by the dedendant in error against the plaintiff in error for a temporary injunction, which was granted, and from the granting of which this appeal is prosecuted.

This appeal was filed in this court on March 27, 1912, and submitted for decision September 27, 1915. The plaintiff in error has failed to file a brief, and has not offered an excuse for such failure, and therefore, under the unbroken line of decisions of this court, this appeal is dismissed. Board of County Commissioners of Garvin County v. Pyeatt, 154 Pac. 549; Wilcox v. Wooton, 159 Pac. 1118.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

LOWERY et al. v. PARTON et al. (No. 6991.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Jan. 30, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. GUARDIAN AND WARD 🔑17—APPOINTMENT —JURISDICTION OF PROBATE COURT—COLLATERAL ATTACK—STATUTE.

Rev. Laws 1910, § 6190, provides with reference to the jurisdiction of probate courts: "The proceedings of this court are construed in the same manner, and with like intendments, as the proceedings of courts of general jurisdiction, and to its records, * * * there are accorded like force, effect and legal presumption as to the records, * * * of district courts." An order appointing a guardian, which recites that application has been made to the county court for the appointment of a guardian, is sufficient evidence, within itself, that the proper petition had been filed in said court invoking the jurisdiction of the court, and is valid as against a collateral attack.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Guardian and Ward, Cent. Dig. §§ 66-70.]

2. GUARDIAN AND WARD 🔑17 — APPOINTMENT—ORDER OF PROBATE COURT—RECITAL OF MINORITY—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

Where an order of the probate court in appointing a guardian recites in the order of appointment that the party for whom the application for appointment of guardian was made was a minor 20 years of age, same is conclusive on collateral attack.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Guardian and Ward, Cent. Dig. §§ 66-70.]

3. JUDGMENT 🔑504(3)—COLLATERAL ATTACK —ORDERS OF PROBATE COURT.

Orders issued by a probate court, though irregular and not in the ordinary form, are valid as against a collateral attack, where the language is sufficient to clearly indicate the purpose and denote the character of such orders.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 946.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 5. Error from District Court, Carter County; A. Eddleman, Judge.

Suit by George A. Parton and others against Choctaw Lowery and others. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants bring error. Affirmed.

I. R. Mason, of Ardmore, for plaintiffs in error. Thos. Norman, of Ardmore, for defendants in error.

JONES, C. On February 20, 1914, in the district court of Carter county, Okl., defendants in error, plaintiffs in the original suit, filed their petition against the plaintiffs in error, in which they allege that they are the owners of a certain oil and gas lease upon the lands belonging to the defendant Choctaw Lowery, such lease having been executed and delivered to one W. C. Daniels, guardian of said Choctaw Lowery; that said lease has been duly approved by the judge of the county and probate court, and they became the owners of such lease by reason of an assignment by J. H. Mathers, made February 13, 1914; that on the 14th day of February, 1914, Choctaw Lowery executed an oil and gas lease upon said lands to one E. M. Kinkade, and that said lease had been placed of record; that the said Choctaw Lowery is not yet 21 years of age; that the lands are valuable for oil and gas, and that the Kinkade lease is a cloud upon their title and interests; and they pray for a cancellation of said lease and for an injunction against the defendants, plaintiffs in error, herein. Pursuant thereto the district court of Carter county issued its order of injunction, and on March 16, 1914, plaintiffs in error filed their motion to dismiss the injunction, which was overruled April 9, 1914. Upon April 13, 1914, plaintiffs in error filed their answer to the petition, in which they deny each and every material allegation, they deny that Daniels was ever the legal guardian of Choctaw Lowery, and pray for a cancellation of the lease held by defendants in error, plaintiffs below. On May 27, 1914, the case proceeded to trial, and at the conclusion thereof the jury, under the direction of the court, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, from which judgment of the court the defendants, plaintiffs in error, prayed an appeal to the Supreme Court of the state of Oklahoma.

[1-3] Plaintiffs in error in their petition in error call attention to ten different assignments of error; but we take it, from the facts as disclosed by the record and the argument made in the brief of plaintiffs in error, that the only material question in this case is whether or not the proceedings in the county court, wherein W. C. Daniels, the guardian of Choctaw Lowery, was appointed, are valid on account of irregularities occurring in such proceedings, and while there may be some irregularity in the probate proceedings the present attack of plaintiffs in error is directed against the order appointing a guardian in said cause, which is as follows, to wit:

"State of Oklahoma, Carter County—ss.: The State of Oklahoma, to All Whom It may Concern, and Especially to W. C. Daniels—Greeting: Know ye, that whereas, application has been made to the county court of said county for the appointment of a guardian to Choctaw Lowery, aged 20 years, minor, and it appearing to the court that it is necessary to appoint a guardian to said Choctaw Lowery, and the said W. C. Daniels having been approved for said trust by the court, and having given bond as required by law, which has been approved, filed, and recorded in said court: Now, therefore, trusting in your care and fidelity, we have appointed and do by these presents appoint you, the said W. C. Daniels, as such guardian, hereby authorizing and empowering you to take and to have the custody of said minor and the care of his education, until he arrive at the age of 21 years, or until you shall be discharged according to law, and requiring you to make a true inventory of all the estate, real and personal, of the said ward that shall come to your possession or knowledge, and to return the same into the county court within three months from the date of these letters, or at any other time the court shall direct, to dispose of and manage all such estate according to law, and for the best interest of the ward, and faithfully to discharge your trust in relation thereto, and also when required in relation to the care, custody, and education of the ward to render an account on oath of the property, real and personal, of said ward in your hands, and all proceeds and interests derived therefrom, and of the management and disposition of the same within one year after your appointment, and annually thereafter, and at such other times as the court shall direct, and at the expiration of your trust to settle your account with the county court, or with the ward if he shall be of full age, or his legal representatives, and to pay over and deliver all the property, real and personal, remaining in your hands or due from you on such settlement to the person lawfully entitled thereto.

"In testimony whereof, we have caused the seal of said county court to be hereunto affixed. Witness, W. F. Freeman, judge of said court, at Ardmore, in said county, this 15th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[Signed] W. F. Freeman,
County Judge. [Seal.]

It will be seen from the foregoing that the first part of the order makes the appointment of the guardian. It recites:

"Know ye that whereas, application has been made to the county court for the appointment of a guardian to Choctaw Lowery, aged 20 years, minor, and it appearing to the court that it is necessary to appoint a guardian to said Choctaw Lowery, and the said W. C. Daniels having been approved for said trust by the court, and having given bond as required by law, which has been approved, filed, and recorded in said court: Now, therefore, trusting in your care and fidelity, We have appointed and do by these presents appoint you, the said W. C. Daniels, as such guardian," etc.

Giving to this full force and credit, and construing it sensibly and legally, it makes the appointment of the guardian, and while it may be to some extent defective in form, we think it is sufficient in substance, and the order having recited the fact that Choctaw Lowery was a minor, that the necessity existed for the appointment of a guardian, and that W. C. Daniels possessed the qualifications necessary for a guardian, and that an application had been filed asking for such appointment, we think renders the order good as against collateral attack.

The validity of the lease in question, executed by W. C. Daniels, as guardian of Choctaw Lowery, and now held by the defendants in error, being based upon the validity of the appointment of the guardian, we deem that it is unnecessary to discuss the validity or the invalidity of the lease, having held that the appointment of the guardian was valid, necessarily the lease, which seems to have been regular in form and duly approved by the county court, would likewise be valid.

We therefore find no error committed by the trial court in rendering judgment in favor of the plaintiffs, defendants in error. This being an equity case, the verdict of the jury would have only been advisory, and the court would not have been bound by the jury's verdict, and no error was committed in directing the verdict.

The case is therefore affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

LUCAS v. KING. (No. 6944.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Feb. 13, 1917.
Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

REPLEVIN ⇨72—JUDGMENT—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

Record examined, and held that the court is unable to find sufficient satisfactory evidence to support the verdict of the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Replevin, Cent. Dig. §§ 292–295.]

Error from District Court, Grady County; Frank M. Bailey, Judge.

Replevin by J. E. Lucas against W. C. King. Judgment for defendant, motion for new trial overruled, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded, with directions to grant a new trial.

Riddle & Hammerly, of Chickasha, and Warren K. Snyder, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. Bond, Melton & Melton, of Chickasha, for defendant in error.

KANE, J. This was an action in replevin, commenced by the plaintiff in error, plaintiff below, against the defendant in error, defendant below, for the recovery of certain specific personal property of the aggregate value of $2,234 and for damages for the wrongful detention thereof in the sum of $2,500. The petition, bond, and affidavit in replevin were in the usual form, the plaintiff alleging that he was the owner of and entitled to the immediate possession of the property involved, which consisted of about 14 head of live stock, 3 sets of harness, 1 wagon, and 7 collars. After the petition, affidavit, and bond in replevin were filed by the plaintiff, the defendant gave a redelivery bond, and in due time filed his answer, which alleged, in effect, that the plaintiff at one time held a mortgage on said personal property to secure a certain indebtedness aggregating $2,100, but that this indebtedness had long since been paid in the following manner. Then follows what purports to be a statement of mutual accounts existing between the plaintiff and defendant, which showed the plaintiff to be indebted to the defendant in the sum of $1,000, for which sum the defendant prayed judgment, together with his costs. To this answer the plaintiff replied, denying generally and specially the allegations thereof, and alleging that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a large sum; that the chattel mortgage mentioned by the defendant in his answer had been foreclosed in the manner provided by law, and the property therein described sold at mortgage sale for a sum much less than the amount due said plaintiff from said defendant, and the proceeds applied pursuant to its terms; that at said sale the plaintiff became the purchaser in good faith of the personal property described in said chattel mortgage, and thereby became the owner thereof. Upon trial to jury there was a verdict in favor of the defendant, which, omitting the caption, reads as follows:

> "We, the jury, impaneled and sworn to try the issues involved in the above-entitled cause, do upon our oaths find for the defendant and fix the amount of his recovery at the sum of $500.00, and for the retention of all property sued for in this cause."

After overruling the motion for new trial filed by the plaintiff, the court entered judgment upon the verdict, to reverse which this proceeding in error was commenced.

Counsel for the defendant state their grounds for reversal in their brief as follows: (1) That the verdict of the jury and judgment of the court are contrary to law; and (2) that the verdict of the jury and judgment of the court are wholly unsupported by and contrary to the uncontradicted evidence.

As we view the record, it presents no question of law whatever for review. The record shows that the pleadings were not challenged by demurrer or otherwise, and that after all the evidence was in and the case closed, the court instructed the jury as to the law of the case upon the issues joined by the pleadings and the evidence without objection or exception by either party. It is true that the action of replevin has for its primary object the recovery of specific personal property, and an ordinary judgment for a sum of money is not responsive to the issues raised (Cobbey on Replevin, § 1147); but the parties to this proceeding, as we have seen, treated it more in the nature of a suit for the adjustment of mutual accounts than an ordinary action in replevin, and so we shall treat it in examining the remaining assignment of error.

To meet the contention that the verdict of the jury is not sustained by the evidence, counsel for defendant in their brief present a statement showing certain credits as being established by the evidence in favor of their client, and say that the allowance of these claims more than justify the verdict of the jury. As there was no attempt to state an account between the parties, of course, we are unable to say just what credits were allowed by the jury, or what claims they rejected. But, looking upon the case from the standpoint of the defendant, we are unable to find satisfactory support in the evidence for many of the items of credit which counsel contend are established. In view of the fact that it will be necessary to reverse the cause for a new trial, and that upon a retrial the pleadings and issues may be so revised as to present merely an ordinary action in replevin for consideration, which, of course, would greatly simplify the case, we deem it necessary to note but three of the larger credits which, in our judgment, are not supported by the evidence.

One of the credits which counsel claim is established by the evidence is designated in their brief as follows:

> "Total value of property sold and converted by Lucas for which King is entitled to credit, $5,563.50."

A large part of the property included in this item consisted of the personal property covered by the chattel mortgage hereinbefore mentioned, and came into the possession of the plaintiff in substantially the following manner: One Arnote held a chattel mortgage against this property which he was about to foreclose. To save foreclosure the plaintiff purchased the Arnote note and mortgage under the following agreement with the defendant, as related by the latter: Mr. Lucas was to take possession of all the live stock and sell the jack and stock horses and apply the proceeds in payment of the Arnote note, retaining the work animals to do certain contract work, leaving the defendant enough teams on the farm to do farm work with, which teams he was also to use on contract work with his brother, when he had no work on the farm for them to do. In pursuance of this agreement Mr. Lucas took possession of the live stock. Upon the defendant taking the necessary work animals back to his farm, to be used in pursuance of his agreement with Lucas, they were seized by a Mrs. Holder, who held a second chattel mortgage upon the property covered by the Arnote mortgage. At this point Mr. Lucas said to the defendant, according to the testimony of the latter:

> "'We have got to sell all this stuff and stop this litigation,' and I said, 'All right, John; anything goes with me.'"

In pursuance of this conversation the personal property covered by the Arnote mortgage was all sold pursuant to the terms of the mortgage, at which sale the plaintiff became the purchaser for the sum of $800, which sum was credited upon the Arnote note, leaving a balance of several hundred dollars still unpaid. Right here there occurred the first serious disagreement between the parties. The plaintiff contends that the sale pursuant to the Arnote note and mortgage was a bona fide sale, and that he credited the Arnote note with the $800, and that that was the end of that transaction in so far as the ownership of the live stock and other property covered by the mortgage is concerned. We find nothing in the record which directly negatives this contention; whilst, on the other hand, the evidence of the plaintiff tends to confirm it. From the part of the defendant's testimony above set out it might fairly be inferred that upon finding the first agreement to be impracticable on account of the second chattel mortgage of Mrs. Holder, Lucas and King entered into a new agreement whereby the property was to be sold under the first, or Arnote, chattel mortgage. "Lucas says," testified the defendant, "'We have got to sell all this stuff and stop this litigation,' and I said, 'All right, John; anything goes with me.'" But even if we assume that the jury might have inferred from the foregoing testimony of the defendant that the sale pursuant to the Arnote note and mortgage was a mere subterfuge to shut off the second mortgagee, who had seized the property, and that the original agreement was to stand, notwithstanding the foreclosure of the Arnote mortgage, yet Lucas ought not to be charged with the value of the property as in conversion. In other words, instead of allowing the defendant the reasonable market value of the property covered by the Arnote mortgage, as counsel assumes the court and jury did, the defendant would be entitled only to have credit for the amount Lucas received for the property upon a sale thereof in good faith; for, testifies the defendant, "Mr. Lucas was to sell the jack and stock horses and apply the proceeds to my note." In either of the foregoing circumstances it would be manifestly unfair to the plaintiff to charge him with the conversion of this property. We also are unable to find in the record any satisfactory evidence which entitled the defendant to receive a credit of $2,284.85 on account of the transaction which, for identification, will be called the "Butler work," the "Strong City work," the "Rock Island work," "county road work," "Herring and Young work," and the "work at Oklahoma City." And the same may be said of the credit which counsel refer to in their brief as follows:

> "He further testified that he paid the balance due on a note and mortgage to one J. E. Brown amounting to about $600," etc.

On the whole case, we are constrained to say that the trial of a replevin case before a jury is a most unsatisfactory method of stating and settling intricate mutual accounts covering a long period of time. If the parties continue to treat this cause as a suit for an accounting, it should be tried as such and complete findings made which would enable this court on review to ascertain with some degree of certainty the specific items of account found to be established by the evidence.

For the reasons stated, the judgment of the court below is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to grant a new trial. All the Justices concur.

LEHR et al. v. GRENNELL FARM LOAN CO. et al. (No. 7315.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Jan. 30, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑1012(1)—WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE—REVERSAL.

Where plaintiff in error appeals from a decree in equity on the question of the weight of the evidence, this court will not weigh the evidence and reverse the judgment appealed from, unless it is clearly shown that the trial court failed to consider uncontroverted evidence, or that the finding and decree are clearly against the weight of the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3990-3992.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 4. Error from District Court, Major County; James B. Cullison, Judge.

Action by Katherine Lehr and Henry Lehr against the Grennell Farm Loan Company and T. H. Grennell. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs bring error. Affirmed.

Tom E. Willis, of Fairview, S. F. Brady, of Oswego, Kan., and C. B. Wood, of Fairview, for plaintiffs in error. Wm. O. Woolman, of Watonga, and S. J. Bardsley, of Fairview, for defendants in error.

JOHNSON, C. This case is on rehearing, and is an action by plaintiffs to have canceled a certain judgment rendered in the district court of Major county in favor of the defendants and against plaintiffs, on the ground of fraud alleged to have been practiced by the defendants in inducing these plaintiffs not to make defense to said cause, and to have canceled a judicial sale and sheriff's deed resulting from said judgment; plaintiffs contending further that the full amount of said judgment has been paid, but that they were induced not to oppose the said sale by fraudulent representations of defendants.

The action is an equitable one, was tried to the lower court without a jury, a decree was entered in favor of defendants, and plaintiffs have appealed.

Upon oral argument, had at a rehearing of this cause, it was stipulated that the only issue for determination by this court is the weight of the evidence; and in prosecution of this issue plaintiffs in error insist that the judgment and decree of the lower court is against the weight of the evidence, and that this court should consider the evidence and render or direct the rendition of judgment in favor of plaintiffs in error, or reverse the judgment of the lower court and remand the cause for a new trial.

The rule of law by which we are guided was stated by this court in the case of Checote v. Berryhill et al., 150 Pac. 679, not yet officially reported, as follows, to wit:

> "Where the plaintiff in error appeals from a decree in equity on the question of the weight of the evidence, this court will not weigh the evidence and remand the case, unless it is clearly shown that the trial court failed to consider uncontroverted evidence, or that the finding and decree are clearly against the weight of the evidence."

As more particularly applicable to this case, the rule has been otherwise stated as follows:

> "Where fraud is relied upon as the basis for equitable relief, and the trial court, after hearing the evidence, finds that fraud has not been established, the appellate court will not disturb such finding, unless it is clearly against the weight of evidence." Overstreet et al. v. Citizens' Bank, 12 Okl. 383, 72 Pac. 379; Schock v. Fish, 45 Okl. 12, 144 Pac. 584; Ashton v. Board of Commissioners of Murray County, 158 Pac. 901, not yet officially reported.

We have carefully read and considered the entire record in the case, and are unable to say that the judgment and decree of the lower court is against the weight of the evidence, or that the court has not considered uncontroverted evidence.

The suit, judgment in which is attacked, was a creditors' suit by the Bank of Ames against these parties and the Citizens' State Bank of Okeene to declare invalid certain mortgages upon the property of these plaintiffs. On cross-petition in that action judgment was rendered for the foreclosure of the mortgages, and the mortgaged property was sold. It is that judgment and sale cancellation of which is sought in this action.

In support of the allegations of plaintiffs below upon the question of fraudulent inducement of the plaintiffs by the defendants not to prosecute their defense of the action in which there was rendered the judgment sought to be canceled, plaintiffs rely largely upon the testimony of the plaintiff Henry Lehr to the effect that T. H. Grennell, one of the defendants, and the principal officer of the Grennell Farm Loan Company and the Citizens' State Bank of Okeene, had stated to the said Lehr that the interests of the said bank and loan company and plaintiffs, in the case in which such judgment was rendered, were the same, and that the said bank and loan company would take care of the interests of plaintiffs in that cause; that the said Grennell took Lehr to the attorney for the bank and loan company in the former cause, and, by reason of confidential relations existing between Lehr and Grennell, and by false representations as to the identity of interests, induced the said Lehr to leave the defense of the Lehrs in the former action to the attorney for the bank and loan company; that, having so left their interests in the hands of the attorney for the bank and loan company, the Lehrs made no defense to the former action, and that the bank and loan company, upon an answer fraudulently obtained by such attorney from Mrs. Lehr, and which she signed unwittingly and without the benefit of fair counsel, in the absence of other defense by the Lehrs, procured the judgment sought to be canceled. This testimony was refuted by the testimony of Grennell, the attorney in question, and the persons who witnessed the execution of the pleading by Mrs. Grennell, at least one of whom was disinterested, and the general circumstances adduced by the testimony tended to support the evidence of defendants upon this point. These witnesses were before the lower court, who had the opportunity to observe them, and who probably knew the persons testifying, and the finding of the lower court was in favor of the testimony of the defendants in error upon this point. The weight of the evidence, aside from the credibility of the witnesses, is undoubtedly with defendants in error upon this question, and, as to the credibility of the witnesses, the lower court was in better position to act than this court is.

Plaintiffs alleged that they did not learn of the judgment against them in the Bank of Ames case until some time after it was rendered; that they learned that an order of sale had been issued for the sale of their property under the decree of foreclosure; that plaintiff Henry Lehr went to see the said T. H. Grennell to find out why judgment had been taken against them, and what was meant by the order of sale; that Grennell told him (Lehr) that it was necessary to take the judgment and to sell the property under the foreclosure, and for the bank or himself to buy the property in, in order to defeat the judgment lien of the Bank of Ames upon the real property involved; that after the property should be sold under the judgment and bought in by the bank or himself, it would be deeded back to Mrs. Lehr, clear of the judgment lien of the Bank of Ames. Plaintiffs further claim that at the time of this understanding with Grennell, and at the time of the foreclosure sale, the judgment against plaintiffs, under which the foreclosure sale was being had, had been fully paid and satisfied; that plaintiffs waived their objections to the judgment and to the foreclosure, regardless of the fact that the judgment had been paid, as an acquiescence in the proposal of Grennell to conclude the foreclosure proceeding for the purpose of getting the land back into the name of Mrs. Lehr, free of the judgment lien of the Bank of Ames. The evidence that the judgment had been satisfied was controverted; but, if this contention of plaintiffs is conceded to be true, then this court would not be justified in interfering with the judgment of the lower court in this case, for the reason that plaintiffs did not come into court in this cause with clean hands. The procuring of the sale, confirmation thereof, and sheriff's deed, for the purpose of satisfying a judgment which had already been satisfied, would have been a fraud upon the court and upon the Bank of Ames; and, if the Lehrs agreed to, or acquiesced in, any such plan, and the execution of this plan resulted in the loss of their property by reason of the failure of the other party to stand by his fraudulent agreement, they should not be heard to complain in equity. Under the testimony of Lehr himself, he learned of the judgment in the Bank of Ames case prior to the foreclosure sale, and acquiesced therein, and agreed to the foreclosure sale, for the purpose of the accomplishment of fraud upon another; and equity will not now hear him say that the judgment had been satisfied.

Plaintiffs contended that they were entitled to much larger credits upon the mortgage indebtedness, which was the subject-matter of the judgment in the Bank of Ames case, than they were allowed by the judgment in that case, setting up this contention in support of their allegations of fraud in the obtaining of that judgment. The principal testimony upon this point and upon the supporting allegation that the judgment was paid before the foreclosure sale was given by the plaintiff Henry Lehr and by his son, Henry Lehr, Jr. Their testimony covered transactions with the Citizens' State Bank and Grennell running through the course of a long term of years. They kept no books, but attempted to give from memory a list of numerous sums of money obtained from the bank through the course of a number of years, and of a great number of sums of money paid by them to the bank during such time. This class of testimony was necessarily vague and uncertain, and upon cross-examination the Lehrs were brought to admit various inaccuracies in their statements from memory. For instance, there was testimony by them of one payment of $800 to the bank during the year 1909, in which testimony it was conclusively shown by other evidence that they were either mistaken or misrepresented the facts. As against this class of evidence, the books of original entry of the bank and loan company were in evidence, and the testimony on the part of the defendants, supported by these books, was definite and certain and of such character that some definite conclusion might be drawn from it.

As hereinabove stated, after a careful reading and consideration of the evidence, we arrive at the conclusion that the judgment and decree of the lower court is fully sustained by the weight of the evidence.

The judgment of the lower court should be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

BURTON v. DOYLE et al. (No. 7887.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. Replevin 🔑49 — Sheriffs and Constables 🔑157(4)—Redelivery Bond—Liability on Official Bond.

The redelivery bond in an action of replevin before a justice of the peace, provided for in section 5403, Rev. Laws 1910, must be taken by the officer levying the writ of replevin, and a redelivery bond taken and approved by a constable, who did not levy the writ of replevin, and who has not, as an officer, succeeded to the possession of the property under said writ, is not taken by said constable in the performance of his official duties. His approval thereof is of no effect, and imposes no liability upon his official bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Replevin, Cent. Dig. §§ 180–185; Sheriffs and Constables, Cent. Dig. §§ 359–364, 370, 371.]

2. Trial 🔑142—Demurrer to Evidence.

Where the evidence of plaintiff, together with such inferences and conclusions as may reasonably be drawn therefrom, does not warrant a recovery against the defendant, a demurrer to the evidence is properly sustained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 337.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from Superior Court, Muskogee County; H. C. Thurman, Judge.

Action of replevin by Chistel Burton against John Doyle and another. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

See, also, 150 Pac. 711.

Brook & Brook, of Muskogee, for plaintiff in error. W. W. Momyer, of Muskogee, for defendants in error.

RUMMONS, C. This is an action by the plaintiff in error against the defendant in error, John Doyle, a constable, and the surety upon his official bond, to recover damages sustained by plaintiff in error because of a breach of the conditions of said official bond. The parties will be hereinafter designated as they appear in the court below. Plaintiff's petition alleges that a writ of replevin was issued to the defendant Doyle in an action, pending in a justice of the peace court of Muskogee county, commanding him to take from the defendant in said action one cow, of the value of $40; that the defendant Doyle, in obedience to said writ, seized and took into his custody said cow, but failed and refused to deliver said cow to plaintiff; that defendant recovered in the action in the justice of the peace court, and that said judgment became final; that plaintiff demanded of the defendant Doyle the delivery of said cow, or her value, but that the said Doyle refused to deliver said cow to plaintiff, or to pay the value thereof to plaintiff; that execution was issued upon the judgment rendered in the justice of the peace court, and returned "No property found"; and that plaintiff has recovered nothing by reason of said suit. The petition alleges that by reason of said facts the conditions of the official bond were broken and plaintiff was damaged. The defendant answered, denying generally the allegations of the petition, but admitting the execution of the bond, the pendency of the suit in the justice of the peace court, and the recovery of judgment therein by plaintiff, and denying specifically all liability to plaintiff. At the conclusion of the evidence on behalf of plaintiff, the defendants demurred thereto, which demurrer was sustained by the trial court, and the plaintiff saved exceptions to the ruling of the trial court upon said demurrer. Motion for a new trial having been duly filed and overruled by the court, and exception to such ruling by plaintiff duly saved, plaintiff brings this proceeding in error to reverse the action of the court below.

Under several assignments of error the plaintiff presents for review the action of the trial court in sustaining the demurrer to the evidence of plaintiff. To sustain the issues on the part of plaintiff, the guardian of plaintiff was offered as a witness, who testified to making demand upon the defendant Doyle for the return of the cow, or her value, which was admitted to be the sum of $40, and that neither the cow, nor her value, nor any part thereof, was ever recovered by the plaintiff. Plaintiff also introduced the docket of the justice of the peace, before whom the replevin action was tried, the writ of replevin, and the return thereof, and a redelivery bond, executed by the defendant in the replevin action. The docket shows that the writ of replevin was issued to Will Doyle, constable. The return upon the writ of replevin shows that it was served by Will Doyle, constable, by taking into his possession the cow described therein, and that, upon the execution of a redelivery bond by the defendant in replevin, said animal was redelivered to said defendant. The redelivery bond shows that it was taken and approved by the defendant Doyle. The defendant Doyle was a witness for plaintiff, and testified that he was a constable and executed the official bond sued on; that, at the time the writ of replevin was issued and served, he thought no one was working under him as deputy constable; and that Will Doyle was acting as deputy under another constable of Muskogee county. This was all the evidence in the case.

[1] We think there is no merit in this appeal, for the reason that the evidence of plaintiff does not show that the defendant Doyle received or served the writ of replevin, or that he ever had in his possession the animal sought to be recovered In fact, it appears that the writ of replevin was delivered to and served by Will Doyle, who was then acting as the deputy of another constable; so that the evidence offered by plaintiff does not tend to sustain the cause of action set out in the petition It is alleged in the petition that the defendant Doyle received the writ of replevin, and in obedience thereto seized and took into his possession the said cow, but failed and refused to deliver her to the plaintiff No connection is shown by the evidence between Will Doyle, who is shown to have taken the cow, and the defendant Doyle. The redelivery bond taken by defendant Doyle was taken without authority, since he was not the officer who served the writ. Section 5403, R. L. 1910, provides:

> "If, within twenty-four hours after service of the copy of the summons, there is executed, by one or more sufficient sureties of the defendant, to be approved by the constable, an undertaking to the plaintiff, in not less than double the amount of the value of the property, as stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff, to the effect that the defendant will deliver the property to the plaintiff if such delivery be adjudged, and will pay all costs and damages that may be awarded against him, the constable shall return the property to the defendant. If such undertaking be not given within twenty-four hours after the service of the order, the constable shall deliver the property to the plaintiff."

From this section it is apparent that in an action of replevin before a justice of the peace the redelivery bond must be taken by the officer levying the writ, or by an officer who has succeeded to the possession of the property under said writ, since he is the only one who can return the property to the defendant if the redelivery bond be executed, or deliver it to plaintiff upon a failure to execute such bond. The redelivery bond, therefore, in this case was not taken by the defendant Doyle in the performance of his official duties, and his approval thereof was of no effect, and he is not liable upon his official bond therefor. Taylor v. Morgan, 43 Okl. 142, 141 Pac. 679, and cases there cited.

[2] Nor does the plaintiff in this action seek to recover upon any failure or neglect of duty by the defendant Doyle in the taking of said redelivery bond. While it is argued in the brief of plaintiff that said redelivery bond was worthless, yet it is not so alleged in the petition, nor is there any evidence to that effect in the record. Nor does it appear that the plaintiff excepted to the sufficiency of the sureties upon said redelivery bond, as provided by section 5404, Rev. Laws 1910, and therefore all objection to the sufficiency of said sureties was waived by him.

The plaintiff having failed to produce any evidence at the trial warranting a recovery against the defendant Doyle and the surety on his official bond, the demurrer of the defendants to the evidence of plaintiff was properly sustained, and the judgment of the court below should be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

CLEVELAND COUNTY v. OKLAHOMA SANITARIUM CO. (No. 7535.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑407(1)—SUMMONS IN ERROR—FORM.

A summons in error is required to be served as in the commencement of an action; and where the statute points out a particular method of serving process upon a domestic corporation, such method is exclusive and must be followed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 2120, 2128, 2129, 2131, 2132.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 3. Appeal from County Court, Cleveland County; B. F. Wolf, Judge.

Proceeding by Cleveland County, by and through its County Commissioners for and on behalf of the County and the State of Oklahoma and J. P. Whittinghill, Tax Inquisitor in and for said County, against the Oklahoma Sanitarium Company (now Oklahoma State Hospital). From a judgment of the county court on appeal from a dismissal by the county treasurer dismissing the proceeding, the plaintiffs bring error. Motion to quash the summons in error sustained.

W. L. Eagleton, of Norman, and J. P. Whittinghill, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. Burford, Robertson, Hoffman & Burford, of Oklahoma City, for defendant in error.

BLEAKMORE, C. On October 1, 1914, the Oklahoma Sanitarium Company was notified by registered letter by the county treasurer of Cleveland county that information had been filed in his office by the tax ferret that certain of its property subject to taxation had not been assessed, and that after ten days from the receipt of such notice any written protests submitted by it, together with the recommendations of the tax ferret, would be considered, etc. The registry return receipt for such letter, dated October 7, 1914, was by "D. W. Griffin, Supt." Upon hearing before the county treasurer on April 8, 1915, the proceeding was dismissed; whereupon an appeal was had to the county court of Cleveland county, wherein, on May 21, 1915, by judgment of that court, the proceedings were again dismissed, to review which the cause has been lodged in this court by petition in error with case-made attached.

There was no waiver of summons in error; but such summons was issued out of this court commanding the sheriff of Cleveland county to notify the Oklahoma Sanitarium Company (its name being now changed to "Oklahoma State Hospital") of the filing of the petition in error, etc., returnable on or before July 31, 1915. Upon this summons the following return was made by the sheriff:

> "I received the within summons in error July 20, 1915, and served the same by delivering a true copy of the original now in my possession to Dr. D. W. Griffin at the Oklahoma State Hospital at Norman, Okl. I cannot find P. J. Whittinghill in my county this July 26, 1915.
> "Claud Pickard, Sheriff,
> "By L. P. Barker, Deputy."

Defendant in error, appearing specially and only for the purpose, has moved to quash the service of summons on the following grounds:

> "First. Said summons was not served upon any person service upon whom would bind the defendant or bring it into court.
>
> "Second. The return of the sheriff upon such summons in error does not show upon its face that service was made upon any person service upon whom would bind this defendant or bring it into court."

The motion is supported by the affidavit of D. W. Griffin, wherein he states:

> "That the Oklahoma Sanitarium Company was a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Oklahoma, and for a period of several years said corporation owned, maintained, and operated a sanitarium and hospital at Norman Okl., for the care and treatment of insane persons, and for several years affiant was in the employ of said cor> poration as its superintendent and principal physician in charge of said hospital.

>
> "That the charter or articles of incorporation of said Oklahoma Sanitarium Company expired by limitation on the 24th day of November, 1914, since which time it has never attempted to do or transact any business; that the last meeting of the stockholders and directors of said corporation was held on the 20th day of November, 1914, at the office of the company in the city of Norman, in Cleveland county, Okl., at which time and meeting all of the assets and property of said corporation was sold, transferred, and delivered to the Oklahoma State Hospital, a corporation, duly organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the state of Oklahoma; that all of the assets and moneys of said corporation were distributed to its stockholders, and there has never been any meeting of the former stockholders or directors of said corporation since said dates, and said corporation became and was then and there dissolved; that said Oklahoma Sanitarium Company never at any time changed or attempted to change its name, but carried on and transacted business under and in its chartered name, until said charter expired at the end of the 20 years for which it was originally incorporated; that the Oklahoma State Hospital, a corporation, thereafter sold, conveyed, transferred, and delivered all of its property, real and personal, the same being largely the property formerly acquired and owned by the Oklahoma Sanitarium Company, to the state of Oklahoma, and the state now maintains, supports, and operates said hospital as a state hospital for the insane at public expense.
>
> "That affiant is now, and was at the time said summons was attempted to be served upon him, employed by the state of Oklahoma as superintendent and physician in charge of said state hospital; that he was not at the time said summons or copy was left with him and service thereof attempted to be made upon him an employé, officer, or agent of the defunct dissolved Oklahoma Sanitarium Company, nor the agent of or in the employ of the Oklahoma State Hospital, a corporation; that he has no right or authority to appear for or represent either of said corporations. * * *"

By R. L. 1910, it is provided:

> "4715. A summons against a corporation may be served upon the president, mayor, chairman of the board of directors, or trustees, or other chief officer, or upon an agent duly appointed to receive service of process; or, if its chief officer is not found in the county, upon its cashier, treasurer, secretary, clerk or managing agent; or, if none of the aforesaid officers can be found, by a copy left at the office or usual place of business of such corporation, with the person having charge thereof."
>
> "5238. The proceedings to obtain such reversal, vacation or modification, shall be by petition in error, filed in the supreme court, setting forth the errors complained of; and thereupon a summons shall issue and be served, or publication made, as in the commencement of an action. A service on the attorney of record, in the original case, shall be sufficient."

It appears from the foregoing affidavit and return of summons that defendant in error is a domestic corporation; that service of such summons was not had upon its president, chairman of the board of directors, or trustees, or other chief officer, or upon an agent appointed to receive service of process, and it does not appear that its chief officer was not found in the county, or that service was had upon its cashier, treasurer, secretary, clerk, or managing agent, or that none of such officers could be found, and that copy of such summons was left at the office or usual place of business of such corporation with the person having charge thereof. It is obvious that the method of serving process upon a corporation as in the commencement of an action specifically prescribed by the statute was not followed in this case.

In Oklahoma Fire Insurance Co. v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., 34 Okl. 149, 125 Pac. 734, in which the provisions of section 5604, Comp. Laws 1909, being the same as section 4715, R. L. 1910, supra, were examined and construed, it was held:

> "Where the statute points out a particular method of serving process upon a domestic corporation, such method is exclusive and must be followed."

It is an elementary principle that a court acquires jurisdiction of a party, where there is no appearance, only by service of process in the manner prescribed by law.

The motion to quash the summons in error is sustained.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

FARMERS' STATE BANK OF TEMPLE v. ANDRUSS. (No. 4837.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. June 13, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

JUDGMENT 🔑622(1)—RES JUDICATA—ITEM OF BANK DEPOSIT.

A bank brought suit upon a bill of exchange, alleging a certain balance due thereon after allowing certain credits, and the defendant answered by general and special denial and set up other matters by way of counterclaim; judgment was rendered for defendant. Thereafter the defendant brought suit to recover on an item which had been admitted by the plaintiff as a credit in the former suit. Held, that the former judgment was a bar to an action upon said item.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1136.]

Error from County Court, Comanche County; W. J. Ray, Judge.

Suit by E. H. Andruss against the Farmers' State Bank of Temple, Okl. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Hamon & Ellis, of Lawton, for plaintiff in error. W. C. Henderson, of Lawton, for defendant in error.

HARDY, J. E. H. Andruss brought suit against the Farmers' State Bank upon a deposit made by him in the Farmers' National Bank of Temple, which had been reorganized as the Farmers' State Bank. The bank answered, and alleged that in litigation theretofore had between the parties the matters involved were adjudicated and determined, and pleaded the judgment therein as a bar to plaintiff's action. Only the pleadings in the former case were introduced in evidence, from which it appears that the Farmers' National Bank sued Andruss upon a bill of exchange in the sum of $8,690.15, less certain credits including the following: "8-7. Dep. Balance, $436.39"—which is the item in controversy. The bill of exchange was attached to the petition, and plaintiff expressly admitted said item as a credit upon the amount claimed to be due. Andruss filed answer in that litigation, containing a general and specific denial and specifically denying the execution of the bill of exchange as sued on, but alleging and admitting the execution of a bill of exchange upon the same date for the same amount in favor of the bank, and pleading that said bill of exchange had been altered, in that it was made to provide therein for interest after date when the original instrument contained no such provision, and as a further defense alleged that he had become indebted to the bank for money advanced to enable him to buy cotton, the tickets for which were delivered to the bank and the cotton shipped to certain cotton brokers at Houston, Tex.; that between the date of said draft and the 6th day of July, 1908, he had received certain credits thereon, and on said day the true amount owing to the bank was $2,096.45, and that by the sale of said cotton he became entitled to an additional credit of $2,446.52, which would extinguish the balance due upon said bill of exchange and leave the bank indebted to him in the sum of $350.07, for which judgment was prayed. Trial in that case resulted in a verdict and judgment for defendant, Andruss, in the sum of $194.07, which amount was satisfied and paid by the Farmers' State Bank.

The sole question presented is whether the item of $436.39 was in issue and was adjudicated in the former suit. To determine this question we are confined to an examination of the pleadings and verdict, for that is all of the record in the former case before us. The petition of the bank in that case set out the bill of exchange with certain credits, including the item in controversy, and prayed judgment for the balance after allowing said credit. Counsel say that the answer of defendant, Andruss, contained a general denial, and set up a state of facts which showed that, on August 7, 1908, the date the deposit was applied by the bank as a credit upon said bill of exchange, Andruss was not indebted to the bank in any sum, but instead the bank was indebted to him, and because in his answer he enumerates certain credits properly applied upon this indebtedness by the bank, and said deposit was not included in the list, when the jury rendered a verdict in his favor this was a finding that said sum had been wrongfully charged off by the bank. The mere fact that his answer contained a general and specific denial was not a disclaimer of the credit allowed by the bank. Ebert v. Long, 43 Minn. 235, 45 N. W. 226; Abbott v. Stevens, 117 Mass. 340. If in fact Andruss was indebted to the bank and had on deposit in the bank a sum of money to his credit, the bank had the right to appropriate the sum on deposit to his credit and apply the same to the satisfaction and discharge of any indebtedness owing by him to the bank. Walters National Bank v. Bantock, 41 Okl. 153, 137 Pac. 717, L. R. A. 1915C, 531. The pleadings clearly apprised the defendant that the sum in controversy had been applied as a credit upon the amount alleged to be due, and that the amount claimed by the bank had been reduced to that extent. Such credit having been applied by the bank upon the amount claimed to be due would naturally be treated by the jury as a credit thereon, and would be considered by them as an extinguishment of the bank's demand to the amount of such deposit in the adjustment of the respective claims of the litigants, and for defendant under those circumstances to permit the trial to proceed in the face of such allegations, without expressly disclaiming said credit and seeking recovery against the bank for the amount thereof, would warrant the jury in considering said sum as a credit upon plaintiff's original demand, and would authorize the court and jury to assume that defendant had acquiesced in such application and consented to the allowance of such credit in his favor. Ebert v. Long, supra. The jury did not adopt entirely the theory of either party, but the verdict evidences the fact that there was an adjustment of the respective claims of each. This item, having been allowed as a credit upon the plaintiff's demand, was clearly within the issues made by the pleadings, and the judgment was a determination of all of the issues within the pleadings as framed, and constitutes a bar to an action by either party thereon.

It is said, however, that Andruss made no claim in his cross-petition against the bank for said sum, and therefore said item was not involved and was not determined. If he intended to disavow said credit as allowed by plaintiff and to claim said amount over against the bank, it was his duty in that case, after the bank had appropriated the same to the payment of its alleged claim, to present in that litigation any right or claim which he might have had and which he now urges for a recovery of that item. Ebert v. Long, supra; Abbott v. Stevens, supra.

For the reasons stated, the plea of res judicata was well taken, and the judgment is reversed. All the Justices concur, except THACKER, J., absent.

FT. SMITH & W. R. CO. v. BLACK et al.

(No. 5608.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. STATUTES 🔑64(3)—PARTIAL INVALIDITY—EFFECT.

Because a law which was intended to embrace two classes of persons or officials is void as to one class, because the Legislature had no authority to legislate with reference to that class, it does not follow that it is void as to the other class with reference to whom the Legislature did have authority to legislate. Hence it is held that, although the act of the territorial Legislature of 1897 (chapter 15, § 11), which prescribed the fees to be charged by the territorial district clerks, was void as to them because they were federal officers, it was not void as to probate judges, who by the same act were directed to charge the fees prescribed for district clerks for like services.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 60, 195.]

2. OFFICERS 🔑94—FEES—STATUTE.

Where a portion of the fees in a case were earned under a statute that was in force at the time the case was filed, but, before the case was disposed of, a new statute became effective, the official must charge the fees under the statute that was in force at the time each particular item of service was performed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. §§ 132, 133, 136–138, 140, 141.]

Error from County Court, Logan County; J. C. Strang, Judge.

Action by the Fort Smith & Western Railroad Company against W. J. Black and others. Actions dismissed with costs, motion to retax costs overruled, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded, with directions.

C. E. Warner and H. P. Warner, both of Ft. Smith, Ark., for plaintiff in error. John Adams, of Guthrie, for defendants in error.

BRETT, J. This case comes up on an appeal from an order of the county court of Logan county, overruling a motion filed by plaintiff in error to retax costs. The plaintiff in error on and about November 13, 1907, filed in the county court of Logan county something over 300 cases against different parties seeking to recover on certain "bonus notes." The cases seem to have remained on the docket until 1912, when they were all dismissed. The county judge in these cases taxed the costs in accordance with the schedule of fees allowed district clerks by the federal statutes. The plaintiff in error objected to the cost being taxed under this schedule, and filed motion to retax same. This motion was overruled, an appeal has been perfected, and a stipulation entered into that the costs in all of the other cases shall abide the decision in this case.

[1] The territorial Legislature of 1897 (chapter 15, § 2, 1897 Session Laws; Wilson's Rev. Laws, § 2993; Snyder's Com. Laws, § 3367) passed a fee bill prescribing the fees to be charged by district clerks of the territory, and in the same act provided the fees to be charged by probate judges, in probate matters; and in section 11 of this same act provided:

> "That whenever the probate judge of any county shall be compelled to perform any services for which no fees are fixed by law, he shall be entitled to receive therefor the same fees as may be by law allowed to district clerks for like services."

There was also a provision allowing probate judges, for any services performed in matters within the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, the same fees as were allowed justices of the peace for like services. Section 1884, Wilson's Rev. & Ann. Statutes 1903. Thus it is clear that by section 11, c. 15, 1897 Session Laws, the intention of the Legislature was to allow probate judges, for like services, the identical fees provided by that chapter for district clerks. But the territorial Supreme Court, in Pitts v. Logan County, 3 Okl. 719, 41 Pac. 584, held that the district clerks of the territory were federal officers, and therefore their compensation and fees were fixed by Congress, and that the territorial Legislature transcended its authority in attempting to regulate their fees; that therefore the act was void, and the clerks of the district court were entitled to the fees prescribed by the federal statutes. And the county judge in the case at bar insists that, since the court held that district clerks are entitled to the fees prescribed by the federal statutes, under section 11, c. 15, of the 1897 Session Laws, above quoted, he was also entitled to charge the same fees, and did so in each of the cases involved in this controversy.

But we think this contention cannot be maintained. The territorial Legislature had no authority to regulate or prescribe the fees or compensation of the territorial district clerks, because they were federal officers; but it did have authority to prescribe the compensation and fees of the probate judges, since they were territorial officers. And in providing a schedule of fees, which they intended should govern the charges of the district clerks, and then by providing in the same act that the compensation of the probate judges for like services should be the same as prescribed for district clerks, did they not fix the fees to be charged by probate judges for that particular class of work?

We are not unmindful of the broad language of section 11, supra, which provides:

> "That whenever the probate judge of any county shall be compelled to perform any services for which no fees are fixed by law, he shall be entitled to receive therefor the same fees as may be by law allowed to district clerks for like services."

But, we think, this provision contemplated only the existing act, and such changes as might in the future be made by the Legislature itself in the schedule of fees of the district clerks. And while it says they "shall be entitled to receive the same fees as may be by law allowed district clerks for like services," they had in mind only such laws as the Legislature itself might enact. And as stated in Lewis' Sutherland, Statutory Construction (2d Ed.) vol. 2, § 363:

> "If a statute is valid it is to have effect according to the purpose and intent of the lawmaker. The intent is the vital part, the essence of the law, and the primary rule of construction is to ascertain and give effect to that intent. 'The intention of the Legislature in enacting a law is the law itself, and must be enforced when ascertained, although it may not be consistent with the strict letter of the statute. Courts will not follow the letter of a statute when it leads away from the true intent and purpose of the Legislature and to conclusions inconsistent with the general purpose of the act.' "

And the very purpose of this act, under consideration, was to fix another and different schedule of fees for district clerks than that which was prescribed by the federal statutes, and at the same time to make the fees for probate judges for like services the same as the Legislature had or might fix for district clerks. Black on Interpretation of Laws (2d Ed.) c. 3, § 24, says:

> "The object of all interpretation and construction of statutes is to ascertain the meaning and intention of the Legislature, to the end that the same may be enforced."

36 Cyc. 1106–1110, states that:

> "The great fundamental rule in construing statutes is to ascertain and give effect to the intention of the Legislature, * * * and in pursuance of the general object of enforcing the intention of the Legislature is the rule that the spirit or reason of the law will prevail over its letter. * * * Every statute must be construed with reference to the object intended to be accomplished by it."

Then, was it the intention of the Legislature that the fees of probate judges should be governed by federal statute, or by the schedule prescribed by the Legislature itself? And because a law which was intended to embrace two classes of persons or officers is void as to one class, because the Legislature had no authority to legislate with reference to that class, does it follow that it is also void as to the other class, concerning which the Legislature did have authority to legislate? We think not. And we think the Legislature by this act has as effectively prescribed the fees to be charged by probate judges for the class of services rendered by district clerks, as if that schedule had been specifically prescribed for probate judges alone, for that class of work.

It is true the territorial Supreme Court declared the act void; but this was solely on the ground that the territorial district clerks were federal officers, and that for that reason the Legislature had no authority to prescribe their compensation. The act was construed by the court from no other angle, or as affecting any one else except district clerks.

We think, beyond a doubt, that the intention of the Legislature was to make the schedule of fees prescribed by itself or succeeding Legislatures the schedule which should govern the charges of both district clerks and probate judges, in cases where their services were similar; and that that intention should control as to probate judges, since the Legislature had the right to fix and regulate their compensation.

[2] Besides, these cases were filed after the incoming of statehood, and in Board of Commissioners of Grant County v. Ernest, 45 Okl. 725, 147 Pac. 322, this court held that after statehood the federal statutes were inoperative even as to district clerks; that article 25 (Schedule), § 2, of the Constitution, which provided for extending all laws in force in the territory of Oklahoma at the time of the admission of the state into the Union, which were not repugnant to the Constitution, and which were not locally inapplicable, did not contemplate the taking over of this federal statute, prescribing the fees of district clerks; but that, as held in Bohart et al. v. Anderson, 24 Okl. 82, 103 Pac. 742, 20 Ann. Cas. 142, this statute "was inconsistent with and repugnant to the schedule to the Constitution as well as locally inapplicable, hence did not become the law of the state."

But the provisions of the territorial Legislature of 1897, which were carried forward in Wilson's Revised & Annotated Statutes of 1903 and Snyder's Compiled Laws of 1909, with reference to the fees of probate judges, were not repugnant to the Constitution or locally inapplicable, and, since these provisions made clear the legislative intent as to what the fees of probate judges should be, we think, they were extended to and remained in force in the state as to county judges after statehood until altered or repealed by law; and this was not done until the special session of 1910.

We therefore conclude that the fees earned in the case at bar prior to the 1910 act should be taxed according to the 1897 schedule, and that those earned subsequent to 1910 should be taxed according to the provisions of the 1910 act, which prescribes the fees to be charged by county courts.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to retax the costs in accordance with the views herein expressed. All the Justices concur, except MILEY, J., who concurs in the conclusion.

BARNES v. UNIVERSAL TIRE PROTECTOR CO. (No. 6355.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT 🔑199(2)—JUDGMENT NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERDICT.

In the absence of special findings, a trial court is without authority to render judgment notwithstanding the verdict, unless the same is warranted by the pleadings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 368.]

2. PLEADING 🔑343 — JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS—ACCOUNT.

Where the bill of particulars contains no allegations of the correctness of the account sued on, and is unverified, plaintiff is not entitled to judgment on the pleadings, even though a verified statement of account be attached to the bill of particulars.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 1048–1051.]

3. JUDGMENT 🔑199(3) — MOTION FOR JUDGMENT NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

A motion for judgment non obstante veredicto does not present for consideration errors in the admission of evidence or the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 367.]

Error from Superior Court, Muskogee County; Farrar L. McCain, Judge.

Suit by the Universal Tire Protector Company against George W. Barnes. Judgment for plaintiff notwithstanding a verdict, and defendant brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Franklin P. Schaffer, of Muskogee, for plaintiff in error. Mosier, Greenslade & Reynolds, of Muskogee, for defendant in error.

HARDY, J. [1] The Universal Tire Protector Company sued George W. Barnes in the justice of the peace court in Muskogee county for an amount alleged to be due upon an account. Parties will be referred to as they appeared in the trial court. Upon appeal the case was transferred to the superior court, where a trial was had to a jury, resulting in a verdict for defendant. Upon motion therefor the court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff notwithstanding the verdict, and defendant prosecutes error. Section 5140, Rev. Laws 1910, is as follows:

> "Where upon the statement in the pleadings one party is entitled by law to judgment in his favor, judgment shall be so rendered by the court, though a verdict has been found against such party."

Construing this statute, this court has held that a trial court is without jurisdiction, in the absence of special findings, to enter judgment non obstante veredicto, unless the same is warranted by the pleadings. Choctaw, O. & W. R. Co. v. Castanien et al., 23 Okl. 735, 102 Pac. 88; Whitaker & Crowder State Bank, 26 Okl. 786, 110 Pac. 776; Foster v. Leftwich, 152 Pac. 583.

It is contended, however, that the court may render such a judgment where there is an entire failure of evidence to justify the verdict in favor of the prevailing party or if the evidence shows as a matter of law that the court should have directed a verdict in favor of the losing party, and where it is not probable that a different result would be reached upon another trial. Such, however, is not the law in this state.

In Curtis & Gartside et al. v. Pigg, 39 Okl. 31, 134 Pac. 1125, Pigg sued Curtis & Gartside Company for damages alleged to have been sustained from personal injuries received as a result of negligence of the company. The company filed motion for judgment on the pleadings after verdict had been returned in plaintiff's favor, basing its motion upon section 5933, Comp. Laws 1909, which is identical with section 5140, Rev. Laws 1910. The pleadings were examined, and it was held that the court did not err in overruling such motion, the court saying:

> "This statute and the decisions cited very clearly support the contention that in certain cases a judgment may be rendered on the pleadings, although a verdict has already been rendered against the moving party. In such cases, however, it must clearly appear upon the face of the pleadings that the movant is entitled to the judgment asked for."

The question was again presented in Foster et al. v. Leftwich, 152 Pac. 583, where, after setting out the statute, it was said:

> "It therefore follows that this court is without jurisdiction, in the absence of special findings, to enter judgment non obstante veredicto, unless the same is warranted by the pleadings."

See, also, 11 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 917, and note 4.

[2] Within this rule, it becomes necessary to examine the pleadings in the case and determine whether, upon the face thereof, plaintiff was entitled to a judgment in its favor. The bill of particulars was unverified, and contains no allegation as to the correctness of the account sued upon, but attached thereto was a verified statement or invoice of the account which formed the basis of the suit. The answer contained a general denial and was verified. Upon this state of the pleadings, an issue of fact as to the existence of the account and the correctness thereof was raised which could not be determined in plaintiff's favor without evidence in support of the allegations in his bill of particulars. Myers v. First Presbyterian Church, 11 Okl. 544, 69 Pac. 874; Buchannan v. Statler & Herndon, 32 Okl. 206, 120 Pac. 658; Miners' Supply Co. v. Chestnutt Gibbons Gro. Co., 150 Pac. 686; El Reno Vitrified Brick & Tile Co. v. Raymond Co., 46 Okl. 388, 148 Pac. 1000; M., K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Lawson, 37 Okl. 322, 132 Pac. 321.

At the trial, in support of the allegations in its bill of particulars, plaintiff offered in evidence what purported to be a written order for two tire protectors sold to defendant, and defendant offered in support of his defense testimony tending to show that at the time the tire protectors were purchased he entered into an agreement with the agent of plaintiff whereby same were to be delivered to him upon trial for 30 days upon a guaranty that they would lessen blow-outs and punctures and prevent skidding and heating of tires, and, in general, save automobile tire expense and annoyance, and that, pursuant to this agreement, he received said tire protectors upon trial, and they were found not to be as represented, and by reason thereof caused him certain damage for which he claimed judgment. The court instructed the jury, however, that he was not entitled to recover upon his counterclaim, and submitted the case to the jury upon the other issues.

[3] Assuming that it was error for the court to permit parol evidence to vary or contradict the terms of the written order, that question was not raised by the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, but could only be presented by motion for a new trial.

In the absence of a demurrer to the evidence or motion for a directed verdict, the sufficiency of the evidence or motion for a directed verdict is not presented to the Supreme Court on appeal (Muskogee Elev. Trac. Co. v. Reed, 35 Okl. 334, 130 Pac. 157; Bank of Cherokee v. Sneary, 46 Okl. 186, 148 Pac. 157; Reed v. Scott, 151 Pac. 484; Oaks v. Samples, 157 Pac. 739); and plaintiff, not having properly raised that question, and not having filed motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, and having prosecuted no appeal to this court, is not in position to urge any errors occurring at the trial, unless the same be presented by the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. In reference to this proposition, the rule is that the court has no authority to entertain a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the ground that there was a failure of proof as to some essential element of the cause of action or that the verdict had been returned upon insufficient evidence to sustain it, but such a motion for the purposes thereof admits the facts found by the jury to be true, and asserts that, taking the verdict at its face, the judgment should go the other way, and cannot be treated as a motion to set aside the verdict because contrary to the evidence. Foster v. Leftwich, supra; Kirk v. Salt Lake City, 32 Utah, 143, 89 Pac. 458, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1021; Maxon v. Gates, 136 Wis. 270, 116 N. W. 758; 11 Ency. Pl. & Pr. 917, and cases cited.

The court erred in sustaining the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and rendering judgment in favor of plaintiff, and the judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to render judgment upon the verdict in favor of the defendant. All the Justices concur.

ELLIS v. MID-CONTINENT OIL & GAS CO. et al. (No. 4510.)*

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEW TRIAL 🔑99—GROUNDS IN GENERAL.

To warrant the granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, it must appear that such evidence fulfills the following requirements: (1) It must be such that it will probably change the result, if a new trial be granted. (2) It must have been discovered since the trial. (3) It must be such as could not have been discovered before the trial by the exercise of due diligence. (4) It must be material to the issue. (5) It must not be merely cumulative to the former evidence. (6) It must not be to merely impeach or contradict the former evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 201, 207.]

2. NEW TRIAL 🔑101—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE—DISCOVERY SINCE TRIAL—MOTION AFTER DECISION.

When the record discloses that before the conclusion of the trial newly discovered evidence and the names of some of the witnesses and the places of residence of the other witnesses who would produce such evidence came to the knowledge of appellant, and that appellant before the conclusion of the trial moved the court to reopen the case and permit appellant to produce such witnesses and offer such newly discovered evidence, which motion was by the court overruled, and when the record further discloses that appellant failed to file motion for a new trial within the statutory time, such evidence is not newly discovered since the trial and will not warrant the granting of a new trial upon that ground.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 205, 206.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Muskogee County; R. P. De Graffenried, Judge.

Action by Jeff D. Ellis against the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Company and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Malcolm E. Rosser, of Muskogee, and William S. Cochran, of Tulsa, for plaintiff in error. Geo. S. Ramsey, of Muskogee, Edgar A. De Meules, of Tulsa, and Sol H. Kauffman, of Muskogee, for defendants in error.

RUMMONS, C. This action was commenced in the district court of Muskogee county by the plaintiff in error, hereinafter styled the plaintiff, against the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Company, defendant in error, hereinafter styled the defendant, and others, to cancel an oil and gas lease upon a tract of land in Muskogee county. The cause was tried to the court without the intervention of a jury, and, after the evidence had been submitted and the cause argued to the court, was taken under advisement by the trial court. Thereafter, and before the trial court had made its findings of fact or rendered judgment in the cause, the plaintiff filed a motion praying the court to reopen the cause and permit him to offer newly discovered material testimony, supporting the motion by affidavits. Upon the hearing of this motion, the court, upon the proffer by defendant that the court might consider the affidavits filed on the motion to reopen the cause, in connection with the evidence, overruled said motion to which plaintiff excepted. Thereafter, on June 4, 1912, the court made its findings of fact, finding against the plaintiff and in favor of the defendant, and ordering that judgment go against the plaintiff for costs, to which plaintiff excepted. On June 20, 1912, formal journal entry of judgment of the court was entered. Thereafter, on June 22d, plaintiff filed his motion for a new trial, supported by affidavits as to newly discovered evidence. This motion was overruled by the court, to which plaintiff excepted and prosecutes this proceeding in error to reverse the action of the trial court.

---

*Rehearing denied July 24, 1917.

The sole assignment of error argued in the brief of counsel for plaintiff is that the court erred in denying the motion of plaintiff for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence.

Plaintiff founded his cause of action for the cancellation of the oil and gas lease of defendant upon the ground that George Washington, a full-blood Creek Indian to whom the land in controversy was allotted, was, at the time of the execution of the oil and gas lease under which defendant claims, a minor, and therefore said oil and gas lease was null and void. The only question of fact at issue between plaintiff and defendant was the date of the birth of said George Washington. The evidence of plaintiff tended to show that the allottee was born in the year 1887 or 1888, while the evidence of the defendant tended to show that he was born in 1885. The oil and gas lease was executed in January, 1907. The father of the allottee, a witness for defendant, fixed the date of the birth of the allottee as the year following his return to the Creek Nation from the Cherokee Nation, which return he said occurred the year following the Esparhecher, or Green Peach War in the Creek Nation, to avoid which, as a good pacifist, he had fled to the Cherokee Nation. The evidence of defendant fixed the date of the war as the year 1883.

The newly discovered evidence upon which plaintiff relies for a new trial is the evidence of the father of the allottee and four other witnesses, one of whom was a witness for plaintiff at the trial, to the effect that the father of the allottee did not return to the Creek Nation from the Cherokee Nation until after the grading for the Iron Mountain Railway was in progress, and that the allottee had not been born at the time of his return. It was agreed that the grading of the Iron Mountain Railway was done in the years 1886 and 1887.

It is argued by counsel for defendant that the action of the trial court in overruling plaintiff's motion for a new trial was right, for the reason that the evidence said to have been newly discovered was cumulative and would not probably result in changing the decision of the court; that the showing of diligence by the plaintiff was insufficient; and that the evidence had not been discovered since the trial concluded.

In the view we take of this case, we deem it unnecessary to determine whether or not the evidence is merely cumulative, or would probably change the decision of the trial court, or whether the showing of plaintiff's diligence was sufficient. It is apparent, from the showing made by plaintiff in support of his motion to reopen the case and offer newly discovered evidence, that plaintiff knew of this evidence before the trial had been concluded by a decision upon the facts by the trial court.

Plaintiff filed his motion to reopen the hearing and permit him to introduce newly discovered evidence on March 28, 1912. This motion was supported by affidavits, in which plaintiff says that:

> "He is reliably informed, and believes that he will be able to prove by Indians whose whereabouts he has ascertained, but whose names he is unable to give, that at the time Peter Washington came to the Creek Nation from the Cherokee Nation, the Kansas & Arkansas Valley Railway, now known as the Iron Mountain, was in progress of construction, which construction was not authorized by act of Congress or commenced until after June 1, 1886, and that Peter Washington and those Indians that came about the same time crossed the line of said railway near the present site of Braggs, Okl., while the roadbed of said railway was being graded and constructed."

Plaintiff's affidavit further showed that Peter Washington would testify to the same state of facts. Plaintiff in his affidavit in support of his motion for a new trial gives the names of Indian witnesses who would testify to the state of facts above set forth, and their affidavits were filed in support of the motion for a new trial. Plaintiff in his affidavit says that "he did not learn reliably of the testimony of said witnesses until June 21, 1912."

[1] It is a well-settled rule of law that motions for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence are not viewed with favor. It has been held by this court, in the case of Vickers v. Phillip Carey Co., 151 Pac. 1023, L. R. A. 1916C, 1155, that, in order to warrant the granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, the evidence must fulfill the following requirements: First. It must be such as will probably change the result if a new trial be granted. Second. It must be discovered since the trial. Third. It must be such as could not have been discovered before the trial by the exercise of due diligence. Fourth. It must be material to the issue. Fifth. It must not be merely cumulative to the former evidence. Sixth. It must not be to merely impeach or contradict the former evidence.

First National Bank of Taloga v. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank, 161 Pac. 1063.

[2] If it be admitted that the evidence upon which plaintiff relies is not merely cumulative or impeaching, and that plaintiff could not with due diligence have discovered it before the trial, and that it would probably change the result, yet the showing made by plaintiff fails to comply with the second requisite for the granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, in that it does not appear that the evidence claimed to have been newly discovered had been discovered since the trial. In fact, the records show that it had been discovered before the trial had finally ended in a decision by the trial court.

It is said by the Supreme Court of the territory, in Watkins v. United States, 5 Okl. 729, 50 Pac. 88:

> "To be grounds for a new trial, the knowledge of what the witness would be expected to testify must have come to the defendant after it was too late to be procured and used upon the trial."

In McCants v. Thompson, 27 Okl. 706, 115 Pac. 600, this court says:

> "The facts set out in the affidavits in support of the motion for a new trial appear to have been known to the defendant at the time of the trial. If he was surprised, he should have asked for a continuance or delay of the case, in order to properly make his defense. We cannot say that the trial court erred in refusing to grant a new trial on account of surprise or newly discovered evidence."

In First National Bank of Taloga v. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank, supra, this court says:

> "As we view it, the existence of the evidence itself, as distinguished from the whereabouts of the witness, must have been discovered since the trial in order to authorize a new trial."

Plaintiff very properly, upon the discovery of the facts set out in his affidavit, moved the court to permit him to offer additional evidence to establish such facts. This motion was overruled by the court, but no complaint as to such ruling is made in the brief of counsel for plaintiff, nor could any complaint of such ruling be considered by us, because as stated in the brief of counsel for plaintiff, and as appears from the record, the counsel for plaintiff, who tried the cause below, failed to file a motion for a new trial within three days after the trial court had made his findings of fact and rendered his decision in the cause.

The plaintiff had his day in court, and, having waived any error that may have been committed by the court in refusing his application to offer additional evidence by failing to move for a new trial within the statutory time, he cannot now set up the same evidence which he offered to submit to the court in his motion to reopen the case as newly discovered evidence warranting the granting of a new trial, because such evidence had been discovered by him and he had full knowledge of it long before the trial was finally concluded.

The judgment of the trial court should therefore be affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

ÆTNA LIFE INS. CO. v. KRAMER et al.

(No. 5782.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR ⟹110—JURISDICTION OF SUPREME COURT — ORDER OVERRULING MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—STATUTE.

Under the second subdivision of section 5236, Rev. Laws 1910, this court has jurisdiction to reverse, vacate, or modify an order overruling motion for new trial, notwithstanding the judgment has not been entered on the verdict, where there is a verdict in a case tried to a jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 740–748.]

2. INSURANCE ⟹73 — STATUTES — CONSTRUCTION.

Sections 3420–3434, inclusive, Rev. Laws of Oklahoma 1910, do not fix the contractual relations between insurance companies doing business in the state and their agents, but this is regulated by contract. The statutes above were not enacted to regulate the relations between insurance companies and their agents, but for the protection of the insuring public.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 99, 100.]

3. TRIAL ⟹29(3)—POWER OF TRIAL COURT—REPRIMAND OF WITNESS.

Trial courts in the exercise of their judicial prerogative have a right to reprimand a witness who, contrary to the admonition of the court, persists in making voluntary statements not elicited by his examination. The admonition, however, must not be done by word, sign, token, or gesture that would indicate the opinion of the trial court as to the merits of the case, or the truth or falsity of the testimony of the witness reprimanded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 82.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 2. Error from County Court, Tulsa County; Conn Linn, Judge.

Action by the Ætna Life Insurance Company, a corporation, against Phil Kramer, John T. Kramer, and Otto Kramer, doing business under the firm name and style of Kramer Bros. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Martin & Moss, of Tulsa, for plaintiff in error. Rice & Lyons, of Tulsa, for defendants in error.

WEST, C. Plaintiff in error attached to their brief a motion to dismiss appeal in this cause, because the case-made fails to contain any final judgment of the court rendering judgment for defendants. The record shows verdict, motion for new trial, and judgment overruling motion for new trial, and provides for an appeal, giving the time to make and serve case-made and providing for a supersedeas. Under the law announced in case of Roof v. Franks, 26 Okl. 392, 110 Pac. 1098, and Neoma P. Phillips v. W. D. Oliver, 155 Pac. 586, this court has jurisdiction to review, vacate, or modify an order overruling motion for new trial, where there is a verdict in a case tried to a jury, notwithstanding a judgment has not been entered on the verdict, and motion to dismiss will be overruled.

[1] This is a suit instituted by the Ætna Life Insurance Company, plaintiff in error, who will hereinafter be designated plaintiff, to recover from Kramer Bros., defendants in error, who will hereinafter be designated as defendants, money alleged by plaintiff to be due it on account of premiums collected by the defendants. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants were acting as its agents under a verbal appointment made by C. H. Verschoyle, a general agent of the plaintiff. Defendants denied that they were the agents of plaintiff, and alleged that they were acting as agents or brokers for Verschoyle & Co., general agents of plaintiff, in the matter of soliciting and collecting the insurance in controversy, and that they had settled in full with Verschoyle & Co.

[2] There are only two issues presented by the pleadings and argued in the brief by plaintiff: First. As to whether or not defendants were, as a matter of law, agents of the plaintiff at the time complained of. Second. As to the misconduct of the trial judge in directing certain remarks to witness of plaintiff while on the stand. We will now consider the first question presented by the pleadings and evidence. Plaintiff contends that as a matter of law, the defendants Kramer Bros., were the agents of the plaintiff under and by virtue of the statutes of the state regulating insurance companies, and particularly section 3431, Revised Laws of the State of Oklahoma of 1910, which is as follows:

> "Sec. 3431. Who Deemed an Agent. Any person who for compensation solicits insurance on behalf of any insurance company, or transmits for a person other than himself an application for a policy of insurance to or from such company, or offers or assumes to act in the negotiating of such insurance, shall be an insurance agent within the intent of this article, and shall thereby become liable to all the duties, requirements, liabilities and penalties to which an agent of such company is subject."

In order to properly ascertain the force of this section and the intent of the Legislature in passing the same, it is necessary to consider in connection therewith at least a portion of the article of which this section is a part, and particularly section 3434, which is as follows:

> "Sec. 3434. Resident Agents for Foreign Companies—Exceptions. Foreign companies admitted to do business in this state shall make contracts of insurance upon lives, property, or interests herein, only through lawfully constituted and licensed resident agents: Provided, that this section shall not apply to direct insurance covering the rolling stock of railroad corporations, or property received for shipment from one state to another while in the possession or custody of railroad corporations or other common carriers."

It will be noted that by the provisions of the above sections there is a concurring obligation on the part of an insurance company doing business in the state and agents soliciting risks for it: First, upon the company to procure and pay for a license for its agents, which license is a written authority of such agents soliciting and procuring risks, and prohibiting companies from making contracts of insurance upon lives, property, or interest only through lawfully constituted and licensed resident agents, and upon agents to have this license before soliciting risk for insurance companies, and fixing personal liability upon an agent if he assumes to act without such license.

It is our view that the statutes relied upon by the plaintiff do not support its contention, and were enacted by the state, not for the protection and regulation of the intercourse of insurance companies and their agents, or to fix their contractual relations, but for the protection of the insuring public. An insurance company doing business in the state certainly could not violate the statute by failing to procure and pay for a license for its agents, and accept risks from unlicensed agents, and then invoke the provisions of the same law to establish the fact of the agency, and to fix the contractual relations of its agents to itself. As between the insured and the company, the defendants were under the statute quoted, as a matter of law, the agents of the company; but as to the relations of the insurance company and its agents the state is not or was not concerned, and their relations would depend upon contract. We therefore cannot say, as a matter of law, the status of the insurance company and their agents as between themselves is fixed by statute, but, on the contrary, we think it is regulated by contract. Welch, Insurance Commissioner, v. Maryland Casualty Company et al., 147 Pac. 1046. The issue as to who defendants were representing, whether plaintiff or Verschoyle & Co., at the time the insurance was solicited and collected for by defendants, was sharply drawn and fairly submitted by the trial court, and the jury by their verdict found that the defendants were the agents of Verschoyle & Co., and we are therefore bound by such finding.

[3] The last assignment of error complained of being the misconduct of the trial judge in directing certain remarks to the witness of plaintiff while upon the stand, and in the presence of the jury is in our opinion the most serious urged. It is difficult to state in this opinion the language of the court complained of, which should be considered in the light of its context, the principal part of which may be found in Case-Made, pages 51–53, inclusive, and is as follows:

> "The Court: Just answer the questions; we are running this business; and confine yourself to the points in controversy.
>
> "Mr. Moss: I don't think that is proper, if the court pleases.
>
> "The Court: I think that is true; but where you have a witness that knows more than the attorneys on both sides of the case—
>
> "Mr. Moss: We except to the remarks of the court.
>
> "Mr. Lyons: Mark that Exhibit A. (The same is so marked for purposes of identification.)
>
> "Q. Is that the signature of Verschoyle & Kahle? A. That is the signature of Verschoyle & Kahle. That was on Verschoyle & Co.
>
> "The Court: Wait there a minute. Put all the remarks down there; put all the remarks of the court down there; the court is going to remark a good deal directly; put it all in there for the attorneys on both sides, and put in there as they say, and that the witness was a very talkative witness, and would not confine himself to the questions of the attorneys. Put it in there so you can get it reversed good and proper.
>
> "Mr. Moss: I do not mean any disrespect at all to your honor, but in order to protect the right of my clients we except to the remarks, to all the remarks, of the court.
>
> "The Court: You have a right to your exception; and I have asked this witness half a dozen times to answer the questions and confine himself to the questions, but he does not do so.
>
> "The Witness: If your honor please, may I state something now?
>
> "The Court: That is it; you have stated too much now; put it all down there, and I will write more and put it in there.
>
> "Mr. Bush: To every remark of the court the plaintiff excepts.
>
> "The Court: I want to try the case fairly on both sides, and give every one a chance; but it does not embarrass me a bit to get reversed every time you want to reverse me."

Our court, speaking through Judge Gillette, in City of Newkirk v. Dimmers, 17 Okl. 525, 87 Pac. 603, said:

> "In the trial of a cause before a jury, it is the province of the jury alone to weigh the testimony of witnesses, and give to it such credence as in their judgment they believe it entitled to, uninfluenced by the judge before whom the cause is being tried. That a trial judge may exert an influence over a jury without speaking to them, and perhaps unconsciously, by mere demeanor or conduct touching the subject under investigation, is undoubtedly true, and where such influence has been exerted appellate courts have invariably held the trial to have been erroneous."

And in case supra the trial judge indicated that the testimony of the witness was untrue and unworthy of consideration. In fact, Judge Gillette, before laying down the rule quoted above, said:

> "It is impossible to read the testimony here quoted without reaching a conclusion that the testimony of Minnie Eads was by such examination criticized as being untrue, and as having been 'procured'—in fact, false."

Not so in the instant case. The trial judge was criticizing the manner of the witness in testifying and his efforts to inject in his testimony statements not responsive to the questions asked. The court at no time indicated that the witness was unworthy of belief, or was testifying falsely, but only too voluble. The courts have and should have authority to conduct trials in an orderly manner in accordance with the rules of evidence, and when a witness insists on voluntary statements not elicited by his examination, and contrary to the admonition of the court, then it is the duty of the court to use his judicial prerogative to maintain the dignity and decorum of his court. He should not, however, do this in any way, either by word, sign, token, or gesture that would indicate his opinion as to the merits of the case, or the truth or falsity of the testimony of the witness reprimanded, and if he does the aggrieved party should be entitled to a new trial. However, in this case we don't believe the action of the trial judge transcended his inherent power to conduct the trial in an orderly manner along the rules of established practice and usage. The court merely admonished the witness to answer the questions asked without incumbering the record with his voluntary statements. It is true the language of the trial court might have been couched in more appropriate and sedate diction; but in the midst of the trial on occasions of this sort it is hard for a trial judge to choose the language of a diplomat, and where he does not invade the province of the jury by indicating his opinion as to the merits of the case or the weight and credence to be given to the witness' testimony, we do not think it should require a reversal of the case, especially where it is not apparent that the aggrieved party has suffered injury or defeat on account of the conduct complained of. Love v. Reynolds, 36 Okl. 297, 128 Pac. 242.

Finding no reversible error, the judgment of the lower court should be and is affirmed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

PASSUMPSIC SAVINGS BANK v. JOHNSON et al. (No. 7156.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. March 6, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MORTGAGES 🔑303, 489—CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT—TIME AS ESSENCE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The P. Bank sued J. and wife on a promissory note for $1,500, a past-due interest coupon for $45, and to recover $200 attorney's fee, as provided for in the mortgage, and prayed that the same be foreclosed. The petition alleged that W., D., M., McM., P., and the A. Bank claimed some interest in the land adverse and inferior to that of plaintiff, and also prayed that they be made parties defendant and required to set it up. W. answered that he had purchased the land subject to the mortgage, and pleaded and proved a contract in which (after reciting that there was $269.55 delinquent interest due on the indebtedness, that said interest coupon would be due on the $1,500 note July 1, 1913, and that W. was interested in the payment of said indebtedness) it was agreed by and between W. and plaintiff, in consideration of a present settlement of all controversies in connection with the loan, that W. would pay plaintiff cash in hand said sum of $269.50 (which he did), and also "on or before June 25, 1913, as full principal and interest then accrued on the loan, $1,447.50, time being of the essence of this contract"; that, if said sum was not paid plaintiff on or before said date, then plaintiff should be entitled to judgment in foreclosure of the mortgage for $1,545, with interest from July 1, 1913, and that W. would interpose no defense to the action; that plaintiff would surrender to W. said evidences of indebtedness duly canceled, and receive the $1,447.50 on or before said date; and that, in case of default in the payment at the time specified, plaintiff would be entitled to judgment for the full amount of said note and coupon and foreclose the mortgage according to its terms. W. defaulted in the payment, but on July 12, 1913, and again on July 30 1913, and again on August 2, 1913, tendered plaintiff $1,447.50, each time with interest from June 25, 1913. There was judgment for plaintiff for $1,446.78, the sum last tendered. Held, that time was the essence of the contract; that plaintiff was entitled to recover $1,500 on the note sued, also $45 on the past-due interest coupon thereto attached, together with interest thereon at 10 per cent. per annum from July 1, 1913, also $200 as an attorney's fee, as provided in the mortgage, with interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the suit, and that the judgment was contrary to the evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1756, 2279.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑327(7)—PROCEEDING IN ERROR—PETITION—DISMISSAL.

By way of cross-petition W. further alleged that the mortgaged lands were theretofore allotted to one S. B., a duly enrolled citizen of the Choctaw Nation by blood, who died November 10, 1904, after selecting his allotment, leaving him surviving as his only heirs at law his widow, K., and J. and S., his minor children, who sold and conveyed the land to Mrs. Pitt, and she to the defendant J., and he to W.; that the sale was good, and passed the title, but that the B.'s were asserting title thereto on the ground that the county court was without jurisdiction to appoint a guardian to make the sale for said minors; and that the three B.'s were necessary parties to the suit and asked that they be brought in. And such was done, whereupon they answered and set up title to the land, and by way of cross-petition asked that their title thereto be cleared of all conveyances including the mortgage sought to be foreclosed. No issue was joined between plaintiff and the three B.'s. There was judgment for W. against them as prayed, and that they take nothing on their cross-petition. Held, that they were not necessary parties to the proceeding in error to reverse the judgment foreclosing the mortgage, and that a failure to make them parties thereto was not a ground for a dismissal of said proceeding.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1818, 1824–1826, 1828–1830, 1832, 1833, 1835; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1650.]

3. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑327(7)—PROCEEDING IN ERROR—PARTIES.

Further, by way of cross-petition, W. also alleged that subsequent to the date of the mortgage sought to be foreclosed he and the defendant D. were sureties for one Williams, who then owned the land, on a promissory note for $1,700, payable to the defendant A. bank, secured by a mortgage thereon; that later they became his sureties on another note to said bank for $2,290, which was secured by another mortgage to the bank executed by W.'s wife, who then owned the land; that both mortgages were junior to another mortgage on the land Williams owed Bowman for $210; that thereafter Williams caused the land to be conveyed to him and D. in consideration that they pay off all of said indebtedness, which they did, to the bank only, by executing their note for $4,000 and paying the balance in cash and delivering the notes to Williams; that thereafter Bowman foreclosed his mortgage and sold the land to the defendant M., who quitclaimed the same to W. for value, who offered to convey one-half thereof to D., in consideration that he pay one-half the purchase money paid M., which he refused to do. The A. bank answered, and D. defaulted, whereupon there was judgment against him and in favor of the bank for $2,261.58 together with attorney's fees and costs, and he was perpetually enjoined from asserting any claim to the land. Held, that neither the bank nor D. were necessary parties to the proceeding in error to review the judgment in favor of plaintiff, the P. bank, against W., foreclosing its mortgage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1818, 1824–1826, 1828–1830, 1832, 1833, 1835; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1650.]

4. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑327(7)—PROCEEDING IN ERROR — PARTIES — MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE.

After the decree in foreclosure was rendered and entered, on the overruling of the motion for a new trial, the same was modified, pursuant to which the defendant W. paid plaintiff $1,462.78 and executed a bond to respond in lieu of the land for any additional sum plaintiff might recover against him on the mortgage indebtedness. Held, that as no deficiency judgment was asked, and could not be recovered against the mortgagors J. and wife, they were not necessary parties to the proceeding in error to review said decree.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1818, 1824–1826, 1828–1830, 1832, 1833, 1835; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1650.]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑327(7)—PROCEEDING IN ERROR—PARTIES.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, M., McM., and P. were alleged to claim some interest in the land adverse, but inferior, to that of plaintiff, M. appeared and disclaimed, and the other two were not summoned, nor did they appear, and no judgment was taken for or against them, all, seemingly, having passed out of the case, held, that a failure to make them parties to the proceeding in error is not a ground for dismissal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1818, 1824–1826, 1828–1830, 1832, 1833, 1835; Mortgages, Cent. Dig. § 1650.]

Error from District Court, Atoka County; Robert M. Rainey, Judge.

Suit by the Passumpsic Savings Bank against G. C. Johnson and Jazie Johnson on a note and to foreclose a realty mortgage, in which James E. Whitehead, J. Kirby Dobbs, T. F. Memminger, Pete McMillan, R. T. Pennington, and the American National Bank of McAlester were made parties defendant, and in which Memminger disclaimed, and Whitehead answered and filed a cross-petition to quiet title, asking that Dobbs, Memminger, and Katie Benjamin, and James and Sampson Benjamin, minors by their guardian, be brought in, and in which they filed answer and cross-petition, upon which Whitehead joined issue. Judgment by default against Pennington and McMillan, and default judgment for the American National Bank against Dobbs, and judgment against the Benjamins, enjoining those parties, with default judgment for plaintiff bank against the Johnsons, with an order of sale. The bank's motion for a new trial was denied, and it brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Charles B. Mitchell, of Oswego, Kan., and H. A. Kroeger, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. James E. Whitehead, of Oklahoma City, for defendants in error.

TURNER, J. On August 6, 1913, Passumpsic Savings Bank, plaintiff in error, in the district court of Atoka county, sued G. C. Johnson and Jazie Johnson on a past-due promissory note, dated January 14, 1909, for $1,500, payable to the Deming Investment Company, and by said company indorsed to plaintiff for value and before maturity, also on a past-due interest coupon thereto attached for $45, and to foreclose a real estate mortgage on certain lands described to secure the payment thereof. As the mortgage provides for an attorney's fee of $200 in case of foreclosure, plaintiff prayed, not only judgment for $1,545, the amount of the note and coupon, together with interest thereon at 10 per cent. per annum from July 1, 1913, but judgment for $200 as an attorney's fee and interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of suit and for costs.

James E. Whitehead, J. Kirby Dobbs, T. F. Memminger, Pete McMillan, R. T. Pennington, and the American National Bank of McAlester were alleged in the petition to claim some interest in the land adverse, but inferior, to that of plaintiff, the nature and extent of which was alleged to be unknown, and for that reason were made parties defendant and asked to set it up. For answer, Memminger disclaimed and passed out of the case. After demurrer filed and overruled, Whitehead answered, making a general denial. After that, for separate amended answer and cross-petition, he in effect alleged himself to be the owner of the land subject to the mortgage; that, as such, on April 9, 1913, he entered into a contract in writing with Deming Investment Company, agent for plaintiff, which, after reciting the fact of the mortgage in question and that there was $269.55 delinquent interest due thereon, reads:

> "Whereas, an interest coupon of forty-five dollars ($45) on said principal note of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) will fall due July 1, 1913, no part of which is included in the said sum of two hundred sixty-nine and 55/100 dollars; and whereas, said party of the first part is interested in the title to said land and the payment of said mortgage indebtedness:
>
> "Now, in consideration of a present settlement of all controversy in connection with said loan, and by way of compromise to obtain such present settlement, said first party hereby agrees to pay to said second party, on signing of this agreement, said delinquent interest in the sum of two hundred sixty-nine and 55/100 dollars ($269.55), and to pay to said second party, on or before June 25, 1913, as full payment of the principal and interest then accrued on said loan, the sum of fourteen hundred forty-seven and 50/100 dollars ($1,447.50) time being of the essence of this contract, and if said sum of fourteen hundred forty-seven and 50/100 ($1,447.50) shall not be paid to the Deming Investment Company, agent as aforesaid, on or before June 25, 1913, then said first party hereby agrees that said Passumpsic Savings Bank shall be entitled to judgment in foreclosure action for the full sum of fifteen hundred and forty-five dollars ($1,545), with interest at ten per cent. per annum from July 1, 1913, together with all unpaid taxes, and said first party agrees that he will not interpose any defense of any nature whatsoever, in such foreclosure action. And for said consideration, said second party agrees to deliver to first party the interest coupons duly canceled, and to surrender the tax sale certificate aforesaid to the county treasurer to be canceled, and by way of compromise to receive said sum of fourteen hundred forty-seven and 50/100 dollars ($1,447.50) on or before June 25, 1913, and to deliver to said first party the canceled principal note of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500), and canceled coupon of forty-five dollars ($45), due July 1, 1913, and duly acknowledged release of said mortgage, time being of the essence of this agreement. And it is mutually agreed, between the parties to this agreement, that in case default is made in the payment of said sums above mentioned, or any part thereof, at the time specified, said Passumpsic Savings Bank shall be entitled to judgment for the full amount of said note and coupon and foreclosure of said mortgage according to the original terms thereof.
>
> "In witness whereof, said first party has hereunto subscribed his name, and said second party has caused its corporate name to be hereunto subscribed by its proper officers and its corporate seal attached, this the day and year first above written.
>
> "[Signed] James E. Whitehead.
> "The Deming Investment Company,
> "By D. S. Waskey, Vice Pres.
> "Witnesses:
> "John B. Snell.
> "Hattie L. Hackney.
> "Attest:
> "F. W. Stout, Secretary. [Seal.]"

And, in effect, that on July 12, 1913, and again on July 30, 1913, and yet again on August 2, 1913, pursuant thereto, he tendered the amount of money called for therein, to wit, $1,447.50 and interest, or $1,462.78, to the Deming Investment Company, which was refused, and which, he says, is all plaintiff is entitled to recover in the cause. By way of cross-petition he in effect alleged that the mortgaged lands were theretofore allotted to one Simon Benjamin, a duly enrolled citizen of the Choctaw Nation by blood; that he died November 10, 1904, after selecting his allotment, leaving him surviving as his only heirs at law Katie, his widow, and James and Sampson Benjamin, his minor children; that they sold and conveyed the land to Maggie Pitt, and she to the defendant G. C. Johnson, and he to defendant; that said sale was good and passed the title from the Benjamins, but nevertheless they were asserting title to the land adverse to plaintiff on the ground that the county court of Atoka county was without jurisdiction to appoint the guardian making the sale for said minors, and hence said sale was void; that the three Benjamins were necessary parties to the suit; and prayed that they be summoned to appear as such and answer and that his title as to them be quieted. The answer further alleged that on December 6, 1909, defendant, together with one Dobbs, were sureties for one Williams on a promissory note for $1,750, payable to the American National Bank of McAlester, which was secured by a mortgage on the land in question; that said mortgage was inferior to another mortgage given by said defendants Johnson to one Bowman for $210, dated January 14, 1909; that on February 18, 1911, he and said Dobbs became surety to said Williams on another note for $2,290, payable to said bank, and his wife, Ellen, being then the owner of the land, executed to said bank a mortgage on said land to secure said note of $2,290, the same being inferior to said mortgage of $1,750 executed to the bank, and also to the $210 mortgage given to said Bowman by the Johnsons; that, after executing said mortgage to the bank, Williams became insolvent and unable to pay the mortgage to the bank or to Bowman, and on March 23, 1912, caused the land to be conveyed to defendant and Dobbs, in consideration that they pay off the note of $210 to Bowman and the notes of $1,750 and $2,290 to the bank, which they did, so far as the bank was concerned, by executing their note for $4,000 to the bank and paying the balance to the bank in cash, whereupon his said notes were delivered to Williams; that thereafter Bowman foreclosed his mortgage for $210, and recovered in said suit an attorney's fee of $50, together with costs, amounting to $52.93, and a decree of foreclosure was entered, and the lands herein were sold to one Memminger, to satisfy the same, and the sale was confirmed, and a deed to the lands issued to Memminger, which was duly recorded, "thereupon barring all right of said bank to the land." He alleges that all the right and title in and to the lands by virtue of its mortgage aforesaid were held by the bank for the benefit of himself and Dobbs, and were lost by the refusal of Dobbs to furnish one-half of the money to pay the Bowman mortgage; that thereafter defendant bought the land back from Memminger for $913.63 for his own benefit, and not for the benefit of Dobbs, and so notified him; that Memminger quitclaimed the lands to defendants, who thereafter offered to convey to Dobbs one-half the land in consideration that he pay one-half of what defendant had paid for the land, but that he refused to pay same, ever since which said time defendant has been in peaceable possession as the owner thereof. He further alleges that, notwithstanding all of which, said Dobbs was asserting title thereto in virtue of the deed executed March 23, 1912, by Williams and wife, as aforesaid, and was also contending that defendant repurchased the land from Memminger for his benefit, and that he is entitled to one-half thereof, and is not liable to pay any part of the $4,000 note they executed to the bank. Wherefore he prayed that plaintiff take nothing; that the Benjamins, Memminger, and Dobbs be brought in to litigate their rights, if any they have, in the lands; that an account be stated between him and Dobbs; and that, in effect, his title to the land be quieted.

On January 15, 1914, plaintiff replied, admitting the execution of the contract, but denying all other allegations in the answer and cross-petition of the defendant Whitehead. After guardian ad litem had been appointed for the two Sampson minors, they, by answer and cross-petition, asserted title to the land as heirs of their father, as alleged, set forth the proceedings of the probate court of Atoka county, and assailed them as void for certain reasons, and prayed that their title to the land be cleared of their guardian's deed to Maggie Pitt, and her deed to the Johnsons, and the mortgage to the Deming Investment Company, sought herein to be foreclosed, and for general relief. The mother adopted their answer. Whitehead joined issue with them by reply, in effect a general denial. Pennington and McMillan also made default, and judgment was entered against them accordingly. Upon the issues thus joined there was trial to the court, who, on February 16, 1914, rendered, and on June 1, 1914, entered, judgment in favor of American National Bank (whose answer is not in the record) against Dobbs by default for $2,261.56, in favor of the bank, together with $226.15 attorney's fees and all costs by the bank therein expended, and perpetually enjoined Dobbs from claiming any interest in or title to the land and from making demand "against the defendant Whitehead [therefor?] or any sum of money by reason of any of the above transactions." At the same time he also rendered and entered judgment that the Benjamins take nothing by their suit, and perpetually enjoined them from asserting any title to the land, or attempting to convey any, or doing anything to "dispute" the title of Whitehead thereto. On June 1, 1914, he also, as shown by a separate judgment entry, rendered and entered judgment in favor of plaintiff, Passumpsic Savings Bank, against the defendant mortgagors, G. C. and Jazie Johnson, by default for $1,462.78 only, declared the same a lien upon the land, ordered it sold to satisfy the same, in case said sum was not paid in a certain time by the Johnsons or Whitehead, and gave judgment that Whitehead recover "all his costs herein expended from the plaintiff, Passumpsic Savings Bank, and the other defendants." After motion for a new trial filed by said bank only, and overruled September 4, 1914, the bank brings the case here, without making any of the defendants, save the Johnsons and Whitehead, parties defendant in error.

In the order overruling the motion for a new trial the judgment previously rendered was modified, so as to require Whitehead within 20 days to pay to the clerk of the court for the use of plaintiff $1,462.78, the amount tendered and alleged by Whitehead to be due on the mortgage. He was further ordered to give a bond in the penal sum of $750, conditioned that, if plaintiff appealed the case and, pursuant to the final order of this court, recovered against the mortgaged property a greater sum than that amount, the bond should stand as full surety for the amount so recovered, in lieu of the mortgage, and that said bond should be void in the event said mortgage was not released in 20 days after the approval of the bond. It was further ordered that plaintiff be paid said sum of $1,462.78 so paid into court within 10 days after it was paid in, upon depositing with the clerk said release, and that the payment and acceptance thereof and said release should in no wise prejudice plaintiff's right of appeal, and a recovery of a larger amount than the judgment, all of which was done.

[5] It is contended that this appeal should be dismissed, because Memminger, McMillan, Pennington, Dobbs, the American National Bank, and the three Benjamins were not made parties to this appeal. There is no merit in this contention as to the three first named, for the reason that Memminger disclaimed and passed out of the case and the two others were neither summoned nor appeared, and no judgment was rendered for or against them. In note 5, 2 R. C. L. 68, it is said:

> "Where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, certain persons were made defendants under a general allegation that they claimed to own or hold some right, title, or interest in the real estate, but there was no judgment for or against them, they seemingly having dropped out of the case, it was held that the failure to make them parties to the proceeding in error was not a ground for a dismissal." State ex rel. Hankins, Co. Atty., v. Holt, 34 Okl. 314, 125 Pac. 460.

[3] And, although Dobbs and the American National Bank were alleged by plaintiff to have some interest in the case, and were summoned, they were also, in effect, dropped from the suit by plaintiff, as it took no judgment against them. To be sure, on Whitehead's cross-petition against them, it was adjudged that Dobbs owed said bank in a sum certain and had no interest in the land in question as against Whitehead; but, as that judgment had nothing to do with the judgment in favor of plaintiff, rendered on the foreclosure of its mortgage, in effect that Whitehead owed plaintiff only $1,462.78 in settlement of the mortgage debt, as he contended, instead of $1,745, as plaintiff contended, we cannot see how a reversal of the latter judgment could possibly affect the judgment adjusting the rights aforesaid between the bank, Dobbs, and Whitehead, and for that reason the bank and Dobbs were not necessary parties to this appeal.

[2] Again, a reversal of the former judgment could not affect the question of what was due and owing plaintiff on the mortgage, for the reason that the bond executed subsequent to judgment now stands in place of the land, which no longer can be held to respond in execution for the debt, and hence we see no reason why plaintiff's appeal cannot be separately prosecuted without affecting any further litigation that might be waged by others concerning it. And besides, as all this litigation between Whitehead and the bank and Dobbs arose out of rights alleged to have accrued since the execution of plaintiff's mortgage and inferior to it, the bank and Dobbs were not necessary parties to its foreclosure in the trial court, and hence not necessary parties in this court. Neither were the Benjamins necessary parties to its foreclosure. Nor were they brought in by plaintiff, but by Whitehead by cross-petition, and as their claims to the land were not properly triable in that suit, but should have been tried in an independent action, it follows that the judgment secured against them by Whitehead, and the judgment in favor of plaintiff against Whitehead's grantors, were several and not joint judgments, and for that reason they are not necessary parties to this appeal.

[4] In support of the motion to dismiss, it is further urged that the case-made was not served upon G. C. and Jazie Johnson within the proper time. Assuming such to be the state of the record, as no deficiency judgment was asked against them as mortgagors, they are not necessary parties defendant in error. Page v. Turk, 43 Okl. 667, 143 Pac. 1047. It follows that none of the parties mentioned were necessary parties to this appeal, and, there being no merit in the remaining grounds in the motion to dismiss, the motion to that effect should be overruled.

[1] This sends us to the merits of the case. Upon the face of the agreement of April 9, 1913, plaintiff was entitled to recover, not only the full amount of his promissory note of $1,500, but also upon the past-due interest coupon of $45, and also $200 as an attorney's fee—in all $1,745, as insisted, instead of $1,462.78, as found by the trial court. There is no ambiguity in the contract. When Whitehead, pursuant thereto, paid $296.55, and agreed to further pay plaintiff, "on or before June 25, 1913, as full payment of the principal and interest then accrued on said loan, the sum of fourteen hundred forty-seven and 50/100 dollars ($1,447.50), time being of the essence of this contract, and if said sum of fourteen hundred forty-seven and 50/100 dollars shall not be paid to the Deming Investment Company, agent as aforesaid, on or before June 25, 1913, then the said Passumpsic Savings Bank shall be entitled to judgment in foreclosure action for the full sum of fifteen hundred forty-five dollars ($1,545) with interest thereon from July 1, 1913, * * *" and that he would interpose no defense to the foreclosure action, and plaintiff thereby agreed to deliver the interest coupons duly canceled and surrender, etc., and, by way of compromise of the mortgage indebtedness, receive said sum of $1,447.50 on or before June 25, 1913, and deliver said note and coupon and cancel the mortgage, and both agreed that time was of the essence of the contract, and when Whitehead failed to pay said amount on that day, as agreed, plaintiff was entitled to recover the full amount of the note and coupon sued, together with $200 attorney's fee according to the original terms thereof, and to foreclose the mortgage on the land as prayed.

It will not do to say that to enforce this agreement would be to enforce the payment of a penalty, and hence the court did right in refusing so to do; this for the reason that the note, secured by the mortgage sought to be enforced, was evidence of a subsisting debt to the amount of it, and the agreement valid and enforceable. This was squarely held in Royal Makepeace v. President, etc., College, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 298. There the facts were that the payee in a note for $4,310 agreed with the maker that, if the maker would convey to him certain land the sum of $3,200 should be allowed him as a credit on the note, and that upon receipt of the conveyance of the land and the maker's note for $500, payable in one year, with interest. the first note should be given up. In the agreement was this clause: "The above arrangement is to be carried into effect in three months." The land was conveyed within the time stated and $3.200 indorsed as a credit on the note, but no other payment and no note for $500 was made or tendered within the three months. Under this state of facts it was held:

> "That the note was not a penalty to enforce the performance of some other obligation, but that it was evidence of a subsisting debt to the amount of it, and that the agreement was in the nature of a composition, the conditions of which must be strictly complied with, and that the maker had not complied with the conditions of the agreement, and therefore the payee was entitled to recover the balance of the note after deducting the $3,200."

In the body of the opinion the court, speaking through Shaw, C. J., said:

> "The object of the plaintiffs was to insure the actual payment of the smaller sum, or, in failure of that, to retain their subsisting and legal claim for the larger; and we can perceive no claim, either in law or equity, on the part of the debtor, to have the benefit of the agreement, without a compliance with the condition upon which it was made. The case is within the reasoning and authority of Tufts v. Kidder, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 537. It is well settled, as well in equity as at law, that a creditor having entered into an agreement for a composition, is not bound to take less than his debt, unless that agreement shall be absolutely and strictly complied with. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 16 Ves. 372."

As an accord and satisfaction is defined to be "an agreement between two parties to give and accept something in satisfaction of a right of action which one has against the other, which when performed is a bar to all actions upon this account" (Bouvier's Law Dictionary), the most that can be said of this agreement is that it was an accord, well pleaded, for the reason that thereby the minds of plaintiff and Whitehead met on the proposition that $1,447.50 was to be accepted, if paid on or before June 25, 1913, in full of the mortgage debt. And for the reason that said accord was not executed, by payment and acceptance of the $1,447.50, pursuant to and within the time prescribed in the contract, for time was of the essence of the contract, plaintiff is entitled to recover upon the original cause of action; that is, on the note and mortgage sought to be foreclosed. 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 420, says:

> "An accord, in order to discharge a contract or cause of action, must be executed, and this execution of the accord is the satisfaction. Satisfaction consists in the actual performance by one party of the agreement of accord, and the acceptance by the other party of such performance in full satisfaction of the original cause of action or contract."

In Hearn v. Kiehl, 38 Pa. 147, 80 Am. Dec. 472, the court said:

> "Accord and satisfaction is a good plea by a debtor to the action of his creditor, but the legal notion of accord is a new agreement on a new consideration to discharge the debtor. And it is not enough that there be a clear agreement or accord, and a sufficient consideration, but the accord must be executed. The plea must allege that the matter was accepted in satisfaction. Mere readiness to perform the accord, or a tender of performance, or even a part performance and readiness to perform the rest, will not do. Such is the law between debtor and creditor."

This is in keeping with what we held in Houston Bros. v. Wagner, 28 Okl. 367, 114 Pac. 1106. There certain partners, as Houston Bros., plaintiffs in error, sued one Wagner, defendant in error, on three certain promissory notes. Defendant admitted the execution thereof, and pleaded what was intended as an accord and satisfaction, in that he had offered, and plaintiffs agreed to accept, in full payment of the indebtedness, a deed to certain real estate; that he had placed plaintiffs in possession and tendered them the deed, which they declined to accept; and the deed was brought into court and again tendered plaintiffs. There was judgment for defendant. In reversing the case, in the syllabus we said:

> "1. An accord must be completely executed to sustain a plea of accord and satisfaction. A part execution and tender of performance of the residue is insufficient.
>
> "2. Where, in an action on certain promissory notes, defendant pleaded accord and satisfaction, in effect, that pending the action it was agreed between defendant and plaintiff's agent that plaintiff would accept of defendant in full satisfaction of said notes certain lots, whereupon defendant placed him in possession and later tendered a deed therefor, which was refused, and the evidence supported the plea, held, that a judgment for defendant was contrary to law."

And so we say the judgment in question is contrary to law, in that, while the agreement pleaded was a good plea of accord, the undisputed evidence discloses that the $1,447.50, agreed to be paid plaintiff, was not tendered on the date fixed therein, and hence was not accepted in satisfaction thereof, but, time being the essence of the contract, was rightfully refused. We are therefore of opinion that plaintiff was entitled to recover $1,500 on the note sued, also, on the past-due interest coupon thereto attached for $45, together with interest thereon at 10 per cent. per annum from July 1, 1913, also $200 as an attorney's fee, as stipulated in the mortgage, with interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of suit, and for costs, and that the mortgage be foreclosed, and the land sold to satisfy the same, or the bond held to respond.

The cause is accordingly reversed and remanded, to be proceeded with according to the views herein expressed. All the Justices concur.

WILLIAMS v. DIESEL et al. (No. 7495.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INDIANS 🔑15(2)—DEEDS—VALIDITY—ACT OF CONGRESS.

A member of the Creek Tribe of Indians, upon the alienation of whose allotted lands restrictions imposed by federal enactment did not expire until August 8, 1907, in order to effectuate an agreement entered into before that time with her grantee, executed and delivered three deeds purporting to convey such lands on March 2, July 1, and August 9, 1907, respectively. Held, that such deeds were inefficient to convey title and void, as violative of an act of Congress approved April 26, 1906 (c. 1876, 34 Stat. 144), then in force, section 19 of which provides: "And every deed executed before, or for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before the removal of restrictions, be and the same is hereby declared void."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indians, Cent. Dig. § 39.]

2. JURY 🔑14(6)—CANCELLATION OF CONVEYANCE—INDIANS.

A suit seeking the cancellation of such deeds on the ground that same were executed in violation of Congressional enactment is one of equitable cognizance, wherein the parties are not entitled, as a matter of right, to a jury trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Jury, Cent. Dig. § 71.]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

3. INDIANS 🔑15(2) — DEED — VALIDITY — "AGREEMENT."

An agreement within the meaning of Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 144, providing that "every deed executed before, or for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before the removal of restrictions, be and the same is hereby declared void," means a coming together of the parties in opinion or determination; the union of two or more minds in a thing done or to be done; a mutual assent to do a thing.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indians, Cent. Dig. § 39.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Agreement.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 3. Error from District Court, Creek County; Wade S. Stanfield, Judge.

Action by Rena Williams against M. L. Diesel and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

S. H. Sornborger, of Sapulpa, for plaintiff in error. W. P. Root, of Sapulpa, and W. L. Cheatham, of Bristow, for defendants in error.

BLEAKMORE, C. This case presents error from the district court of Creek county, wherein Rena Williams, on May 23, 1913, commenced action against M. L. and Bertha Diesel for the cancellation of three deeds executed by her to A. H. Purdy on March 2, July 1 and August 9, 1907, respectively, purporting to convey certain lands allotted to her as a member of the Creek Tribe of Indians, exclusive of her homestead, on the ground that such deeds were violative of congressional enactment, and therefore void, the first two being executed prior to the removal of restrictions upon the alienation of the lands described, and the third an attempted ratification of the former conveyances and likewise void, and seeking also the cancellation of a deed to said lands from Purdy to the Diesels, of date September 25, 1907, recovery of the premises, etc.

Upon notice by his grantee to defend the action, Purdy filed his answer, setting forth, among other things:

> "That both plaintiff and defendant, recognizing that the deeds from plaintiff to A. H. Purdy of date March 2, 1907, and July 1, 1907, were void and of no legal effect in law, did on the 9th day of August, 1907, enter into a separate and independent contract in relation to the sale of said land, by which the plaintiff agreed with defendant A. H. Purdy and sold to A. H. Purdy the lands mentioned in plaintiff's petition, and made and executed a deed to A. H. Purdy, in pursuance of said contract so made on the 9th day of August, 1907, conveying to A. H. Purdy said lands for a new and independent consideration of the sum of $500, and this defendant denies that said last-mentioned deed was taken or given in ratification of the deeds mentioned and given by plaintiff to defendant on March 2, 1907, and July 1, 1907, or that there was in any manner or way a ratification of said deeds, and this defendant says that there was an adequate consideration paid for said lands on said 9th day of August, 1907, and the plaintiff received the same and executed the deed for said consideration, and independent of, and not in ratification of, said pre-existing deeds."

The Diesels also answered, alleging that they were bona fide purchasers from Purdy for a consideration of $1,500, and adopting as their own the answer of Purdy. To these answers plaintiff replied by way of general denial.

The case was tried to a jury. At the conclusion of the evidence offered on behalf of plaintiff demurrer thereto was sustained, and the court directed a verdict for defendants, and rendered judgment accordingly. Plaintiff has appealed.

Plaintiff is a half-blood Creek Indian, and the premises involved constitute her surplus allotment, restrictions upon the alienation of which existed until August 8, 1907, when they were removed by operation of law. She, being the sole witness in the case, testified:

"Q. The record, as your petition alleges, indicates that you made a deed of conveyance of your surplus allotment to Mr. Purdy on the 2d day of March, 1907. Do you recall that occasion? A. A deed? He didn't say it was a deed at that time; he said it was a contract; and he seen my husband out there and told him to bring me in and he would sign me a contract to pay me more than anybody else, and so my husband did so. Q. Well, you executed that deed in here did you? A. Yes, sir. Q. And he represented to you that it was a contract for what? A. Yes, sir. Q. That he would buy it then? A. Yes, sir. Q. When would he buy it? A. After the restrictions were removed. Q. That is what he represented to you? A. Yes, sir. Q. And in pursuance of that you signed what now seems to be a deed? A. Yes, sir. Q. Mrs. Williams, have you ever been to school? A. No, sir; I never have. What little learning I have I learned at home. Q. Are you able readily to read and write? A. No, sir. Q. You do write your own name? A. Yes; a little. Q. Well, did he pay you anything for it at that time? A. No, sir; he did not. Q. He simply promised to pay you more than anybody else? A. Yes, sir; after the restrictions were removed; yes, sir. Q. Well, at that time when was it supposed the restrictions would become removed? Under the act of Congress? A. He said in July some time. Q. The record shows you executed a deed under date of July 1, 1907. At that time did you receive any consideration in money or anything? A. Well, I went there, it was a picnic given there at home, and I went in and I told my husband I wanted some money, and he told me to go to Mr. Purdy and get $50. And that is all I ever did get. Q. Did you at any time, either before or after that, get any more? A. No, sir; that is all. Q. Now on the 9th of August, 1907, you appear to have made another deed? A. Yes, sir. Q. How came you to make that? A. He claimed that the restrictions were removed and that he would pay me the money after I signed the deed. But after I signed the deed, he says, 'There is nothing due you; I paid it to Sam;' and Sam said, 'Come out—' Q. Who is Sam? A. My husband, Sam Williams. Q. Where is your husband? A. I don't know. He said I could get it back if I tried; and I said, 'Why don't you help me?' and he said, 'I haven't anything to do with it.' * * *"

Cross-examination:

"Q. You didn't sell this to him on the 2d of March, 1907? A. No, sir; I contracted with him, when the restrictions were removed. Q. In writing? A. Yes, sir; he made a contract, but I never read it. Q. Have you a copy of it? A. That writing copy? Q. Yes? A. No. Q. You complain of that deed as being your contract? A. No, sir; he didn't say any deed; he said contract. Q. You didn't sign but one paper in March, 1907, did you? A. He said it was a contract. Q. You then signed but one paper? A. Yes, sir. Q. You signed no notes? A. No, sir; I never owed nothing. Q. You didn't make any notes to the International Bank? A. No, sir. Q. Sign them with your husband? A. No, sir. Q. After the second deed, did you make any written contract with Mr. Purdy at that time to sell the land to him? A. Yes, sir; I made it this way, that he would pay me $1,100 with the $50 I got that day before I made the contract. Q. That was just a verbal contract? A. Yes, sir. Q. You told him, if he would loan you that $50, you would sell the land when you got the— A. Yes; when I got the restrictions removed. Q. You didn't pretend to sell it to him that day? A. No. Q. What security did you give Mr. Purdy for the $50? A. I never gave him any security at all; I just went and got it and came out. Q. Didn't sign any note or mortgage at the bank? A. No, sir; didn't have anything to mortgage. Q. Didn't sign that deed as security? A. No, sir. The last deed? Q. No; I am talking about the second one. A. No. He wouldn't pay me all my money until the restrictions were removed. Q. You went back there on the 9th of August? A. My husband carried me back there. Q. Your husband carried you back there? A. Yes, sir. Q. You went voluntarily? A. He asked me to go. Q. And you signed the deed on that occasion? A. Yes, sir; to get my money. Q. Wasn't it discussed on that occasion that your debt to the International Bank, that they would be paid out of this consideration? A. No, sir; I never owed the bank anything that I know of. Q. Or the National Bank? A. It neither. Q. Do you remember the 10th of October, 1907, of giving Mr. Purdy a receipt for $850? A. No, sir; I don't know anything about that. Mr. Purdy came up to me in August. He wanted me to give him a receipt, and I said, 'For what?' and he said, 'The 120 acres of land;' and I said, 'I will pay you the $50, and see my attorneys.' Q. When was that? A. In August. Q. 1907? A. This year. Q. I am talking about 1907. Did you and Sam Williams and Mr. Purdy have a settlement on the 10th day of October, 1907? A. A settlement of what? Q. Consideration of that deed of August 9th? A. No, sir; he never paid me any money but the $50, and I will stay by that."

[1] By Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, 34 Stat. 144, it is provided:

"And every deed executed before, or for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before the removal of restrictions, be and the same is hereby, declared void."

[3] An "agreement" within the meaning of the foregoing provision is defined as:

"A coming together of parties in opinion or determination; the union of two or more minds in a thing done or to be done; a mutual assent to do a thing." Carter v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., not yet officially reported, 160 Pac. 319.

The only testimony adduced at the trial relative thereto establishes conclusively every element of an agreement made between plaintiff and Purdy, while restrictions existed upon the alienation of her surplus lands that she should convey the same to him and be paid the consideration therefor when such restrictions were removed; and to effectuate this agreement the deeds of March 2, July 1, and August 9, 1907, were executed. The first two of these deeds were executed before the removal of restrictions, and admittedly are void for that reason alone; and the third, designed to the same end, and executed as a part of the same transaction immediately upon the law permitting the alienation of such lands becoming operative, was clearly a deed "for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before the removal of restrictions," and is likewise inefficient to convey title and void. If the deeds from plaintiff to Purdy were void, the Diesels, as purchasers from him, of course could take no title.

The doctrine announced in Carter v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., supra, is determinative of this case. Therein it was held:

> "A citizen of the Creek Nation received $300 of the recited consideration of $3,600, and on July 2, 1907, prior to the removal of her restrictions made, executed and delivered a deed to a part of her allotment, void under section 19 of an act of Congress approved April 26, 1906. At the same time she took back from the grantees therein their two promissory notes, one for $1,700, payable August 9, 1907, the other for $1,600, payable August 9, 1908, and agreed to meet them at the same place on August 9, 1907, which she did. There on that day, her restrictions in the meantime being removed by operation of law, they took up both notes, paid her the note for $1,700, and took from her another deed for the same land, which recited the same consideration, and that $2,000 of it was that day cash in hand paid, and executed and delivered to her their note for $1,600, payable one year thereafter. Held that, although executed at different times, both deeds were evidence, or part of one and the same transaction, and should be construed together, and that, the first deed being void as in fraud of the statute, not only in that for the making of which an agreement was entered into before the removal of restrictions, but in that a part of the consideration of the first entered into the consideration for the second deed, the taint of illegality in that deed tainted the second, and that both are void. Held, further, that, being void, the subsequent purchaser of the land took no title.
>
> "As 'transaction' is derived from the Latin words 'trans,' meaning across, and 'agere,' to drive, evidence examined, and held, that the transaction here involved was putting, or driving, across the title to the land from plaintiff to the defendant grantees, and that the two deeds executed for that purpose were evidence or part of that transaction, and should be construed together, not only to determine what the contract or agreement evidenced thereby was, but with what intent it was made."

It is urged by defendants in error that the rule announced in Henley v. Davis, not yet officially reported, 156 Pac. 337, applies and should govern this case. Not so. The conveyances held to be valid and binding in Henley v. Davis, McKeever v. Carter, 157 Pac. 56, and Welch v. Ellis, 163 Pac. 321, No. 6806, were executed subsequent to the taking effect of the act of Congress approved May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312, c. 199), which was a revising act intended as a substitute for all former legislation relative to restrictions upon alienation of lands allotted to the members of the Five Civilized Tribes and operated to repeal the provisions of the act of April 26, 1906, supra; while here, as in the case of Carter v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., the conveyances involved were executed during the time the provisions of the act of April 26, 1906, were in full force and effect.

[2] The pleadings here are in all essential particulars the same as those in Carter v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., and upon the authority of that case this cause must be treated as one of purely equitable cognizance, where neither party is entitled as a matter of right to a trial by jury. We have reviewed evidence introduced on behalf of plaintiff, and hold that the judgment of the trial court sustaining the demurrer thereto is clearly opposed to such evidence, and is contrary to the law.

The judgment is therefore reversed, and the cause remanded for such further proceedings as justice and equity may require consistent with the views herein expressed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

CITIZENS' STATE BANK OF FT. GIBSON v. STRAHAN et al. (No. 6073.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. PLEADING ⇨362(2)—PETITION—STRIKING PARTS.

Record examined, and held, that the trial court did not err in overruling defendant's motion to strike certain portions of plaintiffs' petition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 1148–1151.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR ⇨187(2)—MISJOINDER OF PARTIES PLAINTIFF—FAILURE TO AMEND —WAIVER.

By virtue of our liberal statute which allows amendments as to parties at any stage of the proceedings, the question of misjoinder of parties plaintiff, being an exception which, if taken below, might have been obviated by an amendment, will be held to be waived unless raised in some manner before or at the trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 1185.]

3. EXPRESS STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES IN DEROGATION OF COMMON LAW.

In this jurisdiction it is provided by statute (section 2948, Rev. Laws 1910) that "the rule of the common law, that statutes in derogation thereof are to be strictly construed, has no application to the laws of this state, which are to be liberally construed with a view to effect their objects and to promote justice."

4. USURY ⇨142(1)—ACTION TO RECOVER—NECESSITY OF DEMAND—FORM.

Although demand and refusal be a requisite to the right of the plaintiff to commence an action for the recovery of usury paid, yet, when the law does not require any particular form or condition for either, any demand will be sufficient which notifies the lender that the borrower intends to claim the benefits given him by the statute.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Usury, Cent. Dig. §§ 428, 429, 431.]

5. USURY ⇨142(1)—ACTION TO RECOVER—DEMAND—STATUTE.

Record examined, and held, that the demand herein constitutes a substantial compliance with the proviso of section 1005, Rev. Laws

1910, which provides: "Provided, such action shall be brought within two years after the maturity of such usurious contract; provided, further, that before any suit can be brought to recover such usurious interest, the party bringing such suit must make written demand for return of such usury."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Usury, Cent. Dig. §§ 428, 429, 431.]

6. APPEAL AND ERROR ⚷301—PRESENTATION OF GROUNDS OF REVIEW—MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL—AMOUNT.

The Supreme Court will not examine the record to ascertain whether the amount found by the court or jury is the correct amount, or, indeed, review any of the other alleged errors committed at the trial, which are not presented in the lower court for re-examination by motion for new trial or otherwise.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1743, 1753–1755.]

Error from Superior Court, Muskogee County; Farrar L. McCain, Judge.

On rehearing. Judgment affirmed.

For former opinion, see 158 Pac. 378.

Guy F. Nelson, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. W. D. Halfhill and O'Hare & Davidson, all of Muskogee, for defendants in error.

KANE, J. This was an action commenced by the defendants in error, plaintiffs below, against the plaintiff in error, defendant below, for the purpose of recovering twice the amount of certain usurious interest paid by the plaintiffs and retained by the defendant, contrary to section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910. Hereafter the parties will be called "plaintiffs" and "defendant," respectively, as they appeared in the court below. After the evidence was all in, the jury by direction of the trial court returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for the sum of $773.16, upon which judgment was duly entered, to reverse which this proceeding in error was commenced.

Whilst the petition in error herein contains many assignments of error, counsel for defendant in his brief summarizes the points upon which he relies for reversal under the following subheads:

First. The court erred in overruling defendant's motion to strike from plaintiffs' second amended petition all reference to the borrowing of the sum of $500 on October 20, 1909, for which a note for $518.75 was given, due January 20, 1910; and all reference to the borrowing of $400 on November 24, 1909, for which a note for $412 was given, due January 24, 1910; and all reference to the payments made on said notes, to wit, the sum of $30.75 on January 20, 1910, and the sum of $12 on January 25, 1910—to which adverse ruling the defendant excepted.

Second. The court erred in overruling the defendant's demurrer to the evidence of plaintiff, to which the defendant excepted, and for error of the court in refusing to give the peremptory instruction requested by the defendant to find a verdict for the defendant, to which the defendant excepted.

Third. The court erred in giving a peremptory instruction to find a verdict for the plaintiffs in the sum of $773.16, to which defendant excepted.

Fourth. The court erred in overruling the defendant's motion for a new trial, to which the defendant excepted.

[1] The first assignment of error is based upon the assumption that the instruments mentioned in the motion to strike, upon which the usurious interest was alleged to have been paid, matured two years prior to the commencement of this action; therefore, they say, all right of action for double recovery of interest thereon was barred by that part of the statute which requires such action to be commenced within two years after the maturity of the usurious contract. The evidence tends to show that the various notes referred to in the motion to strike were simply renewals of several original notes; that all the notes involved herein, 13 in number, were part of the same contract, and simply evidenced the original loan of $900, which was the only money plaintiff ever received from the bank. In order to extend the time of payment of the original notes, renewal notes were made from time to time; the original consideration supporting them all. The contract to pay the borrowed sum of $900 did not finally mature until July 1, 1912, which was the date of maturity of the last renewal note. As this action was commenced in August, 1912, it is apparent that this was well within the statutory period of two years.

[2] The contention of counsel as to the second assignment is to the effect that, inasmuch as the evidence showed the plaintiffs jointly executed the notes upon which this action is based, and that all the payments of interest made upon such alleged usurious contract were made by plaintiff Kent Strahan, and that no payments were made or paid by plaintiff Maud Strahan; therefore it was error to overrule the defendant's demurrer to the evidence. The demurrer to the evidence is in the following form:

> "Comes now the defendant and demurs to the evidence offered by the plaintiffs for the reason that it does not prove facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the defendant and in favor of the plaintiffs."

This did not directly present to the trial court for consideration the question of misjoinder of parties plaintiff now raised by counsel. Neither does this question appear to have been presented to the trial court for re-examination by the defendant in its motion for a new trial, the formal grounds for which are stated as follows:

> "First. For error of the court in overruling the objection of the defendant to the introduction of any evidence, to which the defendant at the time excepted.
>
> "Second. For error of the court in the admission of evidence, over the objection of the defendant, to which the defendant at the time excepted.
>
> "Third. For error of the court in excluding evidence offered by the defendant, to which ruling the defendant at the time excepted.

"Fourth. For error of the court in overruling the demurrer of the defendant to the evidence, to which the defendant at the time excepted.

"Fifth. For error of the court in refusing the peremptory instruction offered by the defendant.

"Sixth. For error of the court in refusing instruction No. 1 offered by the defendant.

"Seventh. For error of the court in giving the peremptory instruction to find a verdict for the plaintiffs, over the objection of the defendant."

It is well settled that under liberal statutes, similar to ours, authorizing amendments as to parties, a misjoinder has lost much of its former importance, and unless raised in some manner before or at the trial it will usually be held to have been waived, and consequently cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. 15 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 581; White v. Portland, 67 Conn. 277, 34 Atl. 1022; Nelson v. Smith, 54 Ill. App. 346; Mattoon v. Fallin, 113 Ill. 249; Cofran v. Shepard, 148 Mass. 582, 20 N. E. 281; Cruchon v. Brown, 57 Mo. 38.

The question of misjoinder of plaintiffs not having been directly raised at the trial, we think it now comes too late. It is an exception which, if taken at the trial, might have been obviated by an amendment. The ample power, now given to courts, to allow amendments without costs, renders this objection comparatively unimportant, when it does not affect the merits of the case.

[3-5] The next contention of counsel is to the effect that the demand made by the plaintiffs for the return of the alleged usurious interest was not in substantial compliance with the part of the statute (section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910), which provides that:

"Before any suit can be brought to recover such usurious interest, the party bringing such suit must make written demand for" such usurious interest.

The demand was in the following form:

"Demand is hereby made upon you to return to, and pay to the undersigned, $112.35, the same being for usurious and illegal interest paid to you upon a certain loan made to us during the years of 1910 and 1911; the final payment and settlement made to you on or about the 12th day of July, A. D. 1912."

It seems that the amount stated in the demand was the sum plaintiffs conceived they had paid as usurious interest, and the contention is that, inasmuch as the demand was for a specific sum, which was not double the amount of the usury paid, it was not such a demand as the statute required as a condition precedent to the right of the plaintiffs to commence their action. In discussing the question of a proper demand in Miller et al. v. Oklahoma State Bank of Altus et al., 157 Pac. 767, which was an action similar to this, this court, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Brown, said:

"We also hold that under the second subdivision of said section 1005, where the borrower of money pays therefor a greater rate of interest than 10 per cent. per annum, he, or his legal representatives, may, within two years after maturity of such usurious contract, recover from the person, firm, or corporation taking or receiving such interest twice the amount of the interest so paid, provided that, before bringing such suit, the party bringing the same must make written demand of the party to be sued for payment of the sum so authorized by the statute to be recovered."

And again in the same opinion, speaking upon this question the court in effect reiterates its former statement as follows:

"Where interest has been paid greater than 10 per cent. per annum, the party paying the same may recover double the sum so paid, where the action therefor is within two years after maturity of the usurious contract and after due demand for payment of the sum entitled to be recovered."

Therefore we take it that it is settled law in this jurisdiction that, before commencing an action of this kind, the plaintiff is required to make written demand of the party to whom such usurious interest has been paid of the sum authorized by the statute to be recovered; that is, twice the amount of the interest so paid. Now the question arises whether the demand herein, which was not for twice the sum entitled to be recovered, but for a much smaller sum, was a substantial compliance with the terms of the statute. We find this question also answered—and rightly answered, we think—in the affirmative by a former opinion of this court. Ardmore State Bank v. Thompson, 164 Pac. 977, not yet officially reported. In that case, as in this, it was contended that, inasmuch as the plaintiff "did not make demand for the return of the usury before bringing his action, but that instead he made the demand for the return of the whole interest paid, the demand was not in substantial compliance with the statute." The court held that when the contract is usurious and the borrower makes a written demand requesting the return of the whole interest so paid, instead of twice the interest paid over and above the amount allowed by law, such borrower is within his rights.

In another case (Texmo Cotton Exchange Bank v. Liston, 160 Pac. 82), the demand was for a return of the usurious interest charged, reserved, taken, and received, and the forfeiture and penalty therefor, without stating any amount. The demand was held to be a substantial compliance with the provisions of section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910, relative to the demand for usury paid. In passing upon this question, the court, speaking through Mr. Commissioner Hayson, who prepared the opinion for the court, said:

"The written demand made by Liston was a substantial compliance with the provision in section 1005, Revised Laws 1910, relative to demand prior to the bringing of the suit. The party to whom usury is paid is in as good a position to know the amount of such usury as the party who pays. In most instances he is in a better position, and better qualified in both education and training. He may repay such usury upon written demand being made, and save himself the costs, expenses, and penalty incident to the litigation of the matter. But when a substantial compliance with the law has been > met by the party who pays such usury, to the party receiving the usury, by serving upon such party who receives the usury a written demand for its return, and such demand is refused, and suit is brought and a recovery had, the cause will not be reversed because of some technical error as to the amount demanded, so long as the judgment is within the amount demanded in the written demand and is upheld by the evidence in the record."

And in still another case (Ardmore State Bank v. Lee, 159 Pac. 903), it was held, "The notice is not defective merely because a greater sum was demanded than was due." It is quite apparent from the foregoing cases, and others of like tenor which might be cited, that this court, there being no statutory requirement as to form, has uniformly held any form of demand sufficient which notifies the lender that the borrower intends to enforce his rights under the penalty clause of the usury statute. Generally, it may be said that, although demand and a refusal be a requisite to the right of the plaintiff to commence an action, yet, when the law does not require any particular form or condition for either, any demand will be sufficient which is understood by the parties to be a claim to money or property on one side and a refusal to pay or deliver on the other. 1 Cyc. 696; Kiefer v. Carrier, 53 Wis. 404, 10 N. W. 562; Smith v. Schulenberg, 34 Wis. 41; Colby v. Reed, 99 U. S. 560, 25 L. Ed. 484. In the latter case, the party making the demand demanded a sum largely in excess of that which he was entitled to. It was contended that this was not a proper demand. The court in passing upon the question thus raised says:

> "Responsive to the second request, the judge told the jury that where a party demands more than he is entitled to receive, that circumstance alone will not justify the other party in refusing to deliver that part of the property to which the party making the demand is entitled, provided it is distinct, well known, and clearly distinguishable from that to which the demanding party had no right; that if the party demanded $45,000 of the stock when he was only entitled to $32,000 of the same, the defendant could not properly refuse to deliver what the plaintiff was entitled to receive, on the ground that the demand was excessive. Injustice and inconvenience would flow from any different rule, and, inasmuch as we are all of the opinion that the instruction was correct, it is not deemed necessary to pursue the subject."

The great weight of authority, both in the state and federal courts, is that usury statutes, being remedial, should be given a liberal construction that will carry out the intention of the lawmaking body. Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217, 28 Am. Rep. 455; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. Ed. 196; Eaker v. Bryant, 24 Cal. 87, 140 Pac. 310; Citizens' Bank v. Donnell, 172 Mo. 384, 72 S. W. 925; Albion Nat. Bank v. Montgomery, 54 Neb. 681, 74 N. W. 1102.

In this jurisdiction it is provided by statute (section 2948, Rev. Laws 1910) that:

> "The rule of the common law, that statutes in derogation thereof are to be strictly construed, has no application to the laws of this state, which are to be liberally construed with a view to effect their objects and to promote justice."

The object of requiring the plaintiff to make demand before the commencement of his action undoubtedly is to afford the defendant an opportunity to refund the penalty imposed upon him by statute by taking a rate of interest greater than is allowed by law without being put to the expense and inconvenience of litigation. In these circumstances, any demand which notifies the lender that the borrower intends to claim the benefits given him by the usury law constitutes a substantial compliance with the provisions of section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910, relative to the written demand for the return of the usury paid. And so we say here, as was said in effect in Colby v. Reed, supra, and the other cases hereinbefore cited, the demand being sufficient to notify the defendant that the plaintiff intended to claim the benefits given him by the usury statute, the mere fact that it was for a sum less than he was entitled to did not justify the defendant in refusing to tender at least the sum demanded, and then rely upon this technical defect in the demand to defeat any recovery.

[6] There is some contention, made for the first time in this court, that the judgment entered by the trial court is excessive. By referring to the grounds for new trial presented below, which elsewhere are set out in full, it will be seen that this question was not raised in the court below, nor presented to the trial court for re-examination in the motion for a new trial. It is well settled that the Supreme Court will not examine the record to ascertain whether the amount found by the court or jury is the correct amount, or, indeed, review any of the other alleged errors committed at the trial which are not presented in the lower court for re-examination by motion for new trial or otherwise. McDonald v. Carpenter, 11 Okl. 115, 65 Pac. 942; Osborne & Co. v. Case et al., 11 Okl. 479, 69 Pac. 263; Weaver v. Kuchler et al., 17 Okl. 189, 87 Pac. 600.

The latest expression by this court on this question called to our attention may be found in Frick-Reid Supply Co. v. Hunter, 148 Pac. 83, wherein the point was made that the judgment was excessive because the trial court allowed interest at the rate of 7 per cent. instead of 6 per cent. per annum from date of the rendition of the judgment. In passing upon this question, Mr. Justice Sharp, who delivered the opinion for the court, says:

> "As to the point that the judgment should bear 6 and not 7 per cent. interest per annum from date of rendition, we find that no objection, to the allowance or rate of interest that the judgment should bear, was made in the lower court either at the time the journal entry of judgment was prepared and filed or in the motion for a new trial. It is a rule of very common application that objections must be made in the trial court in order to reserve questions for review. This assignment cannot therefore be considered."

For the reasons stated, the judgment of the court below is affirmed. All the Justices concur.

ARKANSAS VALLEY NAT. BANK v. McCOLLOM et al. (No. 8587.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. Jan. 9, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 29, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑323(3)—PARTIES ON APPEAL—DISMISSAL.

All parties against whom a joint judgment has been rendered, and whose interests will be affected by a reversal or modification of the judgment appealed from, must be made parties to the appeal; and where such is not done the appeal will be dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1796, 1802.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑415—NAMES OF APPELLANTS—FOUNDATION FOR APPEAL.

The fact that the petition in error purports to be in the name of all of defendants in no wise cures the neglect to properly lay the foundation for appeal in the lower court (following Bowles et al. v. Cooney et al., 45 Okl. 517, 146 Pac. 221).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. § 2139.]

Error from District Court, Pawnee County; Conn Linn, Judge.

Action by the Arkansas Valley National Bank against James M. McCollom and others. Judgment by default against defendant James M. McCollom, and judgment against defendant Anna McCollom, and plaintiff brings error. Dismissed.

F. C. Shoemaker, of Pawnee, for plaintiff in error. McNeill & McNeill, of Pawnee, for defendants in error Anna and Perry McCollom.

PER CURIAM. This action was brought by the Arkansas Valley National Bank, plaintiff in error, in the district court of Pawnee county, against James M. McCollom and Anna McCollom, defendants in error, upon three promissory notes executed by them to plaintiff, which notes were secured by a mortgage executed by defendants upon their lands. Certain other parties were joined as defendants, which we deem not necessary to mention. Anna McCollom answered, and set up as her defense to the action that certain usurious interest had been charged; that she was entitled to certain credits on said notes, which had not been made by plaintiff in error, etc. The cause was tried to a jury, and resulted in a verdict against Anna McCollom, upon which the court entered judgment, and also rendered judgment by default against James M. McCollom. The judgment recites:

> "It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the court that the plaintiff do have and recover of and from the defendants J. M. McCollom and Anna McCollom the sum of $630.89, the amount so as aforesaid found to be due said plaintiff, and costs herein, taxed at $——; that said judgment bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum."

[1] It therefore clearly appears that this is a joint judgment. Motion to dismiss this appeal has been filed upon the ground, among others, that James M. McCollom has not been made a party hereto, that no case-made was served upon him or his attorney, that no summons in error has been issued or served upon him, and that, since the judgment was a joint judgment, he is a necessary party to this appeal. The motion will be sustained. It is a rule in this jurisdiction, too well settled to require the citation of authorities, that all parties to a joint judgment, whose interests will be affected by a reversal or modification of the judgment appealed from, must be made parties to the appeal, and, where such has not been done, the appeal will be dismissed.

[2] Plaintiff in error contends that Anna McCollom appeared and defended the action in her own right, and for and in behalf of her husband, in compliance with section 4685, Rev. Laws 1910, and for that reason James M. McCollom is not a necessary party to this appeal. This contention is without merit, in view of the fact that the judgment rendered herein was a joint judgment against both Anna and James M. McCollom. And the fact that the petition in error purports to be in the name of both defendants in error in no wise cures the neglect to properly lay the foundation for appeal in the lower court. Bowles et al. v. Cooney et al., 45 Okl. 517, 146 Pac. 221. Neither is there any merit in the contention that attorneys for defendants in error waived the issuance and service of summons in error and accepted service of case-made for said James M. McCollom, since said attorneys appeared only as attorneys for defendants Anna McCollom and Perry McCollom.

For the reasons stated, the appeal is dismissed.

STATE v. HUPPERT. (No. 7477.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑1130(4)—FAILURE TO FILE BRIEF—DISMISSAL.

Where the county attorney does not file any brief on behalf of the state on appeal, the appeal will be treated as having been abandoned and will be dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2970, 3205.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 3. Error from County Court, Rogers County; H. Tom Knight, Judge.

Action by the State of Oklahoma to confiscate an automobile; L. A. Huppert, intervener, and claimant. Judgment for intervener, and the State brings error. Dismissed.

W. M. Hall and D. M. Battenfield, both of Claremore, for the State. J. I. Howard and C. B. Holtzendorff, both of Claremore, for defendant in error.

HOOKER, C. This action was originally instituted in the county court of Rogers county by the state of Oklahoma, acting through the county attorney, to confiscate one certain automobile on account of it being used in the transportation of liquor in violation of law in said county. The proper proceedings were had for that purpose, and at the proper time L. A. Huppert intervened, claiming to hold a chattel mortgage duly recorded upon said automobile, and that, if the same was being used in transportation of liquor in violation of law, the same was without his knowledge or consent.

The cause was tried in the county court, and after the evidence for the intervener and the state was heard by the court, the jury being waived, a judgment was rendered in behalf of the intervener, directing the return of the automobile to him, from which judgment the state has appealed.

The county attorney has not filed any brief on behalf of the state, and under the rule of this court the appeal will be treated as having been abandoned, and the same is therefore dismissed.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

In re BYFORD'S WILL. (No. 7289.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. May 15, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. WILLS 🔑215—CONTEST—VALIDITY OF EXECUTION—CONSTRUCTION.

While, in a contest over the probate of a will, its construction is not before the court and cannot be determined, yet the court can examine the contents of the will as an incident, where it would aid in determining the validity of its execution.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. §§ 522, 523.]

2. WILLS 🔑25—EXECUTION—WILL OF FULL-BLOOD INDIAN — ACKNOWLEDGMENT AND APPROVAL.

The due execution and attestation of the will of a full-blood Indian member of the Five Civilized Tribes, devising real estate, which disinherits a parent, wife, spouse, or children of such Indian, involves the question of whether or not such will is acknowledged and approved by a judge of the United States Court for the Indian Territory, a United States Commissioner, or a judge of a county court of the state of Oklahoma pursuant to Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, § 23, 34 Stat. 145, as amended by section 8, Act Cong. May 27, 1908, c. 199, 35 Stat. 312.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 53.]

3. WILLS 🔑25 — WILL OF FULL-BLOOD INDIAN—CONSTRUCTION—DISINHERITANCE.

A devise by a full-blood Indian testator of his real estate, which deprives the parent, wife, spouse, or children of such testator of the estate therein to which they or any of them would succeed upon his death intestate, disinherits such parent, wife, spouse, or children, so deprived, within the provisions of Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, § 23, 34 Stat. 145.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 53.]

4. WILLS 🔑25—VALIDITY OF FULL-BLOOD INDIAN—ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The will of a full-blood Indian member of the Five Civilized Tribes, devising real estate, which disinherits the parent, wife, spouse, or children of such Indian, is invalid, unless acknowledged and approved in conformity with the provisions of Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, § 23, 34 Stat. 145, as amended by Act Cong. May 27, 1908, c. 199, § 8, 35 Stat. 312, and therefore not entitled to probate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 53.]

(Additional Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

5. WILLS 🔑25—INDIANS—CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTE — "INHERITED" — "DESCEND" — "DISINHERIT"—"DISHERISON"—"HEIR."

Under Act Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, § 22, 34 Stat. 145, providing that the adult heirs of any deceased Indian of either of the Five Civilized Tribes, whose selection has been made or to whom a deed or patent has been issued for his share of the lands of his tribe, may sell the land inherited from such deceased Indian, the word "inherited" is synonymous with the word "descend," as used in the original agreement with the Creek Nation, approved by Act Cong. March 1, 1901, c. 676, 31 Stat. 861, and the supplemental agreement approved by Act Cong. June 30, 1902, c. 1323, 32 Stat. 500, and covers those cases where heirs take by purchase as well as by inheritance, strictly speaking; the term "disinherit," in this connection, meaning the act by which the owner of an estate deprives the person of the right to inherit it who would otherwise be his heir, and the term "disherison" meaning disinheriting, depriving, or putting out of an inheritance, and the word "heir" relating to the right of succession to the realty of a person dying intestate (citing Words and Phrases, First Series, Disherison; Second Series, Inherit).

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Wills, Cent. Dig. § 53.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Descend; Heir.]

Commissioners' Opinion, Division No. 1. Error from District Court, Garvin County; F. B. Swank, Judge.

Petition by A. H. Shi for the probate of the will of Ellen Byford, deceased, opposed by Simeon Wesley and others. Judgment admitting the will to probate, and contestants bring error. Reversed and remanded.

W. H. Woods, United States Probate Atty., of Sapulpa, for plaintiffs in error. Tom Wallace, of Sapulpa, for defendant in error.

RUMMONS, C. This is a proceeding brought by the plaintiff in error to reverse the action of the district court of Garvin county admitting to probate the last will and testament of Ellen Byford, deceased. This cause was tried in the court below upon an agreed statement of facts, which is as follows:

"That Ellen Byford was a full-blood Choctaw Indian, and that her restrictions had never been > removed by the Department of the Interior of the United States, or any representative thereof. That the only property that the decedent undertook to alienate by will in this case consisted of real estate and is of the value of about $4,500, and is composed of her homestead allotment and surplus allotment as a member of the Choctaw Tribe of Indians. That at the time of her death she was an adult, and she has no issue born since March 4, 1906; and that she left no husband surviving her. That the said Ellen Byford died on the 11th day of May, 1914, and at the time of her death she was a resident of Garvin county, Okl. That the will in question herein was duly and legally executed, as provided by the laws of the state of Oklahoma, but the same was not acknowledged before, nor approved by, a judge of the United States Court in the Indian Territory, nor a United States Commissioner, nor any county judge of the county court of the state of Oklahoma. That at the time of the execution of the will aforesaid the said Ellen Byford was of a sound and disposing mind and memory, and that the will was duly and properly signed, as is provided by the law of the state of Oklahoma on the 17th day of January, 1914, and the will herein is the only will left by the decedent, Ellen Byford, and that the contestants, Simeon Wesley and Nelson Wesley and Edmond Wesley, are the direct issue (children) of the said Ellen Byford, and are full-blood Indians. That Joshua Wesley and Florence Bedford, named in said will, are grandchildren of the decedent, Ellen Byford, and are also full-blood Choctaw Indians.

>
> "It is agreed that the sole and only questions to be determined herein are:
>
> "First. Whether or not a full-blood Indian having no issue born since March 4, 1906, in being, may make a valid will disposing of real estate, including her homestead.
>
> "Second. Whether or not under the terms of the will above referred to (which will is hereby referred to, and made a part of this agreed statement of facts), there is such a disinheritance as will bring this will under the supervision of the congressional act of May 27, 1908, necessitating that said will be acknowledged before and approved by a judge of the United States Court of the Indian Territory, or a United States Commissioner, or a judge of the county court of the state of Oklahoma."

The will offered for probate authorized and directed the executor, named therein, to sell all of the real estate of which testator died seised, and directed the payment by said executor of certain legacies as follows: To Nelson Wesley, son of testator, the sum of $500 in installments of $50 every three months; to Edmond Wesley, son of testator, the sum of $400 in installments of $50 every three months; to Simeon Wesley, son of testator, the sum of $400 in installments of $50 every three months; to Florence Bedford, granddaughter of testator, the sum of $200 in installments of $50 every three months; to Moses Wesley, grandson of testator, the sum of $500 in installments of $50 every three months; and to Joshua Wesley, grandson of testator, all the residue of the estate of testator.

[1, 2] The only question involved in the determination of this case is whether or not the provisions of section 23 of the act of the Congress of April 26, 1906, as amended by section 8 of the act of the Congress of May 27, 1908, governing the execution of wills, devising real estate, by full-blood Indians, are applicable to the will here in question. Said section 23 is as follows:

> "Every person of lawful age and sound mind may by last will and testament devise and bequeath all of his estate, real and personal, and all interest therein: Provided, that no will of a full-blood Indian devising real estate shall be valid, if such last will and testament disinherits the parent, wife, spouse, or children of such full-blood Indian, unless acknowledged before and approved by a judge of the United States Court for the Indian Territory, or a United States Commissioner." 34 Stat. 145.

Said section 8 is as follows:

> "That section twenty-three of an act entitled 'An act to provide for the final disposition of the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes,' approved April twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred and six, is hereby amended by adding at the end of said section, the words, 'or a judge of a county court of the state of Oklahoma.'" 35 Stat. 312.

It is argued by counsel for defendant in error that, as it has been held by this court that, in a proceeding for the probate of a will, the only question to be determined by the court is the factum of the will or devisavit vel non, the question of whether or not the provisions of the will are valid and constitute a good devise or bequest was not before the court, and therefore, it having been agreed that the will in question was executed in conformity to the laws of Oklahoma, it was properly admitted to probate.

Unfortunately for defendant in error, this is no longer an open question in this jurisdiction. In the case of Bell v. Davis, 155 Pac. 1132, this court says:

> "Still another point made in one of the briefs as a reason for denying the probate of the will is that its execution was insufficient because it was not acknowledged before a judge of a United States Court, or a United States Commissioner, or a judge of a county court of the state of Oklahoma. This point depends upon whether or not decedent, a full-blood Indian, left surviving him parents, wife, or children, and disinherited some or all of them; and a consideration of the point does not involve a construction of the will, further than as an incident, and to the extent of determining the validity of its execution. * * * This will having been executed since the passage of the act of May 27, 1908, supra, if it does disinherit such persons, it is insufficient in its execution, as it was not acknowledged before and approved by a judge of a county court of Oklahoma."

In the case of Homer v. McCurtain, 40 Okl. 406, this court holds that whether a will is acknowledged before or approved by a judge of the United States Court for the Indian Territory, a United States Commissioner, or a judge of the county court of the state of Oklahoma, involves the question of due execution and attestation. In re Impunnubbee's Estate, 152 Pac. 346. Nor does the conclusion reached by this court in the cases above cited conflict with the cases of Taylor v. Hilton, 23 Okl. 354, 100 Pac. 537, 18 Ann. Cas. 385; Nesbitt v. Gragg, 36 Okl. 703, 129 Pac. 705; In re Allen's Estate, 44 Okl. 392, 144 Pac. 1055; and Chouteau v. Chouteau, 152 Pac. 373—relied upon by defendant in error. In those cases the question whether the formalities and requirements connected with the acknowledgment and approval of wills devising real estate, which disinherited persons belonging to the classes mentioned in said Acts of Congress, had been complied with, was not before the court and was not discussed by it.

[3-5] It therefore follows that the questions whether or not the will in question comes within the provisions of the acts of the Congress of April 26, 1906, and May 27, 1908, as to acknowledgment and approval of the will of full-blood Indians devising real estate, and whether or not said will has been executed in conformity therewith, were before the trial court for determination and are now before us for consideration. Whether or not this will was duly executed and a valid will under the provisions of the acts of the Congress above referred to depends upon the interpretation and definition of the word "disinherits," contained in the statutes. On behalf of defendant in error, it has been ably and ingeniously argued that the sons of the testator, plaintiffs in error, were not disinherited by the terms of said will, because provision was made for each of them therein. If the word "disinherit" were given the popular meaning which attaches to it, there might be ground for the contention of the defendant in error; but in construing this act of the Congress we must apply the legal meaning attached to the words used therein. In construing said acts, we must also take into consideration the history of legislation by the Congress with reference to the lands of the Indians and the apparent policy of the Congress in relation thereto.

Black's Law Dictionary defines "inherit": "To take by inheritance. Take as heir on the death of the ancestor." "Disinherit": "The act by which the owner of an estate deprives the person of the right to inherit the same who would otherwise be his heir." Bouvier's Law Dictionary defines "disinherit": "An act by which a person deprives his heir who, without such act, would inherit." "Disherison" is defined to be: "Disinheriting, depriving or putting out of an inheritance." 3 Words and Phrases, First Series, 2102. "To inherit is to take as an heir at law by descent or distribution." "The word 'inherited' as applied to real estate implies taking immediately from the testator upon his death as heirs." "'Inherit,' * * * as used in a will directing that testator's grandchildren are to inherit equally as one of his heirs at law, means to take by law and not under the will as one of the heirs at law of the estate. The words 'inherit' and 'heir' in a technical sense relate to the right of succession to the real estate of a person dying intestate, and when used in a statute, as well as in a will or other instrument, they will be taken to have been employed in their legal sense." 4 Words and Phrases, First Series, 3606. "The term 'inherited,' as used in Act of Cong. April 26, 1906, c. 1876, § 22, providing that the adult heirs of any deceased Indian of either of the Five Civilized Tribes, whose selection had been made or to whom a deed or patent has been issued for his share of the lands of the tribe to which he belongs or belonged, may sell the lands inherited from such deceased Indians, is synonymous with the word 'descend' as used in the original agreement with the Creek Nation, approved by Act Cong. March 1, 1901, c. 676, 31 Stat. 861, and the Supplemental Agreement approved by Act Cong. June 30, 1902, c. 1323, 32 Stat. 500, and covers those cases where heirs take by purchase as well as by inheritance strictly speaking." 2 Words and Phrases, Second Series, 1070; Shultis v. MacDougal (C. C.) 162 Fed. 331.

The history of the legislation by the Congress governing the lands of Indians, and particularly the lands allotted to full-bloods, shows conclusively that it has been the purpose of the Congress as to the full-bloods to encourage in every way the keeping and holding by such full-bloods of the lands allotted them and to discourage and restrict the alienation of such lands by the full-bloods. This being the case, we conceive that it was the purpose of the Congress by the provisions of act of March 26, 1906, under consideration, to restrict the alienation by will of the lands of full-blood members of the Five Civilized Tribes from their heirs at law and to throw around the execution of wills made by full-blood members of said tribes, seeking to alienate from their heirs at law the lands which would otherwise descend to them, additional safeguards and formalities. Holding this view of the purpose of Congress, and taking into consideration the legal meaning of the word "disinherit" as defined in the citations above quoted, we have reached the conclusion that any provision attempted to be made in the will of a full-blood member of any of the Five Civilized Tribes, which seeks to deprive or does deprive any heir at law of any part of the estate in lands which he would otherwise inherit by the law of descent and succession of this state upon the death of testator, is an attempt to disinherit such heir, and, if such heirs are of the class of persons described in act of the Congress of March 26, 1906, such will must be executed, acknowledged, and approved in conformity with the provisions of said act, or it will be invalid.

If the testator may bequeath to any heir at law, who is among the class of persons mentioned in said act of Congress, a sum of money in lieu of the estate in his lands which would descend to such heir upon his death intestate, the sufficiency of the sum of money to be bequeathed in lieu of such inheritable interest cannot be determined by the courts as a matter of law, and the validity of the will would be determined upon expert testimony as to the value of real estate, a matter both uncertain and indefinite, or the testator may at his will provide a bequest so small as to be in effect a total disinheritance in the popular acceptation of said term. We feel convinced that a devise by a testator of any real estate which deprives an heir at law of the estate to which that heir would succeed upon his death intestate is a legal disinheritance, and such heirs at law are thereby disinherited as to such real estate. Having reached this conclusion, it is apparent from the agreed statement of facts and the findings of the court in the instant case that the will disinherits the plaintiffs in error, and that some of the plaintiffs in error are among the classes of persons described in section 23 of the act of the Congress March 26, 1906, and that said will, not having been executed, acknowledged, and approved in accordance with the provisions of said act, is invalid and, and not being sufficiently executed, was not entitled to probate.

The judgment of the trial court should therefore be reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to the trial court to proceed in accordance with this opinion.

PER CURIAM. Adopted in whole.

GARLAND et al. v. UNION TRUST CO. et al.

(No. 6265.)

(Supreme Court of Oklahoma. April 24, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MORTGAGES 🔑307 — USURY 🔑34, 48 — RATE OF INTEREST—MORTGAGE LOAN—REMEDY.

The mortgage sought to be foreclosed was dated May 25, 1912, secured the repayment of a loan of $50,000, evidenced by 50 gold notes for $1,000 each, the first two being due December 1, 1912. All were payable to bearer or the registered holder thereof, with 6 per cent. interest per annum from June 1, 1912, and each provided that if any installment of principal or interest was not paid when due, "the principal of this and all of said notes shall become due and payable," and "said principal sum, if not paid at maturity, shall bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum with annual rests after maturity until paid." At the time the evidence of debt was made, executed and delivered, mortgagee deducted $2,500 from the principal sum of the loan, and exacted of the mortgagors a note for $2,750, payable one year after date, with 8 per cent. interest per annum until paid, upon which, on November 25, 1912, mortgagors paid the semiannual interest, amounting to $110. At the time the first two notes fell due, December 1, 1912, mortgagors defaulted, but on December 21st paid, as interest on the loan, $1,572.22, whereupon the mortgagee elected to accelerate the maturity of the principal of the loan and sued to foreclose therefor. Held, accepting the concession that the $2,500 deducted to be interest paid, and the mortgage of $2,750 to be interest charged on the loan, and the $110 semiannual interest to be also interest paid, as all interest paid and charged for the entire time the loan had to run, had the contract been performed, did not exceed the lawful rate, the trial court did right in holding the transaction free from usury. Held, further, that because the mortgagee, under the contract, by the exercise of his option accelerating the maturity of the loan, was entitled to demand more than the amount of the loan with legal interest to the time the loan is called does not make the transaction usurious. Held, further, that neither was the evidence of debt usurious upon its face because it provided for interest on the principal sum at 6 per cent. per annum before maturity and 10 per cent. thereafter, with annual rests until paid. Whether the increase of 4 per cent. was for the "detention" of money, in contravention of the statute, or was a penalty, being an increase to the maximum legal rate of interest only, the evidence of debt was a valid contract for the payment of interest. Held, further, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover on and have foreclosed its mortgage for $2,750, for, having been executed to secure the payment of interest charged and unearned at the time of the acceleration of the maturity of the principal debt of $50,000, said $2,750 mortgage, like the remaining unpaid interest coupons securing the interest on said debt of $50,000, was discharged.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 864, 897; Usury, Cent. Dig. §§ 83–89, 101, 102.]

2. MORTGAGES 🔑489—FORECLOSURE—INTEREST—SET-OFF.

The mortgage sought to be foreclosed was dated May 25, 1912, to secure the payment of a loan of $50,000, evidenced by 50 gold notes of $1,000 each, the two first being due December 1, 1912. All were payable to bearer or the registered holder thereof, with 6 per cent. interest per annum from June 1, 1912, and each provided that if any installment of principal or interest was not paid when due, "The principal of this and all of said notes shall become due and payable. * * *" At the time the evidence of debt was made, executed, and delivered, mortgagee deducted $2,500 from the principal sum of the loan, and exacted of the mortgagors a note for $2,750, payable 1 year after date, with 8 per cent. interest per annum until paid, upon which, on November 25, 1912, mortgagors paid the semiannual interest, amounting to $110. At the time the first two notes fell due, December 1, 1912, mortgagors defaulted, but on December 21st paid as interest on the loan $1,572.22, whereupon the mortgagee elected to accelerate the maturity of the principal of the loan and sued to foreclose therefor, which was done, whereupon the court rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff for $50,000, with interest thereon at 6 per cent. from December 1, 1912, to the date of the judgment, amounting in all to $52,666.67, together with 10 per cent. of that amount for an attorney's fee. Held, error, in that the court should have allowed interest at 6 per cent. on the $50,000 from June 1, 1912, to the date of the judgment, which, principal and interest, would be $54,166.66. And for this amount the court should have rendered judgment, had not defendants, on May 25, 1912, already paid $2,500, conceded to be interest in advance, upon which there should be allowed them interest at 6 per cent. from that date up to the date of the judgment that is, in all, $2,711.16, and had not defendants also already, on November 25, 1912, paid $110 as the semiannual interest on the $2,750 mortgage, upon which a like rate of interest should be allowed them from that time up to the date of judgment, or in all $115.64, and had not defendants also paid, on December 21, 1912, $1,572.22 as interest on the debt, upon which should be allowed 6 per cent. interest up to the date of the judgment, or in all, $1,642.64, making the total of interest paid by defendants in advance

$4,469.44, being an overpayment of interest on the debt of $302.78, which should be credited thereon, leaving due on the principal loan $49,679.22, for which the court should have rendered judgment, plus 10 per cent. of that amount as an attorney's fee, or in all $54,647.14.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1425–1430, 1470.]

3. USURY 🔑101—SET-OFF OF USURY—FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGE.

The second mortgage upon the same property was made, executed, and delivered to secure a loan of $15,750 for 3 years, with coupons thereto attached for $787.50 each, payable semiannually, with interest at 10 per cent. per annum. $750 was deducted from the principal at the time of the loan, and retained as interest paid upon the loan, and the first coupon was paid when due. Upon failure to pay the second coupon, the mortgagee exercised his option, and accelerated the payment of the loan and foreclosed, whereupon he was met with a plea of usury, which the court sustained, and set off the debt with $4,650, and rendered judgment in favor of the mortgagee, foreclosing his mortgage for the balance of the debt. On appeal by the mortgagors, assigning that the court erred in allowing a set-off for said amount only, held, construing Rev. Laws 1910, § 1005, that the $750 deducted from the principal at the time the loan was made and the $787.50 paid to take up the first interest coupon, or in all, $1,537.50, was interest paid on the loan, which left 2 years and 6 months' interest charged and unpaid, or $3,937.50, twice the amount of which, or $7,875, the mortgagors were entitled to have set off against the mortgaged debt, and not $4,650, as found by the trial court, leaving due thereon $7,875, plus 10 per cent. thereof as an attorney's fee, for the payment of which the mortgage should be foreclosed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Usury, Cent. Dig. §§ 235–240.]

Error from District Court, Oklahoma County; W. R. Taylor, Judge.

Action by the Union Trust Company and the Union Trust Company, as trustee, against D. N. Garland and wife and J. C. Barr and wife on notes, and to foreclose a mortgage or deed of trust, and against one Silas Rowland, in which W. J. Walker intervened by answer and cross-petition. Decree for foreclosure, and for foreclosure by defendant Walker against defendants Garland and Barr, and such defendants bring error. Reversed and remanded, with directions.

See, also, 154 Pac. 676.

Stuart, Cruce & Cruce and L. D. Mitchell, all of Oklahoma City, for plaintiffs in error. Ames, Chambers, Lowe & Richardson, of Oklahoma City, for defendants in error.

TURNER, J. On January —, 1913, in the district court of Oklahoma county, Union Trust Company, a corporation, and the same Company as trustee, defendant in error, sued D. N. Garland and Inez, his wife, J. C. Barr and Ollie, his wife, plaintiffs in error, upon their 50 certain real estate gold notes of $1,000 each, made, executed, and delivered by them on May 25, 1912, to the Union Trust Company as trustee, all of which later came into its hands as registered holder. Two of said notes were payable December 1, 1912; 3 June 1, 1913; 2 December 1, 1913; 3 June 1, 1914; 2 December 1, 1914; 3 June 1, 1915; and 35 June 1, 1918. Each was made payable to bearer or to the registered holder thereof, and provided for 6 per cent. interest per annum from June 1, 1912. Each further provided that the principal sum, "if not paid at maturity, shall bear interest at the rate of 10% per annum with annual rests after maturity until paid." At the same time plaintiff sued to foreclose a mortgage or deed of trust, in favor of the Union Trust Company as trustee, given by defendants upon a certain 10-story building in Oklahoma City to secure the payment of said notes. Among other things the petition alleged that, by reason of defendants' failure to pay the two $1,000 notes falling due December 1, 1912, plaintiff had elected to declare the whole debt due and payable, pursuant to the terms of the mortgage, which provides that in case default should be made in the payment of any coupon or notes thereby secured when the same became due, the trustee may, upon certain conditions (complied with) declare the principal of all notes thereby secured immediately due and payable; that, although its lien was prior to that of all others upon the property, one Silas Rowland claimed some interest therein inferior to that of plaintiff's lien, and prayed judgment for the full amount of the mortgage debt, to wit, $50,000, with interest at 10 per cent. per annum and an additional 10 per cent. as an attorney's fee, and for a foreclosure of the mortgage, and that Rowland's interest in the property, if any he have, be declared inferior and subject to the lien of the mortgage.

For answer defendants, after denying every allegation in plaintiff's petition, except such as were specifically admitted, as a second defense, admitted the execution and delivery of the notes and mortgage sued, and alleged that the consideration for same was the loan of $50,000; that plaintiff, through its officers and agents, knowingly and wrongfully and with intent to violate the laws of the state, with reference to the charging of usurious interest, charged, reserved, and received from defendants, and that defendants paid plaintiff $2,500 cash at the time of the loan as interest for the use of said money from the date of the execution of said instruments until December 21, 1912, and executed to plaintiff a note for $2,750, bearing 8 per cent. interest, and payable one year thereafter, and made interest payments amounting to $1,572.22, or in all $6,822.22, being interest exacted during that time at the rate of 27 per cent. per annum; and that by reason of such usurious charge defendants were entitled to set off against plaintiff's demand twice said sum so reserved, to wit, $13,644.44. For further answer defendants submitted a calculation to show that on the face of the evidence of debt and the commission note of $2,750, the usury reserved and charged was $12,830, and prayed that double said amount, or $25,660, be set off against plaintiff's demand. For further answer they allege for the reason that, by the terms of the bonds and the coupons thereto attached, there is reserved and charged 6 per cent. interest per annum upon the bonds before maturity and 10 per cent. thereafter until paid, the same are usurious because, they say, this increase of 4 per cent. was for the "detention" of money in contravention of the statute, and entitles defendants to set off against the debt twice the amount thereof. By amendment a count was added to the petition, praying judgment on the note for $2,750 and for a foreclosure of the mortgage by which the same was secured; said note having matured since the beginning of the suit. For reply, after a specific denial of all new matter set up in the answer, the Union Trust Company, after reciting the fact of the loan and the dates upon which it was payable, said:

> "That at the time of the execution of the notes or bonds and deed of trust securing the payment of said indebtedness the said defendants above named paid to plaintiff the sum of $2,500, and executed and delivered to the Union Trust Company their note for $2,750, with interest at 8 per cent. per annum, payable on May 25, 1913, secured by a second mortgage upon said property, and that plaintiff is still the owner and holder of said note, and same has never been transferred or negotiated and is unpaid.
>
> "Plaintiff further states that the sum of $2,500, which was paid to plaintiff at the time of the making of said loan, the sum of $2,750 which the defendants promised to pay plaintiffs on May 25, 1913, together with the several interest payments alleged to have been made by the said defendants to plaintiff, was a part of the interest which accrued upon said loan for the entire time said loan run, and was not payment of interest for the dates set forth in the answer and cross-petition of said defendants, and was a part performance of the entire contract.
>
> "Plaintiffs further state that under the terms of said contract there would have accrued upon the $2,000 payable December 1, 1912, at 6 per cent. the sum of $62; that there would have accrued on the $3,000 which became due on June 1, 1913, the sum of $165; that there would have accrued on the $2,000 which became due and payable on December 1, 1913, the sum of $182; that there would have accrued on the $3,000 which matured on June 1, 1914, at 6 per cent. the sum of $302; and there would have accrued on the $3,000 due and payable on June 1, 1915, at 6 per cent. the sum of $543; and that there would have accrued on the sum of $35,000, which became due and payable on June 1, 1918, at 6 per cent., the sum of $12,635; that there would have accrued on the note for $2,750 which matured May 25, 1913, at 8 per cent., the sum of $220, which with the $2,500 paid at the time of the execution of the papers and the $2,750 evidenced by said note due May 1, 1913, would have amounted in the aggregate to $18,740, being all of the interest which the plaintiffs exacted and which the defendants contracted to pay on said loan.
>
> "Plaintiffs further state that under the law they were entitled to collect interest at 10 per cent. per annum; that the interest which would have accrued on $2,000 maturing December 1, 1912, at 10 per cent. would have amounted to $103.33; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $3,000 which matured on June 1, 1913, at 10 per cent., the sum of $305; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $2,000 due December 1, 1913, at 10 per cent., the sum of $303.30; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $3,000 due December 1, 1914, at 10 per cent., the sum of $605; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $2,000 due December 1, 1914, at 10 per cent., the sum of $503.33; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $3,000 due June 1, 1915, at 10 per cent. the sum of $905; that plaintiffs are entitled to collect on the $35,000 due June 1, 1918, at 10 per cent., the sum of $———, amounting in the aggregate to $23,783.32, being the maximum amount of interest which plaintiffs were entitled to collect under the law.
>
> "Plaintiffs further state that under the terms of said contract as hereinbefore stated, defendants were only required to pay the sum of $19,740, and the plaintiffs were entitled to collect under the law the sum of $23,783.32, there being a difference of $4,043.32 which plaintiffs were entitled under the law to collect, and which amount is less than the defendants agreed to pay or the plaintiffs exacted from the said defendants, and by reason thereof said loan was not usurious"

—and asked that the same be foreclosed. Then came one W. J. Walker and intervened, and for answer and cross-petition, after denying generally the allegations set forth in the petition, set up a mortgage of $15,750 on the premises made, executed, and delivered to Silas Rowland by Garland and wife and Barr and wife on May 25, 1912, and by said Rowland, for value and before maturity, assigned to him, and prayed that the same be decreed a first lien on the property and foreclosed. And after Garland and wife and Barr and wife had answered and pleaded that the same was usurious and Walker had joined issue by general denial, and Barr had pleaded that he, pending the suit, had been adjudged a bankrupt, and Rowland had disclaimed, there was trial to the court upon the issue of usury joined between the Union Trust Company and Garland and wife and Barr and wife in the enforcement of plaintiff's $50,000 mortgage, whereupon the court on October 20, 1913, found, from the evidence and the agreed statement of facts, the facts substantially to be: That on May 25, 1912, defendants, to secure a loan of $50,000, executed the notes and mortgage sought to be foreclosed; that the notes were for $1,000 each, payable as pleaded, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, payable semiannually; that when the mortgage was executed, defendants paid plaintiff, as a commission for making the loan, $2,500, and also executed to plaintiff the promissory note of $2,750 declared on; that each of the $1,000 notes contained:

> "Said principal sum if not paid at maturity shall bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum with annual rests after maturity until paid,"

—and the mortgage reserved to the mortgagee the right to accelerate the payment of the debt, as pleaded, if any installment of the principal or interest was not paid when due; and also contained the words "appraisement waived," and provided for an attorney's fee, etc. The court further found plaintiff to be the owner; that the mortgage was duly recorded; that default had been made in the payment of the two notes of $1,000 each, due December 1, 1912; that plaintiff had duly declared the default and its election to declare the entire debt thereby secured due and payable; that plaintiff was entitled to a foreclosure thereof, and that there was due and owing thereon $52,666.67, with interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from that date, October 20, 1913, together with $5,266.66 as an attorney's fee, for all of which he gave judgment and decreed the same to be the first lien upon the property. The court further found that when defendants executed to plaintiff their promissory note for $2,750, they also executed to plaintiff a mortgage on the same property to secure its payment as pleaded; that said mortgage contained the words "appraisement waived," and also provided for 10 per cent. additional as an attorney's fee in the event of foreclosure; that the same was duly recorded; that plaintiff was entitled to foreclose it, and that there was due and owing thereon $2,953.08, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from October 20, 1913, together with $295.30 as an attorney's fee, for all of which he gave judgment and decreed the same to be a second lien upon the property; that the title of the defendants and Walker in and to the mortgaged property was inferior and subject to the plaintiff's judgment, and so ordered, adjudged, and decreed; and that the property be sold to satisfy the debt. Thereafter, on the issues tried to the court upon the issue of usury joined between the defendants and Walker in his suit to foreclose his mortgage, the court found that there was usury in that transaction to the extent of $4,650 only, and that Walker was entitled to recover $11,100 only thereon, together with $1,500 as an attorney's fee and to have his mortgage foreclosed, and so adjudged and decreed, to reverse which defendants only bring the case here, and contend the court erred in holding that there was no usury in plaintiff's mortgage, and not in holding there was usury in the Walker mortgage, but in holding that $4,650 only was the extent of the usury therein.

[1] 39 Cyc. 918, 919, says that, in order to constitute usury, there must be an unlawful intent; the subject-matter must be money or money's equivalent; a loan or forbearance; the sum loaned be absolutely or conditionally repayable; and that there must be an exaction for the use of the loan of something in excess of that allowed by law. Rev. Laws 1910, § 1002, reads:

> "Interest is the compensation allowed for the use or forbearance, or detention of money, or its equivalent."

Section 1004 prescribes that:

> "The legal rate of interest shall not exceed six per cent. in the absence of any contract as to the rate of interest, and by contract parties may agree upon any rate not to exceed ten per cent. per annum. Said rates of six and ten per cent. shall be respectively, the legal rate and the maximum contract rates of interest."

And, section 1005:

> "The taking, receiving, reserving or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section shall be deemed * * * usury."

There was no usury in this transaction. In Metz v. Winne, 15 Okl. 1, 79 Pac. 223, the court said in the syllabus:

> "The law of this territory prohibits the taking or contracting for any higher rate of interest than 12 per cent. per annum, and makes it unlawful to deduct more than one year's interest from the loan in advance, but it is not unlawful to compute the interest for the entire time the loan is to run, and contract to pay such sum in installments of such sums and at such times as the parties may by contract agree."

This is what was, in effect, done here, and the question is: Computing the interest for the entire time the loan had to run, does the interest reserved exceed the legal rate? If so, the loan is usurious; otherwise not. In other words, the test is as laid down in J. I. Case, etc., Co. v. Tomlin et al., 174 Mo. App. 512, 161 S. W. 286. There, referring to Taylor v. Buzard, 114 Mo. App. 622, 90 S. W. 126, the court said:

> "In that case the test of usury in a contract is said to be 'whether it would, if performed, result in securing a greater rate of profit on the subject-matter than is allowed by law.'"

Accepting, then, the concession that the $2,500, or, rather, to be exact, the $2,325 (the difference is immaterial) deducted from the principal sum at the time the loan was made and the $2,750 note executed at the same time, together with interest thereon as reserved therein ($110 of which, being semiannual interest thereon, was paid when due), were for interest paid and charged and not a commission, as found by the court, applying the test stated, the contract, if performed, would have exacted of defendants interest as follows:

Principal.	From What Date.	Date Due.	Time.	Rate.	Amt. of Interest.
$ 2,000	6-1-12	12-1-12	6 mo.	6%	$ 60
3,000	" " "	6-1-13	1 yr.	"	180
2,000	" " "	12-1-13	18 mo.	"	180
3,000	" " "	6-1-14	2 yr.	"	360
2,000	" " "	12-1-14	30 mo.	"	300
3,000	" " "	6-1-15	3 yr.	"	450
35,000	" " "	6-1-18	6 yr.	"	12,600

Total interest provided for in the bonds.....	$14,220
Interest collected in advance....................	2,325
Note for additional interest....................	2,750
Interest on $2,750 note for 1 year at 8 per cent.	220
Total interest collectable under the contract	$19,515

Or a little over 8 per cent. interest on the loan, which, of course, was not usurious. In Georgia Southern R. Co. v. Trust Co., 94 Ga. 306, 21 S. E. 701, 32 L. R. A. 208, 47 Am. St. Rep. 153, it is said:

> "A calculation will show that if the bonds ran to full maturity, as contemplated, the lender of the money would not receive, in the aggregate, as much as 8 per cent. per annum for the use of the money, although at the beginning he put out on each bond only $850, and at the end received $1,000. The $150 added to the 6 per cent. interest annually received would not amount to as much as 8 per cent. per annum on $850 for the full term. That the bonds by their terms bore interest from a date previous to their delivery makes no difference, because, notwithstanding this fact, the gross amount of interest for the full term would not have been equal to 8 per cent. per annum. So the original contract, if the bonds ran 40 years, was not usurious; and it does not appear that they contained any stipulation which would prevent a fair and legal adjustment of the interest between the parties in case the bonds became due earlier because of a default in paying interest. Nor does it appear that in providing for the maturity of the bonds in case of such default, there was any device or contrivance to cover up usury."

This was the method adopted to determine whether there was usury in the loan sought to be collected in Metz v. Winne, supra. In that case Metz, on August 27, 1901, borrowed of Winne $600 for 10 years and executed, payable to him, a promissory note for that amount, together with 10 interest coupon notes for $42 each. At the same time he also executed, payable to Winne, a promissory note for $150, due September 1, 1902, together with another note of $30, due at the same time. The $600 note and coupon notes were secured by a first, and the $150 and $30 notes were secured by a second, mortgage on the same property. Winne assigned the $600 note and interest coupons; and, when Metz failed to pay the first coupon when due, Winne took it up and sued on it, as well as on the $150 note, and to foreclose his second mortgage, which contained a provision that, in the event the mortgagor failed to pay any interest note secured by the first mortgage, the holder of the second might pay it, and the sum so paid should become a lien secured by the second, and the holder thereof entitled to an immediate foreclosure. Defendant pleaded usury; and, in holding such there was not, Burford, C. J., said:

"The facts specially pleaded in the answer are that the defendants borrowed from Winne $600, payable in 10 years, with interest at 7 per cent., and that they executed 1 note for $600 and 10 notes for $42 each, representing the interest for the 10 respective years; that they also executed the note for $150, which was for additional interest, and aver that such sum was usurious and excessive. A mere matter of mathematical calculation is sufficient to refute the conclusion of the pleader. Parties may contract for a rate of interest not to exceed 12 per cent. The interest on $600 for 10 years at 12 per cent. is $720. The interest contracted for as shown by these notes is as follows: Ten notes, $42 each, $420; 1 note, $30 and 1 note $150, total, $600, which is $120 less than the maximum interest the mortgagee was entitled under the law to deduct. It is argued that the law does not permit more than 1 year's interest to be deducted in advance. Section 848, Wilson's Stat. 1903, provides: 'The interest which would become due at the end of a term for which a loan is made, not exceeding one year's interest in all, may be deducted from the loan in advance if the parties thus agree.' But it is not alleged or contended that any portion of the interest claimed was deducted from the loan in advance. On the contrary, it appears from the pleading that the mortgagors borrowed and received $600, and executed interest notes, payable in installments after the first year. If they comply with the contract, they will have the use of the principal sum for the period of 10 years, and the presumption is that they will do so. We know of no law that will prevent a borrower from paying all the interest on a loan at the end of 1 year, or in such installments as he may desire and the parties may agree upon, so long as the person making the loan does not exact over 12 per cent. per annum, nor deduct more than 1 year's interest from the amount of the loan in advance. The courts do not undertake to make contracts for individuals, nor to relieve them from burdensome obligations voluntarily assumed and entered into."

To be sure, in that case no interest was taken out of the principal sum, while here $2,325, or less than 5 per cent. was so taken, and a note executed for $2,750 payable in 1 year. But this distinction makes no difference, for, referring to the Winne Case, Kane, J., in Covington v. Fisher, 22 Okl. 207, 97 Pac. 615, said:

"It is true that in that case the interest was not taken out of the principal sum, but the case holds that the mortgagee had a right to contract for the payment of a part of the interest covering the entire period of the 10-year loan at the end of the first year, and for such a sum to be paid at that time as would be largely in excess of the maximum legal rate, if computed only for the period of a year; but the court holds it proper to make the computation for the entire time, and the principle to be drawn from the opinion is that the contracting for the payment of interest in advance does not make the transaction usurious."

We are therefore of opinion that there is no merit in defendants' contention, in effect, that the $2,325 deducted as interest in advance, together with the exaction of a note for $2,750, with interest thereon at 8 per cent. for a year, and the further exaction of $1,572.22 as interest on the loan up to December 21, 1912, or in all, $6,822.22, was the exaction of usury at the rate of some 27 per cent. for a loan of $50,000 from the date of the mortgage up to that time. This for the reason that, although such rate seems excessive computed, as it is, for a part only of the time the loan had to run, the same is not excessive when those payments are spread out over the entire time the contract, if performed, had to run, as we have seen.

But before passing this $50,000 mortgage, it might be well to add that, because plaintiff, under the contract, by the exercise of its option accelerating the maturity of the loan, was entitled to demand and receive more than the amount of the loan, with legal interest to the time the loan was called, it does not follow that the plea of usury should prevail. On this point 29 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 508, says:

"A provision by way of penalty accelerating the maturity of a loan on default in payments by the borrower will not necessarily render the loan usurious, though through the exercise of such option the lender may be entitled at law to demand the return of more than the amount lent with legal interest. Thus, where in consideration of a loan an obligation is taken for an amount as principal greater than the amount of the loan, but the interest stipulated therefor is less than the highest legal rate, so that if > the contract is carried out according to its terms no more than the principal with legal interest will be paid, a provision that upon default in the payment of the interest the entire principal shall become due at the option of the lender will not render the transaction necessarily usurious, though upon such default and the exercise by the lender of his option more than the amount lent with legal interest to the time when the loan is called will be payable. And the same rule has been applied where installment notes were given for the principal and interest for the full term of the loan."

In Goodale v. Wallace et al., 19 S. D. 405, 103 N. W. 651, 117 Am. St. Rep. 962, 9 Ann. Cas. 545, the court said:

> "It is further contended by the appellants that as there was a stipulation in the mortgage that if the mortgagors should fail to pay any portion of the above-mentioned sum, either principal or interest, promptly at the times they should become due, the whole sum—both principal and interest—should at once become due and collectable, therefore the contract was clearly usurious, as the whole amount of the principal of the notes would become due and payable upon default in the payment of the first note; but this contention is untenable, for the reason that such stipulation is in the nature of a penalty from which the mortgagors could relieve themselves by a prompt payment of the notes when due. Webb on Usury, § 120; 2 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, p. 468. The author, in speaking of this class of cases, says: 'So, if the provision for the payment of excessive interest is dependent on contingency which the borrower may avoid by paying the debt, with legal interest, the loan will not be deemed usurious.' State v. Elliott, 61 Kan. 518, 59 Pac. 1047; Tholen v. Duffy, 7 Kan. 405. A similar clause is frequently inserted in mortgages, but the stipulation has never been held as constituting a contract for the payment of usurious interest, so far as our researches extend."

There is no authority holding the contrary, so far as we know. By this we do not mean to intimate that plaintiff, had it sued therefor, which it did not, was entitled to recover in this action on the interest coupons not due at the time the trustee accelerated the maturity of the principal debt and foreclosed therefor. On the contrary, on this point, we mean to say that recovery upon those coupons could not be had for the reason that the moment the principal debt and interest, accrued up to the time to which the maturity of the debt was accelerated, are paid, the remaining undue interest coupons are discharged. This is in keeping with authority (Dugan et al. v. Lewis et al., 79 Tex. 246, 14 S. W. 1024, 12 L. R. A. 93, 23 Am. St. Rep. 332; R. R. Co. v. Mer. Trust Co., 94 Ga. 306, 21 S. E. 701; Goodale v. Wallace, supra; Moore et al. v. Cameron et al., 93 N. C. 51), and is plaintiff's theory of the case. It is also carried into the judgment of the court who permitted a recovery for the principal debt only, together with interest thereon at 6 per cent. from December 1, 1912, or the time when the first two notes fell due, up to the date of the judgment. There was no error in this, so far as the question of usury is concerned, and the judgment must stand, provided, of course, the court did not err in the amount of interest due on the loan.

But, say defendants, this contract is usurious because it provides for interest on the principal sum at 6 per cent. per annum before maturity, or from June 1, 1912, until paid, and, if not paid at maturity, 10 per cent. thereafter, with annual rests until paid. And it is contended by counsel for defendants, not that this increased rate of interest is a penalty and unenforceable, but that it renders the contract usurious because, they say, this increase of 4 per cent. was for the "detention" of money in contravention of the statute, supra. Not so. Being an increase to the maximum legal rate only, the contract was a valid contract for the payment of interest. 39 Cyc. 953, denominates such excess of interest as a penalty, but adds:

> "Whether such penalty for the nonperformance of the contract is enforceable or not, all authorities are agreed that the contract is not usurious, but remains a valid and enforceable obligation against the debtor."

And so we have held in a case where, as here, the increase was the extent of the maximum legal rate only. National Life Ins. Co. v. Hale, 154 Pac. 536, L. R. A. 1916E, 721. In that case this court, speaking through Collier, C., held that where a promissory note drawing 5½ per cent. interest, payable semiannually, contained a clause providing that the rate shall be increased to the maximum legal rate of interest, in the event of default in payment of either principal or interest at maturity, such increased rate was a valid contract for the payment of interest.

[2] We said just now that the court did right in holding there was no usury in the $50,000 loan, and that the judgment of the court in favor of plaintiff for $52,666.67 (principal and interest from December 1, 1912, the date the mortgagors defaulted in the payment of the two $2,000 notes, up to the date of the judgment) must stand, unless the court erred in calculating the interest due on the debt up to that time. And this he did for the reason that, as plaintiff, by the express terms of the evidence of debt, was only entitled to recover thereon 6 per cent. interest from June 1, 1912, until maturity (the 10 per cent. thereafter is not contended for), plaintiff was entitled to recover 6 per cent. only on the debt from that date until the date of the judgment, which, principal and interest, would be $54,166.66. And for this amount the court should have rendered judgment, less $2,500, conceded to be interest paid at the time the loan was made, with 6 per cent. interest thereon from May 25, 1912, to the date of the judgment, amounting, principal and interest, to $2,711.16, less also $110, paid as semiannual interest on the $2,750 mortgage, with interest thereon from November 23, 1912, at 6 per cent. per annum up to the date of the judgment, amounting, principal and interest, to $115.64, and less, also, $1,572.22, paid as interest on the debt, together with interest thereon at 6 per cent. per annum from December 21, 1912, to the date of the judgment, amounting, principal and interest, to $1,642.64, or in all, as interest already paid upon the loan, $4,469.44. And, as said sum exceeds the interest on the loan at 6 per cent. from June 1, 1912, to the date of the judgment by $302.78, the court should have applied that amount in reduction of the principal debt and rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff for $49,679.22, 10 per cent. of which should have been adjudged as an attorney's fee. And this is the judgment the trial court should have rendered.

In Miller v. Fergerson (Ky.) 47 S. W. 1081, the facts were that plaintiff sold defendant a certain lot for $1,120, and afterwards loaned him $650 from that time with which to erect a house upon the lot. As the debt aggregated $1,770, they counted 6 per cent. thereon for 5 years from April 24, 1894, making the principal and interest $2,301, and defendant gave plaintiff 60 notes therefor of $38.35 each, with interest from maturity, payable, respectively, July 1, 1894, and the first of each month thereafter. In the evidence of debt it was agreed that in case defendant defaulted in the payment of as many as 4 of the notes, plaintiff would have the right to treat them as all due and payable. The first one fell due and was paid; 13 fell due and were not paid. Whereupon plaintiff elected to treat them all due and sued to recover, not only on the 13 notes, but asked judgment on the remaining 46, with interest from the time the action was commenced until paid. The court rendered judgment for the full amount claimed. In reversing the case, the Supreme Court held that 6 per cent. upon the indebtedness up to the date of the judgment was all plaintiff was entitled to recover. In passing the court said:

> "In the second place, although, as consideration for the land, the agreement between the parties to add interest to the principal sum of $1,120 was legal and permissible, still, as appellee, taking advantage of the misfortune of appellant, has come into a court of equity for enforcement of that agreement, at a time and in a manner not reasonably anticipated when it was made, he must consent to such judgment as, under the circumstances, a chancellor ought to render. In our opinion, accepting the answer as true, appellant is entitled to recover of appellee, in addition to $650, the aggregate of $1,120, and interest thereon at rate of 6 per cent. from date of the land sale until date of the judgment appealed from. Wherefore the judgment is reversed, and the case remanded, for proceedings consistent with this opinion."

And so we hold that plaintiff was entitled to recover 6 per cent. on this debt from its inception to the date of judgment. And, as the trial court should have done, so we will do, that is, upon the undisputed facts, render such judgment as the trial court should have rendered, which is, that plaintiff have judgment for $49,679.22, together with $4,967.92 as an attorney's fee, the judgment to draw interest as decreed by the court.

We said just now that plaintiff was not entitled to recover for the remaining interest coupons not due at the time the trustee declared the principal debt due and foreclosed therefor. This, we said, was for the reason that the moment the principal and accrued interest, up to the time of the acceleration of the maturity of the debt, are paid, the remaining undue interest coupons are discharged. For the same reason, contrary to the holding of the court, plaintiff is not entitled to recover on its second mortgage of $2,750; for, like the undue coupons, having been executed to secure the payment of interest charged and unearned at the time of the acceleration of the maturity of the debt, it also was discharged. It is for this reason that plaintiff cannot recover on said mortgage, and not for the reason that said mortgage was a part of a scheme to exact usury, as contended by defendant. We are therefore of opinion that the court erred in rendering judgment on said mortgage, as stated, and in ordering it foreclosed.

We are therefore of opinion that, there being error as indicated in the judgment of the trial court in determining the amount due on the $50,000 mortgage of the Union Trust Company, the judgment foreclosing the same should be reversed and modified, and that the judgment foreclosing the $2,750 mortgage should be reversed, with directions to dismiss the suit as to it.

[3] As to the judgment foreclosing the Walker mortgage, it is assigned that the court erred, not in holding that the same was usurious, but in holding that defendants were entitled to a set-off of $4,650 only on the mortgage debt. There is no dispute as to the facts. The evidence discloses that the mortgage on its face secured a loan of $15,750 for 3 years, with coupons thereto attached for $787.50 each, payable semiannually, with interest at 10 per cent. per annum; that $750 was deducted from the principal at the time of the loan, and retained as interest paid upon the loan; that the first coupon was paid when due; that Walker, the assignee of the mortgage, upon failure to pay the second, exercised his option to accelerate the payment of the loan and foreclosed, whereupon he was met with a plea of usury, which the court found to be sustained by the evidence, and pursuant thereto set off the debt with $4,650, and rendered judgment in favor of Walker, foreclosing his mortgage for the balance of the debt, as stated. The governing statute, section 1005, supra, in full reads:

> "The taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section shall be deemed a forfeiture of twice the amount of interest which the note, bill or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon. In case a greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover from the person, firm or corporation taking or receiving same, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice the amount of the interest so paid: * * * Provided, further, that before any suit can be brought to recover such usurious interest, the party bringing such suit must make written demand for return of such usury."

As stated in Miller v. Oklahoma St. Bank (Okl.) 157 Pac. 767, the provisions of this section of our statute are substantially the same as section 5198 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, construing which, in Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 132, 22 Sup. Ct. 50, 46 L. Ed. 118, the court said:

> "Two separate and distinct classes of cases are contemplated by this section: First, those wherein usurious interest has been taken, received, reserved, or charged, in which case there shall be 'a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon'; second, in case usurious interest has been paid, the person paying it may recover back twice the amount of the interest 'thus paid from the association taking or receiving the same.' While the first class refers to interest taken and received, as well as that reserved or charged, the latter part of the clause apparently limits the forfeiture to such interest as the evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid, in contradistinction to interest actually paid, which is covered by the second clause of the section."

From which we learn that, if no interest on this loan had been paid, defendants would have fallen into the first class mentioned, and been entitled to set off against plaintiff's demand a sum equal to the entire interest which the mortgage carried; that is, interest on $15,750 for 3 years at 10 per cent. per annum, or $4,725. And, on the other hand, if all the interest called for by this evidence of debt had been paid, defendants would have fallen into the second class, and, had the mortgagee foreclosed for the principal sum, defendants would have nothing to set off, but would have been compelled to resort to an action in the nature of an action of debt to recover twice the amount of interest paid. All of which seems clear enough. But what shall we say when the facts are, as here, that the interest on the loan has partly been paid and part remains unpaid or charged? We say part has been paid, for the court, in effect, found that $750 was deducted from the principal at the time the loan was made, and that the same was interest and rendered the transaction usurious; and it is conceded that the first interest coupon of $787.50 was paid, or in all $1,537.50 was interest paid on the loan. As this left 2 years and six months interest charged and unpaid, does the statute mean defendants are entitled to set off twice the interest charged by the evidence of debt, that is, $4,725, and, in another action, in the nature of an action of debt, recover against the mortgagee twice the $1,537.50 interest paid? If it does, there would be a double recovery of the interest paid to the extent of the amount of the first coupon, for it is clear that that much of the interest paid would be merged in the set-off. Then, what does it mean? It means, in this case, that so far as the interest paid is concerned, twice that must be recovered in a separate action in the nature of an action of debt, leaving only, as a subject of set-off, twice the remaining interest of 2 years and 6 months charged, or twice $3,937.50, that is, $7,875, which, deducted from the principal debt of $15,750, leaves $7,875, for which the mortgage should be foreclosed, plus 10 per cent. of that amount for an attorney's fee, since defendants assign as error that plaintiffs should not have been allowed any attorney's fee at all. In the headnotes to the Haseltine Case, supra, it is said:

> "Usurious interest paid in cash upon renewals of a note given to a national bank, and of all other notes of which it was a consolidation, cannot be set off in an action upon the note, as the remedy provided by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198 [U. S. Comp. St. 1916, § 9759], where such usurious interest has been actually paid, viz., a recovery in an action in the nature of an action of debt, or twice the amount of the interest thus paid, is exclusive."

Which means that, as the remedy by separate action for the recovery of twice the usurious interest paid is exclusive, no part of it can properly be merged in a set-off of twice the interest which the evidence of debt carries, and that where, as here, both set-off and separate action should be employed to meet the situation, each should be employed to operate within its proper sphere. So far as the present application of this statute is in conflict with Miller v. Altus State Bank, supra, the same is overruled.

There is no merit in the remaining assignments of error.

The cause is therefore reversed and remanded, with directions to modify the judgment and foreclose, pursuant to the views herein expressed. Let the costs of this appeal be equally divided between the Union Trust Company and the defendants Garland and Barr and the intervener Walker. All the Justices concur, except THACKER, J., who concurs in conclusion.

THACKER, J. (concurring). In no aspect of the loan contract in the instant case does there appear to me to be any taint of usury. And I concur in the conclusion reached in the opinion of the court that there is no usury in this contract. But, in concurring in this conclusion, I feel it my duty to dissent from the reasoning by which the contract is tested for usury and found to be within the law.

Under the statutes applicable to the instant case (Laws 1910, p. 253, the same being section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910, and section 915, Stat. 1890, the same being section 1007, Rev. Laws 1910), 10 per cent. per annum is nominally the highest rate of interest permitted by law; but, since the borrower may deduct interest in advance out of the loan for 1 year at the highest rate permitted, these statutes really permit a lender to charge interest at 10 per cent. per annum, plus interest at this rate upon the amount of interest so taken in advance. However, in this opinion, I shall, in deference to the statutes cited, at times speak of the amount actually delivered to the lender, plus the interest taken by the borrower in advance for the first year as the amount of the loan.

In this case, following the case of Metz et al. v. Winne, 15 Okl. 1, 79 Pac. 223, a test for usury is found by computing interest at the highest rate permitted by law upon the full amount loaned for the entire time for which the loan was made; and the fact that this method of computation does not give even an approximately invariable result in limiting benefits that may be taken by lenders and burdens that may be imposed upon borrowers, except where interest is not taken before it could be earned by the amount loaned at the highest rate permitted by law, does not appear from the opinion of the court to affect the applicability of the same in any case.

In the Metz Case, where a loan of $600 for 10 years bore interest to the amount of $222, payable at the expiration of the first year, and to the amount of $42 payable at the expiration of each succeeding year, making a total of $600, the fact that interest at the highest rate of 12 per cent. on $600 would amount to $720 was considered a correct test, showing that the total of $600 called for as interest by the contract was free from the taint of usury. In that case the contract required the payment of $150 over and above the interest that could have been earned under the law at the expiration of the first year of the loan; and it must be obvious that this gave the lender and deprived the borrower of the benefit of an equal amount of the principal loaned, at least so long as this amount had not been actually earned as interest, over and above all other interest payments, by the amount originally loaned. It seems obvious that the loan of $600 in that case could not have earned so much as $720, in view of the times and amounts of interest called for by the contract, unless the question of benefit to the lender and burden to the borrower should be ignored in the test for usury; and to ignore benefits and burdens would seem to me to defeat the only purpose of the limit upon the rate of interest. The reasoning in the Metz Case, which is followed in the instant case, apparently leads to the conclusion that if the contract had required the borrower of the $600 to allow the lender to retain $72 as interest in advance at 12 per cent. for the first year of the loan, and further required the borrower to pay the lender the additional sum of $648 at the end of the first year, as unearned but anticipated interest for the remaining 9 years, thus making a total of $720 required to be paid as interest at the expiration of the first year of the loan, the contract would have been free from the taint of usury, notwithstanding the fact that the borrower had paid the lender at the end of the first year an amount equal to the entire amount of the original $600 loaned, plus $120, which would be 20 per cent. on that amount, to say nothing of the $600 to be paid at the end of the loan period. Under the test for usury applied in the Metz Case, and in the instant case, it appears that the contract now before the court might have required the borrower to allow the lender to retain $5,000 as interest in advance, and to pay the latter at the end of the first year of the $50,000 loan the additional sum of $18,783.32, so that the borrower would have the benefit of a loan of only $45,000 for the first year and of only $26,116.68 for the remaining years of the loan, while the lender would get a correspondingly greater benefit than he would have received if no interest had been taken before it was actually earned by the loan.

If the reasoning of these cases is correct, and the same test is to be applied in all cases to which the same appears to be applicable from the reading of the opinions therein, it appears, for example, that the lender of $100 for 20 years might charge and collect $10 in advance, so that the borrower would only actually receive $90, and at the expiration of the first year, as unearned but anticipated interest, $190 more, making in all $200, which is more than twice as much as the amount actually loaned, and still hold the borrower's obligation to pay $100 at the expiration of the 20 years.

In the case of Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co., 141 U. S. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. 1, 35 L. Ed. 786, where the highest rate of 10 per cent. per annum allowed by the statutes of Illinois was charged on a loan for 5 years and where 3 per cent. of the same for the full term of the loan was taken in advance, the Supreme Court of the United States, in holding that the same was not usurious under the decisions of that state, said:

> "It is to be observed that out of the principal sum loaned the trust company retained, by way of discount, what was claimed to be the present value of such amount as would pay, in advance, 3 per cent. of the stipulated interest for the whole period of the loan, 5 years. In view of this feature in the case there was much discussion at the bar as to whether it was permissible, in Illinois, for the lender to exact and receive interest in advance upon a loan made at the highest rate allowed by its laws. In view of numerous decisions of the Supreme Court of that state, it is not necessary to examine this question upon principle; for it is the settled doctrine of that court that the mere taking of interest in advance does not bring a loan within the prohibition of usury. In Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490, 498 [83 Am. Dec. 240], it was said: 'The remaining plea sets up usury in this, that the interest was made payable semiannually. It has long been settled such reservation is not usurious. The whole interest may be lawfully reserved in advance.' McGill v. Ware, 5 Ill. 21, 28; Mitchell v. Lyman, 77 Ill. 525, 529, 530; Brown v. Scottish-American Mortgage Co., 110 Ill. 235, 239; Hoyt v. Pawtucket Sav. Inst., 110 Ill. 390, 394; Telford v. Garrel, 132 Ill. 550, 554 [24 N. E. 573]. Whether that doctrine would apply where the loan was for such period that the exaction by the lender of interest in advance would, at the outset, absorb so much of the principal as to leave the borrower very little of the amount agreed to be loaned to him we need not say. The present case does not require any expression of opinion upon such a point, for the interest reserved in advance on the loan to Fowler was only of 3 per cent. out of 10 per cent., and a reservation to that extent, it would seem, is protected by the decisions of the state court. The defense of usury, so far as it rests upon the fact that 3 per cent. of the stipulated interest was taken in advance by the lender, must therefore be overruled."

The Illinois rule, however, does not seem to be in accord with the rule generally followed, nor to be sound in principle; and the above intimation that a loan might not be regarded as usurious unless it was "for such period that the exaction by the lender of interest in advance would, at the outset, absorb so much of the principal as to leave the borrower very little of the amount loaned him" should be understood to be applicable only where the Illinois rule prevails, if there. In Law of Usury, by Webb, secs. 112-116, pp. 126-132, it is said:

"The question whether a contract calling for the payment of the highest legal rate of interest in advance is usurious or not is one upon which the authorities are not in harmony. The statutes upon the subjects of interest and usury do not ordinarily specify the particular time during the life of the loan or forbearance at which the interest shall be paid. Such statutes ordinarily provide that the rate of interest shall be a certain amount 'per annum'; and, while there is no additional provision that the interest shall be payable at the end of the year, or at the time of the maturity of the loan, if it be for a period less than one year yet some of the courts have construed the statutes to so mean. In the Ohio case of Penn Mutual Ins. Co. v. Carpenter (40 Ohio St. 260), the court discussed the subject at some length, concluding that: 'A construction of the language of the statute as applicable to the rate of interest only, and not to the time of payment, which will permit the payment of interest at periods shorter than the time a note has to run, furnishes, in our view, no reasonable ground for the advancement of interest before it accrues or is earned. * * * In Ohio, express statutory authority has been given in many instances to banks and other corporations to reserve interest in advance. But the fact that such authority has been expressly granted by statute furnishes the strongest implication that it is denied to all others.' In other states of the Union, the contrary rule prevails, and, it is held that the taking of interest in advance is not usurious. Thus in Illinois, it is held that if a borrower of $3,000, for 1 year, at 10 per cent. interest, receives but $2,700, for which he gives his note for $3,000, with 10 per cent. interest after maturity, the transaction is free from usury. In the early Indiana case of Cole v. Lockhart (2 Ind. 631) the court reviewed the cases which had been decided at that time, and declared that the taking of the highest rate of interest in advance was not usurious.

"Why there should have been such profligate expenditure of learning, consumption of words, and vexation of mind over a question of which there is but one just solution is difficult to understand. Interest is compensation for the use of money. If the amount of the interest is deducted in advance, it is plain that the borrower never uses the interest so paid. He does not receive the full amount of his loan. He cannot use that which he was to receive unless it is paid to him. He cannot employ money kept out of his possession. It renders the borrower no service, performs no purpose, pays no debts, buys no property, satisfies no wants, and accomplishes nothing, as far as the borrower is concerned, for which he should be compelled to pay interest. If mathematical accuracy, combined with justice, should be aimed at, it seems that the interest should be paid at maturity, together with interest upon the interest then due, for one-half the time of the loan.

"Where the interest is taken in advance for a period less than 1 year the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, in the case of Tallman v. Truesdell (3 Wis. 443), makes the following distinction: 'It is contended that the payment of interest semiannually at the rate of $12 for the loan or use of $100 for 1 year; or, in other words, $6 at the end of 6 months, virtually gets interest on the $6 so received during the remaining 6 months of the year. The statute is silent as to the time when the interest may be paid, and only prescribes the rate for a specified term. It is difficult to distinguish clearly between the case when a loan of $100 is made for 6 months at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and at the expiration of the time the lender receives his money back with $6 interest, and the case where a loan of $100 is made for 1 year at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and at the end of 6 months $6 should be paid as interest, and at the expiration of 1 year, $106 are paid. It is true that the borrower loses the interest on the $6 which he paid at the end of 6 months, for and during the remaining 6 months of the year, but it is not true that he pays interest on the $6 to the lender. The lender may or may not get interest on this sum, but if he does, he does not get it from the borrower, since it is not a contract with him for a greater rate than 12 per cent. That a distinction between the cases like the foregoing has been attempted is certainly true, but it has never been rendered sufficiently clear for practical purposes. Where interest is taken in advance the case is different. If the lender reserves his 12 per cent. at the time of the loan, the borrower gets $88, for which he promises to pay $100 at the end of the year. In this case he actually pays to the lender interest on the $12 reserved; that is, the $12 which he pays at the time of the loan is equal to $10.56 interest on the $88 actually received, and $1.44 at the rate of 12 per cent. on the $12 reserved. This would clearly exceed the rate prescribed by the statute. But we do not think it was the design of the statute to make any deduction from the rate of 12 per cent. agreed upon, in cases where the term for the loan is less than a year, or where the interest is agreed to be paid oftener than once a year.

"As stated in a preceding section, if the amount of interest and commissions collected does not exceed the amount of interest allowable by the highest legal rate, there is no usury. So where the amount of interest collected in advance, together with the interest upon it, at the highest lawful rate, does not aggregate more than would be allowed by law as interest upon the principal, there can be no usury. Upon this theory it is held that there is no usury where the bond of the debtor bears no interest, but includes the amount of the debt with interest upon it to the time of the maturity of the bond."

In the editorial note, commencing at page 1156, to the case of Ellis v. Terrell, 109 Ark. 69, 158 S. W. 957, 37 Ann. Cas. 1153, it is said upon the authority of a large number of cases there cited:

"The practice, originating in the custom of banks and those dealing in commercial paper in the course of trade, of taking interest in advance on short-term loans, though admitted to be usurious in principle, has become a recognized legal right; and, in the absence of statutory prohibition, the courts are unanimous in upholding its legality where the loan or forbearance is for a period of time of one year or less."

In idem it is said:

"In Purvis v. Frink, 57 Fla. 519, 49 So. 1023, the court construing a statute providing that a debtor shall not be required to pay a greater sum than the actual principal sum received, with 10 per cent. interest per annum, held that the reservation of interest from the principal of the note in quarterly amounts made the transaction usurious. In some jurisdictions it has been held that since the right to take interest in advance originated in the custom of banks and those dealing in commercial paper, such right must be confined to commercial transactions."

The decisions from the states holding this are cited in connection with the last above statement. In idem it is further said:

"Where the loan or forbearance is for more than 1 year, the decisions are not in accord as to whether taking interest in advance for the full period of time will constitute usury. The majority of cases support the holding of the reported case that to take the highest rate of interest in advance for the entire period of time is usury."

In support of this last proposition the editor cites in addition to the case annotated the following cases: Marsh v. Martindale, 3 B. & P. (Eng.) 154; Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co., 141 U. S. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. 1, 35 L. Ed. 786; Branch Bank v. Strother, 15 Ala. 51. In the case of Smith et al. v. Parsons et al., 55 Minn. 520, 57 N. W. 311, it was held:

"When a 'bonus' is exacted by the lender as a consideration for making a loan, it is, in computing, for the purpose of determining whether the loan is usurious, to be deducted as of the date when it is payable. If payable at the time of the loan, it is to be deducted from the principal as of the date of the loan, and the remainder, or what the borrower receives and retains, is to be taken as the basis for computation."

In that case, where the loan was of $20,000 for 5 years, with a specification that the same should bear interest at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, and where the borrower contracted to pay and paid the lender as a bonus or commission for making the loan 5 per cent. on said $20,000 and rendered the lender services of the value of $500, the court said:

"These considerations furnished a basis for making a computation to ascertain if the interest or compensation for the use of the money actually to be received and retained by the borrower was at the rate of more than 10 per cent. per annum on that amount or those amounts. The interest on the several amounts, at that rate, from the dates of the advances to the time of paying the last installment, November 4, 1884, was about $930. By the terms of the notes there was payable on and before October 1, 1884, as interest, $1,400. It is a mode of computation which defendants cannot complain of, to deduct the bonuses from the principal $20,000 as of the date of November 4, 1884, and calculate the interest on the remainder, $18,500, at the rate of 10 per cent. from that date to the maturity of the notes, add the $930 to that, and to their sum add the principal retained by the borrower, $18,500, aggregating $26,553, and compare that with what by the terms of the notes and mortgage the borrower was to repay to the lender, $20,000 principal, and $7,000 interest. The usurious character of the transaction is apparent."

In the case of McCall v. Herring, 116 Ga. 235, 42 S. E. 468, where the borrower contracted to pay $1,600, with interest thereon at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, but actually received from the lender only $1,520 because of the fact that the lender's agent retained $80 from the principal as his commissions, the court said:

"The contentions raised by the demurrer, and insisted on as reasons sufficient to justify the court in striking the plea necessarily lead to the determination of the question whether the averments of the plea, when taken to be true, characterize the transaction as a usurious one. If they do, the court erred in striking the plea, because the deed relied on by the plaintiff as the basis of the establishment of her lien would be void. If they do not, the court committed no error, and the validity of the security deed is unaffected. In the case of Clarke v. Havard, 111 Ga. 242, 36 S. E. 837, 51 L. R. A. 499, Presiding Justice Lumpkin, in the course of a very able opinion which he delivered in that case, and in which he considered the rulings made by this court in a number of cases preceding it, said: 'A money lender cannot, in this state, lawfully contract for or reserve any greater rate of interest than 8 per cent. per annum, and the prohibition is just as strong against doing so indirectly as it is against doing so openly and without pretense. * * *' Accepting the rulings made in that case as being sound, our next inquiry, in order to fully meet the demurrer, is whether when the $80 retained by the agent of the lender is added to the interest contracted to be paid, it appears that the aggregate of these sums is greater than the highest rate of interest allowed by law to be charged. The borrower gave his note for $1,600, and agreed to pay interest thereon at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, $112. The commission retained amounted to $80. The borrower, according to his plea, received $1,520 interest. upon which sum at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, the highest allowed by law in this state, is $121.60. This would make the amount of interest to maturity, 5 years, $608. Any greater sum than $608 received as interest for this time on this amount would be usury. But, according to the averments of the plea, the interest contracted to be paid, seven per cent. on $1,600 for five years, was $560, which, added to the $80 retained as commissions, aggregates $640 (not including in this calculation any interest on the $80), as interest on the $1,520 received by the borrower. Thus it is clear that the borrower would pay and be liable to pay $32 more than the highest legal rate during the period of the loan for the sum borrowed. And the result is the same if we treat as chargeable to the borrower the $16 which, in one part of his amended plea, he admitted the plaintiff was entitled to receive from him for preparation of abstract, etc. These figures are conclusive to our minds that, when the principles ruled in the Clarke Case, supra, are applied to the facts set out in the plea and by demurrer admitted to be true, the transaction represented by the promissory note, which is the foundation of the action in the present case, was usurious.

"Counsel, however, contend that if the $80 paid by the borrower as commissions is to be treated as interest reserved, then the transaction would not be usurious, for the reason that this amount which was deducted from the face of the note must be treated as the payment of interest pro tanto in advance; that $80 represents 1 per cent. on the amount contracted to be loaned for the full term, 5 years; and that as the balance of the interest contracted to be paid amounts to 7 per cent. the whole rate of interest, when so treated, aggregates 8 per cent., and is within the lawful limit, and that the payment of 1 per cent. of interest in advance under these circumstances does not render the transaction usurious. An examination discloses that the adjudicated cases are somewhat in conflict on the question whether a reservation of the highest legal rate of interest in advance renders a loan transaction usurious, but a majority of those which we have had opportunity to consult draw a distinction, in this respect, between what is termed a long and a short loan. Counsel for defendant in error argues that on principle no such distinction exists, and we agree with him. We are unable to see any reason why on principle the reservation of the highest rate of interest in advance on short-term loans does not render the contract usurious. * * * Mr. Webb, in his treatise on Usury, § 111, declares, on the authority of a large number of adjudicated cases cited in note 3, page 126: 'That it is not usury to discount commercial paper in the ordinary course of business is absolutely settled. This rule of law arose out of custom, and does not depend upon statute.' Mr. Tyler, in his work on Usury, p. 298, declares that: 'The courts uniformly hold, at the present day, that the interest for ordinary paper having the usual time to run, such as is the practice by banks, may be taken in advance, by way of discount, and not subject the paper to the taint of usury. It is obvious, however, that the length of time the paper has to run must have a controlling effect upon this question. If the note has a short time to run, the interest may be taken in advance; whereas the time may be so lengthened out as to make the taking of the interest, in advance, palpably usurious.' Whether, then, there is, in principle, any difference in such transactions in taking the highest legal rate on short and long time loans is not now a question with which we are materially concerned; for undoubtedly, according to the authorities generally, the proposition that taking the highest rate of interest in advance does not render the transaction usurious may be considered settled on short loans. Indeed this court, in the case of Mackenzie v. Flannery, 90 Ga. 590, 16 S. E. 710, ruled that 'to take 8 per cent. interest in advance by way of discount on short loans, in the usual and ordinary course of business, is not usurious.' And in the case of Union Savings Bank v. Dottenheim, 107 Ga. 614, 34 S. E. 221, Mr. Justice Cobb said: 'It is also well settled that a contract providing for the payment of the highest lawful rate of interest in advance is not usurious, though many of the courts which recognize this as an established rule express doubts as to whether upon principle such practice should be allowed to prevail.'

"Just where the line is to be drawn, so as to determine what is a short and what a long term loan, does not seem to have been settled. The period of 1 year seems to have been fixed in the case of Tallman v. Truesdell, 3 Wis. 443. But the rule that interest at the highest legal rate may be taken in advance on long loans without rendering the contract usurious is not established by the authorities generally. There are a number of cases so ruling, in many of which the rulings are made on statutes. Certainly there are no decisions of this court which so declare, and we are not aware of any authority which binds us so to rule. While we accept the doctrine almost universally applied to short loans, in the absence of controlling authority we decline to extend that rule in the case of long loans. On principle it cannot be done, nor ought it to be, for reasons which are tersely stated by Mr. Webb in his work cited supra, 113, in the following language: 'Interest is compensation for the use of money. If the amount of the interest is deducted in advance, it is plain that the borrower never uses the interest so paid. He does not receive the full amount of his loan. He cannot use that which he was to receive, unless it is paid to him. He cannot employ money kept out of his possession. It renders the borrower no service, performs no purpose, pays no debts, buys no property, satisfies no wants, and accomplishes nothing, as far as the borrower is concerned, for which he should be compelled to pay interest.' While the language of Mr. Justice Cobb in the Dottenheim Case cited above is very broad, it was not, as we understand it, meant to include interest on long-time loans, but evidently referred to the rule, which seems so generally to prevail, that the highest rate of interest may lawfully be taken in advance on short loans. If it be contended that this language referred to long as well as short loans, it may be replied that that question was not one which was passed on by the court in that case. If the contention of the defendant in error is sound, then it would lead to this result: If a loan of $500 were made for a term of 5 years at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, then at the time of making the loan the lender could reserve the interest for the whole period, and give to the borrower only $300 in satisfaction of his contract; if such a loan were made for 10 years, the law would be fully met by the lender handing to the borrower $100 and accepting his obligation to pay him $500 at the end of the period; if it were made for 15 years, instead of the borrower receiving anything from the lender, the former would not only get nothing, but would pay the lender $100 for the privilege of executing to him his promissory note."

Interest is not the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties for an obligation to permit the borrower to use or detain money or for the future forbearance on the part of the lender to demand the same; but, as stated in Black's Law Dictionary, it is defined as follows:

"Interest is the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties for the use or forbearance or detention of money. Civ. Code Cal. § 1915; Williams v. Scott, 83 Ind. 408; Kelsey v. Murphy, 30 Pa. 341; Williams v. American Bank, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 317; Beach v. Peabody, 188 Ill. 75, 58 N. E. 680."

The right to the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties "for the use or forbearance or detention of money" logically arises out of and follows, and does not precede, such "use or forbearance or detention of money"; and, accordingly, loan contracts for more than 1 year usually call for the payment of interest after and not before it is earned.

If a contract did not require the payment of interest before it was earned by a loan, and this definition was kept in mind, a voluntary payment of money in advance to meet and cover unearned interest as it accrues in the future would easily be seen to be more in the nature of a return of that much of the principal debt than a payment of interest in the first instance, though taking on the character of a payment of interest as the latter accrues.

In the absence of a contract to the contrary, and as a general rule under the provisions in contracts, interest is not due and payable until it has been earned by the loan, except when taken in advance, as authorized by section 915, Stat. 1890 (section 1007, Rev. L. 1910) for not to exceed 1 year; and, as aptly stated in a note to Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. 359, 10 L. Ed. 200, the rule for casting interest in this country when partial payments are made is as follows:

"The rule for casting interest, when partial payments have been made, is to apply the payment, in the first place, to the discharge of the interest then due. If the payment exceeds the interest, the surplus goes towards discharging the principal, and the subsequent interest is to be computed on the balance of principal remain> ing due. If the payment is less than the interest, the surplus of interest must not be taken to augment the principal; but interest continues on the former principal until the period when the payments, taken together, exceed the interest due, and then the surplus is to be applied towards discharging the principal, and interest is to be computed on the balance. State of Connecticut v. Jackson, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 13 [7 Am. Dec. 471]; Van-Benschooten v. Lawson, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 313 [10 Am. Dec. 333]; Williams v. Houghtaling, 3 Cow. 86, and note; Hicks v. Atkins, 4 Mass. 103; Dean v. Williams, 17 Mass. 417; Fay v. Bradley, 1 Pick. 194; French v. Kennedy, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 452; Hosack v. Rogers, 9 Paige's (N. Y.) 461; Smith v. Shaw, 2 Wash. C. C. 167 [Fed. Cas. No. 13,107]; Dunlop v. Alexander, 1 Cranch C. C. 498 [Fed. Cas. No. 4,166]; Russell v. Lucas, Hempst. 91 [Fed. Cas. No. 12,156A]."

Also see: Woodward Baldwin & Co. v. Jewell et al., 140 U. S. 247, 11 Sup. Ct. 784, 35 L. Ed. 478. The act of June 17, 1910, (Laws 1910, p. 253; section 1005, Rev. Laws 1910) reads as follows:

> "The taking, receiving, reserving or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section shall be deemed a forfeiture of twice the amount of interest which the note, bill or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon. In case a greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover from the person, firm or corporation taking or receiving same, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice the amount of interest so paid: Provided, such action shall be brought within two years after the maturity of such usurious contract: Provided, further, that before any suit can be brought to recover such usurious interest, the party bringing such suit must make written demand for return of such usury."

Section 915, Stat. 1890 (section 1007, Rev. Laws 1910), reads as follows:

> "The interest which would become due at the end of a term for which a loan is made, not exceeding one year's interest in all, may be deducted from the loan in advance if the parties thus agree."

If, as seems indisputable, the purpose of the statutory inhibition against the taking of more than a specified amount of interest is to limit the burden that may be imposed upon the borrower, and the corresponding benefits that may be taken by the lender, we should look to the essence of the transaction and to the net result in benefit to the lender and burdens to the borrower, with due regard to the terms of the contract in respect to times and amounts of interest payments and to the rights of the parties to contract for the payment of actually earned interest at such times as they desire without affecting the question, for a standard test.

I think the statutory limitation upon the burden the lender may impose and the corresponding benefit he may take contemplates the casting of interest according to the partial payment rule hereinbefore stated, treating interest paid in advance of accrual above the product of a computation at the highest legal rate to the date of payment as sterilizing or destroying the interest-producing power of an equal amount of the principal until such advance interest could be actually earned by the loan at the highest rate of interest permitted by law.

Taking the contract in the Metz Case for use in making an illustration, it appears to me that a correct test for usury might be found in the fact that the $600 loaned could have earned, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, $72 at the end of the first year, when $222 that must be treated as interest was paid; that this payment, being $150 over and above the interest that could have been lawfully earned up to that time, sterilizes and destroys the interest-producing power of an equal amount of the $600 loaned, so that only $450 of the same could bear interest until the next interest-paying time, at the end of the second year of the loan, when, at the highest rate permitted, it could produce $54; that, as $54 is $12 more than the $42 called for by the contract at that time, this deficiency should be covered by applying $12 of the $150 excess already in the hands of the lender to the same, with the result that this excess would be reduced to $138 and a corresponding amount of barren principal would become interest producing, so that, for the third year $462 of the $600 would bear interest; that at the end of the third year, when another installment of $42 as interest was due under the contract, this $462 could produce at the highest rate of interest permitted by law $55.44, which would be $13.44 more than the contract required to be paid at that time, so that the unearned interest in the hands of the lender would be reduced to $124.56 for the next year and $475.56 of the $600 loaned would bear interest during the fourth year, and so on until, at the end of the ninth year, nearly all of the excess in the hands of the lender would be earned and absorbed, and nearly all of the loan of $600 would begin to bear interest again. As a result of this method of computation, the $600 loaned could have earned, at 12 per cent. per annum, $72 the first year, $54 the second year, $55.44 the third year, $57.05 the fourth year, $58.85 the fifth year, $60.82 the sixth year, $63.08 the seventh year, $65.60 the eighth year, $68.44 the ninth year, and $71.61 the tenth year, making a total of $626.89. It appears to me that this method of computation gives due consideration to the proportions of the contract, that is, to the times of payment and the amounts required to be paid by the same, in testing for usury. It takes into account the fact that the borrower was required to pay $150 at the end of the first year of the loan as interest that had not been earned; and it also takes into account the fact that each subsequent installment of interest called for by the contract was less than could have been earned at that time within the law.

Although I think the above method of computation gives a correct test, I am not quite as certain of this as I am of the fact that the standard adopted in the instant case and in the Metz Case is fundamentally wrong.

(13 Okl. Cr. 447)

SCOFIELD v. STATE. (No. A-2610.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. May 26, 1917.)

(Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

WITNESSES 🔑379(1)—IMPEACHMENT OF WITNESS.

In a prosecution for selling liquor where the case was closely contested, the refusal to allow defendant to impeach employed detectives by showing that they had made statements out of court as to who had made a sale contradictory to their testimony in court was reversible error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1209, 1247.]

Error from County Court, Woods County; Gus Hadwiger, Judge.

John Scofield was convicted of selling one pint of whisky to one Ralph McAfee, and sentenced to pay a fine of $50, and to imprisonment for 30 days, and he brings error. Reversed.

L. T. Wilson, of Alva, for plaintiff in error. S. P. Freeling, Atty. Gen., and R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. The appellant was convicted of selling one pint of whisky to one Ralph McAfee for the price of $1. The transaction is alleged to have occurred in a barn in the town of Waynoka. Ralph McAfee, the prosecuting witness 17 years of age, together with Ralph Trull, a young man 21 years of age, had come from Texas to Woods county a short time before this transaction, and testify that they met this defendant, a total stranger to them, on the streets of Waynoka, and asked him if he knew where they could get some whisky, and he told them that he had some or could get some. The defendant then went away, according to their testimony, and returned within a short time with a bundle under his arm, and directed them to this barn where the alleged sale is said to have taken place. The prosecuting witnesses and a man by the name of Cham Beeman preceded the defendant to the barn. Beeman was not a witness in the case. McAfee and Trull both testify that the defendant appeared at the barn with a quart of whisky wrapped up in an old pair of trousers and emptied out a pint of the whisky into another quart bottle and sold it to McAfee for the sum of $1. The defendant testified that he saw these people going to the barn, and was suspicious and followed them up there in order to get a drink, and that when he got there they were just opening a quart of whisky which Beeman had at that time; that he did not sell any whisky on that occasion to anybody. Several citizens of Waynoka testify to the good reputation of the defendant for peace and as a law-abiding citizen. Upon the trial, the court, over the objection and exception of defendant's counsel, limited the cross-examination of these prosecuting witnesses in an endeavor on the part of said counsel to show their interest in the matter that they were employed detectives of the sheriff and were to receive money for giving evidence in the case. The objections to such questions were sustained to such an extent that counsel for defendant made an effort to withdraw from the case. However, the court thereafter permitted a limited cross-examination along this line, but an effort was made by counsel for the defendant to impeach the prosecuting witness Ralph Trull, it being the theory of the defendant that if the prosecuting witnesses bought any liquor on that occasion it was sold to them by Beeman and not by him. Counsel for defendant asked the witness Trull if he did not state, in the presence of one Homer Davidson, in the town of Waynoka, on the 23d day of September before the trial, to Mr. Scofield, that he did not see how he could be convicted, as he did not make the sale. To which question an objection upon the part of the state's counsel was sustained, and to which ruling the defendant's counsel excepted, and also in the same conversation if he did not say that Mr. Scofield, the defendant, took no money, but that Cham Beeman took the money, to which he answered, "I don't think I did." Homer Davidson was then placed upon the stand in behalf of the defendant, and was asked whether or not Trull had stated, in substance, the impeaching matters inquired about, to the first of which the court sustained an objection and refused to permit the witness to answer, and as to that part of the conversation in which Trull had said that he did not say that Beeman took the money, the impeaching witness, Davidson, testified that he did so state, which answer, upon objection by the state's counsel, was stricken out, and the jury instructed not to consider it on the ground that the testimony was without weight in the case and was to be given no credence as to Cham Beeman.

There is no question in the minds of the members of this court that the rulings of the trial court relative to this impeaching evidence were erroneous, and in view of the fact that this is a closely contested case in which the defendant, a farmer of good reputation as a law-abiding citizen, was convicted on the evidence of total strangers to him, that did not live in that community and were, as the record clearly discloses, employed detectives, it was competent for the defendant to impeach these witnesses by showing that they had made contradictory statements out of court relative to who made this sale than that testified to in court. Why the state did not call Beeman as a witness in this case does not appear from the record, although he was present during all the time that the other state witnesses testify they had their dealings with the defendant, and as Beeman had an equal opportunity to make the sale, if one was made, the defendant had a right to impeach one of the prosecuting witnesses by showing that he did state, out of court, that Beeman was the man who did make the sale and receive the money. After an examination of the entire record we are convinced that this defendant was not accorded that fair and impartial trial to which he was entitled under our Constitution and statute. The judgment is therefore reversed.

(13 Okl. Cr. 431)

GLAZE v. STATE. (No. A-2491.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. May 26, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. LARCENY 🔑14(1)—LARCENY OF LIVE STOCK —STATUTE.

Section 2652, Rev. Laws 1910, defines "larceny" as the taking of personal property accomplished by fraud or stealth, and with intent to deprive another thereof. Under this definition, a conviction for the larceny of live stock accomplished by fraud is authorized.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Larceny, Cent. Dig. §§ 34, 37.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Larceny.]

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1182—CONVICTION—AFFIRMANCE.

When all the evidence introduced at a trial fairly warrants a conviction and no prejudicial error of law is disclosed, a judgment of conviction will be affirmed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3203–3214.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1172(1) — APPEAL — HARMLESS ERROR — INACCURATE INSTRUCTIONS.

When instructions given by the court are poor in form but free from prejudicial error, the judgment will not be reversed on the ground that they are not precisely accurate.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3128, 3154.]

Error from District Court, Caddo County; Will Linn, Judge.

Olin Glaze was convicted of larceny, and he brings error. Affirmed.

H. W. Morgan, of Anadarko, and Giddings & Tripp, of Oklahoma City, for plaintiff in error. R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

ARMSTRONG, J. Olin Glaze, plaintiff in error, was convicted at the February, 1915, term of the district court of Caddo county, on a charge of larceny, and his punishment fixed at three years in the state penitentiary. The information charges the larceny of two head of cattle, the property of J. C. Childers. Oklahoma Giles was jointly charged, but separate trials were had.

The proof on behalf of the state discloses the following state of facts: J. C. Childers lived about three miles east of Carnegie in Caddo county, and was a farmer. Olin Glaze, plaintiff in error, and Oklahoma Giles, lived near by, and were horse traders. In January, 1915, Giles came to the home of the prosecuting witness and inquired for a bull, and was informed that the witness had a bull, a heifer, and a cow for sale, and was told by Giles that plaintiff in error, Glaze, would buy them. Witness priced the two yearlings at $70. Giles told him that he did not think Glaze would pay the money, but had a mare to sell; that he, Giles wanted the mare, and that if plaintiff in error would trade the two yearlings for the mare, he, Giles, would pay $72.50 for the mare, and said he would go and get Glaze and have him bring the mare over. Glaze rode the mare over, and asked the witness if he had some yearlings to trade for the mare. Witness told him he did not. There was quite a little talk about trading the mare for the yearlings. Witness refused to trade the yearlings for anything, unless he knew he was going to get the money, as he did not want to trade, but wanted to sell. An effort was made to induce the witness to go in search of Giles with a view of getting the money from him for the mare. He would not go, but after considerable persuasion let his son go with Glaze and told both of them that there would be no trade unless he got the money; that if Giles did not have the money, that would be the end of it. About an hour later Giles and Glaze and the boy came back and wanted witness to go to Carnegie to get the money. He got in the buggy with Giles and drove off. Glaze appeared to be on horseback. After going some little distance, a brother-in-law of Giles overtook them with a story, which proved to be untrue, that Giles' wife and baby had been crippled in a runaway. Giles got out of the buggy, got on a horse, and started off. As he rode away, prosecuting witness asked him what he was to do, and Giles told him to meet him in Carnegie the next morning. He was told that witness would meet him there. He then said: "Maybe not to-morrow; I will see you soon"—and went on away. The brother-in-law to Giles got in the buggy and drove the witness home. When they got home, the yearlings were gone. This occurred on Thursday. Witness Giles nor the plaintiff in error said anything further about the matter, nor did either of them bring the money to pay for the yearlings. On Monday the witness went after the money again, and was told by Giles that he did not have it, that he had expected to get the money from his father, but that the money had been spent. Witness was never paid.

Newton Childers, son of the prosecuting witness, corroborates the testimony of his father. In addition, he says that when he went with Glaze to find Giles, Glaze told him, Giles, that the old man (meaning the prosecuting witness) would not let the cattle go until he got the money; that Giles said, "Let's go and see the old man," which they did, and after the prosecuting witness and Giles left to go to Carnegie that Glaze and he without instructions to do so, got the cattle and drove them over to Glaze's place. He rode the mare, and when he got over there started to pull the bridle off and leave her, whereupon Glaze told him that he had better keep her; that she might be all he would ever get for the cattle; that he did not know what to do, and rode the mare back home because Glaze told him to.

Pearl Childers, daughter of the prosecuting witness, testified to hearing the conversation with Olin Glaze, Oklahoma Giles, and her father concerning the yearlings and their desire to trade the mare for them; that her father declined to consider any trade of any kind, and said the money was what he wanted, and in speaking to plaintiff in error said: "When you get the money, Olin, you get the cattle and not before."

Witness E. C. Kelley for the state testified to having a transaction with the defendant Glaze and Oklahoma Giles, in which the two parties, working together, fleeced him out of a horse. It was a similar transaction to the one had with Childers.

The evidence clearly indicates that the plaintiff in error, Glaze, and his codefendant, Giles, were working together in a scheme to defraud the farmers of the community out of their property.

Witness Wesley Bees for the state testified to facts corroborating the testimony of Kelley as to the manner in which he was defrauded.

Witness Bogle for the state testified to a similar transaction, wherein he was defrauded by the same parties. Apparently this witness got $5 for a horse worth $125 through the fraudulent conduct of these men.

The testimony in behalf of the defendant by himself and his witnesses attempted to establish the contention that the mare was traded outright for the yearlings in question, and therefore they had committed no crime.

The jury found against the plaintiff in error, and convicted him of larceny.

A careful reading of the record by any fair-minded man would not permit of any other conclusion than that of guilt. This plaintiff in error and Giles, without doubt, had conspired together to defraud the prosecuting witness out of his property. The proof of similar transactions by them which tended to show the manner in which they were conducting their business and the system which they used in defrauding the citizens of the community were competent.

[1] It is contended by counsel for the plaintiff in error that the proof shows no violation of the statutes of this state. With this contention we cannot agree. Section 2652, R. L. 1910, is as follows:

> "Larceny is the taking of personal property, accomplished by fraud or stealth, and with intent to deprive another thereof."

This definition is broad enough to cover the charges in this case; in fact, was intendfor just such transactions. The proof clearly establishes the crime of larceny by fraud.

[2, 3] There is ample law, as well as ample facts, to support this judgment of conviction.

It is next complained that the court erred in giving instructions Nos. 9 and 10, which are as follows:

> "No. 9. You are instructed, gentlemen of the jury, that there has been submitted for your consideration testimony relative to other trades entered into by the defendant in conjunction with others, wherein certain property was alleged to have been obtained by fraud or stealth. This evidence, gentlemen of the jury, is submitted to you for your consideration as the same may or may not tend in determining whether or not the defendant obtained the property described in the information, from the prosecuting witness, J. C. Childers, by fraud or stealth, with the intent to deprive the owner thereof, and for said purpose only.
>
> "No. 10. You are instructed, gentlemen of the jury, if you believe from the evidence in this case beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant, acting in conjunction with others, by fraud or stealth and with the intent to deprive the owner thereof obtained possession of property of parties other than the prosecuting witness, J. C. Childers, and that the same constituted a part of a plan of the defendant in obtaining possession of said property, with the intent to deprive the true owner thereof, then you might consider such facts as a circumstance in arriving at the intent of the defendant at the time of obtaining possession of the property for which he is prosecuted, and as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant of the crime charged."

These instructions might be improved upon in form, but there is nothing in them prejudicial to the substantial rights of the plaintiff in error.

Again, counsel complain of the court's action in admitting testimony of the witnesses, Kelley, Bees, and others, in reference to other similar transactions. This testimony was properly admitted. There is no question but that these parties were in a conspiracy to obtain property by fraud. In the case at bar their efforts were successful, as they appear to have been in a number of other instances. The law of this state protects the law-abiding citizens from conduct of this kind.

The judgment is entirely righteous, and the record is without prejudicial error.

Affirmed.

DOYLE, P. J., and MATSON, J., concur.

(13 Okl. Cr. 440)

BEAUBEIN v. STATE. (No. A-2603.)

(Criminal Court of Appeals of Oklahoma. May 26, 1917.)

(Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1086(14)—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE—ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR—REVIEW.

Where the record does not show that counsel for appellant objected or excepted to the admission of the evidence complained of, his assignment of error thereon is not reviewable, because not properly preserved.

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑977(3)—ENTRY OF JUDGMENT—TERM OF COURT—STATUTE.

Rev. Laws 1910, § 5943, providing that the time appointed for judgment must be at least 2 days after verdict if the court intends to remain in session so long, or if not at as remote a time as can reasonably be allowed, does not require that a judgment must be pronounced at the term at which a conviction is had; and, if the court is unable to render judgment at such term, it may be rendered at a subsequent term.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2489, 2492.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1183—APPEAL—MODIFICATION OF JUDGMENT.

Where the evidence in a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor did not warrant a fine of $283 and an imprisonment for 115 days, the appellate court, in furtherance of justice, would modify the judgment to impose a fine of $50 and an imprisonment for 30 days.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3195-3198.]

Appeal from County Court, Pottawatomie County; Hal Johnson, Judge.

Ben Beaubein was convicted of selling intoxicating liquor, and he brings error. Modified and affirmed.

G. A. Outcelt, of Tecumseh, for plaintiff in error. S. P. Freeling, Atty. Gen., and R. McMillan, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

PER CURIAM. It is alleged that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the conviction. We have examined the record, and find that the evidence on the part of the state, both direct and circumstantial, if believed by the jury, was sufficient to sustain the judgment.

[1] It is also contended that the court erred in admitting improper and prejudicial evidence, but the record does not show that counsel for the appellant made any objections or took any exceptions to the admission of the evidence complained of. This assignment of error is not subject to review under previous decisions of this court because not properly preserved.

[2] It is also contended that the court was without jurisdiction to pronounce judgment and sentence at the time that sentence and judgment were rendered. The verdict was returned on the 2d day of September, 1915, and thereupon the court appointed the 13th day of September, 1915, at the hour of 8:30 a. m. as a time for pronouncing judgment and sentence. On the 4th day of September, 1915, the defendant filed a motion for new trial, which was pending in said court until the 25th day of October, 1915, when the same was overruled and the sentence pronounced and judgment rendered. The appellant at that time objecting to the jurisdiction of the court to pronounce sentence and render judgment because the term of court at which the verdict was returned had expired by operation of law, the court did not pronounce judgment upon the date fixed. There is a recital in the case-made to the effect that on the 13th day of September, 1915, the day fixed for pronouncing judgment, the appellant was a fugitive. However, counsel for appellant contend that the court could have pronounced judgment in this case in his absence, it being a misdemeanor, and his failure to do so deprived the court of jurisdiction to pronounce judgment at a later date. Section 5944, Revised Laws 1910, provides:

> "For the purpose of judgment, if the conviction is for misdemeanor, judgment may be pronounced in the defendant's absence."

Section 5943, Revised Laws 1910, provides:

> "The time appointed [for judgment] must be at least two days after the verdict, if the court intend to remain in session so long; or, if not, at as remote a time as can reasonably be allowed."

It is discretionary with the court in misdemeanor cases to pronounce judgment in the absence of the defendant, but it is not mandatory that the court do so. Therefore the holding of this court in the case Ex parte Sparks, 9 Okl. Cr. 665, 132 Pac. 1118, is controlling in this instance. In that case it was held:

> "The statute does not require that a judgment must of necessity be pronounced at the same term of the court at which a verdict of guilty in a criminal case is rendered. If the court is unable to render judgment at such term, it may be rendered at a subsequent term."

[3] We find no reversible error in the record. The punishment imposed was a fine of $283 and imprisonment for 115 days. The evidence does not warrant the imposition of this extreme penalty in this case. This court, therefore, in furtherance of justice, will modify the judgment to the extent of imposing a fine of $50 and imprisonment in the county jail for 30 days, and the judgment, as thus modified, is affirmed.

(22 N. M. 502)

STATE ex rel. BACA et al. v. BOARD OF COM'RS OF GUADALUPE COUNTY et al. (JONES & GLEASON, Interveners). (No. 1902.)

(Supreme Court of New Mexico. Dec. 30, 1916. Rehearing Denied May 10, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. JUDGMENT 🔑217—"FINAL JUDGMENT"—ENTRY—STATUTE.

In this jurisdiction, by reason of section 4185, Code 1915, there are no terms of court except for jury trials, and a judgment which disposes of all, or one or more, of the separate and independent causes of action in the case, becomes a final judgment upon its rendition and entry, in the sense that the same passes from the further control of the court, and except a default judgment (section 4227, Code 1915), and an irregularly entered judgment (section 4230, Code 1915), and except for such purposes as all courts always retain control over their judgments.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 394.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Final Decree or Judgment.]

2. Appeal and Error 🔑169 — Review — Questions Raised Below.

It is a fundamental rule of appellate practice and procedure that an appellate court will consider only such questions as were raised in the court below.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1018–1034.]

Appeal from District Court, Guadalupe County; Leahy, Judge.

Action by the State of New Mexico, on the relation of Placido Baca y Baca, for himself and others similarly situated, against the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Guadalupe and others, in which Jones & Gleason, a partnership, intervened. Injunction dissolved, and relators appeal. Affirmed.

See, also, 21 N. M. 713, 158 Pac. 642.

On the 10th day of August, 1914, an election was held in the town of Santa Rosa under the local option statutes, to determine whether or not the sale of intoxicating liquors should be prohibited within the prescribed district. At the election 130 votes were cast in all; the election officers certifying to 47 votes in favor of prohibition and 83 votes against prohibition. This action was thereafter instituted in the district court to enjoin the county clerk, county treasurer, board of county commissioners, and county sheriff of Guadalupe county from issuing licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the said town, upon the ground that, by reason of certain illegal votes having been cast at said election, the true result had not been declared or ascertained by the election judges, and that the actual result of said election was in favor of prohibition. The court was asked to purge the election returns of the alleged illegal votes and declare the true result of such election. All the defendants defaulted, with the exception of the county clerk, who appeared and answered, denying the allegations of the complaint. Jones & Gleason, copartners, operating the only saloon in the town, were allowed to intervene in the suit.

The allegation of the complaint upon which the alleged fraud in the election in question is based is as follows:

> "That approximately sixty-five (65) persons, among them being the following named persons, to wit," omitting names, "and certain other persons whose names are at this time unknown to plaintiff, offered to and did vote against prohibition at the said election, all of whom were illegal voters, in that, as inducement therefor, they directly or indirectly received, agreed or contracted to receive, or accepted gifts, valuable consideration, or some office, place, or employment, and that certain of said persons were also intimidated and in other and divers ways unduly influenced into voting against prohibition, and that said illegal and fraudulent votes to the number of approximately sixty-five (65), as aforesaid, were among and constituted a part of the said eighty-three (83) votes declared by the said board of county commissioners of the county of Guadalupe to have been cast against prohibition at said election, and that, had it not been for said illegal and fraudulent votes, the returns would have shown that a majority of the votes cast were for prohibition."

The trial court, after hearing the evidence presented, made certain findings, incorporated in a final decree, to the effect that certain votes against prohibition had been cast in violation of the Corrupt Practices Act, but that the majority of the legal votes had been cast against prohibition. As a result of this conclusion he dissolved the injunction.

This case was first presented for consideration in this court upon a motion to strike out the bill of exceptions on a number of grounds, and in an opinion handed down June 12, 1916, and reported in 21 N. M. 713, 158 Pac. 642, this court struck the bill of exceptions.

F. Faircloth, of Santa Rosa, for appellants. C. W. G. Ward and Chester Hunker, both of Las Vegas, for other appellants. E. R. Wright, of Santa Fé, for appellees.

HANNA, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] The one assignment of error presented for our consideration attacks the findings and conclusions of law as the same appear in the final judgment or decree, and at the threshold of our consideration of the case our attention is directed to the fact that the judgment or decree was entered on November 4, 1915, and the findings of fact and conclusions of law upon which the said judgment or decree was based were incorporated therein. No formal objections or exceptions to either the findings of fact or conclusions of law appear of record, except certain exceptions taken by each party to the findings and conclusions which were filed in the clerk's office on November 19, 1915, or at a time subsequent to the entry of the final judgment. It is here contended by appellee that the judgment of November 4, 1915, became final when entered, and that the court was without further jurisdiction, except to grant an appeal or to set aside the judgment for irregularity within one year. We do not understand that appellant questions the fact that the judgment or decree was final, and it is evident that appellant could not so contend, because at a former hearing of this cause, upon a motion to dismiss the appeal, appellant took the position that the judgment of November 4th was a final one, which contention was sustained by this court. In the case of Fullen v. Fullen, 21 N. M. 212, 153 Pac. 294, this court, passing upon the question of final judgments, held:

> "In this jurisdiction, by reason of section 4185, Code 1915, there are no terms of court except for jury trials, and a judgment which disposes of all, or one or more, of the separate and independent causes of action in the case, becomes a final judgment upon its rendition and entry, in the sense that the same passes from the further control of the court, and except a default judgment (section 4227, Code 1915), and an irregularly entered judgment (section 4230, Code 1915), and except for such purposes as all courts always retain control over their judgments."

Therefore, the judgment in question being a final one in its character, the error which the appellants now insist upon necessarily relates to matters which were not considered by the court, and which the court was not given an opportunity to correct.

[2] "It is a fundamental rule of appellate practice and procedure that an appellate court will consider only such questions as were raised in the court below." It is therefore clearly apparent that the exceptions of November 19th were interposed at a time after the judgment of November 4th had become final, and after the jurisdiction of the court to change the same had passed, except as to irregularities under statutory authority. In arriving at this conclusion we are not unmindful of the fact that appellant contends that, this being a case tried before the court without the intervention of a jury, no exceptions were necessary. In this counsel rely upon the provisions of section 4214, of the Code of 1915, which section has been construed by the territorial Supreme Court in the case of Neher v. Armijo, 11 N. M. 67, 66 Pac. 517, and in that case it was pointed out that the section in question, while dispensing with the necessity for a formal exception does not dispense with the necessity of an objection in order to preserve the error complained of. See, also, Cunningham v. Springer, 13 N. M. 259, 82 Pac. 232.

For the reasons stated, we are of the opinion that the judgment of the district court must be affirmed; and it is so ordered.

ROBERTS, C. J., and PARKER, J., concur.

(22 N. M. 493)

In re ATCHISON, T. & S. F. RY. CO.

(No. 2056.)

(Supreme Court of New Mexico. May 8, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

TAXATION ⚿301(1)—PROPORTIONATE REDUCTION—RATE—STATUTE.

Under section 12, c. 54, Laws 1915, the levies specified therein are subject to proportionate reduction only when the aggregate rate of the levy for all county purposes, with stated exceptions, is in excess of five mills.

Appeal from District Court, Sierra County; M. C. Mechem, Judge.

From an order of the district court denying relief against two levies made by the county, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company appeals. Affirmed.

W. C. Reid, George S. Downer, and C. M. Botts, all of Albuquerque, for appellant. H. L. Patton, Atty. Gen., Geo. C. Taylor, Asst. Atty. Gen., and E. D. Tittmann, of Hillsboro, for appellee.

PARKER, J. This is an appeal by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company from an order of the district court of Sierra county denying appellant relief against two levies made by the county. The appellant contends that the general county and general road levies made by the county for the taxes of 1915 are excessive, in view of the fact that they are severally in excess of the ascertained rate, after proportionately reducing the maximum rate allowed therefor. Appellant's entire theory is based upon its construction of section 12 of chapter 54 of the Laws of 1915. That section provides that the counties shall not levy more than five mills on the dollar, for all county purposes, with stated exceptions. It also provides for a maximum rate for state and other levies. The particular paragraph of the section pertinent to the conclusion to be reached in this case provides:

> "Each of the tax levies provided by law in force at the time this act takes effect, except said special levies, shall be and hereby is proportionately reduced, so that the aggregate amount of such tax levies shall not exceed the maximum rates respectively specified in this section."

The appellant proffers a mathematical formula which it asserts is the only method by which the portion of the section can be given practical application. It relies somewhat, also, upon the construction given by the different departments of state and certain public officials, which is the same as that for which appellant contends in this case. But it entirely overlooks the plain words of the statute. The Legislature clearly provided that certain levies should be proportionately reduced, but only in the event that they exceeded, in the aggregate, more than the new maximum rate specified in the same act. Levies, prior to the passage of the act of 1915, were made upon the basis of one-third of the assessed value of property. The law, at that time, provided for certain maximum rates for each of the levies authorized by law, with the exception of two levies which were not limited by such maximum rates. The Legislature has eliminated those provisions as to the maximum rates for each of the purposes specified theretofore by law, and has declared, in effect, that the rate of levy for any specified purpose for which levies are authorized is immaterial so long as the aggregate of the levy for all county purposes, with certain exceptions, shall not exceed five mills on the dollar. In the event that the aggregate of such rates of levy does exceed the five mills, then the Legislature provided that the levies should be proportionately reduced so that the aggregate rate should not exceed the five-mill general maximum. It said no more nor less than this, and no other construction of the paragraph of the section is permissible or justified by the plain intent of the Legislature. Whether the Legislature was speaking to only a proportionate reduction of the levies made in 1914 or those made in 1915, or whether it contemplated that in the event a reduction became necessary the basic figures should be the rate of the levy actually made for each specified purpose or the maximum rate of the levy specified by law for each purpose, it is unnecessary to determine in this case. All that the court determines in this case is that the portion of section 12, c. 54, Laws 1915, heretofore quoted, provides for a proportionate reduction only in the event that the aggregate rate of the levies made by the county, with stated exceptions, is in excess of five mills, the maximum aggregate rate specified by the law of 1915. The findings of the trial court and the admission of appellant show that the aggregate of the levies of the county, in this case, did not exceed five mills.

---

⚿For other cases see same topic and KEY-NUMBER in all Key-Numbered Digests and Indexes

The judgment of the trial court is therefore affirmed, and it is so ordered.

HANNA, C. J., and ROBERTS, J., concur.

(22 N. M. 501)

In re MARRON & WOOD. (No. 1961.)

(Supreme Court of New Mexico. May 19, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

ATTORNEY AND CLIENT 🔑59—DISBARMENT PROCEEDINGS—COSTS—STATUTE.

Costs are the creatures of statute, and in the absence of statute authorizing the taxation of costs none can be taxed in disbarment proceedings. Held, that section 4282, Code 1915, does not authorize taxation of costs in disbarment proceedings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Attorney and Client, Cent. Dig. § 76.]

On motion to retax costs. Motion granted. For former opinion, see 160 Pac. 391.

Harry S. Bowman, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State. A. B. Renehan and D. K. Sadler, both of Santa Fé, for respondents.

HANNA, C. J. The respondents have filed a motion in this case to retax the costs, on the theory that the taxation of costs against them by the clerk was without authority of law. In 6 C. J. 613, it is said:

> "In the absence of statute giving costs in such cases [disbarment], the general rule is that none can be recovered by either party."

In 2 Thornton on Attorneys at Law, § 895, it is said that costs are the creatures of statute, and the general rule is that none can be recovered in disbarment cases, in the absence of statutory authority therefor. See, also, 4 Cyc. 917, and cases cited in each of the foregoing authorities.

The only statute in this state which could be claimed as authority for the taxation of costs against the respondents is section 4282, Code 1915, which reads as follows:

> "For all civil actions or proceedings of any kind, the party prevailing shall recover his costs against the other party, except in those cases in which a different provision is made by law."

An act of the Legislature of 1917, dealing with the taxation of costs in disbarment cases, need not be considered, because this motion was filed before that act was passed. Section 4282, quoted supra, was originally section 1 of article "Costs" in the Kearney Code, and has been carried into the Code of 1915 as it was originally adopted. The statute is an exact duplicate of one in Missouri, which in turn was no doubt copied from Massachusetts. An investigation of the cases in those states fails to disclose any case wherein the statute was applied to disbarment cases. Whether the rule of ejusdem generis should be applied to the statute of this state, or whether disbarment proceedings are civil in their nature, we do not deem it necessary to decide. We are satisfied that the statute did not contemplate actions other than the ordinary and usual ones, where a matter is being litigated by two antagonistic parties. And this conclusion is not affected by the fact that perhaps it may be true that the state is a party to disbarment cases. The proceeding is special and does not fall within the terms of the statute.

We are therefore of the opinion that the taxation of costs against the respondents was erroneous, and the motion to retax the costs will therefore be granted; and it is so ordered.

PARKER and ROBERTS, JJ., concur.

(30 Idaho, 411)

STATE v. CUMMINS.

(Supreme Court of Idaho. May 5, 1917.)

1. EXPRESS STATUTORY PROVISION.

Section 25, S. B. No. 62, Sess. Laws 1909, p. 17, makes the transportation of intoxicating liquors into a prohibition district, or into any point or place in this state, where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited by law, a misdemeanor.

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW 🔑295—DUE PROCESS—PROHIBITION DISTRICT—VALIDITY OF STATUTE.

This section does not contravene the provisions of the fifth or fourteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States, nor the provisions of section 1, art. 1, of the Constitution of the state of Idaho.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 841.]

3. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑17—TRANSPORTATION INTO PROHIBITION TERRITORY—VALIDITY.

An act, prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquors into territory where the sale thereof is prohibited by law, is a valid exercise of the police power.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 21–23.]

Appeal from District Court, Minidoka County; Edward A. Walters, Judge.

Dan Cummins was convicted of transporting intoxicating liquors into a prohibition district, and he appeals. Affirmed.

T. Bailey Lee, of Burley, for appellant. J. H. Peterson, Atty. Gen., T. C. Coffin and Herbert Wing, Asst. Attys. Gen., E. G. Davis, of Boise, and Homer C. Mills, Pros. Atty., of Rupert, for the State.

BUDGE, C. J. Appellant was convicted of the crime of unlawfully transporting liquors into a prohibition district. A motion for a new trial was overruled. This appeal is from the judgment and from the order overruling appellant's motion for a new trial. The information was brought under section 25, S. B. No. 62, Sess. Laws 1909, p. 17, which reads as follows:

> "Sec. 25. Any person, firm, corporation, society or club within this State who shall accept for shipment, transportation or delivery, or who shall ship, transport or deliver any intoxicating liquors to any person, firm, corporation, society or club in any prohibition district in the State of Idaho, or to any point or place in this State where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited by law, except as may be authorized by this act or the interstate commerce law of the United States, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished as provided in section 30 of this act."

The charging part of the information reads as follows:

> "That the said D. H. Cummins, on or about the 17th day of April, A. D. 1914 at Paul, in the county of Minidoka, state of Idaho, did willfully, knowingly and unlawfully ship, transport and deliver intoxicating liquors from Jerome, Idaho, into a prohibition district of the state of Idaho, to wit, Paul, Minidoka county, Idaho, well knowing that he, the said D. H. Cummins, was transporting intoxicating liquors, to wit, whisky, into a prohibition district of the state of Idaho, to wit, Paul, Minidoka county, Idaho. That said transportation of intoxicating liquors was not authorized by the law of the state of Idaho, or the interstate commerce law of the United States, or for any other lawful purpose, and contrary to Senate Bill No. 62 of the Session Laws of the State of Idaho for the year 1909."

Appellant assigns the following errors:

> "(1) The court erred in overruling defendant's demurrer to the information.
>
> "(2) The court erred in overruling defendant's objection to the introduction of any evidence touching his transportation of intoxicating liquors into Minidoka county.
>
> "(3) The court erred in overruling defendant's motion that he be discharged, and the cause dismissed.
>
> "(4) The court erred in overruling defendant's motion for a new trial."

And further assigns that:

> "The evidence is insufficient to support the verdict, there being in the record no evidence whatever to sustain it."

[1, 2] The main contention of appellant is that the transportation of intoxicating liquors through a prohibition district does not come within the purview of the statute above quoted, for the reason, as appellant urges, that to so hold would make the statute unconstitutional, in that it would then contravene the provisions of the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and section 1, art. 1, of the Constitution of the state of Idaho, for the reason:

> "That it unequivocally prohibits the use and enjoyment by one of his own property, and in effect deprives him thereof without due process of law."

Since the briefs in this case were filed, this court decided the case of In re Crane, 27 Idaho, 671, 151 Pac. 1006. The objections to the constitutionality of such legislation are thoroughly reviewed in that opinion, and the conclusion there reached is adverse to the contention of appellant in this case. It is unnecessary to here review all the authorities considered in the Crane Case. It will be noticed, however, that the opinion in that case quotes with approval the following language from Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 8 Sup. Ct. 273, 31 L. Ed. 205:

> "And so, if, in the judgment of the Legislature," the possession of intoxicating liquors "would tend to cripple, if it did not defeat, the effort to guard the community against the evils attending the excessive use of such liquors, it is not for the courts, upon their views as to what is best and safest for the community, to disregard the legislative determination of that question."

[3] We hold, therefore, that under the section of the statute above quoted the transportation of intoxicating liquors to any point or place in this state, where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited by law, is a misdemeanor. This is a valid exercise of the police power. Clark Distilling Co. v. Western Maryland R. Co., 37 Sup. Ct. 180, 242 U. S. 311, 61 L. Ed. 326 (decided January 8, 1917); In re Crane, supra; Glenn v. Southern Express Co., 170 N. C. 286, 87 S. E. 136, distinguishing and modifying State v. Williams, 146 N. C. 618, 61 S. E. 61, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 299, 14 Ann. Cas. 562.

The information is sufficient to charge the crime of transporting intoxicating liquors into a prohibition district under the provisions of this section of the statute. The evidence shows conclusively that appellant procured the whisky at Jerome, Idaho, and that he transported it upon the train into Paul, Minidoka county, Idaho, which was then within a prohibition district, within which the sale of intoxicating liquors was prohibited by law.

There is no force in appellant's contention that he had not delivered any of the whisky to any person, that he was retaining it in his own possession, and that he was merely transporting it through the prohibition district to his own home. It is not necessary, under the provisions of the statute, to either plead or prove that the liquor was delivered to any person.

The evidence is sufficient to sustain the verdict and judgment.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

MORGAN and RICE, JJ., concur.

(30 Idaho, 415)

STATE v. BUTTERFIELD.

(Supreme Court of Idaho. May 5, 1917.)

1. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING—"CATTLE RANGE"—STATUTE.

Under section 6872, Rev. Codes, if the usual and customary use of a range has been for cattle, it is a "cattle range."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, Cattle Range.]

2. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING—"SHEEP AND CATTLE RANGE."

If the usual and customary use of a range has been for both cattle and sheep, it is not a cattle range under said section, but a "cattle and sheep range."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

3. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING—ABANDONMENT OF CATTLE RANGE.

The exclusive right of cattle men, as against sheep men, to the use of certain range which has first been occupied by the cattle men, may be abandoned by their act in entirely ceasing to use said range, or by permitting the customary use of it for sheep in common with cattle, without protest, or asserting an exclusive right.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

4. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING—SHEEP RANGE.

If cattle men and sheep men jointly use the range in the usual and customary manner of using it for a period of time long enough to create a custom, if the cattle men know of such joint use and do not protest against it nor claim a prior and exclusive right to the same, then the herding or grazing of sheep upon such range is not unlawful, even though it be a fact that, before such customary joint use for both sheep and cattle, the land was used exclusively for cattle.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

5. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING SHEEP ON CATTLE RANGE—EVIDENCE.

The evidence in this case held insufficient to justify a verdict of guilty of grazing sheep upon a cattle range.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

6. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—CATTLE RANGE—ABANDONMENT—EVIDENCE—INSTRUCTIONS.

Proof of customary use of a range for both cattle and sheep in common is proper evidence to consider in determining whether such range has been abandoned as a cattle range, and an instruction to this effect, requested by defendant, should have been given by the trial court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

7. PUBLIC LANDS 🔑17—GRAZING SHEEP ON CATTLE RANGE—OFFENSE—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTE.

Held, that said section 6872, Rev. Codes, is not unconstitutional and void. State v. Horn, 27 Idaho, 782, 152 Pac. 275, and State v. Omaechevviaria, 27 Idaho, 797, 152 Pac. 280, approved and upheld.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Public Lands, Cent. Dig. § 23.]

Appeal from District Court, Washington County; Ed L. Bryan, Judge.

A. G. Butterfield was convicted of having violated section 6872, Rev. Codes, by herding, grazing, and pasturing sheep upon a cattle range, and he appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Alfred A. Fraser, of Boise, and E. R. Coulter, of Weiser, for appellant. T. A. Walters, Atty. Gen., and Lot L. Feltham, of Clarkston, Wash., for the State.

McCARTHY, District Judge. This case was commenced in the probate court of Washington county, upon a complaint charging the defendant with a violation of the provisions of section 6872, Rev. Codes. Upon the trial in said court, the defendant was found guilty as charged in the complaint, and an appeal was taken from the judgment to the district court for Washington county. Upon the trial in the district court the defendant was again found guilty, and the court sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 and the costs of the action. The appeal herein is from said judgment of the district court.

The principal assignments of error relied upon by appellant, are: First, that the court erred in refusing to give certain instructions which were requested by him; second, that the evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict; and, third, that the statute upon which the prosecution is based is unconstitutional and void.

The complaint alleges that the defendant herded, grazed, and pastured, and permitted and suffered a band of sheep to be herded, grazed, and pastured, on the range in question, said range being then and there cattle range previously occupied by cattle, and range then and there usually occupied by cattle growers, the said defendant having full knowledge of the character of said range.

It is stipulated by and between the parties that the tract of land or range mentioned in the complaint has ever since the year 1885 been used both as a cattle and sheep range in the usual and customary use of such range as a cattle or sheep range. The defendant was convicted of permitting and suffering sheep to be herded, grazed, and pastured upon said range. The case was prosecuted under the provisions of section 6872, Rev. Codes, which reads as follows:

> "Any person owning or having charge of sheep, who herds, grazes, or pastures the same, or permits or suffers the same to be herded, grazed or pastured, on any cattle range previously occupied by cattle, or upon any range usually occupied by any cattle grower, either as a spring, summer or winter range for his cattle, is guilty of a misdemeanor; but the priority of possessory right between cattle and sheep owners to any range, is determined by the priority in the usual and customary use of such range, either as a cattle or sheep range."

There is evidence in the record to the effect that the range was first used for horses and cattle in 1874, and has been used continuously for horses and cattle ever since. The evidence shows that sheep came upon the range about 1885. There is evidence that since 1890 the defendant himself has ranged sheep upon the range in question. The stipulation is to the effect that ever since 1885 sheep have ranged upon it in the usual and customary use of it as a sheep range. No protest on the part of the cattle men and no claim of exclusive right on their part is shown in the evidence up to within a few days prior to the commencement of this action.

The defendant requested several instructions on the question of abandonment, among others the following:

> "The jury are instructed that, if you find from the evidence that continuously since the year 1885 the range or tract of land mentioned in the complaint has been jointly used both as a cattle and sheep range in the usual and customary use of such range, then you should take this fact into consideration upon the question as to whether or not such range had been abandoned as an exclusive cattle range."

This and all other instructions on that question requested by the defendant were refused by the trial court. The trial court instructed the jury upon the question of abandonment, saying that the state must show that the range had not been abandoned as a cattle range, and that, if the evidence proved that it had been abandoned as a cattle range, the verdict must be for the defendant. The trial court did not define in its instructions what is meant by the word "abandonment," as used in this action. In the case of State v. Omaechevviaria, 27 Idaho, 797, 152 Pac. 280, this court apparently recognizes the defense of abandonment in this class of cases, saying in substance that the state must show that the range had not been abandoned as a cattle range. The defense of abandonment was not made in that case, and therefore the court did not enter into a detailed discussion of that subject. The trial court in this case followed substantially the language used by the Supreme Court in State v. Omaechevviaria, supra. However, in the present case the defense of abandonment was specifically raised by the defendant, and the evidence produced makes it necessary to treat specifically of that question.

[1-4] The statute says that:

> "Priority of possessory right * * * is determined by the priority in the usual and customary use of such range."

If the usual and customary use of the range has been for cattle, then it is a cattle range. If the usual and customary use of the range has been for sheep, then it is not a cattle range. If the usual and customary use of such land has been by both cattle and sheep, then it is not a cattle range, but a cattle and sheep range. It is the contention of the state in this case that, if the range is first used for cattle, then the joint use of the range by cattle and sheep for a period of time however long will not divest it of its character as a cattle range. The state contends that the defense of abandonment does not apply unless the cattle men absolutely and entirely cease to use the range for cattle. The first part of section 6872 may seem to give some color to this contention. The last part of it, however, seems to be against this contention. If the priority of possessory right depends upon the usual and customary use of the range, and the range has been used for a time long enough to create a custom by both cattle men and sheep men, without any protest on the part of the cattle men, then it would seem that the usual and customary use of that range is a joint use by both sheep and cattle. The right which is given the cattle men by this statute is an exclusive right as against sheep men to certain range which they first use for cattle. The term "cattle range," as used in this statute, means an exclusive cattle range. If the exclusive right can be abandoned by the act of the cattle men in entirely ceasing to use the range, it seems to us that it can also be abandoned by them by permitting the customary grazing of sheep upon the land in common with the cattle without protest. Evidence tending to show that they had permitted the sheep men to use said range jointly with them since 1885, without protest, is therefore evidence tending to show that said range had been abandoned as a cattle range. If cattle men and sheep men jointly use the range in the usual and customary manner of using it for a period of time long enough to create a custom, if the cattle men know of such joint use and do not protest against such use of the range for sheep, nor claim a prior and exclusive right to the same, then the herding or grazing of sheep upon such range is not unlawful, even though it be a fact that, before such customary joint use for both sheep and cattle, the land was used exclusively for cattle. We therefore think that the court should have given to the jury the instruction requested by the defendant and quoted above, to the effect that they might take proof of the joint use of the range into consideration in determining whether or not the cattle men had abandoned their claim to the range as a cattle range.

[5, 6] Counsel for respondent, in their brief, contend that to recognize the defense above mentioned would be tantamount to recognizing adverse possession as a defense and would be tantamount to holding that the sheep men, by committing trespasses in the past, have acquired a license to commit crime. The defense of adverse possession as such does not apply, nor is it to be conceded for one moment that any one can acquire the right to commit crime by reason of having committed it in the past. The point is that under this particular statute the question of whether a man is committing a crime by herding his sheep upon a certain range depends upon the character of that range. The character of the range, in turn, depends upon the past acts and attitude of the cattle men and sheep men in regard to it. The act of the defendant himself, among others, may thus tend to prove the character of the range.

The question of abandonment is, in the first instance, a question of fact for the jury.

In our judgment, however, the uncontradicted evidence and the stipulation as to a customary joint use from 1885 until May, 1916, without protest, establishes an abandonment of the range as a cattle range within the meaning of that term as used in the statute. We therefore conclude that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict of guilty and the judgment of conviction based thereon.

[7] So far as the constitutional questions raised in this case are concerned, they were passed upon by this court in State v. Horn, 27 Idaho, 782, 152 Pac. 275, and State v. Omaechevviaria, supra. While the questions involved are close, this court does not see fit to overrule those decisions.

The judgment of conviction is reversed, and the case is remanded to the trial court, with direction to take such future action as may appear proper in view of this decision.

MORGAN and RICE, JJ., concur.

(40 Nev. 423)

ROBERSON v. KILBORN. (No. 2254.)*

(Supreme Court of Nevada. June 4, 1917.)

1. DEPOSITIONS ⚷71—ANSWERING QUESTIONS—CONTUMACIOUS REFUSAL—PENALTY—STRIKING PLEADING.

Where plaintiff in giving his deposition refused under advice and command of his counsel to answer certain questions until the court had ruled that they should and must be answered, his refusal was not contumacious, nor was he a recalcitrant witness, and it was error, before ruling that the questions must be answered, to strike his complaint.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. § 132.]

2. DEPOSITIONS ⚷71—ANSWERING QUESTIONS—CONTUMACIOUS REFUSAL—PENALTY—STRIKING PLEADING—DISCRETION OF COURT.

Conceding questions propounded in taking a deposition were legal and pertinent, it was an arbitrary exercise of authority to enter judgment against defendant before giving him an opportunity to answer the questions propounded and ruled to be proper.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Depositions, Cent. Dig. § 132.]

Appeal from District Court, Washoe County; T. F. Moran, Judge.

Suit by George Oliver Roberson against George D. Kilborn. From an order striking the complaint and giving judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded, with instructions.

George Springmeyer, of Reno, for appellant. Homer Mooney, of Reno, for respondent.

SANDERS, J. George Oliver Roberson, appellant, brought suit in the district court of Washoe county against George D. Kilborn, respondent, to recover damages alleged to have been suffered by reason of the publication of an alleged libelous article in the Nevada State Journal, a daily newspaper published by respondent in the city of Reno. After service of summons, and before answer, it was stipulated by the parties, through their respective counsel, that the deposition of appellant might be taken on application of respondent. Pursuant to the terms of the stipulation, appellant's deposition was taken, signed, sworn to, returned, and filed. Thereafter, respondent served on appellant's counsel a written notice to the effect that on the 4th day of April, 1916, he would move the court for an order striking out the complaint on file in the cause and dismissing the same, and for an order that judgment be entered in favor of respondent, on the grounds that appellant refused to give his deposition, and refused to answer as a witness questions to him propounded, and, in support of the motion, that he would rely on the papers and pleadings in the cause, including the purported deposition. The motion came on for hearing, and was submitted to the court for its decision on the 4th day of April, 1916. On said date, the court, it appears, caused to be made and entered the following minute order:

> "Be it further remembered, that in open court, on April 4, 1916, defendant duly moved the court for an order striking out plaintiff's complaint and for judgment for defendant on the grounds stated in the aforesaid notice of motion; that plaintiff, acting by and through his counsel, then and there offered to make answer on his deposition to all questions and interrogatories which the court might declare to be proper, competent, relevant, or material, and which the court might direct, require, or order him to answer; that said matters were then and there duly argued by respective counsel for plaintiff and defendant, and submitted to the court for its decision."

Thereafter, on the 24th day of August, 1916, the court made its ruling, decision, and order sustaining the motion, upon the following grounds (excerpt from decision):

> "Without going further into the deposition and picking out each question separately, we think we have pointed out enough in connection with what we have observed in the record of the proceeding to warrant the court in making a ruling on this motion. The alleged libel is set out merely to show what relevancy the questions propounded by defendant's counsel could have to same. All the questions mentioned in this opinion are relevant and should have been answered. The plaintiff has refused to answer proper questions to such an extent as to defeat the taking of his deposition.
>
> "For the reasons given, the complaint of plaintiff is stricken out, and judgment is given against him. It is so ordered."

The taking of the deposition of a party to a suit before trial is strictly a statutory proceeding, embraced by chapter 54 of the Civil Practice Act (Rev. Laws, §§ 5419-5449). Section 479 of the act provides that, if a party refuse to give his deposition before trial, his pleading may be stricken out and judgment be taken against him. Section 496 of the act provides that, refusal to answer as a witness, or to subscribe a deposition, may be punished as a contempt by the court or officer; and, if the witness be a party, his complaint may be dismissed or his answer stricken out. Whether a court may, under section 496 of the act, strike a pleading of a party witness before his being adjudged guilty of a contempt—quære.

*Rehearing denied August 1, 1917.

[1] The court based its ruling and decision upon the ground that appellant refused to answer proper questions to such an extent as to defeat the taking of his deposition. It is not pretended that the witness refused to give his deposition. It clearly appears from the record that the excuse of the witness for not answering the questions was that under the advice of his counsel and, in fact, by reason of the command of his counsel, he declined to answer. His refusal to answer was not, therefore, contumacious; nor can it be said that he was a recalcitrant witness. He proffered his willingness to answer the questions when ruled upon by the court, and, upon the hearing of the motion, it appears that his counsel offered to make answer to all questions propounded which the court should rule to be pertinent and legal, and which the court might direct, require, and order him to answer.

The facts thus presented are entirely different from those the court had to deal with in the case of Maxwell v. Rives, 11 Nev. 220. There the examination was conducted in the presence of the court, and the witness refused, and continued his refusal, to answer questions ruled by the court to be proper. Here the witness refused to answer pending a ruling by the court, and his excuse, as before stated, for not answering, was that he did so under the advice of his counsel.

[2] Conceding, but not deciding, that the questions propounded were legal and pertinent, it was an arbitrary exercise of authority to enter judgment against appellant before giving him an opportunity to answer the questions ruled to be proper.

In applying a statute in a proceeding of this kind to a similar state of facts as here presented, the Supreme Court of Indiana decided that, it is only where a party refuses to attend and testify that he may be punished as for a contempt, and his pleadings stricken out. If it appears that he did attend and testify, and merely refused to answer certain questions under the advice of his counsel, without any disrespect to the court, but because there is nothing in the complaint upon which to base such questions, it will be error to punish him as for contempt, or to strike out his pleadings. Chaffin v. Brownfield, 88 Ind. 305.

In the case of Livesley v. O'Brien, 6 Wash. 553, 34 Pac. 134, cited by respondent in support of the regularity of the judgment here complained of, the court's overruling of a motion to strike the interrogatories to be propounded to a party witness was in effect an approval by the court of the interrogatories. In that case the court said that motions of this character are directed to the discretion of the trial court, and its action in passing thereon will not be reversed unless the record shows an abuse of discretion.

No harm could have resulted to respondent by giving to appellant an opportunity to answer the questions when the court had ruled them to be proper. In fact, it might have enabled respondent to obtain the information which he professed to want. But to refuse to give appellant an opportunity to answer the questions when so ruled upon might deprive appellant of a constitutional right. Citizens' National Bank v. Alexander, 34 Ind. App. 597, 73 N. E. 279; Lawson v. Black Diamond Coal Mining Co., 44 Wash. 26, 86 Pac. 1120.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded. The district court is instructed to revoke the order striking appellant's complaint and to enter an order reinstating the same.

McCARRAN, C. J., and COLEMAN, J., concur.

(84 Or. 310)

TONEY v. TONEY et al.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 22, 1917.)

1. Deeds 🔑210—Recital of Consideration—Contradiction.

Where a deed is attacked on the ground of fraud or imposition, the recital of a consideration therein is only prima facie evidence that the consideration has in fact been paid; a fraudulent grantee cannot tie the hands of a court of equity by inserting in the deed such a recital contrary to the fact.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 635, 636.]

2. Trusts 🔑69 — Resulting Trusts — Conveyance Without Consideration.

Where property is conveyed without consideration, and the circumstances unequivocally rebut the presumption of a gift, equity will charge the grantee with a resulting trust in favor of the grantor.

3. Husband and Wife 🔑49½(8) — Conveyance—Presumption of Gift—Circumstances Rebutting.

Where a wife sued her husband for divorce, their married life having been infelicitous, and he contested the suit, being obliged to provide his wife with suit money, and, after decree of divorce for the wife, she sued out execution, and compelled her husband to pay the money adjudged to be due her with costs, and later the wife attached an interest which the husband had in a millinery store, and seized some of his clothing and personal effects, and carried it away with her, and demanded that he pay her $50 as a consideration for its return, the circumstances were such as to clearly rebut the presumption that the husband intended to make a gift to his wife when he conveyed to her, without consideration, property worth about $6,000.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Husband and Wife, Cent. Dig. § 254.]

4. Deeds 🔑211(3) — Intoxication — Sufficiency of Evidence.

In suit by a divorced husband to set aside a deed to his wife on the ground that it was executed without consideration when he was intoxicated, and was a victim of fraud, artifice, and imposition, evidence held to show that the wife defrauded and imposed on her husband, taking advantage of him when he was intoxicated, pursuant to a design to despoil him of all his property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 644, 645.]

5. Deeds ⚷17(2)—Inadequacy of Consideration.

Inadequacy of consideration may be so gross as to shock the conscience, and in such case equity will seize on slight circumstances of fraud and oppression as a ground for setting aside the transaction, a principle applicable to a transfer without any consideration, where the relations of the parties preclude the conclusion that a gift was intended.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Deeds, Cent. Dig. §§ 26, 27.]

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Baker County; Gustav Anderson, Judge.

Suit by Jesse D. Toney against Alta E. Toney and O. C. Olsen. From a decree for plaintiff, defendant Toney appeals. Affirmed.

This is a suit brought to set aside a deed executed by plaintiff in favor of appellant on the 7th of September, 1915, to lot 6 in block R, lot 9 in block F, and lots 4, 7, and 8 in block L, in the townsite of Haines, Baker county; the said deed also purports to transfer to appellant some furniture and household goods and an automobile. It appears that plaintiff and appellant were married in November, 1911. That in October, 1914, appellant brought suit for divorce against plaintiff. The suit was contested. A decree was passed on the 25th of June, 1915, granting appellant a divorce, giving her a money judgment for $1,063.33 and a one-third interest in the property in dispute in this case, all of which belonged to plaintiff prior to the date of the said decree. Appellant was also given by the decree a one-ninth interest in 280 acres of land in Baker county, an undivided one-third interest in which had belonged to plaintiff. Immediately after the entry of the decree in her favor appellant issued execution, levied on plaintiff's property, and forced payment of her money judgment. Appellant subsequently sold to plaintiff's brothers her undivided interest in the 280 acres of land, receiving therefor $1,667. On the 31st of August appellant brought suit against plaintiff for the partition of the property involved in this litigation, and a few days thereafter plaintiff executed the deed in controversy. Appellant having acquired all of the property involved in the partition suit, this suit was dismissed. The case at bar was brought on the 25th of April, 1916. Plaintiff bases his claim to a cancellation of the deed on the fact that it was executed without consideration; that he was intoxicated at the time when the deed was executed; and that he was the victim of fraud, artifice, and imposition on the part of appellant. Shortly after the bringing of this suit, and on the 8th of May, 1916, a deed was placed of record in Baker county, whereby appellant transferred the property in dispute to O. C. Olsen. A supplemental complaint was filed joining Olsen as a party defendant, and subsequently, and under date of July 1, 1916, Olsen reconveyed to appellant. No answer was filed by Olsen, nor was he called as a witness. The findings of the lower court were in accord with plaintiff's contentions, and a decree was entered setting aside the deed and giving plaintiff judgment against appellant for $1,400, being the value of the automobile, and $500 being the value of the furniture and household goods. This personal property had been taken out of the state by appellant, and the only relief which an Oregon court could give plaintiff was a money judgment for the value of the property. The defendant Alta E. Toney appeals.

J. B. Cordiner, of Spokane, Wash. (Cordiner & Cordiner, of Spokane, Wash., and O. B. Mount, of Baker, on the brief), for appellant. Joseph J. Heilner, of Baker (James H. Nichols, of Baker, on the brief), for respondent.

McCAMANT, J. (after stating the facts as above). Appellant's explanation of the execution of the deed in controversy is that plaintiff sought an interview with her on the morning of September 6, 1915; that he expressed a desire that appellant should have all of the property involved in the partition suit, stating that he had not treated her properly during their married life. She claims that the deed was executed pursuant to this understanding, and that plaintiff thoroughly understood its import. Plaintiff claims that an arrangement was entered into between the parties on this same day for the settlement of the partition suit, appellant to take two houses, including the one in which the parties had been living, and plaintiff to take the remainder of the property. Plaintiff testifies that he suggested that the parties should go over to the bank in Haines and execute the necessary deeds; that appellant refused to do this, insisting that the papers should be made out by her attorney at La Grande; that on the following day the parties went to La Grande; and that appellant fraudulently prepared a deed covering all of the property involved in the partition suit, the household furniture and effects, and plaintiff's automobile as well. Plaintiff further claims that while he was under the influence of liquor he was induced to sign the deed without reading it, under the belief induced by appellant that the deed was operative merely to convey to appellant that portion of the real property which she was to receive under the verbal agreement entered into for the settlement of the partition suit.

[1] The deed recites a consideration of $1 and other valuable considerations. Appellant contends that this recital is binding on plaintiff, and that evidence is not admissible for the purpose of showing that the conveyance was executed without consideration. In support of this contention the case of Finlayson v. Finlayson, 17 Or. 347, 21 Pac. 57, 3 L. R. A. 801, 11 Am. St. Rep. 836, is cited. If this case sustains the contention of appellant in this regard, it must be deemed to be overruled by the later decisions of Velten v. Carmack, 23 Or. 282, 288, 31 Pac. 658, 20 L. R. A. 101, and North American Co. v. Cole, 61 Or. 1, 6, 118 Pac. 1032. These later decisions establish the principle that where a deed is attacked on the ground of fraud or imposition, the recital of a consideration therein is only prima facie evidence that the consideration has in fact been paid. A fraudulent grantee, in other words, cannot tie the hands of a court of equity by inserting in the deed such a recital contrary to the fact. This we understand to be the rule in other jurisdictions. 13 Cyc. 614; 17 Cyc. 651 to 652, and cases cited. In this case there is no contention that a consideration was given plaintiff for the property described in the deed. The evidence indicates that the property was worth in the neighborhood of $6,000.

[2] Where property is conveyed without consideration, and the circumstances unequivocally rebut the presumption of a gift, equity will charge the grantee with a resulting trust in favor of the grantor. Bennett v. Hutson, 33 Ark. 762; Giffen v. Taylor, 139 Ind. 573, 37 N. E. 392; Myers v. Jackson, 135 Ind. 136, 34 N. E. 810, 812; Lingenfelter v. Ritchey, 58 Pa. 485, 98 Am. Dec. 308; McDermith v. Voorhees, 16 Colo. 402, 27 Pac. 250, 25 Am. St. Rep. 286. This court is committed to a doctrine closely approaching that announced in the foregoing authorities. Gray v. Beard, 66 Or. 59, 68, 133 Pac. 791.

[3] Do the circumstances of this case clearly rebut the presumption that plaintiff intended to give the property in dispute to appellant? It appears from the testimony that both plaintiff and appellant had been previously married; that their married life was infelicitous; that the divorce suit was contested; that during the pendency of the suit plaintiff was obliged by the court to provide appellant with suit money; that immediately after the divorce decree appellant sued out execution thereon and compelled plaintiff to pay the money adjudged to be due her with accruing costs. The partition suit seems to have been brought by appellant without any effort to divide the property amicably. These facts would seem to preclude any contention that the relations between the parties were cordial at the time when the deed was executed in appellant's favor. The antagonistic relations of the parties are further emphasized by circumstances which transpired subsequently. In December, 1915, on the maturity of a note for $600, which plaintiff had given appellant, she assigned the note to one E. C. Tuckey, brought action thereon in Tuckey's name, and attached an interest which plaintiff had in a millinery store. Thereafter appellant seized some clothing and personal effects belonging to plaintiff, and to which appellant had no claim of any kind. She carried this property with her to Spokane, and demanded that plaintiff should pay her $50 as a consideration for its return to him. We have no hesitation in saying that the evidence in the case at bar forecloses any contention that plaintiff intended to present appellant with the property described in this deed. In so far as the case involves the real property, we think it clear that the decree of the lower court can be upheld under the doctrine of a resulting trust.

We also think that the evidence sustains plaintiff's contentions as to fraud and imposition. It appears by an overwhelming preponderance of the testimony that plaintiff for many years had been a drinking man; that his marital troubles drove him to excessive drinking in the summer of 1915; that he was under the influence of liquor more or less for a number of months at that time; and that by the 7th of September his system was so poisoned with alcohol as to make him an easy prey to the avarice of appellant. While appellant testifies that she saw but little of plaintiff during the summer of 1915, her testimony in this respect, as in other respects, is unbelievable. The parties were living at that time in the same house in the village of Haines. Appellant must have seen plaintiff every day, and must have been fully apprised of his habits and the mental condition arising therefrom. Appellant cites 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law (2d Ed.) 401. In this authority the following principle is announced:

> "Where a person seeks to avoid responsibility for a contract on the ground of intoxication alone, it must appear that the drunkenness was so excessive that he was utterly deprived of the use of his reason and understanding, and was altogether incapable of knowing the effect of what he was doing."

This authority was called to the attention of this court in the case of Fagan v. Wiley, 49 Or. 480, 484, 90 Pac. 910. While the rule announced in the Encyclopædia was accepted as a correct statement of the law, it was also held in the above case that where a party under the influence of liquor purchases property at an exorbitant price the burden devolves on the vendor of showing the perfect good faith of the transaction. In this case we are dealing with a conveyance wholly without consideration. While the evidence fails to show that plaintiff was utterly deprived of the use of his reason and understanding at the time when he executed the deed, it does show that he was broken both mentally and physically as the result of continued excessive indulgence in drink. It appears that he had been drinking for an hour at Haines before he went with appellant to La Grande to execute the deed, and that while the deed was being prepared he was drinking mixed drinks in a saloon in La Grande. It further appears that when he returned to Haines after executing the deed later on the same day he was visibly intoxicated. The principle cited in the Encyclopædia of Law is also announced in Ruling Case Law. It is qualified, however, by the following language:

> "It should be noted, however, that complete intoxication is necessary only when the contract is sought to be avoided on the ground of mental incapacity. Where the avoidance is sought on the ground of fraud, even partial intoxication may be sufficient if it was brought about by the act or connivance of the other party or if an undue advantage was taken of the intoxicated person." 6 R. C. L. 598.

[4] We think this case is clearly one wherein appellant took advantage of an intoxicated person, pursuant to a design to despoil him of substantially all he had in the world.

[5] Inadequacy of consideration may be so gross as to shock the conscience, and in such case equity will seize on slight circumstances of fraud and oppression as a ground for setting aside the transaction. 4 R. C. L. 501; Archer v. Lapp, 12 Or. 196, 202, 6 Pac. 672; Sherman v. Glick, 71 Or. 451, 461, 142 Pac. 606. This principle is applicable to a transfer of property without any consideration to support it, where the relations of the parties preclude the conclusion that a gift was intended. The evidence clearly shows that plaintiff remained ignorant of the contents and effect of this deed for months after its execution.

There are other circumstances in the record which strongly tend to prove appellant's bad faith. Although plaintiff's automobile was transferred to appellant by the deed in question plaintiff continued to use the automobile for approximately two months after the execution of the deed. At the end of that time appellant drove the automobile to La Grande and executed a bill of sale thereof in favor of her attorney. The testimony on appellant's behalf is that the bill of sale was given to secure a fee of $75, which she owed her attorney, but it also appears that appellant was in funds and able to pay any debt of that size which she owed; also that her attorney was advised of her circumstances, and knew that she was solvent, and that any claim he had against her was good without security.

We are satisfied from the evidence that the deed executed by appellant in favor of the defendant Olsen was executed with intent to put the property out of the reach of plaintiff. It appears that the deed was antedated, and the circumstances suggest that it was executed immediately after plaintiff received her copy of the summons and complaint in this case. Her explanation of the transaction is unbelievable, and the ingenuity of her counsel has been able to suggest nothing which can account for this deed on any other theory than that above suggested. Appellant's effort to cover up the property and thus to deprive plaintiff of his remedy discredits appellant's contentions. The evidence amply sustains the findings and conclusions of the lower court.

The decree of the lower court is affirmed.

(84 Or. 319)

ENTERPRISE MERCANTILE & MILLING CO. v. CUNNINGHAM.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 22, 1917.)

1. Replevin 🔑59 — Complaint — Sufficiency.

A complaint in replevin seeking to recover possession of a dwelling house on the land of the defendant, which recites no facts to overcome the presumption that the building was real estate, was insufficient, and a demurrer thereto should have been sustained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Replevin, Cent. Dig. §§ 215–218.]

2. Fixtures 🔑29 — Severance of House — Replevin.

Negotiations by a homesteader for the sale of his improvements together with a relinquishment of his possessory right to the land as homesteader did not constitute a constructive severance of the house from the realty, which would entitle a creditor to replevin the house as personal property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fixtures, Cent. Dig. §§ 60, 61.]

3. Fixtures 🔑29—Conversion or Change of Form—Severance of House.

Constructive severance of a fixture must arise from the intention of the owner as evidenced by his acts, and the disclosed purpose of a future severance would not change the character of a building from real estate to personal property.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fixtures, Cent. Dig. §§ 60, 61.]

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Wallowa County; J. W. Knowles, Judge.

Replevin by the Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Company against D. M. Cunningham. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed and remanded.

Plaintiff began an action in replevin, alleging inter alia:

> "That plaintiff is the owner of and entitled to the immediate possession of the following described personal property: One small dwelling house situated on the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter, section 20 in township 1 south of range 45 E. W. M., and of the value of $100."

Then follow allegations of the wrongful withholding of possession to plaintiff's damage and a prayer for judgment. Defendant demurred to the complaint, contending that it appears therefrom that the property of which recovery is sought is real estate, and therefore not subject to replevin. The demurrer having been overruled, defendant answered with a general denial. Upon the trial defendant objected to the introduction of any evidence by plaintiff for the reason that the complaint does not state a cause of action. The objection being overruled, the trial proceeded, resulting in a judgment for plaintiff, from which defendant appeals.

D. W. Sheahan, of Enterprise, for appellant. J. A. Burleigh, of Enterprise, for respondent.

BENSON, J. (after stating the facts as above). There are 17 assignments of error, but we shall consider but two: (1) The demurrer to the complaint; and (2) the defendant's motion for a directed verdict.

[1] The complaint seeks to recover possession of a dwelling house located on land of the defendants, but recites no facts which would take the property out of the classification of real estate where, prima facie, it belongs. The opposing counsel have each cited a single case supporting their several contentions. Plaintiff relies upon Brearley v. Cox, 24 N. J. Law, 287, which supports his claim that the pleading is sufficient. Defendant cites Bridges v. Thomas, 8 Okl. 620, 624, 58 Pac. 955, 956, which says:

> "In our judgment the court correctly sustained the demurrer to the petition. We have been cited [to] but one case which states a different rule. The Supreme Court of New Jersey, in the case of Brearley v. Cox, 24 N. J. Law, 287, held that it was no cause for demurrer to a declaration in replevin that it was brought for 'a barn, shingle mill, office, and shed,' for the reason that such things, while ordinarily fixtures and a part of the realty, yet they might be personalty, and whether they were or not was a matter of evidence. The case is disposed of on the theory that the facts showing whether such things were real or personal was evidence, and that it was not proper to plead evidence. We do not consider the case based on sound reasoning. There are strong reasons why the rule should be otherwise. If one is entitled to maintain the action of replevin, and to have the property seized and delivered to him, before a court should permit its process to be used to sever a building from its resting place, and cause it to be placed on wheels and transported back and forth like live stock or other chattels, the character of which cannot be questioned, the one desiring such process should be required to plead a state of facts which, if proven, could leave no question as to his right to maintain the action, and to possession of the building."

The latter case clearly states the better rule, and it is the rule already adopted by this court in Van Orsdol v. Hutchcroft, 163 Pac. 978, in which Mr. Justice Moore says:

> "As nearly every building is put up with the intention that it shall become and remain a part of the land on which it rests, it necessarily follows that, in order to overcome the presumption that a building is real property, a pleading must allege facts showing the structure was placed on a temporary foundation and erected with the intention that it should be removed, or that it had been taken from its original support so as to be moved away."

It follows that the demurrer should have been sustained.

[2] Even if the complaint were sufficient, the defendant's motion for a directed verdict should have been allowed, upon the evidence. There is no dispute as to the substantial facts in the case. One A. W. Fisher was the occupant of the house and the land upon which it is situated, and was indebted to the plaintiff. Fisher began negotiations with defendant for the sale of his improvements, together with a relinquishment of his possessory right to the land as a homesteader. While such negotiations were pending, plaintiff began an action against Fisher, and undertook to attach the house as personal property upon the theory that the negotiations for the sale of the house constituted a constructive severance of it from the realty, thereby changing its nature. Thereafter and before judgment, defendant purchased the relinquishment of the possessory right to the land together with the improvements thereon, went into possession thereof, filed the relinquishment and his own application for the land, and subsequently received a patent therefor. After judgment, the sheriff went through the form of an execution sale of the house at which plaintiff became the purchaser and then brought this action.

[3] It has been held in a long line of cases that the relinquishment of the possessory right of a homesteader is a marketable commodity.. Fain v. United States, 209 Fed. 525, 126 C. C. A. 347, and cases there cited. It is fundamental that a constructive severance of a fixture must arise from the intention of the owner as evidenced by his acts, and there is not a vestige of evidence in the record of any intention upon the part of Fisher to sever the house from the land and, in fact, it was never severed. Nor, indeed, could the disclosed purpose of a future severance act to change the character of the building from real estate to personal property. The motion for a directed verdict should have been allowed.

The judgment will be reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to enter judgment for the defendant.

(84 Or. 323)

STATE v. NEWLIN.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 22, 1917.)

1. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑221 — SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT—STATUTE.

Under the direct provisions of Laws 1915, p. 166, § 33, it is not necessary that an indictment should disclose that a party charged with the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor did not have legal authority to sell such liquor, or that he was not within any of the exceptions provided for by the act.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 240–248.]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑223(3)—PLEADING—PROOF.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, designated in the indictment as "ethyl alcohol," as "alcohol" and "ethyl alcohol" are practically synonymous, there is no merit in the contention that in disclosing merely a sale of alcohol there was a failure of proof, and that the court erred in instructing the jury that "ethyl alcohol is, as a matter of law, intoxicating liquor."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 271.]

3. WITNESSES 🔑345(1) — IMPEACHMENT — PRIOR CONVICTIONS.

In view of statutory provision that to impeach a witness it may be shown by examination of the witness that he has been convicted either of a felony or misdemeanor, in a prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, where defendant testified that he had been convicted but once, the state was properly permitted to show in rebuttal that there were five prior convictions of defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 1126.]

4. INTOXICATING LIQUORS ⚷239(10) — INSTRUCTIONS.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, where there was evidence that a witness for the state and another went to a point near defendant's place on the day that this sale was alleged to have been made, and that such other went into the defendant's store and came out in a short time with a bottle of alcohol, from which the witness drank, the court properly refused to instruct that there was no evidence that defendant on the day stated made a sale to such person.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 342-345.]

5. CRIMINAL LAW ⚷1159(4)—REVIEW—EVIDENCE.

The credibility of the evidence is for the jury, and does not concern the appellate court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3077.]

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Union County; J. W. Knowles, Judge.

Adolph Newlin was convicted of selling intoxicating liquor in violation of law, and he appeals. Affirmed.

On January 20, 1917, the defendant was indicted for selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the provisions of chapter 141 of the Laws of Oregon of 1915, the charging part of the indictment reading as follows:

> "The said Adolph Newlin, on the 11th day of January, 1917, in the county of Union and state of Oregon, did then and there wrongfully, willfully and unlawfully sell intoxicating liquor, to wit—ethyl alcohol—to one Joe Hickey, by then and there, him, the said Adolph Newlin, selling and delivering the said intoxicating liquor to the said Joe Hickey, and receiving therefor the sum of fifty cents, lawful money of the United States, contrary to the statutes in such cases made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state of Oregon."

To this indictment the defendant filed a general demurrer, which being overruled, a plea of not guilty was entered and a trial had resulting in a judgment of conviction, from which this appeal is taken.

F. S. Ivanhoe, of La Grande (Ivanhoe & Marker, of La Grande, on the brief), for appellant. John S. Hodgin, Dist. Atty., of La Grande, and Geo. M. Brown, Atty. Gen., for respondent.

BENSON, J. [1] It is first contended that defendant's demurrer to the indictment should have been sustained because the statute which forms the basis of the prosecution permits the sale, under certain specified restrictions, of ethyl alcohol by registered pharmacists, and that in order to sufficiently describe a crime, the indictment should disclose the fact that defendant was not then one of the privileged class or that the sale was in violation of one or more of the restrictions. Section 33 of the act referred to contains the following provision:

> "And it shall not be necessary in the first instance, for the state to allege or prove that the party charged did not have legal authority to sell such liquor, or was not within any of the exceptions provided by this act."

We need not consider what merit might be found in defendant's contention in the absence of this clause; but, since it exists, there was no error in overruling the demurrer.

[2] The next contention is that since the evidence disclosed merely a sale of alcohol, without any specific evidence that it was ethyl alcohol, there was a failure of proof and that the court erred in instructing the jury "ethyl alcohol is, as a matter of law, intoxicating liquor." An examination of the authorities discloses the fact that "alcohol" and "ethyl alcohol" are practically synonymous. Examining Webster's Dictionary, we find it defined thus: "Alcohol: Pure spirits of wine; pure or highly rectified spirit called ethyl alcohol." The Standard Dictionary and many others support this position, and therefore there is no merit in defendant's contention upon this point.

[3] It is also urged that the trial court erred in permitting the state to offer in evidence the judgment rolls of five prior convictions for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor after the defendant had admitted upon cross-examination that he had been convicted of a crime. The defendant had testified that there had been but one such conviction, and in rebuttal the state was permitted to show that there had been five. In State v. Bacon, 13 Or. 143, 9 Pac. 393, 57 Am. Rep. 8, Mr. Justice Lord says:

> "On the subject of the impeachment of a witness, the Code provides 'that it may be shown by the examination of the witness, or the record of the judgment, that he has been convicted of a crime.' Code, § 830, p. 274. And the word 'crime,' as defined by the Code, includes both felonies and misdemeanors. It may therefore be shown by the examination of the witness that he has been convicted either of felony or a misdemeanor, and the record may also be introduced to prove that fact."

We can see no good reason for the contention that it was error to admit the evidence of more than one conviction. If the fact that a witness has been convicted of one criminal offense has a tendency to discredit his testimony, we may fairly infer that several convictions would simply add to the effect of such inference. The following authorities support this view: 40 Cyc. 2610; People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846, 847; People v. Eldridge, 147 Cal. 782, 82 Pac. 442, 444.

[4, 5] It is further insisted that there was error in refusing to give to the jury the following requested instruction:

> "I instruct you, gentlemen of the jury, that there is no evidence in this case that defendant made an unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor on the 11th day of January, 1917, to the person mentioned in the evidence as a fireman that witness Hickey claims furnished with a bottle of alcohol; and you will not consider any testimony on this trial concerning any sale claimed to have been made by defendant to said alleged fireman, or that any such person may have furnished any intoxicating liquor to said witness, or that any liquor said witness may have received from such alleged fireman was intoxicating liquor, or that the same was ever purchased from defendant."

The court very properly refused this request for there is evidence to the effect that Hickey and a man, whose name is not disclosed, but who was understood by the witness to be a fireman in the railroad service, went to a point across the street from defendant's place on the same day that the sale charged in the indictment is alleged to have occurred; that there they each contributed 50 cents for the purchase of alcohol; and that the fireman went into the defendant's store and came out in a short time with a bottle of alcohol, from which the witness Hickey drank. We are not concerned as to the credibility of the evidence; that is for the jury, and it is sufficient to say that in the face of this evidence it would have been decidedly improper for the court to have given such an instruction. There are other assignments of error, but none of them are of such a nature as to change the result, and they need not be considered.

The judgment is affirmed.

(84 Or. 328)

MONROE et al. v. WITHYCOMBE et al.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 22, 1917.)

1. Pleading 🔑214(1) — Demurrer—Admission.

For purposes of an appeal, demurrers to the complaint admit the facts pleaded.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 525, 529.]

2. Fish 🔑1—Ownership in State.

Fish are feræ naturæ, and while in a state of freedom their ownership, so far as a right of property can be asserted, is in the state, not as a proprietor, but in its sovereign capacity for the benefit of and in trust for its people in common.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fish, Cent. Dig. § 1.]

3. Navigable Waters 🔑36(1)—Title of State to Land Under Navigable Water—Admission of Territory.

On its admission to the Union Oregon was vested with title to the land under the navigable waters within the state, subject to the public right of navigation, and to the common right of citizens of the state to fish.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Navigable Waters, Cent. Dig. §§ 180–182, 184, 200.]

4. Fish 🔑8—Regulation by State.

In the exercise of its police power, and for the welfare of all its citizens, the state can regulate or even prohibit the catching of fish.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fish, Cent. Dig. § 16.]

5. Fish 🔑11 — Master Fish Warden — Power.

The master fish warden of the state, holding a position created and exercising an authority defined by the Legislature, cannot do what the Legislature cannot empower him to do.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fish, Cent. Dig. § 21.]

6. Constitutional Law 🔑208(1) — Privileges and Immunities—Exclusive Right to Catch Salmon—Monopolies.

In Oregon the Legislature cannot grant to one person an exclusive right to catch salmon at a place and in waters where all citizens have the right to fish, because, when that which belongs equally to all the citizens of the state is taken from all and vested in only one citizen, it is equivalent to transforming a public right into a monopoly, exercisable by only one citizen, and therefore violative of Const. art. 1, § 20, providing that no law shall be passed granting to any citizen or class of citizens privileges or immunities, which, on the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 665, 666, 669–674.]

7. Constitutional Law 🔑62—Separation of Powers—Delegation of Legislative Power.

There is a large class of cases where the Legislature may vest in administrative officers power to determine when particular cases do or do not fall within a competent rule established by the Legislature.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 94–102.]

8. Constitutional Law 🔑62—Separation of Powers—Delegation of Legislative Power.

The Legislature may delegate to a board the power to stock a stream with fish and close it against fishing, providing the order is not discriminatory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 94–102.]

9. Constitutional Law 🔑74—Delegation of Legislative Power to Board—Interference by Court.

In cases where the Legislature may delegate to and vest in an administrative board a power, the courts will not attempt to control or interfere with the judgment and discretion of the administrative officers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 124.]

10. Constitutional Law 🔑60 — Legislative Power—Delegation.

The Legislature can neither directly nor indirectly empower a mere administrative board to do that which the Legislature itself cannot do.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 89, 90, 93.]

11. Fish 🔑10(2)—License to Build Fish Traps—Prior Rights—Statute.

Under Laws 1913, p. 225, providing that it shall be unlawful for the master fish warden or board of fish commissioners to grant a license to any person to build fish traps in any locality in the Columbia river when in their judgment the same interfere with a prior right of fishing, etc., the mere issuance by the master fish warden to defendant of licenses to build fish traps in the Columbia river did not foreclose inquiry into the existence of prior fishing rights at the locality involved in suit by aggrieved persons to prevent the construction of the traps, since the statute makes no provision for a notice or hearing, and makes no attempt to vest the warden with judicial authority, so that the doctrine that courts cannot interfere with the judgment and discretion of administrative officers has no application.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fish, Cent. Dig. § 20.]

12. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW 🔑80(2)—ADJUDICATION OF RIGHTS BY OFFICER OR BOARD—STATUTE.

Laws 1913, p. 225, construed as an attempt to vest the master fish warden or board of fish commissioners with judicial power to adjudicate constitutional rights, would be unconstitutional to the extent of such an attempt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 144.]

13. FISH 🔑10(2)—FISH TRAPS—CONFISCATION OF PILING—STATUTE.

Though a person licensed to do so by the master fish warden is not entitled to construct salmon traps in the Columbia river or to maintain the piling driven at each of three places, it would be inequitable to command the warden and board of fish commissioners to remove and confiscate the pilings under the provisions of Laws 1913, p. 226, § 2, when they were driven pursuant to licenses presumably issued in good faith.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fish, Cent. Dig. § 20.]

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Clatsop County; J. A. Eakin, Judge.

Suit by C. G. Monroe and others against James Withycombe and others, constituting the State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners, R. E. Clanton, Master Fish Warden, and R. S. Farrell. From a decree for plaintiffs, defendants appeal. Complaint and suit dismissed as to the warden and members of the board, but decree affirmed as to defendant Farrell.

C. G. Monroe and ten other natural persons, together with the Sanborn Cutting Company, a corporation, in May, 1915, commenced this suit for themselves and all others similarly situated, or who might desire to join in the suit, for the purpose of preventing R. S. Farrell from constructing pound net fish traps on the north shore of Welch's Island, in the Columbia river, a navigable stream. The defendants are James Withycombe, I. N. Fleischner, Marion Jack, C. F. Stone, and F. M. Warren, who constitute the state board of fish and game commissioners, R. E. Clanton, who holds the position of master fish warden, and R. S. Farrell, who holds three licenses, issued to him on April 1, 1915, by the master fish warden, purporting to authorize the holder to construct and maintain that number of pound net fish traps at designated places on the north shore of Welch's Island. The Sanborn Cutting Company is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Oregon with its principal place of business in Astoria, Or., and is engaged in the business of catching, packing, and preserving salmon. Each of the remaining plaintiffs is a citizen and resident of Oregon and is engaged in catching salmon. The corporation holds two licenses, issued on May 1, 1915, authorizing it to operate two seines in the waters of the Columbia river for the purpose of catching salmon; and each of the remaining plaintiffs was licensed on May 1, 1915, to catch salmon in the waters of the Columbia river with a gill net.

Large quantities of salmon are found in the Columbia river and are of great commercial value. The salmon industry has grown to great proportions, and for many years has been one of the principal industries of this commonwealth. Thousands of the citizens of Oregon earn their livelihood by catching salmon, and annually the business aggregates hundreds of thousands of dollars. Salmon are generally taken by gill nets and seines. A gill net is made of twine so tied as to form meshes for the purpose of gilling the fish, and is hung between two lines, one being known as the float, because it floats on the surface, and the other as the lead, because weighted down and kept beneath the surface of the water so as to suspend the net vertically. Seines are likewise made of twine, one edge of the seine being provided with floats and the other with sinkers so that it will hang vertically in the water, and when its ends are brought together or drawn ashore the seine incloses the fish caught within it. Gill nets and seines are floating fishing appliances; but a pound net fish trap is a permanent and fixed structure. A pound net fish trap, as it is usually constructed in the Columbia river, has three parts: The heart, pot, and lead. The heart is constructed by selecting some point in the river, ranging from 200 to 800 feet from the shore line, according to the conditions found, and driving piling in the bed of the river so as to form the letter V with the point of the V upstream. The point of the V is not closed, but it is left open, and at this opening piling are driven so as to form a hollow square, and this square makes the pot. Commencing at the lower end of the inner arm of the V, piling are driven at convenient distances apart on a straight line to the shore. Webbing sufficiently wide to reach from the bed of the river to a point 2 or 3 feet above extreme high water is strung along and attached to the piling in the lead and heart of the trap. Webbing is also used in the pot, but, instead of being affixed to the piling, it is so arranged that it can be lifted. Any salmon that migrate upstream and encounter the trap naturally attempt to pass the barrier, and in making the attempt generally find their way into the heart and then into the pot of the trap, where the fish are lifted from the water.

Welch's Island is within the boundaries of Oregon. Pursuing its westward course to the sea, the main channel of the river runs along the north side of Welch's Island. This channel extending along the north side of the island is not only a part of the main ship's channel, but, according to the complaint, it has also been the natural gill net and seining ground for the fishermen of the Columbia river, and is "the most valuable drifting ground for gill nets and the most valuable ground for operating seines in the Columbia river." It further appears from the complaint that from time out of mind fishermen have taken salmon out of this channel and the waters along the north side of the island by means of gill nets and seines, and that during the fishing season fishermen habitually, daily and hourly, navigate their gill nets and seines in these waters, which, prior to the issuance of the licenses to Farrell, were universally recognized as a common ground of fishing for all fishermen operating gill nets and seines. Continuing, the complaint avers that:

> "The citizens of the state of Oregon licensed to operate gill nets and seines are entitled of right, and are entitled under and by virtue of the laws and statutes of the state of Oregon, to the free and unobstructed use of said channel and the waters thereof, for the purpose of navigating the same with both gill nets and seines, and have been exercising such right, accordingly as herein alleged, for time immemorial."

One license attempts to authorize Farrell to construct a pound net fish trap at a point on the north shore of the island about 800 feet from the mouth of Multnomah slough, another trap is to be located about 4,200 feet below the first, and the third is to be about 1,000 feet below the second trap. Upon receiving the licenses Farrell commenced to construct traps at the three specified places; and, unless restrained, he proposes to complete the three traps so that they will extend out into the channel for a distance of 500 or 800 feet from the shore line. The plaintiffs say that they have been using and intend to continue to use gill nets and seines in the waters of the river along the north side of the island, but if Farrell is permitted to build the traps plaintiffs will be prevented from using their seines and nets, and it will have the effect of giving the exclusive use of that fishing ground to Farrell. The plaintiffs further allege that the licenses held by Farrell were issued in violation of chapter 128, Laws of 1913, and that, although the plaintiffs petitioned to have the traps confiscated, the master fish warden and board of game and fish commissioners nevertheless refused to do so.

All the defendants filed a joint demurrer; the members of the board of game and fish commissioners and the master fish warden joined in a second demurrer; and a third demurrer was filed by Farrell. The trial court overruled the three demurrers, and, when the defendants declined to plead further, a decree was entered declaring that "the public have the prior right of fishery and prior right to navigate the waters and channel of the Columbia river in front of Welch's Island" for the purpose of operating gill nets and seines, enjoining Farrell from constructing fish traps, and commanding the board of game and fish commissioners to cancel the licenses held by Farrell within 20 days from the date of the decree. All the defendants appealed.

Geo. M. Brown, Atty. Gen., Chriss A. Bell, of Portland, and Frank Spittle, of Astoria, for appellants. G. C. & A. C. Fulton, of Astoria, for respondents.

HARRIS, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] For the purposes of this appeal the demurrers admit the facts alleged in the complaint, and consequently throughout the discussion it must be assumed that the complaint speaks the truth, notwithstanding the fact that the plaintiffs make frequent use of the superlative degree. The Columbia river is a navigable stream. The waters along the north shore of the island are "the most valuable drifting ground for gill nets and the most valuable ground for operating seines on the Columbia river"; and these waters have always been "recognized as a common ground for fishing."

[2] Fish are classified as feræ naturæ, and while in a state of freedom their ownership, so far as a right of property can be asserted, is in the state, not as a proprietor, but in its sovereign capacity for the benefit of and in trust for its people in common. State v. Hume, 52 Or. 1, 5, 95 Pac. 808; Portland Fish Co. v. Benson, 56 Or. 147, 154, 108 Pac. 122; State v. Catholic, 75 Or. 367, 374, 147 Pac. 372; Harper v. Galloway, 58 Fla. 255, 51 South. 226, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 794, 19 Ann. Cas. 235; 11 R. C. L. 1041.

[3] Upon its admission to the Union Oregon was vested with the title to land under the navigable waters within the state, subject to the public right of navigation and to the common right of the citizens of this state to fish. Hume v. Rogue River Packing Co., 51 Or. 237, 246, 83 Pac. 391, 92 Pac. 1065, 96 Pac. 865, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 396, 131 Am. St. Rep. 732. Quoting the language of Mr. Justice Moore in Eagle Cliff Fishing Co. v. McGowan, 70 Or. 1, 12, 137 Pac. 766, 770:

> "The right of fishing in a navigable stream in Oregon is free and common to all the citizens of the state."

[4] In the exercise of its police power and for the welfare of all its citizens the state can regulate or even prohibit the catching of fish. State v. Schuman, 36 Or. 16, 58 Pac. 661, 47 L. R. A. 153, 78 Am. St. Rep. 754; State v. Hume, 52 Or. 1, 6, 95 Pac. 808; State v. Catholic, 75 Or. 367, 374, 147 Pac. 372; Harper v. Galloway, 58 Fla. 255, 51 South. 226, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 794, 19 Ann. Cas. 235.

Farrell relies entirely upon the three licenses from the state for his asserted right to construct the traps, and consequently the legality of the disputed right depends upon the legality of the authority attempted to be conferred. If Farrell is permitted to erect the traps specified in the licenses, the traps will have the effect of excluding gill net and seine fishermen from the waters in which it is admitted that previously all the citizens of this state had a common right to fish. In short, if it is lawful to authorize Farrell to erect these traps, it is lawful to prohibit all other citizens of Oregon from exercising a right that is conceded to be common to all, and to grant to Farrell alone the exclusive right to fish in waters covering an area of more than a mile in length by 200 or more feet in width; and if it is lawful to grant to a single individual the exclusive right to fish in that area it is likewise lawful to grant an exclusive right to fish in a larger area.

[5] The licenses relied upon are issued by the master fish warden. His position is created and his authority is defined by the Legislature, and therefore he cannot do what the Legislature cannot empower him to do. If the Legislature cannot grant an exclusive right to fish to one person, then the state could not through its master fish warden authorize the construction of the three controverted pound net fish traps when they will have the effect of conferring an exclusive right upon a single person, because the state cannot lawfully do indirectly what it cannot do directly.

In most jurisdictions where the question has been presented for ultimate judicial decision it has been determined that the Legislature has power to grant to a single person an exclusive right to catch floating fish. Payne v. Providence Gas Co., 31 R. I. 295, 77 Atl. 145, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 65; State v. Leavitt, 105 Me. 76, 72 Atl. 875, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 799; Phipps v. State, 22 Md. 380, 85 Am. Dec. 654; Com. v. Hilton, 174 Mass. 29, 54 N. E. 362, 45 L. R. A. 475; Heckman v. Swett, 107 Cal. 276, 40 Pac. 420; 2 Farnham on Waters and Water Rights, § 370. See, also, Gough v. Bell, 21 N. J. Law, 156, 165, and Gough v. Bell, 22 N. J. Law, 441, 459, criticizing the prior case of Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. Law, 1, 78, 10 Am. Dec. 356. In Washington it has been held that it is lawful to grant to a single person exclusive control for a reasonable distance and for a limited period. Walker v. Stone, 17 Wash. 578, 50 Pac. 488; Halleck v. Davis, 22 Wash. 393, 60 Pac. 1116.

[6] In this jurisdiction, however, the rule is firmly established that the Legislature cannot grant to one person an exclusive right to catch salmon, because, when that which belongs equally to all the citizens of this state is taken from all and vested in only one citizen, it is equivalent to transforming a public right, exercisable by all citizens alike, into a private right and a monopoly, exercisable by only one citizen, and it is therefore in violation of article 1, § 20, of the state Constitution, which commands that:

> "No law shall be passed granting to any citizen or class of citizens, privileges or immunities which, upon the same terms, shall not equally belong to all citizens."

See Hume v. Rogue River Packing Co., 51 Or. 237, 259, 83 Pac. 391, 92 Pac. 1065, 96 Pac. 865, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 396, 131 Am. St. Rep. 372; Eagle Cliff Fishing Co. v. McGowan, 70 Or. 1, 15, 137 Pac. 766. See, also, Slingerland v. International Con. Co., 43 App. Div. 215, 223, 60 N. Y. Supp. 12, affirmed in 169 N. Y. 60, 61 N. E. 995, 56 L. R. A. 494.

Not even the Legislature could have granted to Farrell the exclusive right to take salmon in waters where all the qualified citizens of Oregon have the common right to take floating fish; and therefore the licenses issued by the master fish warden do not legalize the construction of the traps which Farrell proposes to build. The question presented here is not whether all pound net fish traps are per se unlawful; but the sole question for decision is whether the traps which Farrell proposes to build would be unlawful, and that question is determined by the effect which it is conceded that the traps would have upon the common right of all the qualified citizens of this state. It is not necessary to decide whether the state can lawfully empower one person, to the exclusion of others, to take shellfish from a specified area of a navigable stream whose bed is owned by the state; nor is there any need to discuss the right to erect wharves and other similar structures in aid of navigation, since the proper exercise of that right is easily distinguishable from the instant case where an attempt is made to authorize only one person to fish for salmon for his own personal benefit and private profit without any advantage to the public.

The defendants contend, however, that the issuance of the licenses to Farrell forecloses any subsequent inquiry concerning the existence of prior fishing rights. Since this contention arises out of the language found in chapter 128, Laws 1913, such portions of the statute as are now material are here set out:

> "It shall be unlawful for the master fish warden or the board of fish commissioners to grant a license to any person, firm, partnership or corporation, to build or set up fish traps or any other fixed fishing appliance, or drive piles therefor, in any locality in or on the Columbia river and its tributaries in this state, when in their judgment the same interferes with a prior right of fishing." Section 1.
>
> "Whenever any fish trap or any other fixed fishing appliance is built or set up in violation of this act, the master fish warden of the state of Oregon is hereby empowered, authorized and directed to confiscate and sell said fish trap, and to remove all the piling driven for such purposes immediately, and he is authorized and directed to pay into the hatchery fund of that district of the state of Oregon the proceeds of said sale." Section 2.

The argument of the defendants is to the effect that chapter 128, Laws 1913, prohibits the master fish warden and board of fish commissioners from issuing a license for a pound net fish trap if in their judgment the trap will interfere with a prior right of fishing; that the enactment confers upon the officers power to exercise their judgment and discretion, and that in the absence of fraud an exercise of such judgment and discretion will not be interfered with by the courts; that the issuance of the licenses to Farrell presupposes that the master fish warden and the board exercised their judgment and discretion and determined that the issuance of the three licenses to Farrell and the construction of the licensed traps would not interfere with any prior fishing rights; and that therefore the courts will not and cannot prevent the construction of the traps, because to do so would be to interfere with and supervise the judgment and discretion of the board and master fish warden. Before attempting to discuss the argument of the defendants, it is proper first to make a brief survey of the legislation in force at the time of the passage of chapter 128, because it may be assumed that this statute was adopted with reference to the laws then in effect. Section 5272, L. O. L., created a board of fish commissioners whose duty it was to appoint one master fish warden. The name and personnel of the board has since been changed; for it is now known as the state board of fish and game commissioners. Chapter 287, Laws 1915. The board was clothed with various powers. Sections 5278, 5282, 5313, and 5316, L. O. L. Section 5237, L. O. L., defined the closed season on the Columbia west of the Deschutes river. Section 5294, L. O. L., made it unlawful to operate and maintain a pound net "without first having obtained from the fish warden a license therefor as hereinafter provided." By the terms of section 5298a, L. O. L., a qualified person desiring to operate a pound net was required to "make application in writing to the fish warden" specifying the location of the pound net, "and upon payment of a license fee as hereinafter provided, said fish warden shall issue to such applicant a license to operate the character of appliance desired in said application." All licenses expired on the 31st day of March following their issuance. Section 5303, L. O. L. After the owner constructed a pound net he was required to file a map with the fish warden "giving the exact description and location thereof." Section 5304, L. O. L.

It is not necessary to pursue the suggestion found in Evanhoff v. State Industrial Acc. Com., 78 Or. 503, 516, 154 Pac. 106, and determine whether the present form of our state Constitution enables the Legislature to clothe the master fish warden and board of fish commissioners with judicial power to inquire into and decide upon the existence of prior fishing rights, for the reason that it is obvious that the Legislature has neither given nor attempted to give the warden and board authority to render a final adjudication of constitutional rights.

[7-9] There is a large class of cases where the Legislature may vest in administrative officers power to determine when particular cases do or do not fall within a competent rule established by the Legislature (6 R. C. L. pp. 176, 179); and likewise the Legislature may delegate to a board the power to stock a stream and close it against fishing, provided the order is not discriminatory (Portland Fish Co. v. Benson, 56 Or. 147, 108 Pac. 122; 11 R. C. L. 1042); and in such classes of cases the courts will not attempt to control or interfere with the judgment and discretion of the administrative officers. There is, however, an impassable chasm between the power to prohibit all persons from fishing in a stream and an attempt to give one person an exclusive right to fish.

[10] The power of a board to close a stream exists only because the Legislature, which delegates the power, itself has power to close the stream; but not even the Legislature can lawfully favor one citizen with the exclusive right to fish in a navigable stream, and consequently the Legislature can neither directly nor indirectly empower a mere administrative board to do that which the Legislature itself cannot do. All the citizens of Oregon have a common right to fish in the waters mentioned in the complaint, and to deprive any one citizen of that right is to violate the state Constitution.

[11] To say that the mere issuance of the licenses closes any further inquiry into the existence of prior fishing rights because the courts cannot interfere with the judgment and discretion of administrative officers is to say that these plaintiffs can be deprived of a right without a hearing, without an opportunity to be heard, and even without notice. Chapter 128, Laws 1913, makes no provisions for a notice or a hearing, and it makes no attempt to vest the warden or board with judicial authority; and therefore the issuance of the licenses did not involve any of the elements of a final judicial adjudication of the fishing rights of these plaintiffs. If, on the other hand, the warden and members of the board are considered as mere administrative officers without judicial powers, the licenses issued by them to Farrell are invalid because they operate to confer an exclusive right upon Farrell. While the Legislature has power to authorize administrative officers to issue licenses, yet the validity of such licenses, when issued, is to be determined by the results which follow an exercise of the authority named in the license rather than by the mere words found in the paper called the license.

[12] While chapter 128, Laws 1913, does not attempt to vest the warden or board with judicial power to adjudicate constitutional rights, nevertheless, if in its present form it is regarded as an attempt to do so, it would to the extent of such an attempt be unconstitutional; if, on the other hand, the warden and board be regarded as officers with only administrative powers, the validity of the licenses issued to Farrell is to be determined by the results wrought by them, and when so determined they are ascertained to be ineffective; and therefore in either event the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree preventing the construction of the traps.

Farrell drove three piling at each of the places designated by the three licenses, and plaintiffs allege that they petitioned the master fish warden and board to remove and confiscate them pursuant to section 2 of chapter 128, Laws 1913. The defendants argue that, when the plaintiffs petitioned for the removal and confiscation of the piling on the authority of chapter 128, they precluded themselves from afterwards questioning the validity of the statute. It is true that the plaintiffs do contend that chapter 128 is unconstitutional to whatever extent it may be said to attempt to confer upon the warden and board authority to render a final adjudication of fishing rights or to grant exclusive rights to fish; but it is also true that the plaintiffs never at any time contended that section 2 was invalid or that the whole chapter was unconstitutional for all purposes, although it may be invalid to whatever extent it may attempt to confer power to adjudicate existing rights or to grant exclusive rights.

[13] While Farrell is not entitled to construct the traps or to maintain the piling driven at each of the three places, yet it would not be equitable to command the warden and board to remove and confiscate the nine piling under the provisions of section 2 of chapter 128, Laws 1913, when the piling were driven pursuant to licenses which were presumably issued in good faith; and therefore the mandatory injunction prayed for by the plaintiffs is denied.

The acts of the warden and board complained of by the plaintiffs were fully consummated before this suit was begun; it does not appear that the warden and board propose to issue licenses in the future for traps along the island; and therefore the complaint and suit are dismissed, without costs as to the warden and members of the board; but the licenses issued to Farrell are annulled, and as to him the decree is affirmed.

(84 Or. 678)

SEAWEARD v. FIRST NAT. BANK OF ONTARIO. *

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 29, 1917.)

1. Mortgages 🔑497(1) — Foreclosure — Judgment—Conclusiveness.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a conveyance treated as a mortgage, the Supreme Court decreed strict foreclosure, to be avoided upon payment of the amount due within 90 days, defendants did not lose their right to recover rents and profits collected by the mortgagee pending the appeal by failing to apply to the trial court when the mandate was sent down to have the amount of such rents and profits credited on the sum to be paid for redemption, as the determination of that issue would have been equivalent to the institution of an action at law, and the defendants, having only 90 days within which to redeem, were not required to speculate upon the trial of such issue.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mortgages, Cent. Dig. §§ 1469, 1471, 1473.]

2. Judgment 🔑949(2) — Pleading Former Adjudication—Sufficiency.

In a suit to foreclose a conveyance treated as a mortgage, the judgment was modified on appeal so as to deny attorney's fees. Thereafter the mortgagor's assignee sued to recover rents and profits collected by the mortgagee pending the appeal, and the mortgagee pleaded the decree in the foreclosure suit in bar, setting forth copies of the pleadings, decree, mandate, etc., as exhibits. By way of recoupment and counterclaim the mortgagee sought to recover attorney's fees and certain other expenses. The reply alleged that the question whether defendant was entitled to recover the sum so claimed ought to have been litigated in the former action, and referred to the exhibits attached to the answer, thereby making such exhibits a part thereof and alleged that by reason of such adjudication defendant was estopped from claiming such sums. Held, that the reply was sufficient in details to present the question of former adjudication.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1796, 1803.]

3. Judgment 🔑678(1) — Conclusiveness—Persons Concluded.

A judgment or decree is conclusive, not only on those who are parties to the action or suit, but also on all persons in privity with them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1195, 1221.]

4. Judgment 🔑585(2) — Conclusiveness—Identity of Causes.

The test of identity of causes as bearing upon the question of res judicata is the identity of the facts essential to their maintenance.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1062-1064, 1067, 1073, 1093.]

5. Judgment 🔑627—Conclusiveness—Parties Concluded.

Where, in a mortgage foreclosure suit, attorney's fees were denied on appeal, the judgment was conclusive in a subsequent action by the mortgagor's assignee against the mortgagee in which the mortgagee counterclaimed for and sought to offset such attorney's fees, and no sum could be allowed or offset for such fees.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. §§ 1141-1143.]

6. Pledges 🔑27—Care of Property—Reimbursement.

Mortgagees assigned the mortgage and secured notes to a bank as collateral security for a debt. The mortgagors were unable to pay and conveyed the land to the bank, taking an option to repurchase, which they did not exercise. The bank canceled the notes and mortgage and surrendered them. An option to repurchase was subsequently given the mortgagees, who failed to exercise it, and the bank foreclosed, treating the conveyance to it as a mortgage. The bank had taken possession of the land and received the rents, issues, and profits, and the mortgagees sued to recover rents and profits received subsequent to the decree in the foreclosure suit. Held, that the bank was entitled to an allowance of sums paid by it in caring for and superintending the management of the farm under the general rule that a trustee, though not entitled to compensation for services performed personally in discharging the trust, may recover the reasonable value of services of others employed by him.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pledges, Cent. Dig. §§ 67, 68.]

*Rehearing denied July 3, 1917.

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Malheur County; Dalton Biggs, Judge.

Action by J. H. Seaweard against the First National Bank of Ontario, Oregon. From a judgment for plaintiff for an insufficient amount, each party appeals. Modified and remanded.

This is an action by J. H. Seaweard against the First National Bank of Ontario, Or., a corporation, to recover $2,614.16 as money had and received to the use of T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, partners as Seaweard Bros., which claim is alleged to have been assigned to the plaintiff. This action is a continuation of the suit of the First National Bank v. Seaweard, 78 Or. 567, 152 Pac. 883. The facts there set forth and here involved are to the effect that about January 1, 1911, T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard sold and conveyed a farm in Malheur county, Or., to Emil E. Dean, Earl M. Dean, and A. M. Johnston, who as part consideration therefor gave the vendors four promissory notes of $5,000 each, and secured the payment thereof by a mortgage of the farm. T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, on February 14, 1913, were indebted to the defendant herein on their matured promissory notes in the sum of $14,437.23, to secure which they assigned as collateral and pledged to an officer of the bank the notes for $20,000 and the mortgage securing them. Being unable to pay the matured installments of these obligations, the makers thereof and their wives, on February 21, 1913, executed a deed of the farm to an officer of the bank, who took the title in trust for his principal and gave the vendors last named an option to repurchase the land on or before May 24th of that year by paying the amount of the notes for $20,000, together with the taxes and other expenses which the bank might incur in operating the farm, whereupon the four notes were marked, "Paid," the mortgage canceled, and these instruments surrendered to the makers. The officers of the bank then took possession of the farm with the right to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof. The option referred to not having been exercised, the officers of the bank executed to T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard an option to repurchase the farm on or before November 1, 1913, upon the payment of their indebtedness to the bank, the taxes, and the expenses of keeping the premises in repair. The latter option not having been exercised, the bank commenced a suit against T. M. Seaweard, E. F. Seaweard, Emil E. Dean, Earl M. Dean, and A. M. Johnston, and the wife of each, treating the conveyance of the farm to an officer of the bank as a mortgage, alleging that such transfer was made pursuant to an agreement with T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, setting forth the latters' matured promissory notes, which stipulated for the payment of a reasonable sum as attorney's fees in case suit or action was instituted to collect any part thereof, and praying a foreclosure of the lien created by the deed to an officer of the bank. The answer of T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard denied that such conveyance was executed with their consent, and for a further defense alleged substantially that the notes for $20,000 and the mortgage securing them were pledged as collateral to the bank, which converted them to its own use, thereby becoming liable for the payment of such obligations, less, however, the indebtedness of T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard to the bank, aggregating $15,485.72, which sum was tendered in satisfaction of their matured notes but upon condition that the bank deliver to them the notes for $20,000 and the mortgage securing them, which, it will be remembered, had been surrendered to the makers. The reply controverted the allegations of new matter in the answer, and the cause being at issue was tried resulting in a decree as prayed for in that complaint awarding to the bank a recovery of its indebtedness against T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard and $1,500 as attorney's fees provided for in their promissory notes, and they appealed.

After a trial in this court, that decree was modified by disallowing any sum as attorney's fees and ordering that unless within 90 days from the entry of the mandate in the lower court T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard paid to the bank the amount of their indebtedness to it, less $15,485.72, the sum so tendered, and $334.24, which had been obtained by the officers of the bank in operating the farm, the lien of the deed of the premises should be foreclosed, but in case such payment was made a deed should be executed by the holder of the legal title to T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard. First Nat. Bank v. Seaweard, supra. The amount so specified was paid within the time limited, whereupon a demand was made upon the bank for the payment of $2,614.16, which sum it had received in the year 1915 and during the pendency of the appeal, as rents, issues, and profits of the farm. Upon a refusal to pay any part of that sum, this action was instituted. The answer herein denies the material averments of the complaint, sets forth the facts hereinbefore stated, and for a further defense and by way of counterclaim alleges, in effect, that in operating the farm during the year 1915 the bank was entitled to $78.42 for caring for the premises; that it had paid out $212.15 for taxes, repairs, etc.; that in the suit to foreclose the lien the bank had been obliged to employ attorneys, to whom it paid $1,500, and had also disbursed the further sum of $350.05 as expenses incurred in that suit, the prosecution of which was necessitated by the failure and refusal of T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard to pay their indebtedness to the defendant—all of which facts the plaintiff knew when he took an assignment of the claim here sued upon. For a second defense and by way of offset, the facts hereinbefore detailed are substantially repeated, and it is averred, in effect, that in the decree foreclosing the lien all accounts between T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard and the bank were considered and finally determined, and the decree rendered in that suit bars the maintenance of this action, setting forth copies of the pleadings, decree, mandate, etc., therein, and making them a part of the answer, designated as Exhibits "A," "B," "C," "D," and "E." For a third defense and by way of recoupment, the facts hereinbefore specified are reiterated, and it is alleged generally that at all the time the possession of the farm was held by the bank it was entitled to $78.42 for caring for the premises; that it paid out $212.15 as taxes and for repairs, etc.; that in the suit to foreclose the lien the bank was compelled to pay $1,500 as attorney's fees and also to disburse $350.05 as expenses in prosecuting that suit, amounting to $2,140.62, which outlay could have been avoided if T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard had paid their obligations to the banks; and that all such facts were known to the plaintiff when he took an assignment of the claim referred to. The reply put in issue all the averments of new matter in the answer, except the payment of $212.15 for taxes, etc., for which sum it is admitted a credit should be allowed. The reply in referring to the exhibits set forth in the answer contains a paragraph the material part of which reads:

> "Plaintiff admits that said defendant paid out the sum of $1,500 for attorney fees, and the sum of $350.05 for court costs, filing fees, transcript, taking of testimony, printing bills, and other incidental expenses of said litigation in said Bank-Seaweard Case, all of which are the same sums referred to in defendant's first answer and defense, and denies that, by reason of acts therein complained of, defendant was damaged in the sum of $1,850.05, or any other sum whatsoever, and alleges that the question whether or not the defendant was entitled to recover said sum of $1,500 for attorney fees or any part thereof, and said sum of $350.05 or any part thereof, was and ought to have been litigated in said Bank-Seaweard Case, and the plaintiff hereby refers to Exhibits 'A,' 'B,' 'C,' 'D,' and 'E' attached to the said affirmative answer and defense of defendant to plaintiff's complaint, and hereby makes said exhibits and each thereof a part hereof, and alleges that by reason of said adjudication defendant is and ought to be precluded and estopped from alleging or claiming any sums whatsoever as attorney fees and costs by reason of said litigation in said Bank-Seaweard Case."

Based on these issues, this case was tried, without the intervention of a jury, upon an agreed statement of facts, from which the court deduced conclusions of law to the effect that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant $2,614.16, the sum received by it in the year 1915 as rents, issues, and profits of the farm, against which the defendant was entitled to offset and recoup $1,500 as attorney's fees incurred in prosecuting the foreclosure suit, $212.15 paid out for taxes, repairs, etc., and $78.42 as compensation for caring for the farm, and that the defendant was entitled to the remainder with interest thereon from November 12, 1915. A judgment having been rendered in accordance with these findings, each party separately appeals.

R. W. Swagler, of Ontario, Or. (W. H. Brooke, of Ontario, Or., on the brief), for appellant. Wells W. Wood, of Ontario, Or. (McCulloch & Wood, of Ontario, Or., on the brief), for respondent.

MOORE, J. (after stating the facts as above). [1] It is maintained by defendant's counsel that, when the mandate in the foreclosure suit was sent down, an opportunity was presented to contest in the lower court the right of the bank to retain the sum of money which it had received as rents, issues, and profits of the farm in the year 1915, pending the appeal; but no advantage having been taken of that fitting occasion, and such fact having been set forth in the answer herein as a bar to a recovery, an error was committed in awarding any part of that sum to the plaintiff. The decree in that suit having been for a strict foreclosure, to be avoided, however, upon the payment within 90 days from the entry in the lower court of our mandate of the amount due the defendant from T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, it is possible that upon their application the time might have been enlarged and the decree opened so as to allow them to show, in case there was no conflict in respect thereto, the sum which was so received as rents and profits. Such leniency is not generally indulged, and the party seeking redemption under a decree of that kind is required to pay the specified sum of money within the time limited. 2 Wiltsie, Mort. Foreclosure, § 977.

In the case at bar, a controversy existed as to the credits to which the defendant claimed it was entitled and should withhold from the money which it had received. This sum, it will be remembered, was obtained after the appeal was taken in the foreclosure suit, and for that reason the accounting therefor could not have been heard or determined in the trial of that cause unless it had been sent back for that purpose. The entry of our mandate in the lower court was tantamount to an exercise of a ministerial duty, and, while possibly the decree might there have been opened for the purpose of crediting on account of the sum to be paid for redemption the money received as rents and profits pending the appeal, a dispute in respect to the remainder, if any, so to be applied existed, and the determination of that issue would have been equivalent to the institution, as in this instance, of an action at law to recover money had and received to the use of T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, the plaintiff's assignors. Such a remedy, though equitable in character, could not have been tried in a court of equity to which the case of the First National Bank v. Seaweard, supra, pertained, unless such cause had been remanded for that purpose. Aside from this, as the plaintiff was allowed only 90 days after the entry of the mandate within which to redeem the real property from the decree of a strict foreclosure, he could not well afford to take the chances of speculating upon a trial of the issue in an action at law as to the amount of credit to which he was justly entitled by reason of the defendant's collection of the rents, issues, and profits of the farm during the year 1915 and pending the appeal, but was compelled to pay the entire sum demanded in order to protect his rights, and hence no error was committed in the respect alleged.

In the case of First Nat. Bank v. Seaweard, supra, it was held in effect that while a determination of the amount due the plaintiff from the defendants therein on their matured promissory notes was essential, requiring that copies of these obligations should be set forth in the pleadings and the originals offered in evidence, the foreclosure there involved was not based on such notes, but upon the conveyance of the farm to an officer of the bank, wherein the deed was treated as a mortgage; and that the promissory notes for $20,000 having been marked, "Paid," and surrendered to the makers, no attorney's fee could be predicated even upon the latter negotiable instruments. For that reason the decree in the lower court in that suit allowing $1,500 as such fee was modified by denying a recovery of any sum for that purpose, and as a consequence of the conclusion thus reached by this court preventing that plaintiff from obtaining any part of the costs and disbursements which it had incurred in the prosecution of the suit. L. O. L. § 567; Spores v. Maude, 81 Or. 11, 158 Pac. 169.

[2-4] It will be borne in mind that the plea of res judicata put forth by the reply substantially shows that the foreclosure suit, wherein the defendant in this action was plaintiff and T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard, who assigned their claim to the plaintiff herein, were defendants, presented an issue as to the right of the bank to recover an attorney fee; that such controversy was ultimately decided on the merits January 18, 1916, by this court denying any relief therefor, which facts are to be inferred by setting out in hæc verba the decree in that case, thereby supplying an averment to that effect. Fowlkes v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 14. And that the question there considered and determined is the identical dispute here involved. Such statement is sufficient in details to present the question of former adjudication. 9 Ency. Pl. & Pr. 619; 23 Cyc. 1225. A judgment or decree is conclusive, not only on those who were parties to the action or suit, but also on all persons in privity with them. Schuler v. Ford, 10 Idaho, 739, 80 Pac. 219, 109 Am. St. Rep. 233, 3 Ann. Cas. 336. The test of identity of causes for the purpose of determining the question of res adjudicata is the identity of the facts essential to their maintenance. Harrison v. Remington Paper Co., 140 Fed. 385, 72 C. C. A. 405, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 954, 5 Ann. Cas. 314. The allegations of new matter in the reply are deemed to have been controverted as upon a direct denial. L. O. L. § 95. The stipulations of fact upon which this action was tried contains a clause to the effect that in the suit of the First Nat. Bank v. Seaweard, supra, plaintiff paid to its attorneys for their services $1,500, which was a reasonable sum for that purpose. Considering such agreed statement in connection with the issue last referred to, the trial court deduced the conclusion of law that the bank was not barred by the former decree from offsetting against the sum of money now sued for the payment so made as attorney's fees. An inspection of the exhibits mentioned discloses no uncertainty exists in respect to the identical question decided on the merits in that suit, which final determination is controlling herein as the law of the case, as much so in relation to such fee as to the costs and disbursements which the bank incurred in the prosecution of that suit. Powell v. Dayton, etc., R. Co., 14 Or. 22, 12 Pac. 83; Thompson v. Hawley, 16 Or. 251, 19 Pac. 84; Murphy v. Albina, 22 Or. 106, 29 Pac. 353, 29 Am. St. Rep. 578; Kane v. Rippey, 22 Or. 299, 29 Pac. 1005; Portland Trust Co. v. Coulter, 23 Or. 131, 31 Pac. 280; Baker County v. Huntington, 48 Or. 593, 87 Pac. 1036, 89 Pac. 144; Baines v. Coos Bay Nav. Co., 49 Or. 192, 89 Pac. 371; Oliver v. Synhorst, 58 Or. 582, 109 Pac. 762, 115 Pac. 594; State v. McDonald, 59 Or. 520, 117 Pac. 281; Meyer v. Livesley, 61 Or. 55, 120 Pac. 749; Benbow v. The James John, 61 Or. 153, 121 Pac. 899; Williams v. Pacific Surety Co., 70 Or. 203, 139 Pac. 934; Hanna v. Alluvial Farm Co., 79 Or. 557, 152 Pac. 105, 156 Pac. 265.

[5] The question of attorney's fees having been considered and finally determined by this court upon the merits on the former appeal, the conclusion thus reached is binding upon the defendant herein, which was a party to that suit, and also upon T. M. Seaweard and E. F. Seaweard and their assignee, the plaintiff herein, who took the chose in action with knowledge of their rights in the premises. The allowance therefore of any sum as attorney's fees in this action must be denied, and no offset against the sum sued for can be awarded for that purpose.

[6] The plaintiff's counsel complain of the trial court's allowance of $78.42, or any other sum, as compensation to the defendant for its care of the farm during the pendency of the former appeal and while the bank held possession of the premises. It is argued that the pledgee in possession performed such service for its own benefit and not for the pledgors' advantage, and hence it is not entitled to any remuneration for such services. A pledgee is a trustee, and under the rule prevailing in England he is not allowed any compensation for labor or trouble bestowed upon the trust estate. Such rule, however, finds little favor in the courts of the several states of the Union, where it is generally held that the trustee cannot recover compensation for services which he personally performs in discharging the trust, but that when others are engaged by him for that purpose he may recover the reasonable value of the services so performed. Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138, 17 Am. Dec. 257, and notes. The legal principle thus stated is not in conflict with the rule announced in the case of Caro v. Wollenberg, 163 Pac. 94, where it was ruled that services personally rendered by a trustee did not constitute a valid charge against the trust estate or the cestui que trust.

In the case at bar, the defendant, being a corporation could not personally care for or superintend the management of the farm, but was compelled to discharge that duty by others for the performance of whose services it is justly entitled to a reasonable compensation. The sum awarded for that purpose does not exceed the measure allowable, and hence it should not be disturbed.

It is conceded that the sum of $212.15 is a just claim for money paid out for taxes, repairs, etc., and was properly allowed as an offset against the sum of money received as rents. That sum and $78.42, the compensation for the care of the premises, aggregating $290.57, should therefore be deducted from $2,614.16, leaving $2,423.57 as due the plaintiff with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the time this opinion is handed down. Baker County v. Huntington, supra; Sargent v. American Bank & Trust Co., 80 Or. 16, 39, 154 Pac. 759, 156 Pac. 431; Hayden v. City of Astoria, 164 Pac. 729, decided by this court May 1, 1917.

The judgment herein will therefore be modified in the particulars specified, and, under the amendment of section 3 of article 7 of the Constitution, the cause will be remanded for the purpose of entering such final determination.

(84 Or. 386)

NOYES-HOLLAND LOGGING CO. et al. v. PACIFIC LIVE STOCK & LUMBER CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 29, 1917.)

COURTS 🔑207(3)—LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

The Supreme Court will not continue an injunction restraining a plaintiff in ejectment from proceeding because a chancery suit affecting defendants' right to the property is pending on appeal, where the parties are solvent and defendant's rights can be adequately protected after determination of the chancery appeal.

Department No. 1. Appeal from Circuit Court, Columbia County; J. A. Eakin, Judge.

Cross-bill by the Noyes-Holland Logging Company and the Portland Lumber Company against the Pacific Live Stock & Lumber Company and M. T. O'Connell. From a dismissal of the cross-bill, plaintiffs appealed and obtained a temporary injunction from a Supreme Court justice. On motion to dissolve such temporary injunction. Dissolved.

The Pacific Live Stock & Lumber Company began an action in ejectment to recover from the plaintiffs here the possession of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 3, township 7 north, range 3 west, in Columbia county. These plaintiffs interposed a cross-bill in equity, whereby they sought to correct an alleged mistake in a contract between the Portland Lumber Company and M. T. O'Connell, granting them the right of way for a logging railroad over his land so that they could justify their possession of the land in dispute under the agreement as thus amended. As part of the relief sought under the cross-bill, they prayed for injunction against the prosecution of the law action, and to that end obtained a temporary restraining order pendente lite. The circuit court heard the cross-bill on its merits after issue formed thereon, and dismissed it, allowing the ejectment action to proceed. These plaintiffs then appealed, and gave a bond stipulating for the payment of all costs, disbursements, and damages which might be adjudged against them on the appeal. Their opponents, however, prepared to try the action of ejectment, whereupon plaintiffs in the suit applied to and obtained from one of the justices of this court ex parte a temporary injunction, forbidding the prosecution of the action. The case has been presented to us on a motion to dissolve this temporary injunction.

Hugh Montgomery and Platt & Platt, all of Portland, for appellants. Thomas Mannix, of Portland, for respondents.

PER CURIAM. The leading case on this subject is Livesley v. Krebs Hop Company, 57 Or. 352, 97 Pac. 718, 107 Pac. 460, 112 Pac. 1. It was there decided that, although injunction was not within the original jurisdiction of this court, yet in order to preserve its jurisdiction over the subject of the suit on appeal, it would issue a temporary restraining order pendente lite. In that suit the plaintiffs sought to prevent the Krebs Hop Company from enforcing a judgment against them on the ground that the company was insolvent, and that, having a good reason for resisting the judgment on appeal, the remedy would be entirely lost to the plaintiff on account of the insolvency of the concern claiming the judgment. Manifestly, under such circumstances, the court would find its efforts futile to render complete justice in the case on account of the inability of the company to restore what it might have unjustly collected. In Kellaher v. Portland, 57 Or. 575, 110 Pac. 492, 112 Pac. 1076, Mr. Justice Eakin said:

> "This court cannot, by injunction, protect property rights, or enjoin acts that might result in damage to a litigant. That is the province of the circuit court, and this court can only review its action on appeal."

To a like effect is Brice v. Younger, 63 Or. 4, 123 Pac. 905.

In this case there is no suggestion of the insolvency of either party, or that the estate of either of them in the land will be irretrievably clouded or destroyed unless the injunction be continued to the end of the litigation. As said in Brice v. Younger, supra, the plaintiff in ejectment would proceed at his peril while the cross-bill remains open for the consideration of this court. If the proceeding in chancery is well founded, the court can exercise its equitable powers in restoring the defendant in ejectment to its former situation at the expense of opposing parties. There is no pretense that the equitable authority of the court will be paralyzed if occasion should arise for its use.

All the cases hold that injunction in such instances rests in the sound discretion of the court. The temporary restraining order having been granted without notice to the opposing parties, it is, of course, subject to dissolution on a proper hearing, and the question of whether or not the justice who granted it abused his discretion is not here involved. It not being apparent to the court that the rights of either party will be prejudiced beyond repair by withholding this injunction, an order will be entered dissolving the temporary restraining order, so that the action in ejectment may regularly proceed, subject, of course, to the final disposition of the cross-bill.

(84 Or. 389)

BISHOP v. HENRY et al.

(Supreme Court of Oregon. May 29, 1917.)

1. Mechanics' Liens 🔑1—Mines and Minerals 🔑112(1)—Nature of Lien.

A mechanic's or miner's lien is a creation of the statute, which must be looked to for the right to file any such lien.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 1; Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 233.]

2. Mines and Minerals 🔑114—Claim of Lien—Ownership of Property.

L. O. L. § 7445, requiring every laborer or materialman claiming a lien on a mine, etc., to file a claim, containing a statement of his demand, with the name of the owner or reputed owner, if known, and the name of the person by whom he was employed, or to whom he furnished the materials, is complied with by a statement that the person against whom the lien is claimed is the owner and reputed owner, or by a statement in the alternative that a designated person is the owner or reputed owner.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 236.]

3. Mines and Minerals 🔑114—Claim of Lien—Ownership of Property.

Under L. O. L. § 7445, the claim of lien need not state the name of the owner when such owner is not known.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 236.]

4. Judgment 🔑707 — Conclusiveness — Persons Not Parties.

H., the daughter of a person formerly owning an interest in mining claims, obtained letters of administration, and with the consent of defendant, who also owned an interest, entered into possession for the purpose of working the property, and representing the interest of the estate. Defendant then made no claim that the estate had no interest. A controversy having arisen, H. abandoned the administration of the estate, and she and her associates filed relocation notices, and obtained supplies and labor from persons who believed her and her associates to be the owners of the claim. Afterwards defendant brought suit and obtained a decree declaring him the sole owner of all the claims as against H. and her associates. Held that, as against the persons furnishing labor and supplies and claiming liens, who were not praties to the suit, the decree took effect as of its date, and did not determine their rights.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 1230.]

5. Mines and Minerals 🔑112(3)—Liens—Consent of Owner.

As H. and her associates went into possession with defendant's permission, he should have posted notices as provided by L. O. L. § 7444, in the case of owners of a mine worked by lessees or by persons other than the owner, if he desired to prevent liens attaching to the claims.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 235.]

6. Mines and Minerals 🔑114 — Liens — Claim of Lien.

Lien notices stating that H. and her associates were the agents of the owner of the claim and were the owners and reputed owners thereof were sufficient without naming defendant; as L. O. L. § 7445, requiring the name of the owner or reputed owner, "if known," was apparently intended to apply to such a case where title in fee was in the government, and neither party had much more than a possessory right.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 236.]

7. Mines and Minerals 🔑117—Liens—Enforcement—Attorney's Fees.

In a suit to foreclose mining liens for labor performed and materials and supplies furnished by plaintiff and by other persons who had assigned their claims to plaintiff, it was immaterial whether reasonable attorney's fees should be allowed for all the claims in the aggregate or singly.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. § 239.]

In Banc. Appeal from Circuit Court, Baker County; Gustav Anderson, Judge.

Suit by F. W. Bishop against Susie Norwood Henry and others to foreclose liens. From a decree denying foreclosure as against the defendant R. C. Crawford, plaintiff and defendant Joe Kingsbury appeal. Modified.

This is a suit to foreclose certain quartz mining liens on what is commonly known as the Norwood mines. Those claimed by plaintiff are for labor performed and materials and supplies furnished by him and his assignors between March 1 and November 3, 1913. Defendant Kingsbury claims a lien for services commenced in 1908 and continued until November 3, 1913. The court decreed a lien upon a certain mill upon the premises, but denied any upon the mining claims. Plaintiff and defendant Kingsbury appealed.

A brief statement of the facts leading up to this controversy is as follows: In 1893 H. W. Norwood made amended locations of three of the mining claims, the Keystone, Empire, and Amadore. His wife, Cora S. Norwood, made amended locations of three others, the Snowflake, Lilly, and May Flower. The Lilly, Amadore, and another, the Nettie May, were conveyed to defendant Crawford. Afterwards these were all known as the Keystone mines for a time. Mr. and Mrs. Norwood and Mr. Crawford each claimed a one-third interest therein and developed the claims in common as a group. Crawford advanced money to the Norwoods upon this arrangement. Mr. Norwood died, and in 1903 Mrs. Norwood executed two mortgages covering her interest in the premises. These were foreclosed in 1904, and the property sold to defendant A. W. Eastham, trustee. In 1908 defendant Susie Norwood Henry, a daughter of H. W. Norwood, went to Baker county, where she applied for letters of administration of his estate, which were granted. She understood and represented that three of the claims in question belonged to his estate. She consulted with defendant Crawford, who made no claim to the contrary, and who believed that the Norwoods still owned an interest in the mines. With his permission she and Grace Carmalt entered into possession of the premises, moving into a cabin thereon, for the purpose of working the property and representing the one-third interest belonging to the Norwood estate. It was mutually understood that Crawford was to continue his possession, represent his one-third interest, that all were to co-operate and work the mines as a group, and that each had a one-third interest therein respectively. This plan was continued until a controversy arose in 1909, when Crawford presented a claim against the Norwood estate for assessment work done on the mines for it which was disallowed. During that year, objections being made by Crawford to the final settlement of the estate, Susie Norwood Henry abandoned the administration thereof, and she and her associates on different dates filed relocation notices upon the quartz claims embraced in the Keystone group, and also located other claims. These were afterwards known as the Norwood mines. So far as the county records showed, Susie Norwood Henry and her associates were the owners of the claims. Early in the summer of 1913 the last-named claimants commenced the construction of a mill upon the premises, and requested and obtained from plaintiff, a hardware merchant in Baker, and his assignees, other merchants, credit for hardware, merchandise, supplies, meat, etc., for about 30 days, until the mill could be operated and returns realized. Mrs. Henry and Grace Carmalt resided upon the mining claims, were reputed to be and were believed by these merchants to be the owners thereof. Defendant Crawford lived about a quarter of a mile from the mines, and, as he states, could see what was being done thereon. The mill was built and run for a short time. Meanwhile Crawford had succeeded to the interest of A. W. Eastham in the mines, the date of which is not clearly indicated by the record; it probably being developed in the suit hereafter mentioned. After arrangements were made, a considerable portion of the supplies furnished to the mines and the labor performed thereon. Crawford commenced a suit on July 26, 1913, against Susie Norwood Henry, Grace Carmalt, Steve Chaplin, and A. W. Eastham, trustee, in which a decree was entered August 31, 1914, declaring that the claims were not subject to relocation by Susie Norwood Henry and her associates, and that as to them Crawford was the sole owner of all the claims constituting the Keystone group. The findings of fact and conclusion of law of the circuit court in that suit were introduced in evidence, but not the whole record. It appears that Norwood's interest as well as that of Mrs. Norwood had been conveyed.

O. B. Mount, of Baker (A. A. Smith, of Baker, on the brief), for appellants. C. H. McCulloch, of Baker, for respondent.

BEAN, J. (after stating the facts as above). Crawford resists the liens sought to be foreclosed in this suit begun November 26, 1913. He consented to the removal of the mill, which has been sold for $500, and a portion of the proceeds are in the hands of the county clerk. The question involved herein relates to the mining claims. The several liens were filed to secure payment for materials and supplies furnished and labor performed in the development of the mines. The lien notices were similar. In that of Hans C. Olson it is stated in part thus:

"That the said mining claims are known as the Norwood group of mining claims, and are situated about eight miles northeast of the city of Baker; that the same are contiguous and are worked through common shafts, tunnels, excavations, and workings and by means of one mill or ore reduction works; that said labor so performed was upon said Norwood group of mining claims above described, and upon that certain five-stamp mill situated upon said mining claims, all of which said mill, mill buildings, structures, and machinery being situated upon the said Norwood group of mining claims and used in the working and mining of the same; that the said Susie Norwood Henry, Grace Carmalt, and Steve Chaplin were the agents of the owners of said mining claims, mill, structures, and machinery, and hired this claimant to perform the work, labor, and services aforesaid; and the said Susie Norwood Henry, Grace Carmalt, and Steve Chaplin are the owners and reputed owners of said mining claims hereinabove described and of said mill, structures, and machinery, and caused said work and labor to be performed."

In one or two of the lien notices the name of A. W. Eastham, trustee, is included as owner.

It is contended by defendant Crawford: (1) That the lien notices were not effective and do not support the liens, for the reason that the name of R. C. Crawford, who was afterwards declared to be the sole owner, was not stated therein; and (2) that Crawford never authorized the expenditure upon the mines. Section 7444, L. O. L., provides in part as follows:

> "Every person who shall perform labor upon, or furnish material for the working or development of any mine, * * * and any person who shall do work or furnish material for any road, tramway, train [trail], flume, ditch or pipe line, building, structure or superstructure used for, or in connection with the working or development of any such mine, * * * and any person who shall perform labor or service in freighting or packing any material or supplies for the use, working or development of any such mine, * * * and any person who shall furnish any provisions, materials or supplies for the working or development of any such mine, * * * structure or superstructure * * * shall have a lien upon such mine, * * * to secure to him the payment for the work or labor done, or material furnished: * * * Provided, that when two or more mines, lodes, mining claims or deposits are owned or claimed by the same person or persons, and worked through a common shaft or tunnel, * * * then all the mines, * * * shall, for the purpose of this act, be deemed one mine; and provided further, that this section shall not be deemed to apply to the owner or owners of any mine, * * * when the same shall be worked by a lessee or lessees, or by any person or persons other than the owner: * * * Provided further, that the owner or owners * * * post, or cause to be posted, * * * a notice in writing, * * * stating the name or names of the lessees, or other person or persons other than the owner operating said property, and that the owner or owners thereof will not be responsible for any debt or debts contracted by the lessee or lessees, or other person or persons other than the owner, in connection with the working, operation or development of such property. * * * The failure of any owner or owners of such property to post the notices above provided for, and secure the proper recording thereof, shall be deemed conclusive proof of the consent of such owner or owners that his or their interest in such mine shall be subject to any lien filed under the provisions of this act."

Section 7445, L. O. L., provides in substance that it shall be the duty of every laborer or materialman claiming a lien, within 60 days after he has ceased to labor or furnish materials therefor, to file with the proper county clerk a claim containing a true statement of his demand, after deducting all just credits and offsets, "with the name of the owner or reputed owner, if known, and also the name of the person by whom he was employed or to whom he furnished the materials, and also a description of the property to be charged."

[1-3] A mechanic's or miner's lien is a creation of the statute to which we must look for the right to file any such lien. 2 Snyder on Mines, § 1705. The provision of the statute that the claim of lien shall state the name of the owner or reputed owner, if known, is complied with by a statement that the person against whom a lien is claimed is the owner and reputed owner. A statement in the alternative that a designated person is the owner or reputed owner is also sufficient under such a statute. 2 Jones on Liens (3d Ed.) § 1401; Gordon v. Deal, 23 Or. 153, 31 Pac. 287; Haines Com. Co. v. Grabill, 78 Or. 375, 381, 152 Pac. 877; Arata v. Tellurium Gold and Silver Min. Co., 65 Cal. 340, 4 Pac. 195, 344; Abelman v. Myer, 122 App. Div. 470, 106 N. Y. Supp. 978; McPhee v. Litchfield, 145 Mass. 565, 14 N. E. 923, 1 Am. St. Rep. 482; Minor v. Marshall, 6 N. M. 194, 27 Pac. 481. Our statute contemplates that in certain cases the name of the owner may not be known, and in such event it is unnecessary that the notice contain the same. 2 Jones on Liens (3d Ed.) § 1401.

[4, 5] There is no claim in this suit that Crawford posted any notice of nonliability within the purview of the statute. His main reliance is based upon the decree of August 31, 1904. As to the claimants who were not parties to that suit, the decree is analogous to a foreclosure of the former claims, other than his own, and took effect as of that date. It does not determine the rights of these lien claimants which were created before that time and were not foreclosed nor affected. At the commencement of their connection with the mines Susie Norwood Henry and Grace Carmalt went into possession thereof for the purpose of working the properties and representing the one-third interest supposed to belong to the Norwood estate. This was all done with the consent and acquiescence of defendant Crawford. In so far as these claimants are concerned, the authority given by Crawford and his sanction for these parties to work the mine was of just as much force as though he had leased the property to Mrs. Henry and her associates and executed a written lease therefor. Had he desired not to become liable for any work done upon these mines by the parties whom he let into possession, he should have posted notices as provided by the statute. See Haines Com. Co. v. Grabill, supra. Crawford's position is entirely different from what it would be had the parties incurring the indebtedness entered into possession of the mines without his sanction or authority. Loud v. Gold Ray Realty Co., 72 Or. 155, 142 Pac. 785; Post v. Fleming, 10 N. M. 476, 62 Pac. 1087; Hamilton v. Delhi Min. Co., 118 Cal. 148, 50 Pac. 378; 27 Cyc. 772.

[6] In Bitter v. Mouat Lumber & Inv. Co., 10 Colo. App. 307, 51 Pac. 519, it was held that a lien claimant can be charged only with knowledge of the ownership of property as apparent upon the public records. In equity and good conscience defendant Crawford should not now be allowed to claim that Mrs. Henry and Grace Carmalt were not the owners, rightfully in possession of and working the claims in suit, when he permitted them to hold out to the world that they were the rightful owners thereof. He stood idly by from 1907, when he allowed them to take possession of the mines, until 1913, when most of the indebtedness for which liens are claimed was incurred. Then, as he states, in July, 1913, or somewhere along there, he concluded that he owned all the mines. Prior to that time he claimed only a one-third interest. As to these lien claimants the die was cast before Crawford brought his suit. See Bigelow on Estoppel (2d Ed.) p. 453. By a tardy suit which became effectual in August, 1914, he should not be allowed to defeat the claims of those who in good faith extended credit on account of the mines to which were charged merchandise and supplies furnished in the development thereof. Our statute directing that a notice of lien shall state the name of the owner or reputed owner of the property sought to be charged, if known, seems to have been enacted for just such a case as this where the title in fee is in the United States government, and neither party has much more than a possessory right to the claims. The lien notices, the complaint, and the proof are in conformity with the statute, and are sufficient to sustain the liens. 13 Ency. Pl. & Pr. p. 969 et seq.

Objection is made to the amount of defendant Kingsbury's claim. The work was done during the several years named, and accurate accounts do not appear to have been kept by him. With a little assistance he constructed a 90-foot tunnel, other work was done on the mines, and supplies and materials were transported in the development thereof. After a careful consideration of all the evidence, $1,111.50 is found to be due Kingsbury and allowed him upon his own lien, and the further sum of $228.50, due upon the lien of his assignor, Hans C. Olson, making a total of $1,340, together with $125 attorney's fees. The claims of plaintiff are approved as found by the trial court.

[7] Objection is made to the form of the allowance of attorney's fees for plaintiff. We see no merit in this claim nor any material difference in allowing reasonable attorney's fees for all the claims in the aggregate or singly. The decree of the trial court is modified as herein indicated and the amounts allowed claimants will be declared to be a lien on the mines described in the complaint.

GREIGER v. SALZER et al. (No. 8529.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. INSURANCE 🔑33—INSURANCE COMPANIES—ISSUANCE OF STOCK.

Rev. St. 1908, § 3117, regulating the issuance of stock in insurance companies, being special in character and passed after the general act regulating incorporation of stock companies, governs the organization of insurance companies in cases of conflict with the general law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 38.]

2. INSURANCE 🔑33—STOCK SUBSCRIPTIONS—PERSONAL LIABILITIES.

Rev. St. 1908, § 3117, authorizing the commissioner of insurance to designate certain incorporators to receive stock subscriptions and pay a certain amount thereof to the commissioner before the company may do business, renders the persons so delegated personally liable for the subscriptions, although they may have retired from the company before plaintiff subscribed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 38.]

3. INSURANCE 🔑33—ACTIONS—PARTIES DEFENDANT.

In action to recover stock subscriptions against insurance company incorporators designated by the commissioner of insurance under Rev. St. 1908, § 3117, to receive such subscriptions, the proposed insurance company, which never had a legal existence, is not a necessary party defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 38.]

En Banc. Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; John H. Denison, Judge.

Action by G. Greiger against Louise K. Salzer and Willis M. Marshall, as executors, and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Reversed and remanded.

Barnett & Campbell and John E. Fetzer, all of Denver, for plaintiff in error. Doud & Fowler, of Denver, for defendants in error executors. Hayt, Dawson & Wright, of Denver, for defendants in error Marshall and others. S. E. Marshall, of Denver, for defendants in error Marshall and Iliff. Isham R. Howze, of Denver, for defendant in error Moore.

BAILEY, J. This action is to recover money paid for shares in a projected life insurance company, undertaken to be organized under the laws of the State, but never in fact perfected. Defendants below, defendants in error here, with others, filed with the Secretary of State articles of incorporation for The United States Postal Insurance Company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000.00, divided into 10,000 shares of $100.00 each. In conformity with section 3117, R. S. 1908, there was presented to the State Insurance Commissioner, at the same time, a certified copy of such articles for his approval. These were duly certified by the Attorney General as conforming to law, and returned by him to the Insurance Commissioner, who thereupon approved the same, and, under the statute, named the defendants to take subscriptions to the stock of the company, they having been designated in the articles as its board of directors for the first year. Books were opened for subscriptions, and, under the direction and control of the defendants, meetings were held at which company bylaws and an official seal were adopted, and other preliminary steps taken. Stock was sold, some of which was paid for in full, other subscriptions were partially paid, and there were still other sales upon which nothing was ever paid. It appears that nearly $76.000.00 was collected from such sales, about $66.000.00 of which was spent in salaries, general, incidental and promotion expenses. Having failed to secure subscriptions and collections for the amount necessary to perfect the organization, the proposition collapsed, and the question now is whether the defendants are liable for a return of the money so subscribed and paid in.

Plaintiff below, plaintiff in error here, bases his right to recover upon the statute of the State governing the incorporation of insurance companies, and upon general principles. At the close of his testimony, on motion, an order of non-suit was entered and the cause is here for review on error.

Section 3117, supra, upon which the plaintiff chiefly relies, reads as follows:

> "* * * They [the incorporators] shall file a copy of the articles of incorporation with the commissioner of insurance, who shall submit the same to the Attorney General for examination; and if found by him to be in accordance with the provisions of this act, and not inconsistent with the constitution of this State, he shall certify and deliver back the same to the commissioner, who shall commission the persons named in the certificate of incorporation, or a majority of them, to open books for the subscription of stock in the company, at such time and place as they shall deem it convenient and proper, and shall keep the same open until the full amount specified in the certificate of incorporation is subscribed.
>
> "Whenever such capital stock has been subscribed and not less than the amount required by this Act shall have been fully paid in, and deposited with the commissioner of insurance, as required by this act, they shall notify the commissioner, who shall cause an examination to be made, either by himself or some disinterested person, especially appointed by him for the purpose, who shall certify under oath that the provisions of this Act have been complied with by said company, as far as applicable thereto. Such certificate shall be filed in the office of said commissioner, who shall thereupon deliver to such company a certified copy thereof, which shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county wherein the company is to be located, before the authority to commence business is granted."

Section 3112, R. S. 1908, provides that no life insurance company shall be permitted to be incorporated for business until a deposit of $100,000.00, either in cash, or in approved securities, is made with the State, as a guarantee fund to protect policy holders, and the business of the company.

[1, 2] Plaintiff contends that under section 3117, supra, the commissioners therein mentioned are trustees of an express trust, and their duties are to conserve the funds received from the sale of stock, to deposit the statutory amount with the Commissioner of Insurance, and that until the stock has been fully subscribed and the required amount of money so deposited, they are personally liable for the preservation and integrity of such fund.

A decision of the issues depends upon a construction of the sections of the statute referred to above. If these sections are wholly without import, then possibly the defendants may escape liability, but if, on the other hand, they are to be ascribed significance and meaning, then the defendants ought to be held to respond according to their express mandate.

These sections are distinct from the law governing the incorporation of other companies. They were enacted to safeguard the rights of those taking policies in such companies, and beneficiaries thereunder. The legislative idea manifestly was to prevent any company from lightly and prematurely assuming liability imposed by the issuance of policies of insurance. Under the statute no company may issue a policy until after all of its capital stock has been subscribed, a deposit of certain amount of funds made with the Insurance Commissioner, and upon certificate from that official attesting that these conditions have been complied with. The State Insurance Commissioner is required by law to designate the persons, or a majority of them, who are named in the certificate of incorporation, to assume the responsibility of securing stock subscriptions, of collecting the same, and of turning over such collections in amount to meet the demands of the statute, to the proper State official, before the company may undertake business. It is plain that during this embryonic period the affairs of the projected company are governed by these sections, and the duties and liabilities of those named for the preliminary work are determined and controlled thereby. These duties are positive and explicit, and unless the statute be applied and enforced those named as commissioners are without restraint, regulation, or direction whatsoever, and may make such disposition of the stock and assets of the company as meets their pleasure or whim. The legislature could never have intended or contemplated such a situation. The statute is a child of experience, and is calculated to abate, or at least minimize, evils which have arisen in the past in the organization and conduct of insurance companies. Unless it can be construed to accomplish such end, it is impotent for any purpose, and the legislature which achieved it has produced a worse than useless thing. The commissioners under the statute were to get the entire capital stock of the company subscribed, and to collect thereon and pay over to the Commissioner of Insurance at least $100,000.00. Their responsibilities ceased only when these duties were performed. The fund to be raised was for a specific purpose, and could not lawfully be diverted. Neither was the organization itself complete, nor could it lawfully do business, until the commissioners had performed their duties in this connection.

The statute is special in character, was passed after the general act, and rules the organization of insurance companies, whereever repugnant to or in conflict with provisions relating to the incorporation of stock companies in general. This is fundamental. 36 Cyc. 1151. The principle is declared in this State in Purmort v. Tucker Lumber Co., 2 Colo. 470; Edwards v. D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 13 Colo. 59, 21 Pac. 1011.

The record shows that the defendants set out to perform some at least of their duties under the statute; offices were rented, books were opened and stock subscriptions were received and money collected thereon. An attempt was made to complete the organization of the company, under the general incorporation laws; meetings were held, the defendants in error were elected officers and directors, agents were employed to sell stock and substantially everything was done which might have been done had the organization of the company been complete, except the issuance of insurance. Later, some of the defendants who had been elected directors resigned, and other stockholders, who had not been designated as commissioners, were chosen to succeed them. Finally, after expending approximately $66,000.00 of the $76,000.00 received from stock subscriptions, the abortive company became defunct, never having obtained authority to do business. It is manifest that consideration for payments made for its stock has totally failed, and plaintiff now seeks a return of his money from those who set in motion, and are responsible for, the instrumentality through which he was induced to part with it.

It is well settled in England that, where a corporation has nominally organized only, as in this case, and abandons or never attempts the business for which it was projected, the corporators and promoters are liable, on general principles, to those who purchased and paid for its stock. Johnson v. Gaslett, 3 C. B. (N. S.) 569, 3 Mewes Eng. Case Law Digest, 1162–1512; Nockles v. Crosby, 3 Barne & Cress, 814, 10 Eng. Com. Law Rep. 367; Chaplin v. Clarke, 4 Ex. 403; Walstab v. Spotswoode, 15 Mees. & W. (Ex.) 501; Green v. Barrett, 1 Sim. 45, 3 Mewes Eng. Case Law Dig. 1381. In 10 Cyc. at page 265, the principle is stated as follows:

> "A person who has paid money for shares in a company which never comes into existence, or who has paid money afterward to a scheme which is abandoned before it is carried into execution, has paid it on a consideration which has failed, and he therefore may recover it back in an action at law, as so much money had and received to his use, unless it can be shown that he has consented to or has acquiesced in the application of the money which those into whose hands it has come have made of it, and he may maintain a bill in equity for the same purpose. Where a person has paid money to the promotors of a projected corporation under an agreement that the shares shall be issued to him when the company is formed, he will be entitled to recover his money back from them unless the organization of the company is accomplished within a reasonable time."

In 7 R. C. L. 86, the rule is laid down generally that promotors or incorporators who receive payments of subscriptions to stock of a proposed corporation are personally liable for the return of the money paid, in case of failure to perfect the corporation.

In Miller v. Denman, 49 Wash. 217, 95 Pac. 67, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 348, a statute similar in principle to the one here involved was construed by the court. That statute provides for the formation of trust companies, and among other things it requires that those who are the incorporators shall be the first board of directors, and that prior to doing business the stock shall be fully subscribed and paid-up, and that thereafter a certificate of authority shall issue from the Secretary of State. In construing the statute, and discussing the duties and liabilities of the directors thereunder, the court said:

> "Chapter 176, p. 367, Laws 1903, is an act relating to trust companies. Section 2 provides for the execution of a certificate of organization by not less than seven persons mentioned in section 1. These persons, under section 5, constitute the first board of directors. Sections 1 and 3 provide that, before the corporation shall be authorized to transact business, the capital stock shall be fully paid and the Secretary of State shall issue to the company a certificate of authority. From these and other provisions it is evident that the organization would not be complete until all conditions precedent in the act required had been performed and the certificate of the Secretary of State had been issued. Necessarily subscriptions and payments of capital stock could only be solicited * * * by the original incorporators, * * * or by their duly authorized agents. They were authorized to receive money on subscriptions, but it was their duty to preserve the same as a trust fund to be used in perfecting the organization, or returned to the subscribers if the enterprise proved abortive. They stood in a position similar to that of the promotors of an ordinary corporation, and incurred at least as much liability. It was not necessary for the appellant to plead or prove that the respondents had been guilty of conspiracy or fraud, although he might properly do so. The respondents assumed certain trusts, duties, and liabilities by becoming the original incorporators and directors of the proposed company, the organization of which they intended to perfect in compliance with the trust company act. If they collected less than the original subscriptions on capital stock, and failed to return the same when the enterprise proved unsuccessful, for want of sufficient funds, they violated their trust, and became liable to the subscribers whether such failure resulted from their conspiracy, fraud, or negligence. If they permitted a portion of their number to divert the funds to an unauthorized purpose, they were guilty of such negligence and breach of trust as would compel them to respond to subscribers who might thereby suffer loss. It, therefore, is unnecessary to discuss * * * whether the appellant made a case of conspiracy or fraud."

After citing several of the English cases referred to above, and quoting from Johnson v. Goslett, supra, the court continues as follows:

"The case of Hudson v. West, 189 Pa. 491, 42 Atl. 190, is especially applicable to the facts before us, not only on the question of the liability of the original promotors or directors, but also as to the effect of an investment of subscription money claimed to have been made, with the alleged ratification and consent of subscribers. In that case the court said: 'This question seems to be of the simplest character. There was no pretense of any compliance on the part of the defendants with the terms of the contract. They received the plaintiff's money in consideration that they would form a company and give him stock therein to the amount of $10,000.00, and they did nothing of the kind. They certainly cannot keep the plaintiff's money in those circumstances. Their want of success in the formation of the company is no concern of the plaintiff, and it is no defense in this action.'"

The court then quotes section 162 from Alger on the Law of Promotors, as being in point, which reads thus:

"When a subscriber for shares in a projected corporation has paid money thereon in advance to the promotors, and the scheme proves abortive, he may recover back his money. This right rests on the failure of the consideration on which the money was paid. But the scheme is not to be deemed abortive until the formation of the corporation has been abandoned, or has become impracticable, or a reasonable time for the formation has elapsed. It is reasonable, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, that the expense of exploiting the proposed undertaking should, in case it collapses, fall upon the original projectors, and not on those who advanced their money on the faith of the ability of the projectors to do that which they undertook to do."

In commenting upon the authorities this is said:

"We think the principles announced in the above authorities apply with especial force to the facts of this case, and that the defendants, as original directors occupying a position kindred to that of promotors, would be liable to the plaintiff for the return of his subscription, even though they have been guilty of neither fraud nor conspiracy. There was sufficient evidence of * * * breach of trust, and failure of duty to require the question of their liability to be submitted to the jury."

Under the statute defendants in error were charged with the specific and express duty of securing subscriptions to the entire capital stock of the company, and of depositing with the Insurance Commissioner $100,000.00, either in cash or approved securities, as a guarantee fund against company liabilities. That they resigned as directors could in no way alter or affect their duties or liabilities under the statute. They could not avoid these by resigning from the directorate of the company, nor could they, or any of them, be released except upon performance, or by consent of all the beneficiaries, or through appropriate proceedings in a court of equity. Beech on Trustees, §§ 488, 489; Dilliard v. Winn, 60 Ala. 285; Ross v. Barclay, 18 Pa. 179, 55 Am. Dec. 616. It is no defense that defendants, or some of them, were not acting as directors when plaintiff purchased his stock, or that they, as individuals, never received the money. Neither can they claim that they did not know or understand that they had been appointed as commissioners, with duties and liabilities such as are now claimed were imposed by the statute. As incorporators of the company they were bound to know the law, and their duty under it. It is not necessary, however, to resort to this principle to charge them with liability, as the record affirmatively shows that they fully understood what their duties were, and the effect of the statute. They adopted advertising matter in the nature of letters, to persuade prospective purchasers that their interests would be faithfully protected, and their money applied according to law, in which is set forth the purpose and intent of the statute as they construed it. These matters establish actual knowledge and complete comprehension on the part of the defendants of the entire situation. A part of one letter so used is as follows:

"In regard to the questions asked in your letter we wish to say that the company was incorporated May 13th, and the amount of business on the books is, of course, nothing at this time, the law requiring that no business can be written until our capital stock is fully paid up and deposited with the State. The stock which has been sold up to date aggregates a little more than $200,000.00 and the amount paid in is small, owing to the fact that the amount subscribed is to be paid on the monthly payment plan.

"You ask in regard to the amount of stock now for sale, and the treasury stock reserved, and the amount of stock given to original incorporators, officers, etc. In reply to this, would say that an Insurance Corporation is very unlike most any other corporation; the capital cannot be used for development purposes. No promotion or treasury stock can be held out. The entire capital stock must be paid for and invested in securities, prescribed by the statutes, and remain in the custody of the State, unimpaired. The statutes of this State require that the Superintendent of Insurance make an examination annually with an appraisement and valuation of the assets and liabilities of each Legal Reserve Life Insurance Company organized and operating under its laws. As a result, no such organization has failed since the creation (in 1873) of the legal reserve requirements."

A portion of another letter sent out by the vice-president and general manager reads as follows:

"* * * We have no hesitancy in asking you to put a small amount of money in stock of this character, for as far as the possibilities of loss are concerned, I would say they are eliminated entirely. After the company is formed the entire capital stock must be held by the State of Colorado in securities satisfactory to the Commissioner of Insurance, and until the entire capital is paid in, the money collected is held intact by the Central Saving Bank & Trust Company and will draw 3% interest while deposited and should such a thing occur that the Company would not be formed, the money you have paid will all be returned. If you wish more evidence along this line that what I say is true, you may make further inquiries by writing the Central National or Saving Bank as above referred to."

When these, and similar, communications were sent to prospective investors, none of the defendants had resigned as directors of the company. The written authority from the Commissioner of Insurance was accepted by the defendants, and they embodied an interpretation of the statute in their advertising literature, and set in motion machinery for extracting money from the public. In law they must be held to have undertaken the trust, charged with full knowledge of their duties and responsibilities thereunder, and it is too late now to change or modify the situation. Once having put their hands to the plow, the defendants may not voluntarily turn back, or abandon the enterprise, and thus escape liability.

Some of the defendants contend that they cannot be held because the company as such, and not the commissioners, received stock subscriptions, dissipated the funds, and did the other acts of which complaint is made. The records of the company show that the defendants were present when action was originally taken relative to stock subscriptions and as to other matters concerning which they were empowered to act, as commissioners under the statute. At one directors' meeting one of the defendants was elected president, one vice-president and general manager, one secretary and treasurer, one chief medical director and one general counsel. They were present at other meetings where money was paid out, salaries fixed, stock salesmen engaged, and stock selling arrangements perfected. It is contended that these, and similar acts, show, or tend to show, that the company and not the statutory commissioners took charge of the stock subscriptions, collected the money, and spent it in violation of the statute, but to us they appear conclusive of the fact that the defendants were cognizant of every act done, and that all that was done was with their advice, approval and assistance, and that but for their participation and sanction nothing whatever could have been done. Extracts from the company minute book show that the defendants merely employed the company as a convenient instrument with which to carry out their plan of organizing and perfecting it. That this is an effective way to complete such an organization is apparent; and had the defendants been mindful of their statutory duty, this method of performing it might well have been the best that could have been adopted. In law, however, the company was merely the agent of the commissioners; its acts, its knowledge, its contracts and the funds arising therefrom, were all theirs, and they are liable in law for the result of such agency. Indeed, under the facts of this case, the defendants ought not to be heard to question or deny liability. They were charged with the duty of collecting and conserving the fund in question, and if they permitted another to usurp their functions, and collect and dissipate such fund, they are as clearly liable as though they did the thing themselves.

[3] It is urged also that the complaint is defective in that the United States Postal Insurance Company is not joined as defendant. The company had, and has, no legal existence as an insurance company, and as we are now advised, is entitled to no consideration from any standpoint. It has no legal rights and no legal status, and is not asking to be made a party. The question here involved is one solely between purchasers of stock and these defendants. The attempt seems to be to use the projected company as a shield to aid defendants in escaping personal liability, and this should not be countenanced.

The record plainly discloses that the defendants were responsible for everything done in connection with the attempt to perfect the organization of the proposed insurance company, and while actual fraud is not charged or proven, it does appear that they were grossly negligent and utterly regardless of, and totally indifferent to, their duties and responsibilities under the law, as commissioners, and this of itself, without more, is sufficient to fix liability.

The intent of the statute is so clear that there is no room for a reasonable difference of opinion about it. It was intended thereby to guard against and make impossible the very thing which happened to this company. If those who were designated under the statute to administer its affairs, during the formative period, had properly performed their duties and functions, the calamity which overtook the company through a dissipation of its assets, could never have come upon it.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded to the trial court for further proceedings in conformity with the views herein expressed.

TELLER, J., not participating.

BOARD OF COUNTY COM'RS OF ARAPAHOE COUNTY et al. v. UNION PAC. R. CO. et al. (No. 8677.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. April 2, 1917. Rehearing Denied June 4, 1917.)

1. COUNTIES ⚿165, 192—TAXATION—SPECIAL LEVY—LEGALITY—RECOVERY—STATUTE.

Although Mills' Ann. St. 1912, § 1330 (Laws 1891, p. 111, § 2), provides that "neither the board of county commissioners nor any officer of the county shall add to the county expenditures in any one year anything over and above the amount provided for in the annual appropriation except as herein otherwise specially provided," etc., excess warrants issued in 1912–13 on funds created in 1911, after such funds had been exhausted, were not invalid, and plaintiffs could not recover a special tax of 1.7 mills paid under protest, levied by the board of county commissioners and included in its annual appropriation bill of 1913, for a special fund for liquidation, payment, and redemption of the same warrants, and all orders and claims in view of section 1321 (Laws 1893, p. 100, § 1), providing that it shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners of any county having unliquidated and unpaid warrants or orders drawn upon any fund, for the payment of which there are no funds in the county treasury, and to pay which the incoming taxes are already levied are insufficient at the same time other taxes are levied for the year, in addition to the other taxes provided by law, to levy a sufficient tax, etc., for the purpose of creating a special fund for payment and redemption of all such unliquidated and unpaid warrants and orders; the act of 1891 in so far as this case is concerned being directory.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 246–248, 300–302.]

2. Officers 🔑110—Directory Statutes.

Statutes prescribing the manner, form, and time within which public officers are required to discharge the public functions are regarded as directory unless there is something which shows a different intent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. §§ 176–179, 182–184.]

3. Counties 🔑192—Taxation—Retroactive Laws—Prospective Construction.

Mills' Ann. St. 1912, § 1321 (Laws 1893, p. 100), authorizing board of county commissioners of counties which have, "or shall have, any unliquidated and unpaid county warrants," etc., to make a special levy, etc., applies to warrants issued after the date of its passage.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 300–302.]

En Banc. Error to District Court, Arapahoe County; John A. Perry, Judge.

Action by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and others against the Board of County Commissioners of Arapahoe County and another. From a judgment for plaintiffs, defendants bring error. Reversed.

Walter M. Morgan and Thomas E. Watters, both of Denver, for plaintiffs in error. C. C. Dorsey, E. I. Thayer, and William B. King, all of Denver, for defendant in error Union Pac. R. Co. E. E. Whitted, of Denver, for defendant in error Colorado & S. Ry. Co. E. N. Clark, of Denver, for defendant in error Denver & Rio Grande R. Co. H. T. Rogers, of Denver, for defendant in error Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co.

ALLEN, J. During the last quarter of 1913, the board of county commissioners of Arapahoe county included in its annual appropriation bill and among its several levies the following:

> "For 'Special Fund' for liquidation, payment and redemption of all registered warrants, and all orders and claims against all funds prior to the fiscal year 1913, 1.7 mills on each dollar of assessed valuation, $27,710.00."

This special levy was made for the purpose of paying certain excess warrants which were issued in 1912 and January, 1913, upon certain funds created in 1911 for the fiscal year 1912, and which excess warrants were registered after the respective funds upon which they were drawn had become exhausted. Taxes were collected under this special levy, and by the plaintiffs below were paid under protest. This action was brought by the plaintiffs below, four several railroad companies, as taxpayers in their own behalf and in behalf of other taxpayers similarly situated, against Arapahoe county and its treasurer. The chief purposes of the action were: (1) To prevent the disbursement of the money paid by the plaintiffs under such special levy; (2) to have the said special levy and the alleged excess warrants declared null and void; and (3) to obtain judgment for repayment of taxes paid under said levy. The trial court denied the injunctive relief sought, but held the special levy and the appropriation of the fund raised thereby invalid, and ordered the return to plaintiffs of the taxes they had paid under said special levy.

According to the findings of fact of the trial court, it was shown upon the trial of this cause that the alleged excess warrants were issued in good faith, in proper amounts respectively, in payment for materials furnished and necessary to be furnished and for labor and service done and performed and necessary to be done and performed for the county. The court further found that, in the case of the roads and bridges fund, the expenditures or issuance of excess warrants was due to the great and unusual and practically unprecedented floods of the year 1912 which could not have been anticipated, and, in the case of other funds, the difference between the amount appropriated and the amount of the warrants was due to errors of judgment upon the part of the county board and to its inability to anticipate the exact amounts which would be necessary to accomplish the purpose for which such funds were created by the appropriation made in 1911.

The special levy in question was, or could have been, made pursuant to chapter 54 of the Session Laws of 1893, particularly section 1 thereof; the same being section 1321, Mills' Ann Sts. 1912, and section 1375, R. S. 1908, reading as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners of any county of this state which has, or shall have any unliquidated and unpaid county warrants or orders, drawn on any fund, for the payments of which there are no funds in the county treasury of such county, and to pay which the incoming taxes already levied are insufficient, at the same time other county taxes are annually levied for the current year, in addition to the other taxes provided by law, to levy a sufficient tax, not exceeding five mills on the dollar of assessed property, as shown by the assessment roll of such county of the current year, for the purpose of creating a 'Special Fund' for the liquidation, payment and redemption of all such unliquidated and unpaid warrants or orders. A like levy shall be so made at such time, annually, until all of such unliquidated and unpaid warrants or orders shall be fully liquidated, paid and redeemed, principal and interest, as provided in this act."

[1] Counsel for defendants in error, plaintiffs below, insist that the excess warrants in question, issued after the funds on which they were respectively drawn had been exhausted, are invalid because of the provisions of section 2 of the Act of 1891 (Laws 1891, p.

111), being section 1330, Mills' Ann. Sts. 1912 (section 1216, R. S. 1908), as follows:

> "Neither the board of county commissioners, nor any officer of the county shall add to the county expenditures in any one year anything over, and above the amount provided for in the annual appropriation resolution of that year except as is herein otherwise specially provided. And no expenditure for improvements to be paid for out of any fund of the county shall exceed in any one year the amount provided for such improvements or purpose in the annual appropriation resolution; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the board of county commissioners from ordering any improvement, the necessity of which is caused by any casualty or unforeseen contingency happening after such annual appropriation is made, if there shall be money in the county treasury belonging to the proper fund out of which payment for such improvement can be made."

[2] Statutes prescribing the manner, form, and time within which public officers are required to discharge the public functions are regarded as directory, unless there is something in the statute which shows a different intent. People v. Earl, 42 Colo. 238, 248, 94 Pac. 294. Where the directions of a statute are given merely with a view to the proper, orderly, and prompt conduct of business, the provision may generally be regarded as directory. 36 Cyc. 1158.

The purpose of the act of 1891, hereinbefore quoted, may be as was stated in Beshoar v. Las Animas County, 7 Colo. App. 444, 448, 43 Pac. 912, to compel antecedent determination of the exact amount which should be used for the general purposes of the county as well as the sums which might be applied to other purposes, and to compel the county commissioners to consider and decide with great care the levy which should be made and the objects to which the moneys might be realized from it should be put. But the fact also remains, as was stated by this court in Bent County v. Santa Fé Ry. Co., 52 Colo. 609, 617, 125 Pac. 528, 530, as follows:

> "However desirable it may be that the affairs of the several counties be conducted on a cash basis, from the revenues derived each year from taxation, it is a matter of common knowledge that to do so is practically impossible, and the General Assembly has frequently recognized the fact and made provision therefor."

One of such provisions which may reasonably be deemed to be referred to in the above quotation from the Bent County Case is the act of 1893, hereinbefore quoted, and under which the special levy in question might have been made. If the act of 1891 were at all times strictly complied with, it is very likely that no occasion would ever arise for acting under the provision of the act of 1893 quoted. The act of 1893 was evidently enacted because it is practically impossible to comply strictly with the requirements of the act of 1891 in all counties at all times. Therefore section 2 of the act of 1891, hereinbefore quoted, so far as the same applies to such expenditures as are represented by the excess warrants in this case, should be held directory, in view of the foregoing circumstances and in view of the further fact that nowhere in the act of 1891 is it provided that warrants issued or indebtedness incurred in violation of the provisions of section 2 thereof shall be void or the county absolved from all liability thereon. This court has intimated, in the case of La Plata County v. Hampson, 24 Colo. 127, 132, 48 Pac. 1101, 1103, that such warrants and indebtedness may be binding upon the county. In that case, the defense of the county in a suit upon claims was that the appropriation available for the year had been exhausted prior to the presentation of the claims. The court said:

> "If the defense of the county was good at the time presented, it would, nevertheless, have been the duty of the county authorities to have made provision for these claims at the earliest possible moment, when they could legally have made an appropriation therefor, to wit, at the time of making the next annual appropriation."

[3] Defendants in error contend that the act of 1893 was intended only to provide for a special levy for the redemption of warrants theretofore issued and excess warrants outstanding at the time of the passage of the act. But, as was said in the Bent County Case, "the act contains expressions that might include indebtedness subsequently incurred." The act provides that a special levy shall be made in those counties that have, "or shall have, any unliquidated and unpaid county warrants or orders drawn on any fund," etc. This clearly shows that the act was intended to cover and provide for warrants that might be issued after the date of the passage of the act as well as warrants theretofore issued.

The act of 1891 had been tried and tested. It had become a matter of common knowledge that to place and keep the financial affairs of a county upon a cash basis in strict compliance with the statute of 1891 was practically impossible; that county officials in an effort to discharge all of their public duties pursuant to this and other provisions of the law enjoined upon them, on account of contingencies arising that were unforeseen and could not be anticipated at the time of making and providing the annual appropriations, had been obliged from time to time to incur necessary indebtedness in excess of the appropriations and issue warrants therefor; that many such warrants in some counties were outstanding after the exhaustion of the funds on which they were drawn; and that evidently more under like circumstances would be issued in the future, and if not redeemed would tend to leave bona fide claims unpaid and also tend to impair the financial credit of the county.

The Legislature evidently recognized this situation, and as a matter of public policy passed the statute of 1893, hereinbefore quoted, intending thereby to afford relief and to allow the county board to make a special levy for the purpose of creating a fund to redeem all such outstanding warrants, whether such had been, or in the future would be, issued under like circumstances. The wording of the act, as hereinbefore pointed out, sustains this view of the meaning and the purpose of the statute.

The special levy and the taxes collected thereunder were valid, and it therefore follows that the trial court was right in refusing the injunction prayed for by plaintiffs below, but was in error in rendering judgment for the plaintiffs for the repayment of the taxes paid under the special levy. The judgment is reversed, the cause remanded, and the court directed to dismiss the complaint.

Reversed.

WHITE, C. J. (specially concurring). I agree that the judgment should be reversed, but not upon the grounds stated in Mr. Justice ALLEN'S opinion. In fact, I dissent from the construction placed upon the statutes therein discussed, and think he has erred in stating the facts of the case.

The undisputed record is that the warrants issued in 1912 and January, 1913, for the payment of which the special levy in question was made, were issued after the fund upon which they were drawn was entirely exhausted, and were not issued "upon certain funds created in 1911 for the fiscal year 1912." Moreover, the entire taxes to create such fund had been collected and paid out prior to the issue of such warrants or the contracting of the indebtedness for the payment of which they were issued. The act of 1891 (sections 1215, 1216, and 1217, R. S. 1908) prohibits adding to the county expenditure in any one year anything above the annual appropriation therefor, except that the board of county commissioners are permitted to order "any improvement, the necessity of which is caused by any casualty or unforeseen contingency happening after such annual appropriation is made, if there shall be money in the county treasury belonging to the proper fund out of which payment for such improvement can be made." Section 1216, supra, declares that no contract shall be made by the board of county commissioners and no liability against the county created by any officer of the county, whether the object of the expenditure shall have been ordered by the board of county commissioners or not, unless an appropriation shall have been previously made concerning such expense, and makes every officer of the county "who shall undertake to create any liability against the county, except such as he is by statute required to do," personally liable upon his official bond for such indebtedness. Section 1364, R. S. 1908, provides that, when the county commissioners shall deem it necessary to create an indebtedness for making or repairing public roads or bridges, they may upon 30 days' notice submit the question to a vote at a general election, and that upon authorization by the people the commissioners "shall be authorized to contract the debt in the name of the county."

Having in mind these express statutory provisions governing the subject, I am unable to understand how it can be held that county commissioners have authority to do that which they are therein expressly prohibited from doing. Bent County v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 52 Colo. 609, 125 Pac. 528, quoted from in the majority opinion, has no application to the facts of this case. In that case it was stipulated:

> "That the contract for the repairs was made on the 30th day of August, 1904; that on said date 'there was in the proper fund sufficient money to pay for the construction of said bridge'; that the fund so on hand was afterwards consumed in the necessary repairs of other bridges and roads before warrants could be issued for the contract in question."

And it was held that the particular contract was valid, and:

> "If any contracts for road and bridge work, or claims allowed against such fund, were illegal, they were contracts made and claims allowed subsequent to the making of the contract in question."

In the case at bar there was neither a fund, nor a tax levy to create a fund, when the work was ordered or when the warrants were issued. Therefore the indebtedness attempted to be created was not a liability against the county, but by statute (section 1217, supra) was a personal liability of the public officials who attempted to create it. There being no valid indebtedness against the county for this work, the warrants issued therefor were equally invalid.

Section 1 of the act of 1893 (section 1375, R. S. 1908) has no application to the facts of this case. The act makes it the duty of the board of county commissioners of any county which "has, or shall have, any unliquidated and unpaid county warrants or orders, drawn on any fund, for the payments of which there are no funds in the county treasury of such county, and to pay which the incoming taxes already levied are insufficient," to make a special levy or levies from time to time to pay the same. Clearly "unliquidated and unpaid county warrants or orders," as therein used, have reference to legal obligations, and none other. A county official may not deliberately order work done, and create an indebtedness therefor, and thereafter impose upon the public payment of the same, in face of the law expressly prohibiting such acts, and making him and his bondsmen personally liable for such indebtedness.

But, apart from this, the judgment should be reversed. The object of the proceeding was to enjoin the county treasurer "from paying the warrants in question or disbursing any of the moneys created by the special levy of 1.7 mills; that the excess warrants of $22,210.69 be declared null and void; that, as an incident to the injunctive relief asked, judgment be entered against the county of Arapahoe and the county treasurer for the taxes paid by the plaintiffs respectively by reason of the alleged illegal levy," with interest, etc. There were many such warrants, person offering to vote shall be found on said certified registry list"—registration is a condition precedent to holding an annual town election and, as there was no such registration, due to an entire omission of duty by officers, the election was void, and defendants were not entitled to the office of trustees of the town of Hudson.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Elections, Cent. Dig. § 111.]

3. Elections ⚷285(3) — Contests — Pleadings—Failure of Registration.

In a contest suit, allegation that the board of registration failed to sit fairly implied that there had been no registration of the voters prior to the election.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Elections, Cent. Dig. §§ 269, 274.]

En Banc. Error to Weld County Court; Fred W. Stover, Judge.

Contest proceedings by Charles Kugel and others against A. A. Fish and others. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants bring error. Reversed and remanded.

Charles F. Tew and Walter E. Bliss, both of Greeley, for plaintiffs in error. F. J. Green and Mann & Mann, all of Greeley, for defendants in error.

WHITE, C. J. This controversy is over the right to the offices of trustees of the town of Hudson and involves the question of the validity of an alleged annual election for officers of such town. At the election plaintiffs in error and defendants in error were opposing candidates, and the former were declared elected. Thereupon defendants in error instituted contest proceedings which resulted in a judgment in their favor, and the opposing parties prosecute this writ of error. The judgment was based upon the finding that certain designated votes cast for plaintiffs in error were illegal. It was alleged by contestees, and admitted by contestors, that there was no registration of the electors for this election, and the evidence clearly established that there was none. Contestees were their own successors, having been elected at a previous election. They sought to exclude as evidence each and every ballot cast at the election in question upon the ground that they were illegal, not having been cast by registered electors. They were unsuccessful in this regard, the court holding that registration was not essential to a valid election for town officers. Plaintiffs in error rely solely upon the alleged invalidity of the election, coupled with their right to hold over as incumbents of the offices.

[1] It is well settled that where the law requires registration of voters preceding an election, and provides that no one shall be permitted to vote unless he is registered, and no registration is had, the election, where the omission occurs, is of no force and effect, and no one may claim the right to an office as a result thereof. State v. Hilmantel, 21 Wis. 566; State ex rel. v. Stumpf, 23 Wis. 630; State ex rel. v. Frazier, 98 Mo. 426, 11 S. W. 973; Nefzger v. Davenport, etc., R. Co., 36 Iowa, 642; People v. Kopplekom, 16 Mich. 342; 15 Cyc. 302.

[2] The law of this state provides that elections in towns shall be held on the first Tuesday in April at places in each ward or precinct designated by its board of trustees; or, if there be no wards or precincts, then at some place so designated therefor in such town. Section 6622, R. S. 1908. The section also requires that the board of trustees "shall appoint the judges of election," and makes provision for the holding of a special election if for any reason officers have not been elected at the time and in the manner provided by law. It further provides that:

> "All elections for municipal officers shall in all respects be held and conducted in the manner prescribed by law in case of county elections."

And section 2249, R. S. 1908, declares that:

> "No vote shall be received at any election unless the name of the person offering to vote shall be found on the said certified registry list."

The Constitution declares that all elections shall be free and open, and commands the General Assembly to pass laws to secure the purity of elections and guard against abuses of the elective franchise. Article 2, § 5; article 7, § 11. To the end that elections be free and open, and to discharge the duty imposed by the Constitution, the Legislature enacted the aforesaid statutes. They provide for the organization of boards of registration, and require the registration of electors, and forbid the reception of votes at any election unless the name of the person offering to vote is found on the certified registry list.

We are of the opinion that the law required the registration of voters as a condition precedent to holding an annual town election, and, as there was no such registration, the purported election was a nullity. 6 Amer. & Eng. Ency. of Law (1st Ed.) 290. We are dealing here with an entire omission by the officers to perform their duties, not with an imperfect performance thereof. As said in State ex rel. v. Frazier, supra:

> "We are not now dealing with a mere irregularity in the workings of a registration law. There was, in this case, a total failure to comply with a law making the registration of voters an essential preliminary to an election. The effect of such failure is no longer an open question. * * * This court has expressly declared that it entirely invalidates the election"—citing authorities.

But are the electors to be deprived of their right to vote when the registration board failed to meet and thus furnished no opportunity to register? We answer the question in the affirmative. People v. District Court, 33 Colo. 14, 20, 84 Pac. 694. A law does not become unconstitutional simply because its officers neglect their duty in its administration. Such officers may be compelled by law to act in the premises. Moreover, the statutes here under consideration expressly provide for a special election, if for any reason officers have not been elected at the time, and in the manner provided by law. In People v. Kopplekom, supra, there was no opportunity of registration, and the point was raised whether votes cast by unregistered persons should be counted. It was admitted that acts requiring registration of voters were valid, but contended that those otherwise qualified could not be deprived of their right to vote simply because they were unregistered when the officers designated to conduct the registration failed for any cause to do so. In disposing of the question, it is said:

> "It is not to be disguised that this reasoning has considerable strength, but it has failed, however, to satisfy us. The statute in question is grounded upon the same article of the Constitution which gives the right to vote, and its object, as expressly declared in the title, is 'further to preserve the purity of elections, and guard against the abuses of the elective franchise, by a registration of electors.' In accordance with this declared object, the act proceeds to provide for the organization of boards of registration, and to require the electors to register, and expressly forbids all voting by persons not registered. The administration of the statute is confided to the local officers elected by the people themselves, for the discharge of other municipal duties, and who may be compelled by law to act. It contemplates general obedience and continuous administration, and nowhere, in terms, makes any provision for its own nullification, either through violence, or the negligent or willful failure of officers to organize or preserve boards. It does not speak the language of a mere offer, or proposition to the electors, to register or not, but utters the language of law; unconditional, absolute, imperative; and declares that all who do not register shall not vote. If the Legislature had expressly declared that no one should be deprived of his vote for not registering whenever the means of registration should be unprovided, the statute must have been regarded as equivalent to a legislative proposition to the electors to register or not, as they should see fit; and the introduction of the same idea, by construction, would produce the same result."

In Perry v. Whitaker, 71 N. C. 475, where no registration books at all were opened, the registration books of a prior election were used, thereby depriving many citizens of the right to vote, because they were not registered, the election was declared void. Zeller v. Chapman, 54 Mo. 502, recognizes the same rule holding that if registration officers refuse to act, or fail to perform the duties imposed upon them, the election is void.

[3] Defendants in error make a point as to whether the language of the pleadings constitutes an allegation and admission that no registration for such election was had in the town, claiming that the language of the allegation was only that the board of election judges refused to sit, etc., while the admission was "that no one was registered," etc. We think this is too technical for consideration, and that the fair import of the language used is that there had been no registration of the voters prior to the election. But, apart from this, the evidence discloses, and the record conclusively shows, that there was no registration of voters, and the real contention in the case was whether a registration was essential to a valid election. As the right of defendants in error to these offices rested solely on an election which was invalid, the court could not lawfully adjudge them entitled thereto; and, as plaintiffs in error were entitled to hold over by virtue of a previous election, they should not have been disturbed in their possession of the offices until their successors were elected and qualified.

The judgment is therefore reversed, and the case remanded for proceedings not inconsistent with the views herein expressed.

HUSTON v. OHIO & COLORADO SMELTING & REFINING CO. (No. 8806.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. April 2, 1917. Rehearing Denied June 4, 1917.)

1. Assignments 🔑80—Right of Action—Fraud.

Assignment from wife's executor to plaintiff of stock purchased by her and taken by plaintiff in lieu of wife's cash bequest held not to transfer any right of action against the corporation for fraud in the sale of stock.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assignments, Cent. Dig. § 147.]

2. Assignments 🔑80 — Sale of Stock — Right of Action—Fraud.

The sale of stock does not transfer a right of action for damages caused by false representations made to the vendor by the person from whom he purchased.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assignments, Cent. Dig. § 147.]

3. Assignments 🔑131 — Action by Assignee of Stock — Sufficiency of Complaint.

Complaint charging fraud in sale of stock held insufficient to show assignment of cause of action to complainant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assignments, Cent. Dig. §§ 220-226.]

4. Assignments 🔑80—Fraudulent Sale of Stock — Representations Made to Plaintiff's Wife.

Plaintiff had no right of action for misrepresentations made to himself and wife inducing his wife to purchase stock, upon the ground that he elected to take the stock in lieu of wife's cash bequest, relying on such representations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Assignments, Cent. Dig. § 147.]

5. Fraud 🔑24—Misrepresentation—Proximate Cause.

A misrepresentation is not actionable unless it is a proximate and immediate cause of the transaction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Fraud, Cent. Dig. § 8.]

6. Pleading 🔑236(1) — Allowance of Amendment—Discretion of Court.

Where plaintiff had twice amended his complaint and had apparently pleaded fully the facts relied on, there was no abuse of discretion in refusing a further amendment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. § 601.]

Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; Charles C. Butler, Judge.

Action by Charles C. Huston against the Ohio & Colorado Smelting & Refining Company. Demurrer to amended complaint sustained, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

John T. Bottom, of Denver, and Frederick P. Smith, of Helena, Mont., for plaintiff in error. Yeaman & Gove and Kenaz Huffman, all of Denver, for defendant in error.

ALLEN, J. Charles C. Huston, plaintiff below, sought to recover of the defendant company money which had been paid by one Martha D. Huston during her lifetime to the defendant for shares of its capital stock. A demurrer to the amended complaint was sustained by the trial court, and this is the principal alleged error to be considered.

The amended complaint alleged, among other things, in substance the following: That Martha D. Huston purchased the shares from defendant at times prior to June 13, 1903, and was induced to purchase same by means of certain misrepresentations of the defendant and its agents communicated to the plaintiff, who, relying upon and believing defendant's representations to be true, communicated them to his wife, the said Martha D. Huston; that Martha D. Huston died domiciled in the state of Ohio in January, 1904, disposing of all of her property by will and bequeathing much of the same to the plaintiff, her husband; that the plaintiff, in lieu of $10,000 in cash bequeathed to him, elected to receive and did receive the said stock of the defendant company, while still, and because, relying upon the said false representations of the defendant; "that under and by virtue of an assignment of the certificates of shares held by Martha D. Huston, deceased, made to him by Henry L. Rich, as executor of the last will and testament of Martha D. Huston, deceased, the plaintiff succeeded to any and every right, or authority, in law or equity, to recover from defendant company * * * any damages that might have resulted because of any fraud or deceit in and about the sale of said shares of stock to Martha D. Huston."

[1] The most important question raised by the demurrer is: Was the cause of action, if any, possessed by Martha D. Huston against the defendant assigned to the plaintiff?

The amended complaint also alleges that the fraud, deceit, and misrepresentations of the defendant were not known to or discovered by the plaintiff at any time prior to the year 1911, which was about seven years after the death of the said Martha D. Huston. Neither the plaintiff nor the executor therefore at the time the stock was assigned to the plaintiff by the executor knew of any cause of action existing or having accrued against the defendant.

Under these circumstances, unless it otherwise appears from the assignment, it is reasonable to conclude that the assignor did not intend to transfer to the assignee any cause of action against the company as incident to the assignment of the stock. From the allegations of the complaint, apart from mere conclusions, it does not appear that anything more was expressly assigned than the stock itself. As to what passes with an assignment, the following is stated in Corpus Juris:

> "The cardinal rule to be applied is to ascertain the intention of the parties as to what interests, rights, or property they intended to pass under the assignment, and to carry out such intention as nearly as may be done without violence to the language used by them." 5 C. J. 949.

From the allegations of the complaint it appears that the plaintiff merely received an assignment of the stock. No more can pass with an assignment of stock under the circumstances of this case than that passing with the sale of stock under ordinary circumstances.

[2] "A sale of stock does not transfer a right of action for damages caused by false representations made to the vendor by the party from whom the vendor purchased." 1 Cook on Corp. (6th Ed.) § 355.

In the case of Kenedy v. Benson (C. C.) 54 Fed. 836, a receiver sold property of a cattle company to defendants and took in payment certain shares of stock. He kept the stock and settled with the company for cash. Afterwards he individually brought suit against the defendants for damages for fraudulent representations made at the time of the sale as to the value of the stock. The court held that the defendants transferred the stock to the cattle company, and the right of action, if any existed, belonged to the cattle company, and further stated:

> "The right to an action for the recovery of damages having thus vested in that company, it would not pass to any third person to whom the company might sell or assign the stocks in question as a mere incident thereto."

[3] It can be said of the complaint in the instant case as was said of the complaint in that case, that:

> "There are no facts averred which show a transfer or assignment of the right to claim damages from the defendants by reason of the alleged false statements in regard to the value of the stock."

The right of action growing out of fraud is usually a personal right to the extent that it does not pass with an assignment of the thing to which the right relates. Worsham v. Brown, 4 Ga. 284; Mullinax v. Lowry, 140 Mo. App. 42, 124 S. W. 572; Steele v. Brazier, 139 Mo. App. 319, 123 S. W. 477; Fox v. Hirschfeld, 157 App. Div. 364, 142 N. Y. Supp. 261; 5 Corpus Juris, 952, note 22 (e).

In accord with the foregoing rule is the case of Norris v. Colo. Turkey Honestone Co., 22 Colo. 162, 43 Pac. 1024.

The demurrer was properly sustained upon the ground that it does not appear that there was any assignment of the cause of action to the plaintiff. It is not necessary, therefore, to pass upon the question of the assignability of the cause of action either under the laws of Ohio or of Colorado.

[4] The plaintiff also attempts to state a cause of action independent of that which might have accrued to Martha D. Huston or her legal representatives, upon the ground that he elected to take the stock in lieu of the cash bequeathed to him under the will because he believed in the alleged false representations of the defendant. But these alleged false representations were made, if at all, long prior to the time plaintiff made his election, and were made, as he says, to induce him and his wife to purchase additional shares. They were not made with the purpose or intention of influencing plaintiff to accept an assignment of the shares in the manner pleaded, and plaintiff cannot base an independent cause of action upon such alleged misrepresentations.

[5] In Adams v. Schiffer, 11 Colo. 15, 17 Pac. 21, 7 Am. St. Rep. 202, and Wheeler v. Dunn, 13 Colo. 428, 437, 22 Pac. 827, this court, quoting from Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, thus states the rule:

> "A misrepresentation goes for nothing unless it is a proximate and immediate cause of the transaction. It is not enough that it may have remotely or indirectly contributed to the transaction, or may have supplied a motive to the other party to enter into it. The representation must be the very ground on which the transaction has taken place."

We think our conclusion is also borne out by 2 Cooley on Torts (3d Ed.) 940.

[6] It appears from the record that the parties below stipulated that the motion to strike interposed to the first complaint should be treated as a demurrer. Thereupon the court sustained the demurrer, and plaintiff by leave of court filed an amended complaint. This was further amended by filing a supplemental complaint. Plaintiff having twice exercised the privilege of amending, and apparently pleading fully the facts relied on, there was no error or abuse of the court's discretion in refusing plaintiff the right to amend further. The right to amend further was discretionary with the court. King v. Mecklenburg, 17 Colo. App. 312, 315, 68 Pac. 984. Unless it appears that such discretion is abused, a court of review will not interfere. Anthony v. Slayden, 27 Colo. 144, 60 Pac. 826.

The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and BAILEY, J., concur.

SOWERS v. PITCHER et al. (No. 8826.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. March 5, 1917. Rehearing Denied June 4, 1917.)

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS 🔑125 — CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE—CITY CHARTER.

Denver City Charter Amendment Feb. 14, 1913, § 292, making the classified service include "all offices, positions and employment" with certain exceptions, refers to the offices, etc., and not their incumbents, and does not automatically bring a person then holding office under the protection of the civil service law so as to prevent her discharge except in accordance with its terms.

En Banc. Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; Hon. Charles C. Butler, Judge.

Mandamus by Ella Sowers against Clair J. Pitcher, as Commissioner of Finance of the City and County of Denver and ex officio Treasurer of the City and County of Denver, and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

William W. Grant, Jr., and Frank McLaughlin, both of Denver, for plaintiff in error. James A. Marsh and Jacob J. Lieberman, both of Denver, for defendants in error.

BAILEY, J. The question to be settled is whether plaintiff automatically was brought into the classified service of the City and County of Denver for the reason that, since 1909 she had continuously been employed in the office of the Treasurer and was so employed in February, 1913, when Section 292 of the Charter was amended, bringing that department within the civil service. Plaintiff in error, plaintiff below, was discharged from the service on August, 8, 1914, by defendant in error, defendant below, Commissioner of Finance and Ex-Officio Treasurer of the City and County. Plaintiff sued out an alternative writ of mandamus to compel payment of the remainder of her salary for August, 1914. Judgment was rendered for defendant and the case comes here for review on error.

It is agreed that unless plaintiff was brought within the classified service by the Charter amendment of February 14, 1913, Section 292, she is not entitled to the benefits of Section 304 of the Charter, governing the manner of discharge. It is also admitted that if she was not automatically placed under civil service by that Section, then she came into such service only by taking and passing an examination, and by working as a probationary appointee for the six months prior to her discharge, and that then defendant could, and did, exercise a lawful discretion in dismissing her at the expiration of the probationary period.

This case is ruled by Shinn v. People, 59 Colo. 509, 149 Pac. 623, where, in construing Section 10 of the civil service law of 1907, as amended by an initiated act in 1912 (Laws 1913, p. 682) to read as follows:

> "All appointive officers and employés in the civil service of the state and of all state institutions shall be included in the classified service * * *"

—the court said:

"The legislature deemed it necessary, in order to make Section 10, as originally enacted, apply to persons occupying positions then brought into the classified service, to thus provide: 'All persons occupying positions in the classified service when this act takes effect shall retain their positions until removed therefrom under its provisions.' This provision was omitted from the act of 1912, which is a clear legislative declaration that it was not the intent of the people, by the initiated act, to have it apply to persons * * * who had not qualified by taking the required examination. The omission of the paragraph negatives the contention of counsel for Shinn that by the provision in question he personally was placed in the classified service. The manifest intention of the people, in view of all the provisions of the civil service law was to make the provision of amended Section 10 apply to appointive offices and to the positions to be filled, rather than to persons. The scope of the application of this law is to be gathered from all of its provisions which must be considered together to correctly ascertain its meaning. It should be liberally construed to enforce its ostensible object, which is to promote the efficiency of the civil service by employing persons only who have shown, by proper examination, qualifications for positions therein, and not to put in, or keep in the service, persons who have not so qualified. Thus considered and thus construed, Shinn was never in the classified service. The application of the law extends only to those who have taken an examination, and thereby showed the necessary qualifications, and to those who should do so in the future."

Plaintiff invokes Section 292 of the Charter to demonstrate that, by its provisions, she automatically came within the scope of the civil service act. That section, so far as it bears on this controversy, is as follows:

> "The classified service, under this article, shall include all offices, positions and employments elected, appointed or serving under the authority in any way of the City and County, except the following: Each Commissioner and all his elective officers, and * * * the attorney and his professional assistants, all other heads of * * * departments * * * all Commissioners * * * provided the police and chief of the fire department, with their subordinates, shall not be classified as heads of departments, but shall be in the classified service."

In Shinn v. People, supra, it was held that Section 10 of the amended civil service law referred to the offices, and to the positions to be filled, rather than to the persons then occupying the offices. This conclusion is equally applicable to the like provision contained in Section 292 of the Charter. The scope of the application of the law is to be gathered from the act as a whole. It provides for examinations, as a preliminary to entering the classified service, and this applies to all seeking positions with the municipality under the act, whether already holding a place or not, since the act itself does not specifically provide that those already having employment with the city should hold over and be in the classified service. The intent to place the position, and not the individual filling it, at the time of the adoption of the Charter amendment, under civil service regulations, is more clearly apparent from the language of Section 292, supra, than it was from the section of the statute construed in Shinn v. People, supra. The precise situation is presented here, in principle, which was present in the Shinn Case and we conclude, upon that authority, that plaintiff was not automatically placed within the classified service by the passage of Section 292. That provision affected only the "offices, positions and employments" and not the then incumbents. Plaintiff came within the classified service only when she took and passed the civil service examination, and accepted employment thereunder, as a probationary appointee. Her subsequent discharge, within the six months' probationary period, was, by express charter provision, within the discretion of defendant, and was therefore lawful. The judgment of the lower court must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

DENVER & R. G. R. CO. v. DA VELLA.
(No. 8556.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. April 2, 1917. Rehearing Denied June 4, 1917.)

COMMERCE 🔑27(8)—INTERSTATE COMMERCE—RAILROAD EMPLOYÉS.

Where a section hand, when injured, was engaged in inspecting and repairing a railroad track used in interstate commerce, as well as in removing old rails from the side of the track, he was engaged in interstate commerce, whether or not the assumption was warranted that the old rails were taken from the track.

Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; John H. Denison, Judge.

Action by Oresta Da Vella, Royal Italian Consul, as administrator of Vincenzo Plasteno, against the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

E. N. Clark and R. G. Lucas, both of Denver, for plaintiff in error. F. W. Sanborn and Geo. Allan Smith, both of Denver, for defendant in error.

GARRIGUES, J. Vincenzo Plasteno was accidentally killed while employed by plaintiff in error as a section hand on its railroad. He left, as his sole surviving heir, his mother, who was dependent upon him for support, and who at the time of the accident was a subject and resident of the kingdom of Italy. This action was instituted on her behalf by defendant in error as administrator of the estate of the deceased. The jury returned a verdict of $2,000 against the company, and it brings the case here on error.

The complaint alleges substantially that defendant, a railroad corporation, is a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce; that deceased was in its service as a section hand and track repairer, and while so employed on September 21, 1912, near the station of Chester, Colo., was so badly injured by one of the trains of defendant, through its carelessness and negligence, that he died the next day. It was stipulated on the trial that defendant was, at the time stated, a common carrier by railroad, engaged in interstate commerce on its line of railroad, and at the siding or station near Chester, where deceased was injured, and is subject to the provisions of the federal Employers' Liability Act.

On defendant's narrow gauge line between Salida and Grand Junction is a station or siding called Chester. Two miles west of this, at a point called Tank 7, is a section house, used as headquarters for two section crews, one working east and the other west. From Chester easterly there is a heavy upgrade to the top of Marshall Pass. Each section foreman had power to employ and discharge section hands, who worked under his direction and control. There is evidence showing that it was the duty of the foreman to go with the men each day over his section, inspect the track, keep it in repair for train service, and remove old ties and rails, and for this work he was furnished with a push car. It was the custom of the foreman to sit on the front end of this car, which the men pushed over the track, and in this way they inspected the track and roadbed, and, upon discovering anything out of repair, would stop and fix it. September 20, 1912, the foreman received orders from the roadmaster to gather up the old rails along the track on his section and put them on a car at Chester. The next morning the foreman, with three section hands, one of whom was the deceased, started out with the push car for the purpose of inspection and gathering old rails. When they reached Chester, they had picked up four rails, and, after placing these on a car, were intending to continue their work a mile and a half east of Chester, which would necessitate their pushing the car upgrade. About this time a heavy freight train, going east, came in, propelled by three engines, one of which was at the rear of and pushing the train. While this freight was standing on the main line, the foreman ordered his gang to fasten the push car by means of a rope to the knuckle of the drawhead on the tender of the rear engine, so that the train would pull them up the heavy grade. This was done, the foreman and the men, in obedience to his order, got on the push car, and in a few minutes the train pulled out. It appears that the freight had orders to pull in on a siding to allow a passenger train to pass. This apparently was unknown to the section men, who thought it was going to pull out, instead of which it simply went up past the switch and then began to back in on the siding. The men remained on the push car, which was in some manner derailed as the train was moving backwards, and deceased was run over by the tender and engine and fatally injured. There is no direct or positive evidence as to the immediate cause of the accident, other than this. The engineer on the rear engine testified that, when he received the order to back up and saw the men on the push car, he did not execute it until it had been repeated the third time. There was evidence that the side track was in bad condition; that it was constructed of rails of different weights, which made the track uneven; that many of the ties were rotten, and into some of them no spikes had been driven. There was also testimony to the effect that the wheels of the push car had from one to one and a quarter inches play, and that the car "had a habit of getting off the track."

1. Upon the question of negligence there was a fair conflict in the evidence, and we think the case should not be reversed on the ground that there was insufficient evidence to sustain the verdict.

2. A section hand, employed in looking after and repairing the track of a railroad company engaged in interstate commerce, while employed in such work, is an employé engaged in interstate commerce; and, it being stipulated that defendant was engaged in interstate commerce, the inquiry is: Was the work which deceased was doing at the time of his injury a part of the interstate commerce in which defendant was engaged?

It was an interstate track and roadbed, which defendant was obliged to keep in repair to move cars carrying interstate commerce. Deceased, at the time of his injury, was engaged in inspecting and repairing the track, as well as removing old rails, which were along the side of, and which we think it fair to assume were taken from, the track. But whether this is a warranted assumption or not makes no material difference in this case, because a part of the duties of deceased at the time, and in which he was engaged, was to inspect and repair the track. The following cases support the conclusions herein announced: Chicago, K. & W. R. Co. v. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, 15 Sup. Ct. 585, 39 L. Ed. 675; Pedersen v. Delaware Co., 229 U. S. 146, 33 Sup. Ct. 648, 57 L. Ed. 1125, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 153; St. Louis Co. v. Seale, 229 U. S. 156, 33 Sup. Ct. 651, 57 L. Ed. 1129, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 156; N. C. R. R. Co. v. Zachary, 232 U. S. 248, 34 Sup. Ct. 305, 58 L. Ed. 591, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 159; N. Y. Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Carr, 238 U. S. 260, 35 Sup. Ct. 780, 59 L. Ed. 1298.

The judgment will be affirmed.

Affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and SCOTT, J., concur.

STEWART v. NEWTON LUMBER & INVESTMENT CO. (No. 8864.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. CONTRACTS ⟹333(5) — COMPLAINT — CONSTRUCTION.

In an amended complaint, alleging that plaintiff had given her note for a certain sum, secured by a deed of trust reciting that, in addition to certain real estate, it included a building to be erected thereon, "the money secured by this deed of trust being advanced for the purpose of being applied for the construction of such improvement," and that defendant had failed to advance a portion of the sum promised, for which portion plaintiff prayed judgment, the words quoted did not show that the money was to be paid direct for the erection of the building, but, when considered with a paragraph of the complaint, alleging that defendant agreed to release the deed of trust if plaintiff was not paid the sum promised on or before certain date, showed that the money was to be paid direct to plaintiff.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. §§ 1652, 1653.]

2. Pleading 🔑362(1)—Complaint—Motion to Strike.

Since such amended complaint as filed stated a cause of action, it was error to render the complaint defective by striking out the portion which alleged an agreement to release the deed of trust if plaintiff was not paid the specified sum on or before a certain day.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Pleading, Cent. Dig. §§ 1147, 1154, 1155.]

Error to District Court, Pueblo County; C. S. Essex, Judge.

Action by Elizabeth Stewart against the Newton Lumber & Investment Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

M. J. Galligan, of Pueblo, for plaintiff in error. Adams & Gast, of Pueblo, for defendant in error.

TELLER, J. The plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff below, alleges that the trial court erred in sustaining a demurrer to her amended complaint, as well as in striking out parts of it.

The complaint, as amended, alleges that on March 9, 1914, she executed and delivered to the defendant her promissory note for the sum of $6,000, with a deed of trust securing the same; that said deed of trust recited that in addition to the real estate described in it, it "included a two-story brick residence to be erected upon the above premises, the moneys secured by this deed of trust being advanced for the purpose of being applied to the construction of such improvement"; that all of said $6,000 was to be paid to plaintiff on or before May 1, 1914; "that she had received only $4,170 of said money, though she had often demanded that defendant pay her the balance of said sum; that there was due her a balance of $1,830 and $176 interest paid on an amount named in the note which she had never received. Plaintiff demands judgment for $2,006.

The sole ground of demurrer was that the complaint does not state a cause of action since it is said:

> It "shows on its face that the moneys in said complaint referred to were by the agreement of the parties hereto to be advanced for the purpose of being applied to the construction of a building on the lots in said amended complaint described, and contains no allegation that the defendant has refused to advance said moneys for said purpose, and contains no allegation that the plaintiff desires to use said moneys for said purpose."

If the complaint, after the granting of the motion to strike, was defective in the respect named, it yet remains to consider whether or not the portions stricken out supplied the alleged deficiencies.

[1] In that part of paragraph 2 which was stricken out it is alleged that the defendant promised and agreed to release the deed of trust in the event that plaintiff was not paid the sum of $6,000 on May 1, 1914—

> "the date upon which plaintiff should receive said amount, and the said entire amount of $6,000 would be paid plaintiff by said defendant on or before May 1, 1914."

It is then alleged that the delivery of the note and deed of trust was in consideration of defendant's said promises. That the entire sum was to be paid to plaintiff on May 1, 1914, is twice alleged later in said paragraph. To sustain the demurrer it is necessary to ignore these allegations and construe the recital in the deed of trust as giving the plaintiff a right simply to have $6,000 applied, through the defendant, on the construction of the residence mentioned as a part of the security. Such is not the fair import of the language of the complaint. A statement that the money was to be advanced for the purpose named does not necessarily mean that the defendant was to pay it out; and, in the face of the positive allegation that it was to be paid to plaintiff on a certain day, it cannot be said that the complaint fails to show a right to the funds.

[2] It thus appearing that the amended complaint as filed stated a cause of action, it follows that the court erred in striking out that part of the complaint which contained the allegations above mentioned. The effect of the court's order was to render the complaint defective, and so lead to a dismissal of the suit. The complaint sets out some transactions with the defendant which are closely connected with and somewhat explanatory of the giving of the note and deed of trust, and it is highly probable that some of these facts may have an important bearing on the rights of the parties to this litigation. The defendant should be required to answer, and the case be tried on its merits.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in harmony with the views above expressed.

WHITE, C. J., and HILL, J., concur.

NORKETT v. MARTIN. (No. 8840.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

Physicians and Surgeons 🔑18(8)—Care and Skill Required—Proof of Standard.

The jury must be guided by expert testimony in determining whether a physician exercised such care and skill as his employment required; and unless a standard is established by testimony of physicians they have no standard, and the case for malpractice must fail.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Physicians and Surgeons, Cent. Dig. § 43.]

Error to District Court, Denver County; Charles C. Butler, Judge.

Action by Margaret L. Norkett, an infant, by next friend, Alice Norkett, against H. H. Martin. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

Frank McLaughlin and B. B. Laska, both of Denver, for plaintiff in error. William J. Miles, of Denver, for defendant in error.

TELLER, J. The plaintiff in error, a minor suing by her next friend, was plaintiff below in an action against defendant in error, a physician, to recover damages for alleged negligence in diagnosing and treating an ailment from which she was suffering. A verdict was returned for the defendant, and a judgment of dismissal entered thereon.

The only error alleged is in an instruction which reads as follows:

> "In considering whether the defendant, in his diagnosis, care and treatment of the plaintiff's injury or disease exercised ordinary care, you cannot set up a standard of your own, but must be guided in that regard solely by the testimony of the physicians, and if you are unable to determine from the testimony of the physicians what constituted ordinary care and skill under the circumstances of this case, there would be a failure of proof upon the only standard for your guidance, and the evidence would be insufficient to warrant any verdict for the plaintiff."

Counsel concede that this instruction is a copy of one which was approved in McGraw v. Kerr, 23 Colo. App. 163, 128 Pac. 870, but insist that a difference in facts renders that case inapplicable. We cannot agree with that conclusion. The court there was considering, and discussed at some length, by what evidence a jury should be guided in determining whether or not a physician had exercised such care and skill as his employment required, and held that it was a question for experts. It also held that "if no standard was established by the testimony of physicians, then the jury had no standard." This case is clearly within the rule thus laid down. The principle on which the rule is based was announced by the court in Jackson v. Burnham, 20 Colo. at page 536, 39 Pac. 577, and is supported by abundant authority.

The instruction was correct, and the judgment is affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and HILL, J., concur.

WHEELER v. PEOPLE. (No. 8787.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. Criminal Law 🔑1166½(7) — Appeal — Selection of Jury.
   Error in sustaining a challenge by the people to a juror in a criminal case is not ground for reversal, where it does not appear that the jury, as finally chosen, was not competent and impartial, or that defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges before the jury was secured.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3116.]

2. Criminal Law 🔑1152(2)—Discretionary Ruling—Qualifications of Juror.
   The trial court's determination as to a juror's qualifications will not be disturbed on appeal in a criminal case in the absence of an abuse of discretion.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3056.]

3. Perjury 🔑32(1) — Evidence — Amended Record.
   In a prosecution for perjury, it was not error to admit in evidence a duly amended record showing that the case wherein the perjury was committed was one for assault with intent to kill, though such record originally showed, through error, that murder was the offense charged.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. § 108.]

4. Courts 🔑116(1)—Records—Amendment.
   The court has inherent power to correct its own record to make it speak the truth.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. § 369.]

5. Courts 🔑117 — Records — Collateral Attack.
   A court's record is not subject to collateral attack.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. § 374.]

6. Perjury 🔑15—Nature of Offense.
   Perjury may be committed in the trial of a case the record of which contains error necessitating a reversal.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. § 62.]

7. Perjury 🔑11(2)—Materiality of Testimony.
   Perjured testimony, to be material, need not be directly to the main issue, but it is sufficient that it have a tendency to prove any material fact in the chain of evidence.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. §§ 39, 45–48½, 49½, 53, 54.]

8. Perjury 🔑11(2) —Materiality of Testimony.
   In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, testimony as to whether the defendants were at the place where the alleged offense was committed at the time it was committed was material, and hence the giving of false testimony in respect thereto constituted perjury.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. §§ 39, 45–48½, 49½, 53, 54.]

9. Perjury 🔑29(4)—Pleading and Proof—Variance.
   In a prosecution for perjury, there was no fatal variance between an information, charging that defendant testified, "in substance and effect," that he did not know the defendants then on trial were among those who went with him in his wagon to the point near where an assault with intent to murder was committed, and the transcript of defendant's testimony, from which it appeared that he attempted to convey the impression that such defendants might or might not have been with him at that time, but that he was unable to state positively either way.
   [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. §§ 101–106.]

10. Perjury 🔑31 — Administration of Oath—Presumption.
    In a prosecution for perjury, it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the oath was properly administered to defendant in the case wherein he is alleged to have committed the perjury.
    [Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. § 107.]

11. Perjury 🔑10—Administration of Oath—Waiver of Objection.

Where defendant on trial for perjury did not object to the form of the administration of the oath, at the time he gave the false testimony, he cannot claim that its administration was not in conformity with law.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. §§ 36, 37.]

12. Criminal Law 🔑829(1)—Refusal of Instructions Covered.

In a prosecution for perjury, the refusal of an instruction defining the words "willfully" and "corruptly" was not error, where instructions given sufficiently defined these terms for the purposes of the case, and under such instructions the jury, in finding a verdict of guilty, must have found that the testimony was willfully and corruptly given.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2011.]

13. Perjury 🔑38—Findings.

A finding, in a prosecution for perjury, that defendant knowingly swore falsely necessarily implies a finding that he swore willfully and corruptly.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Perjury, Cent. Dig. § 139.]

14. Criminal Law 🔑823(6) — Refusal of Instruction Covered—Perjury.

In a prosecution for perjury, it was not error to refuse an instruction that defendant should be acquitted, if at the time of giving the alleged false testimony, through embarrassment, excitement, or fear, he was unable to recall the fact to which he was testifying, where the jury were instructed that false swearing under an honest belief that the statements are true is not perjury, that they were to determine from the evidence whether such honest belief existed, and that if defendant swore falsely without reasonable grounds to believe his statements true, he was guilty of perjury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1992–1994, 3158.]

15. Criminal Law 🔑1172(1)—Harmless Error—Submission of Issues.

In a perjury case, the submission to the jury of the question of the materiality of the alleged testimony did not require reversal, where such testimony was clearly material.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3128, 3154.]

Error to District Court, Boulder County; Neil F. Graham, Judge.

Zell Wheeler was convicted of perjury, and brings error. Affirmed.

Oscar A. Johnson and Guy D. Duncan, both of Boulder, for plaintiff in error. Fred Farrar, Atty. Gen., and Ralph E. C. Kerwin, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the People.

BAILEY, J. Plaintiff in error was tried and convicted in the District Court of Boulder County of the crime of perjury because of certain testimony he had theretofore given in the trial of a criminal case in that court. Judgment was entered on a verdict of guilty, and the case now is here for review on error. Only a few of the numerous assignments of error have been urged.

[1, 2] It appears that one of the talesmen disclosed upon voir dire that he had been summoned as a special venireman, but had not served as a juryman, during the year previous to the trial of the plaintiff in error. He was challenged by the people, the challenge was resisted, and sustained by the court. This is the first assignment argued. It is neither shown nor alleged that the jury, as finally chosen, was not competent and impartial, or that the defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges before the jury was finally secured. Defendant was entitled to a trial by a competent jury, but not by any particular persons, even though those whom he preferred may have been competent. 24 Cyc. 324. As the court is the trier of the juror's qualifications, its decisions should not be disturbed, except upon abuse of a discretion thus exercised. Union Gold Mining Company v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 2 Colo. 566; Collins v. Burns, 16 Colo. 7, 26 Pac. 145; Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 Pac. 817.

[3-6] The case in which the alleged perjured testimony was given was one for assault with intent to murder. In the introduction to the clerk's record of the case it was made to appear that the defendants therein had been arraigned upon the charge of murder. The record itself, however, shows that in the information the defendants were charged with the offense of assault with intent to murder. At the beginning of the trial an attempt was made to correct this error nunc pro tunc, which, however, seems to have been abandoned. Shortly afterward, the judge who presided at the trial of the case in which the improper entry occurred made and entered in open court an order correcting the record. The record so amended was introduced in evidence in the case at bar, over the objection and exception of plaintiff in error, on the ground that he had a right to rely upon the record as it stood previous to correction. This position is untenable. The court has inherent power to correct its own record so as to make it speak the truth. Breene v. Booth, 3 Colo. App. 470, 33 Pac. 1007; Pleyte v. Pleyte, 15 Colo. 44, 24 Pac. 579. Neither is the record subject to collateral attack. Moreover, the state of the record in a previous case does not concern the plaintiff in error, as perjury may be committed even in a trial the records of which contain error of a character to necessitate a reversal.

[7, 8] Error is assigned because the court refused to direct a verdict of not guilty on the ground that the alleged perjured testimony was immaterial. Perjured testimony to be material need not be directly to the main issue; if it has a tendency to prove any material fact in the chain of evidence, that makes it material. If it be substantially material it is sufficient. 30 Cyc. 1419. The term "material matter" refers not only to the main fact which is the subject of inquiry, but also to any fact or circumstance which tends to corroborate or strengthen the proof adduced to establish the main fact. Thompson v. People, 26 Colo. 496, 59 Pac. 51; In re Franklin County, 5 Ohio Dec. 691; People v. Greenwell, 5 Utah, 112, 13 Pac. 89. It was contended by the People that, on the morning of the assault, Wheeler was hired by the defendants and others to drive them from Erie to a point near Hecla Heights, in Boulder County, which he did, and that after they left his wagon they went to a straw stack and immediately began shooting at the Hecla mine property. To show that the defendants were at the place where the alleged offense was committed at the time it was committed was one of the material facts to be established. No other single fact in the chain of facts could well be more material.

[9] It is also urged that there is a fatal variance between the language used in the information in stating the alleged false testimony, and the proof in this behalf adduced at the trial. The information charges that the defendant testified "in substance and effect" that he did not know whether the defendants then on trial were among those who went with him in his wagon to a point near Hecla Heights on a certain morning in April, 1914. From the transcript of his evidence it is clear that he did substantially so testify. It is clearly manifest that he desired, and attempted, to convey the impression that the defendants might, or might not, have been with him at that time, but that he was unable to state positively either way. This proof corresponds in substance to the charge made in the information, and this is all that the law requires. 30 Cyc. 1442.

[10, 11] It is alleged that there was not sufficient evidence to show that the oath had been properly administered to the defendant, or that it had been given to him while he had his right hand raised. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that the oath was properly administered. Thompson v. People, supra. Besides, no objection was made at the time to the form of its administration; plaintiff in error took the oath, and testified under it, and cannot now claim that its administration was not in conformity with law. 30 Cyc. 1417.

[12, 13] The refusal to give a certain offered instruction, in which the words "wilfully," and "corruptly" were defined, was not error. Other instructions sufficiently defined these terms, so far as they are applicable to this case, and under these instructions the jury must have found the testimony to have been given wilfully and corruptly in order to have returned a verdict of guilty. Whether it was given wilfully and corruptly was a matter for the jury to determine, and if the jury found that the defendant knowingly swore falsely, the wilfulness and corruption is necessarily implied. 30 Cyc. 1457; Morgan v. State, 63 Miss. 162; Brown v. State, 57 Miss. 424.

[14] Error is urged upon the refusal to give another instruction, the substance of which was that if defendant, at the time he gave the alleged false testimony was, through embarrassment, excitement or fear, unable to recall the fact to which he was testifying, he should be acquitted. Instruction number 7, as given, in substance instructs the jury that false swearing under an honest belief that the statements are true, is not perjury; that they are to determine from the evidence whether such honest belief exists; that if he swore falsely without reasonable grounds to believe his statements true, he was guilty of perjury. This instruction covers the question, if there be a question, of Wheeler's mental condition at the time, and the refusal of the modified instruction is not prejudicial error. There was testimony to the effect that he disclosed no embarrassment at the trial; that previously, before the grand jury, he readily remembered that defendants were in the wagon with him at the time in question; that shortly before the trial he repeated this statement to the district attorney and others; and that when arrested, immediately after giving the alleged perjured testimony, he admitted that he had lied while on the stand, and requested an opportunity to go back and correct his statements.

[15] By instruction number 9 the question of the materiality of the alleged perjured testimony was submitted to the jury, and this is assigned as further error. In Thompson v. People, supra, the same question was raised, and the court passed upon it in the following language, which is applicable to the point here involved:

> "The next error relied on is the giving of instruction number eight which is substantially in the language of the information, because it leaves to the jury the question of the materiality of the alleged false testimony. That on a trial for perjury, the question of the materiality of the testimony is one of law for the court, is well settled, and in this particular the instruction as given was objectionable. As we have seen from an examination of the testimony, the evidence of plaintiff in error was material, and the district court would have been compelled so to charge, and must necessarily have so found in overruling the motion for a new trial; so that the submission of the question of the materiality of the evidence to the jury, they having found in their verdict that the false testimony was material, in no way prejudiced the rights of plaintiff in error. State v. Lewis, 10 Kan. 157; Montgomery v. State, 40 S. W. (Tex. Cr. R.) 305."

Other errors assigned have not been argued, and do not merit discussion. Plaintiff had a fair and impartial trial, and the judgment will be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and ALLEN, J., concur.

PEOPLE by PALMER, Dist. Atty., ex rel. FRANCIS et al., v. ESCHEMAN.

(No. 9065.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

Time 🔑4—"Year Preceding"—Irrigation Districts — Elections — Statute — Construction.

Rev. St. 1908, § 3445, provides that district election shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in each year. Laws 1915, p. 299, § 3, amending Rev. St. 1908, § 3443, provides that at all elections held for director of an irrigation district every citizen owning agricultural land within the district who has paid property taxes within said district during the "year preceding" shall be entitled to vote. Held, that the words, "preceding year," mean the preceding twelve months, and not the preceding calendar year.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Time, Cent. Dig. § 4.]

Error to District Court, Costilla County; A. Watson McHendrie, Judge.

Action by the People, by John I. Palmer, District Attorney of the Twelfth Judicial District, on the relation of Ira E. Francis and others, against Henry Escheman. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

John I. Palmer, Dist. Atty., of Saguache, F. B. Webster, of San Luis, and Melville & Melville, of Denver, for plaintiff in error. Elias H. Ellithorp, of San Luis, for defendant in error.

TELLER, J. This was an action under chapter 28 of the Code to remove defendant in error from the office of director of an irrigation district, and to seat in his place one who was the opposing candidate at the district election in December, 1915. It is stipulated that if the words, "year preceding," in section 3 of chapter 104 of the Session Laws of 1915 mean the 12 months immediately preceding the date of the election, or during the calendar year of 1915, the defendant in error should be declared elected; but if those words mean the calendar year of 1914, then the relator Grimwood should be declared elected to said office.

The law provides that district elections shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in each year. Section 3445, R. S. 1908. For the plaintiff in error it is urged that the word "year" used in a statute is ordinarily considered to refer to a calendar year beginning January 1st and ending December 31st. We think the words in the statute in question mean the preceding 12 months, and not the preceding calendar year. This construction appears better to effect the purpose of the act than would the other construction. There is no apparent reason why a property owner in the district who has paid taxes on property therein during the year 1915 should be denied the right to vote because, perchance, he purchased the property in 1914 after the taxes had been paid. The law should be liberally interpreted to give the owners of land in the district who possess the qualifications named in the act a voice in the affairs of the district, and so effect the evident purpose of the Legislature.

The act of 1915 removed some of the restrictions on voters which were imposed by the law of 1907, thus enlarging the class entitled to vote at district elections; and to hold that the same act, by the words quoted, restricts the right to vote to those who have paid taxes 11 months or more before the election is to narrow the right without any good reason therefor. The words "preceding year" have been given the construction here given to them in Bovce v. Boyle, 25 Colo. App. 165, 136 Pac. 467.

The judgment is affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and HILL, J., concur.

CHICAGO, B. & Q. R. CO. v. SCHOOL DIST. NO. 1 IN YUMA COUNTY et al.

(No. 8512.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. Statutes 🔑6 — Enactment — Revenue Bills.

Sess. Laws 1911, p. 585, amending Rev. St. 1908, § 5895, providing for the establishment and maintenance of schools and the raising of revenue therefor, is not a revenue law within the meaning of Const. art. 5, § 31, requiring revenue bills to originate in the House of Representatives.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 5.]

2. Statutes 🔑6 — Enactment — Revenue Bills.

Under Const. art. 5, § 31, requiring that revenue bills originate in the House of Representatives, the Senate having power to originate Gen. Laws 1877, §§ 2447–2544, being an act to establish and maintain school systems, although such act included provisions for the raising of necessary revenue, the Senate thereafter had the power to originate acts amendatory of the School Act, which provided for the levy and collection of school taxes.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 5.]

3. Statutes 🔑6 — Enactment — Revenue Bills—"Defraying Expenses of the Government"—"Service of the Government" —"Levying of Taxes."

The levy of school taxes is not taxation for "defraying expenses of the government" or for the "service of the government," and is not "the levying of taxes" in the strict sense of the words within the meaning of Const. art. 5, § 31, requiring that all revenue bills originate in the House of Representatives.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 5.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Levy of Taxes.]

4. Words and Phrases—"Government."

"Government" is the exercise of authority in the administration of the affairs of the state, community, or society; the authoritative direction and restraint exercised over the actions of men in communities, societies, or states (citing Words and Phrases, Government).

5. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW ⇨48 — CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTE.

Where a statute is assailed as unconstitutional and there are two possible interpretations, the court will adopt that construction by which the statute will be constitutional.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 46; Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 56.]

6. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW ⇨48 — CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTE—CONSTITUTIONALITY.

A statute must be held constitutional unless the contrary appears beyond all reasonable doubt.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 46; Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 56.]

Error to District Court, City and County of Denver; James H. Teller, Judge.

Action by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, a corporation, against School District No. 1, County of Yuma, and another. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff brings error. Affirmed.

E. E. Whitted and Thos. R. Woodrow, both of Denver, for plaintiff in error. Jo. A. Fowler, of Denver, for defendants in error.

ALLEN, J. This was an action brought by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company to recover a portion of the "Special School Tax" paid by the company under protest to the treasurer of Yuma county. The school board of the defendant, school district No. 1, certified to the board of county commissioners of Yuma county a 20-mill levy, the board made the same, and the assessor used the levy in extending taxes against the property of the plaintiff railroad company. The levy was certified and made under chapter 206 of the Session Laws of 1911, being an act entitled

> "An act to amend section five thousand eight hundred and ninety-five (5895) of the Revised Statutes of Colorado, 1908."

The complaint was drawn upon the theory that this act is one for raising revenue, within the meaning of section 31 of article 5 of the Constitution of the state of Colorado, and, the bill having originated in the Senate, the act is unconstitutional and void because enacted in violation of the above constitutional provision. A demurrer to the complaint was sustained, and, the plaintiff electing to abide by the complaint, judgment was entered for defendants. Plaintiff brings the case here upon error. The sole question presented by the assignments of error and briefs of counsel is the constitutionality of chapter 206 of the Session Laws of 1911.

Chapter 206 of the Session Laws of 1911, the act in question, was an act amending section 5895, Revised Statutes of 1908. That section was a part of the school laws of the state, which are embraced in chapter 124 of the Revised Statutes of 1908. These laws were enacted in obedience to section 2 of article 9 of the Constitution, which is as follows:

> "The General Assembly shall, as soon as practicable, provide for the establishment and maintenance of a thorough and uniform system of free public schools throughout the state, wherein all residents of the state, between the ages of six and twenty-one years, may be educated gratuitously. One or more public schools shall be maintained in each school district within the state, at least three months in each year; any school district failing to have such school shall not be entitled to receive any portion of the school fund for that year."

The first legislation pursuant to the above constitutional requirement was chapter 92 of the General Laws of 1877, entitled "Schools," the same consisting of an act entitled "An act to establish and maintain a system of free schools," approved March 20, 1877. G. L. 1877, pp. 807–841, §§ 2447–2544. The section of the act of 1877 corresponding in its subject-matter to section 5895, R. S. 1908, was section 66. This section, among others, was amended by the Laws of 1881, p. 211. The school laws were carried into the General Statutes of 1883 under chapter 97 thereof, and section 66 became section 67, G. S. 1883, § 3062. The act was again amended in 1887 by an act entitled "An act to amend chapter 97 of the General Statutes entitled 'Schools.'" Session Laws 1887, p. 379. The act of 1887, among other things, amended section 67, and that section, as amended, became section 5895, R. S. 1908.

As a first step in the consideration of the case at bar, it is proper to determine whether or not the act of 1877, above mentioned, was an act "for raising revenue" within the meaning of section 31 of article 5 of the state Constitution, which reads:

> "All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose amendments, as in case of other bills."

The main purpose of the act of 1877 was "the establishment and maintenance of a thorough and uniform system of free public schools throughout the state." The provisions which it contained for the levy and collection of taxes was incident to the main purpose, but such provisions were necessary in order that the main purpose might be carried out and a school system established and maintained. With respect to the taxation provisions being incident to the main purpose of the statute, the act of 1877 is analogous to many laws, both state and federal. In the case of Assurance Co. v. Clayton, 54 Colo. 256, 130 Pac. 330, the court, in speaking of chapter 193 of the Session Laws of 1907, which was an insurance act, used the following language:

> "A bill designed to accomplish some well-defined purpose other than raising revenue, is not a revenue measure. Merely because, as an incident to its main purpose, it may contain provisions, the enforcement of which produces a revenue, does not make it a revenue measure. Revenue bills are those which have for their object the levying of taxes in the strict sense of the words. If the principal object is another purpose, the incidental production of revenue growing out of the enforcement of the act will not make it a bill for raising revenue."

In the case of Geer v. Board of Commissioners, 97 Fed. 435, 38 C. C. A. 250, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals had under consideration, among other things, the constitutionality of the act of 1889 (Session Laws Colo. 1889, pp. 31, 32), authorizing counties to refund their judgment and bonded debts, which act provided for certain levies for carrying out the purposes of the act. To the contention that the act, having originated in the Senate, was void because it was a bill "for raising revenue," within the meaning of section 31, art. 5 of the state Constitution, the court replied:

> "But a bill for raising revenue, within the meaning of this provision of the Constitution, is one which provides for the levy and collection of taxes for the purpose of paying the officers and of defraying the expenses of the government. This act was not of that character. Its main purpose was to authorize certain quasi municipal corporations to refund their debts. The provisions for the levy and collection of taxes which it contained were mere incidents to the general refunding legislation which it carried. * * * These provisions raise no revenue for the government, but, on the other hand, the act expressly provided that the moneys derived from the levies made under it should not be appropriated to pay the officers of the state or of the county, or to defray the expenses of governing the people. * * *"

The language quoted from the above cases is in accord with numerous authorities. U. S. v. Mayo, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,755; U. S. v. James, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,464, 13 Blatch. 207; Northern Counties Trust v. Sears, 30 Or. 388, 41 Pac. 931, 35 L. R. A. 188; U. S. v. Norton, 91 U. S. 569, 23 L. Ed. 454; Twin City Bank v. Nebeker, 167 U. S. 196, 17 Sup. Ct. 766, 42 L. Ed. 134; Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289; Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 395; 1 Story on the Constitution (5th Ed.) 880; 36 Cyc. 946. The case of Fletcher v. Oliver, supra, contains the following expression:

> "There are many laws that provide for raising money by taxation that are not revenue laws. The law under which the city derives the power to tax the property within its limits, originated in the Senate. The law organizing schools, and permitting the levy of a tax for that specific purpose, originated in the Senate, and no one ever dreamed of calling them revenue laws."

[1, 2] Under the authorities cited (and there appear to be none to the contrary) there can be no question but that the act of 1877, providing for the establishment and maintenance of a system of free schools, was not an act "for raising revenue" within the meaning of section 31 of article 5 of the state Constitution. The Senate, therefore, had the power to originate the bill which became the act of 1877. If the Senate had the power to originate a general and complete statute, as was the act of 1877, there does not appear to be any good reason why the Senate cannot originate a series of acts when each is but a part of the complete and general law and all, taken together, are, and amount to the same, as one complete and general act.

It is true that in a general act, as in the act of 1877, the provisions for the levy and collection of taxes are incident to the main purpose of the statute, while in a special act such provisions may be all that is contained in the same. But it appears from most of the authorities cited that the general act under consideration in those cases was upheld, not only because the taxation features therein were incident to the main purpose of the act, but also because the taxation provided for was not that kind of taxation which was for paying officers or defraying the expenses of the government.

The act of 1911, in controversy, considered by itself, does not provide for any other taxation than that for the support and benefit of a school system. So far as pertinent to the subject under consideration, the act reads as follows:

> "5895. On or before the day designated by law for the commissioners of each county to levy the requisite taxes for the then ensuing year, the school board in each district shall certify to the board of county commissioners a statement showing the aggregate amount, which, in the judgment of said school board, it is necessary to raise from the taxable property of said district, to create a special fund for any of the purposes specified in section 51 of this chapter; said statement shall also show the items composing said aggregate and the purpose to which it is intended to devote each sum so itemized. It shall thereupon be the duty of the county commissioners to levy, at the same time that other taxes are levied, such rate, within the limits allowed by law, as will produce the aggregate amount so certified. The amount of such special tax, which shall be assessed to each taxpayer of such district, shall be placed in a separate column of the tax book, which shall be headed 'Special School Tax,' provided, in the case of districts of the third class no higher rate than twenty mills per dollar shall be levied. * * *"

Section 51, referred to, is section 5925, R. S. 1908, which enumerates the powers of school boards, who are required, among other things, to employ and pay teachers, to provide school furniture and equipment, and to provide books for indigent children, to repair school buildings, and, when necessary, to rent, build, or remove schoolhouses. To use the language of the court in the case of Assurance Co. v. Clayton, 54 Colo. 256, 130 Pac. 330, does the foregoing statute have for its object "the levying of taxes in the strict sense of the words"? Or, in the language of the opinion in Geer v. Board, supra, is the levy provided for "defraying the expenses of the government"? The case of Commonwealth v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 395, 399, contains the following in the opinion:

> "The principle underlying this provision of the Constitution is founded on the ground that the people are bound to pay the taxes to support the government in consideration of protection to their lives, liberty, and property; hence the power of taxation was placed in the hands of the popular branch of the Legislature as a means of security to the people, from whom its members are selected, against exactions by taxation for other than strictly governmental purposes. This view excludes from the comprehension of this constitutional clause such bills as appropriate money to or from the treasury, raised from the people in consideration of other benefits and services than protection in their lives, liberty, and property."

The act of 1911, in controversy, does not provide for any levy or taxation for paying any public officers, or for aiding in or securing protection of life, liberty, and property.

[3] The levy and collection of taxes for the maintenance of a school system is not taxation for "defraying the expenses of the government" as that expression is used in the opinion in Geer v. Board, supra, or "for the service of the government," as the same idea is expressed in U. S. v. Mayo, supra. The making of a tax levy for school purposes is not "levying of taxes in the strict sense of the words," as these words are used in the case of Assurance Co. v. Clayton, 54 Colo. 256, 120 Pac. 330, and other cases.

[4] The meaning of the term "government" is so commonly understood that to define the same does not appear to be necessary, yet the term, as used in the cases cited, may be defined as:

> "The exercise of authority in the administration of the affairs of a state, community, or society; the authoritative direction and restraint, exercised over the actions of men in communities, societies, or states." People v. Pierce, 18 Misc. Rep. 83, 41 N. Y. Supp. 858; 4 Words and Phrases, 3138.

[5] If it were conceded that reasons could be adduced for holding the act of 1911 a revenue measure within the meaning of section 31, art. 5, of the state Constitution, yet since it is possible, right, and proper to uphold the act under the authorities cited, the latter is clearly the duty of this court.

> "It is an elementary principle that where the validity of a statute is assailed and there are two possible interpretations, by one of which the statute would be unconstitutional and by the other it would be valid, the court should adopt the construction which would uphold it." 6 Ruling Case Law, 78, § 77.

[6] We are required to uphold legislation, unless its unconstitutionality appears beyond all reasonable doubt. Farmers' Independent Ditch Co. v. Agr. Ditch Co., 22 Colo. 513, 528, 45 Pac. 444, 55 Am. St. Rep. 149; Denver City v. Knowles, 17 Colo. 204, 211, 30 Pac. 1041, 17 L. R. A. 135. An act is to be overthrown only when it is clear and unquestioned that it violates the fundamental law. People v. Rucker, 5 Colo. 455, 458; People v. Goddard, 8 Colo. 432, 437, 7 Pac. 301; Munn v. People of the State of Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. Ed. 77. These cases are quoted from, with approval, in Consumers' League v. C. & S. Ry. Co., 53 Colo. 54, 58, 125 Pac. 577, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 1158. This court in People v. Commissioners, 12 Colo. 89, 93, 19 Pac. 892, 894, having for determination the constitutionality of the act of 1887, of which the act of 1911 in controversy is amendatory, used the following language:

> "The doctrine is elementary that no act of the General Assembly should be declared unconstitutional unless it is clearly and palpably so. * * * In a matter so important as the maintenance of public schools, the courts should incline to uphold, rather than to defeat, the action of the officers charged with the execution of the laws."

Upon the grounds hereinbefore stated, we hold that the act of 1911 in controversy, the same being chapter 206 of the Session Laws of 1911, is not an act "for raising revenue" within the meaning of section 31, art. 5, of the state Constitution, and is therefore constitutional and valid.

The complaint was based upon the statute of 1887, or section 5895, R. S. 1908, as it stood prior to the act of 1911 amending the same, and was framed upon the theory that the act of 1911 was unconstitutional and void as being a revenue measure which originated in the Senate. The statute of 1911 being constitutional and valid, the demurrer to the complaint was properly sustained. The judgment is affirmed.

Affirmed.

WHITE, C. J., and BAILEY, J., concur.

EMERSON-BRANTINGHAM IMPLEMENT CO. v. WOOD. (No. 8574.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. March 5, 1917. Rehearing Denied June 4, 1917.)

SALES ⚷38(7) — BUYER'S ACTION FOR RESCISSION—MISREPRESENTATIONS.

Where a tractor was purchased under a written agreement making no representations regarding the fuel it could use, and the buyer made a part payment and signed a receipt reiterating the original contract terms after the use of distillate as fuel had proved unsatisfactory, he cannot rescind because the seller's agent stated the tractor could use such fuel before the contract was signed.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Sales, Cent. Dig. §§ 74, 75.]

Error to District Court, Denver County; John H. Denison, Judge.

Action by Nicholas A. Wood against the Emerson-Brantingham Implement Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Reversed.

Frank L. Grant, of Denver, for plaintiff in error. W. G. Temple and E. M. Sabin, both of Denver, for defendant in error.

SCOTT, J. The plaintiff in error sold to the defendant in error under a written contract, a Big Four gas traction engine for the sum of $3,100, with freight to be added from Minneapolis, Minn., to Briggsdale, Colo. Five hundred dollars was to be paid in cash, and the remainder in three promissory notes —one for $200, due June 15, 1913; one for $1,200, due November 1, 1913; and one for $1,200, due November 1, 1914. This action is by the defendant in error for a recission of the contract. The agreement was dated March 29, 1913, and, in so far as it seems necessary to consider, recites:

> "That as soon as reasonably possible after notice from the purchaser [N. A. Wood] of the arrival of said engine at said station [Briggsdale, Colo.] to send an operator at its own expense to start said engine and instruct the purchaser in its proper operation, and direct and supervise the trial hereinafter provided for. The purchaser further agrees that he will purchase said engine for the price and settle for it upon the terms hereinafter set forth: If after three days' trial of the engine under the direction and supervision of said operator in such field work as the purchaser may elect (and he agrees immediately upon arrival of the engine to furnish the place and designate the kind of work for such trial, weather conditions being favorable), it shall be demonstrated that the engine will and does fulfill the following conditions: (a) That the engine will develop its rated horse power at the drawbar. (b) That the engine, if rated at 30 or more horse power, will furnish ample and steady power to drive any 40-inch cylinder threshing machine, complete with self-feeder, weigher, and blower. * * * If said engine, fixtures, and equipment are not so purchased, the purchaser agrees within two days after the expiration of such three days' trial to return same to said railway station, and said purchaser further agrees that his failure to so return said engine, fixtures, and equipment within two days after said three days' trial shall be proof conclusive that said engine and equipment fulfilled the warranty in every respect, and shall constitute an acceptance and purchase of said engine, fixtures, and equipment by the undersigned at the price and upon the terms and conditions hereinbefore stated.
>
> "Sixth. It is mutually agreed that said engine, fixtures, and equipment are purchased upon the following warranty only, viz.: (a) Should any parts (except electrical parts) prove defective within one year from the date of purchase of said engine, on account of inferior material or workmanship, and such parts be returned to the Big Four Tractor Works, Minneapolis, Minn., transportation prepaid thereon, and be found by the company to be defective on account of inferior material or workmanship, said company will furnish new parts in lieu of such defective parts on board cars, Big Four Tractor Works, Minneapolis, Minn. * * *
>
> "Seventh. It is expressly agreed that settlement for or the retention of said engine beyond the time specified in clause fifth thereof shall be a waiver of all other representations, warranties, terms, or contentions upon which said engine is ordered or purchased, except those in clause sixth hereof.
>
> "Eighth. It is further agreed that this order and agreement is given and accepted, and the sale and purchase of said engine, fixtures, and equipment are made, upon the express condition that this order and agreement contains all the terms and conditions of the sale and purchase of said engine, fixtures, and equipment, and cannot in any manner be changed, altered, or modified without the written consent of the officers of said company, and that the sending of any person by the company to repair or operate said engine or the remaining of the person sent to start said engine, after the expiration of said three days' trial, shall in no manner waive, modify, or annul any of the terms or conditions hereof."

At the foot of the agreement appears the following, signed by the plaintiff:

> "I acknowledge that I fully understand all the terms and conditions of the above agreement, and that I have this day received a copy of the same."

The specific allegations of fraud upon which the purchaser relies are:

> "(3) That the defendant, with intent to deceive and defraud the plaintiff, and to induce him to purchase such engine, falsely and fraudulently represented to the plaintiff, at and prior to the time of said sale, that the said engine would develop full thirty (30) horse power, and would burn kerosene, distillate, and other low-grade fuel of that character successfully and with much greater economy than any of the so-called 'kerosene engines,' and that the plaintiff relied upon said representations and was thereby induced to purchase and pay for said engine as aforesaid.
>
> "(4) That in truth, and as the defendant then well knew, the said representations made by the defendant to the plaintiff regarding said engine as aforesaid were false and untrue, and that the said engine did not and could not be made to develop a capacity of thirty (30) horse power, and will not successfully burn kerosene, distillate, or other low-grade fuel of that character, and cannot be successfully operated with such fuel, and can only be operated with gasoline or naphtha, the cost of which fuel prohibits the use of said engine, makes the same impracticable for farming purposes, and renders the said engine absolutely worthless to this plaintiff."

Verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff below in the following words:

> "We, the jury, find the issues herein joined for the plaintiff, and assess his damages at the sum of $980.23."

The record does not recite the formal decree, if such was entered, but we are advised only that it was:

> "Ordered that judgment be entered in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant in accordance with the verdict herein."

We are not advised by the record as to whether the court ordered the contract to be rescinded, the notes to be canceled, or that any equitable relief was otherwise granted. Just how the court could have rendered the money judgment for damages, without a finding as to fraud, and the prerequisite order for rescission of the contract, is not suggested by counsel for either party, but in order to avoid further litigation we will determine the matter on the issues raised by the pleadings.

It will be observed that the only allegation upon which the plaintiff relied was that the defendant represented, at a time preceding the signing of the contract, that the engine would burn kerosene, distillate, and other low-grade fuel of that character successfully, and with greater economy than any of the so-called kerosene engines, and that in fact it cannot be successfully operated with such oils, and can only be operated with gasoline or naphtha, the cost of which is impracticable and prohibitive for farming purposes. There is no other complaint, either in the pleadings or testimony. Nothing is said in the agreement as to the character of fuel the engine will burn. The agreement describes the machine as a gas traction engine, not an engine to be operated by the use of oil.

The plaintiff testifies that the representation made to him was by the agent of the company prior to the agreement. The record discloses that the plaintiff is a physician and a man of business. There is no contention but that he did not read and sign the agreement knowingly and without the slightest misunderstanding as to its contents, including his own statement therein that he fully understood its terms and conditions. Yet his only contention is for a condition which he well knew was not contained in the agreement when he signed it. He does not pretend to attack, either by pleading or proof, the good faith of the company in any other respect. The machine was delivered at his premises, on its own power, from the railroad station, some eight miles distant. It was subjected to the test provided in the agreement. The plaintiff employed for such purpose his brother, who was an experienced engineer and machine man, and who made the test in conjunction with the company's expert. It was after this test that he made the cash payment and signed the notes, and at which time he executed the following receipt:

> "Receipt for Machinery Delivered. Dated at Denver, Colo., 4—23—1913. Received of Emerson-Brantingham Implement Company (an incorporated company), of Rockford, Illinois, the following described machinery: One Big Four '30' tractor, No. 1347, under and pursuant to the conditions of a written order signed by N. A. Wood, dated on the 29th day of March, 1913, which order contains a written warranty from said company on said machinery; a copy thereof of being received by us. It is expressly understood and agreed that the above-described machinery is received by the undersigned under and pursuant to the terms and conditions of the said written warranty and not otherwise (any changes in the machinery ordered or terms of payment notwithstanding), and that said written order and warranty contains all the agseements between us on account of said purchase; that the notes given by the undersigned to the company for said goods and the mortgage securing said notes were examined and read before they were executed, and the same are delivered in fulfillment of said written agreement.
>
> "[Signed] N. A. Wood."

The test began on or about April 15th. The plaintiff had shipped distillate to the farm, and it was tried and did not work successfully. Indeed, distillate was used for a part of the distance from the station to the farm, and did not prove satisfactory, all this with the knowledge of plaintiff, and before he made his payments and signed the receipt, in which it was reiterated that the written agreement and warranty contains all the agreements between the parties. It is plain that the plaintiff had full opportunity to learn from his own observation and examination as to the truth or falsity of the alleged misrepresentations, before he paid for and gave his receipt for the machine. The law in such case is well settled and no longer admits of argument:

> "If, after a representation of fact, however positive, the party to whom it was made institutes an inquiry for himself, has recourse to the proper means of obtaining information, and actually learns the real facts, he cannot claim to have relied upon the misrepresentation and to have been misled by it. Such claim would simply be untrue. The same result must plainly follow when, after the representation, the party receiving it has given to him a sufficient opportunity of examining into the real facts, when his attention is directed to the sources of information, and he commences, or purports or professes to commence, an investigation. The plainest motives of expediency and of justice require that he should be charged with all the knowledge which he might have obtained, had he pursued the inquiry to the end with diligence and completeness. He cannot claim that he did not learn the truth, and that he was misled." Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, § 893.

Courts may not destroy the stability and certainty of written contracts upon such a frivolous showing as is here presented. It was said by this court in St. Vrain Co. v. Denver U. P. Ry. Co., 18 Colo. 211, 32 Pac. 827:

> "By the oral evidence proposed it is attempted to show that the cañon location was certainly and definitely agreed upon, to the exclusion of the route outside of the cañon. This is in direct contradiction of the terms of the written agreement. If such proof is admissible under the claim of fraud, then any oral agreement would be admissible to vary and contradict the terms of a written contract. This cannot be permitted. The rule contended for would, if adopted, introduce an element of uncertainty into written contracts that could only be productive of strife between the parties. After a written contract has been executed, oral negotiations leading up to such a contract cannot be shown, for the purpose of changing or contradicting its terms."

There are other errors presented, which would seem to justify a reversal of the judgment, but are not considered, in view of what has been said.

Judgment reversed.

WHITE, C. J., and GARRIGUES, J., concur.

STELSON v. HAIGLER. (No. 8778.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. Brokers 🔑64(1) — Realty Broker—Right to Commission.

Though a purchaser of realty secured by a broker was ready and willing to make the first payment called for by the contract of sale at the time it became due, his readiness and willingness was not sufficient, he not having made the payment nor offered to do so, to entitle the broker to commission, which was to be paid from such first payment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. §§ 67, 97.]

2. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑144(2)—Justification for Refusing Payment—Defects in Title.

Where a contract for the sale of realty provided that, should there be any defects in the title of the lands and water rights, the buyer gave the seller reasonable time to have such defects set aright, and the irregularities complained of were not suggested to the seller until after the first payment under the contract was to be made, and such defects were cured with all reasonable diligence in about three months, the buyer was not justified in refusing or neglecting to make tender of payment, or payment, as provided in the contract of sale, because of defective title.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. §§ 272–274.]

3. Vendor and Purchaser 🔑3(4)—"Option"—"Contract of Sale."

Where the owner of land executed a memorandum agreement providing that he sold and agreed to convey by warranty deed, etc., the full purchase price for the land being $131,000, to be paid as follows: $1,000 to be placed in escrow with a bank to be turned over to the seller on the finding of marketable titles by the buyer, and $30,000 on or before December 1, 1912, and $100,000 March 1, 1918—the buyer nowhere in the agreement agreeing to purchase or to make any payment or to bind himself in any other respect, aside from forfeiture of the amount paid at the time the contract was made, the agreement was an "option" to purchase, and not a "contract of sale," since, unless a contract contains language which may be reasonably construed as an agreement on the part of the buyer to purchase the property, or to assume some obligation thereunder, it is an option contract, and not an agreement of sale and purchase, which creates mutual obligations, while an option gives a right to purchase without imposing any obligations.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, Cent. Dig. § 3.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Contract of Sale; Option.]

4. Brokers 🔑49(2)—Realty Broker—Negotiation of Option Contract—Right to Commission.

An agent employed to sell or find a purchaser has not performed his contract by negotiating a mere option contract, and therefore is not entitled to recover the agreed, or indeed any, compensation for such services.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Brokers, Cent. Dig. § 71.]

Error to District Court, El Paso County; John E. Little, Judge.

Action by Arthur W. Haigler, doing business under the firm name and style of the Haigler Realty Company, against D. C. Stelson. To review a judgment for plaintiff, defendant brings error. Reversed.

R. L. Chambers and Robert Kerr, both of Colorado Springs, for plaintiff in error. Harris & Price, of Colorado Springs, for defendant in error.

SCOTT, J. The action is by the Haigler Realty Company to recover from Stelson the sum of $5,000 alleged to be due as a real estate broker's commission for the sale of Stelson's ranch. The commission is claimed both under a written contract and as the value of the services rendered. The record discloses that Stelson gave the Haigler Realty Company a written agreement which both agree was intended as a contract of employment to sell the ranch of Stelson. Later the Haigler Realty Company presented R. F. Kloke, a real estate broker of Omaha, Neb., who received from Stelson the following memoranda of agreement, omitting so much thereof as is immaterial in this proceeding:

"The party of the first part sells and agrees to convey to the party of the second part by warranty deed and abstract brought down to date of transfer, the same to show marketable title, the following described lands and water rights: [Here follows description.]

"The full purchase price for the above-described lands and water rights being $131,000, to be paid as follows: One thousand dollars to be placed in escrow with the Exchange National Bank of Colorado Springs, to be turned over to the party of the first part upon the finding of marketable titles by party of the second part; $30,000 on or before December 1, 1912; $100,000 March 1, 1918, the same to be evidenced by promissory note bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, payable semiannually, to be secured by first mortgage covering the aforesaid lands and water rights. * * *

"Tenth. That he will execute warranty deed showing marketable titles free and clear of all liens and incumbrances as above set forth covering the above-described land, conveying the said lands and water rights to the party of the second part, his heirs or assigns, or to any one whom said party of the second part may direct upon the payment of the said $30,000 and the execution of note and mortgage as above set forth, the same to be paid and executed on or before December 1, 1912.

"It is further agreed between the parties hereto that should there be any defects in the title covering above-described lands and water rights that the party of the second part gives the party of the first part reasonable time through the courts to have such defects set aright.

"It is mutually agreed that the time of payment shall be an essential part of this contract, and in case of failure of the said party of the second part to make either of the payments above mentioned this contract shall be forfeited and determined, at the election of the said party of the first part, and the said party of the second part shall forfeit all payments made on this contract, as liquidation of all damages to party of the first part. * * *

"Colo. Springs, Colo., Sept. 2, 1912.

"Received of R. F. Kloke, Omaha, Neb.—$1,000 to apply as part payment on the land mentioned in contract between myself and R. F. Kloke, copy of which is attached hereto.

"Should the said R. F. Kloke not find the abstracts covering the lands and water rights marketable as mentioned in the said contract, I do hereby agree to return to said R. F. Kloke the $1,000 paid to me on this date; the said $1,000 being paid to me in lieu of the $1,000 which is to be placed in escrow in the Exchange National Bank, Colorado Springs, Colo., as recited in said contract.

"[Signed] D. C. Stelson."

Haigler testifies that the receipt above set forth was a modification of the preceding agreement. Verdict and judgment were rendered against the plaintiff in error in the full sum of $5,000.

It is contended by the defendant that the agreement between Stelson and Kloke was a mere option, and not an agreement of sale and purchase; that the option did not ripen into a sale, and therefore the plaintiff did not produce a purchaser ready, able, and willing to purchase the lands, and for such reason is not entitled to a commission. The contention of the plaintiff is that this agreement was an absolute contract of purchase and sale.

[1] There were no further payments made by Kloke, nor was there any tender of payment. It is true that Kloke testified that he was ready and willing to make the first payment at the time it became due, but if this be true, it was not sufficient, in view of the fact that he did not make the payment nor offer to do so. He further says that he came to Colorado Springs and saw Haigler and told him that he was ready to pay, but he did not see Stelson, nor seek to see him, and immediately returned to Omaha.

We said in Bailey v. Lay, 18 Colo. 405, 33 Pac. 407:

> "The averment that Cummins and Olcott and the Iron Mask Company were ready and willing to accept the premises and make payment is not equivalent to an averment of payment or of an offer to pay. In a case of this kind, when the time for payment has actually arrived, mere readiness and willingness to pay are immaterial; such readiness and willingness, without more, will not discharge contract obligations. An averment of readiness and willingness to pay presents nothing tangible or substantial; it involves little more than the state of mind of the party presenting the plea; and the determination of an issue taken thereon would not decide the rights of the parties. On the other hand, an averment of payment or of an offer to pay is an averment of an overt act, an important and substantial fact; and the determination of an issue taken thereon would, subject to other issues in the case, be decisive of the controversy."

Kloke was a real estate broker, and it is plain from the record that he did not intend to make a purchase of the premises, but rather to secure an option that he might have opportunity to sell the lands. It is also made clear that Kloke did not come to Colorado Springs on December 2, 1912, for the purpose of making the payment, or any tender of the same. This appears from a night letter telegram from Haigler to Kloke sent on the evening of November 29th, with but one intervening day before time for payment. This telegram was as follows:

> "To R. F. Kloke, Omaha National Bank Bldg., Omaha, Neb.
>
> "Letter received. Stelson demands $1,000.00 for extension of contract for 20 days to apply on purchase price, but according to terms of contract we think if you get abstracts here with your requirements on title by Dec. 2d that it would continue in force until he furnished marketable title therefor. Do not fail to get abstracts here with your requirements by Dec. 2d. Answer."

Kloke appears to have come to Colorado Springs in response to this telegram, bringing the abstracts with him and returned to Omaha without even advising Stelson of his presence. It is palpable that the purpose was to secure time, and not to make either payment or tender. The plaintiff's agreement specifically recites:

> "The title is to be marketable and good and sufficient warranty deed to be executed and delivered by the said D. C. Stelson to the Haigler Realty Company, their heirs or assigns, on or before the 1st day of December, 1912, together with abstract showing marketable title, provided the $1,000 is tendered or paid on or before the 3d day of September, 1912, and $30,000 is tendered or paid on or before the 1st day of December, 1912. If the said payment as above mentioned is not paid or tendered on or before the dates mentioned above, then this contract is to be void and of no effect, and both parties are released from all obligations therein, and in that event the said $1 paid on this date is to be held by D. C. Stelson as liquidated damages."

And:

> "If sale is made as above stated, I agree to pay Geo. W. Morse $1,000 and the Haigler Realty Company $5,000 out of the $30,000 payment above mentioned."

It will be seen from this that the $30,000 payment must be either tendered or paid on or before the 1st day of December, 1912, and that such tender or payment was a condition precedent to the execution of the deed and its delivery with the abstracts, and that, if not so tendered or paid, the agreement was to be void, and both parties to stand released therefrom; again, that the compensation to the Haigler Realty Company in any event was to be made from the first or $30,000 payment.

It is agreed that this sum was not paid nor tendered, nor any part thereof, as stipulated, nor at all. It is clear, therefore, that unless such first payment or tender was excused, or made unnecessary by the acts and conduct of Stelson, the plaintiff cannot recover; for this was the result which the Haigler Company agreed to produce in consideration of the commission. But, independent of this express provision, it was the duty of Kloke to make the first payment provided in his agreement. It was held in the case of Bailey v. Lay, supra, that:

> "The gravamen of the complaint is that defendants Lay, Mallory, and Brown refused to make and deliver a deed of conveyance of their certain mining property to the Iron Mask Mining & Smelting Company, as by said agreement in writing they had contracted to do. According to the terms of the written agreement, the defendants were to deliver the deed to the mining property at the time of the first payment of $250,000. * * *
>
> "The agreement in regard to the first payment and the agreement to deliver the deed were to be performed at the same time; they were mutual and dependent agreements; and performance or an offer to perform in respect to first payment was necessary to make it incumbent upon the defendants to deliver the deed. Englander v. Rogers, 41 Cal. 420; Bakeman v. Pooler, 15 Wend. [N. Y.] 637; 2 Parsons on Contracts, 528; Chitty on Contracts (11th Ed.) 1082."

The record does not disclose that Stelson at any time refused to comply with this written agreement, but, on the contrary, and for a long time after December 2, 1912, when the first payment became due, and even up to the commencement of this action, he still offered to make the sale upon the terms stated in the agreement.

Stelson, after December 1, 1912, wrote letters both to the Haigler Realty Company and to Kloke urging that the matter be closed up as it was important to prepare for the approaching season's work on the ranch. As late as March, 1913, more than four months after the first payment became due, Kloke wrote Stelson asking for an extension of time, and declared that "the chances are that nothing can be done for some little time in the way of closing it up."

[2] The plaintiff below undertakes to excuse the payment of the $30,000 and the completion of the contract by Kloke, upon the ground that the title to the premises was defective, and was not a marketable title. Very soon after, or perhaps at the time of, the signing of the Kloke agreement, Stelson turned over the abstracts of title to Haigler, who in turn delivered them to Kloke for examination. These were not returned to Stelson until after December 1, 1912, and after the first payment was due, whereupon Stelson delivered them to H. W. Wing, an attorney of Colorado Springs, with experience in titles and abstracts, together with certain objections of Kloke's attorney, for the purpose of having irregularities in the title corrected so as to meet these objections. The plaintiff below offered the testimony of Wing to support its contention as to defective or nonmarketable title.

Wing testified that he proceeded at once to, and did, have the defects remedied. He says that the objections were by Ramsey, the Omaha attorney of Kloke, and were about 150 in number; that in great part they dated back from 40 to 50 years, and were technical in character, many being matters of identification where names appeared by initials and with the full Christian name; that there were some apparent defects in case of tax titles, some of which he proceeded to have cleared through court action; that there were no legal or valid defects in the titles or any of them; that Stelson and his grantors had been in open and actual ownership and possession of the premises for about 26 years to his personal knowledge; that he caused all the objections to be satisfied; and that in his opinion the title to the premises and to all water rights connected therewith was a marketable title at the time the abstracts were placed in his hands.

It appears from this testimony that about 3 months were required to clear up all of the irregularities complained of. It does not appear that Kloke made any objection to the abstracts thereafter, though he asked for an extension of time to make the payment.

No other testimony was offered concerning the question of title, and there is no testimony in the case which tends to show any valid defect therein to any of the lands or water rights involved. The irregularities complained of were not suggested to Stelson until after the date when the first payment was to be made, and these appear to have been cured with all reasonable diligence.

It was expressly agreed in the contract given to Kloke that:

> "It is further agreed between the parties hereto that should there be any defects in the titles covering above-described lands and water rights that the party of the second part gives the party of the first part reasonable time through the courts to have such defects set aright."

Under the facts thus disclosed and in view of this express agreement, there was no sufficient justification for Kloke to refuse or neglect to make the tender or payment as provided in the agreement, because of defective title. Indeed, he made no such objection until after the expiration of the time for payment.

[3] Neither Kloke nor Stelson claim any rights under the agreement as between themselves. But under all settled rules of construction the agreement between Stelson and Kloke was an option to purchase, and not a contract of sale. Nowhere in the agreement does Kloke agree to purchase, nor to make any payment, or to bind himself in any other respect, aside from the forfeiture of the amount paid at the time the contract was made. Both Stelson and Kloke treated and construed the agreement as an option at the time, and at all times since. In letters of both each refers to and speaks of the agreement as an option, and Kloke in his deposition testified as follows:

> "Q. But was it a sale, or was it an option, from your point of view? A. I consider it a contract to purchase and with a forfeiture clause, without any liability in case I did not come across or he did not come across."

Again he says:

> "Of course I will admit, as purchaser, that I took this precaution, that in case any unforeseen accident should happen I was not bound, but he was. I did not have to comply with my part of the contract if I did not want to, and he did."

And he further testified:

> "My understanding, so far as I was concerned, was that in case I did not want to take the property, did not want to fulfill my contract, naturally I would have to lose what I put up."

So that upon the face of the agreement it was unilateral in character, and fully intended by the parties as an option only.

It may be laid down as an established rule of law that, unless the contract contains language which may reasonably be construed as an agreement on the part of the vendee to purchase the property, or to assume some obligation thereunder, it will be an option contract and not an agreement of sale and purchase. It is impossible to conceive of an agreement of sale and purchase without obligation on the part of the vendee to purchase. On the other hand, the absence of such obligation is the distinctive characteristic of an option contract. A contract of sale creates mutual obligations on the part of the seller to sell, and on the part of the purchaser to buy, while an option gives the right to purchase, within a limited time, without imposing any obligations to purchase. James on Option Contracts, § 105, and authorities cited; Hessell v. Neal, 25 Colo. App. 300, 137 Pac. 72.

[4] An agent employed to sell or find a purchaser has not performed the contract by negotiating a mere option contract and therefore is not entitled to recover the agreed or any compensation for such services. Fox v. Denargo Land Co., 37 Colo. 203, 86 Pac. 344; Brown v. Keegan, 32 Colo. 463, 76 Pac. 1056. See, also, James on Option Contracts, § 205, and authorities cited. We must hold, therefore, that under the facts and circumstances of this case the Haigler Realty Company is not entitled to recover.

The questions here considered were properly raised by demurrer, by instructions tendered and refused, and by instructions given and objected to. There are other assignments of error which we do not deem important to consider.

The judgment is reversed.

WHITE, C. J., and GARRIGUES, J., concur.

JOTTER v. MARVIN. (No. 9007.)

(Supreme Court of Colorado. May 7, 1917.)

1. JUDGMENT 🔑149—MOTION TO VACATE—QUIETING TITLE.

The defendant in a suit to quiet title and for relief related thereto may, by motion to vacate, attack a judgment on the ground that he was not served with summons, though plaintiff, after securing a judgment, has conveyed the land in controversy to another, who in turn has conveyed it to an innocent purchaser; such motion being in effect a direct attack on a judgment which takes the place of a suit in equity and stands upon the same plane.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Judgment, Cent. Dig. § 260.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑1111—SCOPE OF DECISION — JUDGMENT QUIETING TITLE — MOTION TO VACATE—INNOCENT PURCHASER.

In such case the question whether, if ultimately successful in sustaining his title, the defendant can secure the land from the alleged innocent purchaser in view of the fact that it was transferred to him when no stay of judgment was pending and before a writ of error was sued out, will not be determined where such purchaser was not a party to the action.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 4411–4420.]

En Banc. Error to District Court, Yuma County; H. P. Burke, Judge.

Action by Charles B. Marvin against George W. Jotter. A motion to vacate judgment for plaintiff was denied, and defendant brought error, and plaintiff files plea in abatement, to which defendant demurs. Demurrer to plea in abatement sustained.

M. M. Bulkeley, of Wray, and Allen & Webster and Louis H. Drath, all of Denver, for plaintiff in error. John F. Mail, of Denver, for defendant in error.

HILL, J. This hearing is upon a demurrer to a plea in abatement in this court. The action was instituted in the district court by the defendant in error against the plaintiff in error wherein judgment was entered decreeing that the defendant in error was the owner of a certain 160 acres of land in Yuma county; that the plaintiff in error had no right, title, or interest therein. The decree also cancels a tax deed as well as certain judgments and decrees and quiets the title to said land in the defendant in error. Thereafter the plaintiff in error, defendant below, appeared in said cause and moved that said judgment be vacated and set aside. This motion was upon the ground that the defendant had never been served with summons, and for that reason that the judgment was absolutely void, etc. Thereafter, and on April 27, 1916, the court denied said motion. The defendant reserved the necessary exceptions asked, and was given 60 days within which to prepare a record on error, which was thereafter duly approved and has been lodged in this court, etc., all within proper time. The plea in abatement filed here alleges that after the trial court's refusal to sustain this motion to vacate and set aside said judgment, and on, to wit, the 15th of May, 1916, the defendant in error's grantee sold and conveyed said land by deed to one Hartjoy, which deed was on June 19th following recorded, etc.; that said Hartjoy paid to the grantee of the defendant in error, to wit, the Charles B. Marvin Investment Company, for said land, full value in the sum of $2,000; that Hartjoy bought said land without knowledge of this proceeding on error or any contemplated proceeding looking to the reversal or modification of the judgment hereinabove mentioned. It is further alleged that upon the denying of the motion to vacate said judgment made by plaintiff in error in the district court no stay of execution was sought nor anything done relative to staying the operation of said judgment, and not until the 23d of June, 1916, was any record on error presented to the trial judge, nor was the same filed with the clerk of the district court until July 12th following, and after said land had been conveyed to Hartjoy; that the cause was not filed in this court until July 18th following, and that no supersedeas was sought or issued; that the plaintiff in said action (the defendant in error here) hath not now, nor has he had since May 15, 1916, any title or interest in said land. For the foregoing reasons it is urged that the plea in abatement should be sustained and the action dismissed.

It may properly be conceded that if, after the rendition of a judgment and before its review, any event happens which would make a different result useless, the action will be dismissed. Such is not the case here.

The plaintiff in error contends that there was no service upon him in the original action, for which reason the judgment is void. If such be the case, he, no doubt, could have brought a separate suit for the purpose of having it set aside. Likewise he could litigate with the grantee of the grantee of defendant in error concerning their respective titles to the land. In such case, if this judgment was sought to be used against him, if the record in that case fails to show service, he could be successful in a collateral attack upon it for want of service, etc. He did not do this, but saw fit before the land was transferred to Hartjoy to go into that case with a motion to vacate the judgment. To all intents and purposes this constituted a direct attack upon it, which takes the place of a suit in equity and stands exactly on the same plane. By thus doing he gave jurisdiction to that court of his person, and when his motion was denied, it has precisely the same force and effect as if he had brought an independent suit in equity for that purpose, as was said in Kavanagh v. Hamilton, 53 Colo. 157, at page 163, 125 Pac. 512, at page 515, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 76:

> "Direct attack on the judgment of a court of record may be by motion, as in Du Bois v. Clark, 12 Colo. App. 220, 55 Pac. 750, or by answer and cross-complaint, as in Wilson v. Hawthorne, 14 Colo. 530, 24 Pac. 548, 20 Am. St. Rep. 290, or by an equitable action to cancel or enjoin its enforcement, as in Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 Pac. 824, or by writ of error, or possibly by a bill of review."

Du Bois v. Clark, 12 Colo. App. 221, 55 Pac. 750, recognizes the right to make a direct attack by a motion to vacate for want of jurisdiction, and that in such cases the same is not by virtue of the Code provision allowing six months for the same. In making the distinction the court (12 Colo. App. at page 229, 55 Pac. at page 753) says:

> "But, because equity will not decline jurisdiction, it does not follow that the same purpose may not be accomplished by motion. Our Code provision restricting a party to six months within which to make application to be relieved from a judgment taken against him through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect has no relevancy here. The privilege is granted to parties, but a person who was never served with process, and who never appeared, is not a party within the meaning of that provision. It is from his failure to do something which he might have done that a court, by virtue of that provision, grants a party relief, when he is able to give a good reason for his failure. But where a person has no knowledge that anything is required of him, his quiescence is not a failure to do something which he might have done, and the terms, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, and neglect are not properly applicable to it. It was not the intention of the law to require a man, at his peril, to move within a specified time, who is utterly ignorant of the necessity of motion, or of the existence of anything which calls for motion. But the authority of a court to set aside its judgment, when the action is demanded by justice, is not dependent upon statute. The power is inherent, and may, in a proper case, and upon a proper showing, be exercised at any time. See Ladd v. Stevenson, 112 N. Y. 325, 19 N. E. 842, 8 Am. St. Rep. 748. And there is no reason in sight why the questions of fact involved in a proceeding to set aside a judgment may not be tried and determined as well and as satisfactorily upon motion as upon bill."

[1] The plaintiff in error, having gone into the original suit with his motion to vacate, gave the court jurisdiction of his person the same as if he had been plaintiff by a bill in equity. Even though the court had no jurisdiction in the original proceeding, it then acquired jurisdiction to determine the question of its jurisdiction in the original action, and if it has erroneously held that it had jurisdiction and that the judgment is valid, unless that ruling is reviewed and set aside, it constitutes a complete bar against the plaintiff in error, not only in the present case in favor of the defendant in error, Marvin, but those in privity with him, which position is occupied by Mr. Hartjoy. It follows that, if no review can be had of this motion to vacate the judgment, because the defendant in error has conveyed the land to another, who has in turn conveyed it to Hartjoy, the plaintiff in error can have no relief or recourse against any one upon account of its existence, even though right in his contention that he had never been served. We cannot agree with this line of reasoning. Defendant in error was the alleged owner of the land when he brought his suit against the plaintiff in error in which he sought to try the title of the plaintiff in error, and to have judgment decreeing that he had no interest therein. He alleges that he never has had and seeks to have his day in court concerning it. If he has not had it, then a judgment that he has ought not to be allowed to stand against him simply because the defendant in error, after securing the judgment, has conveyed the land to another who, in turn, has conveyed it to an innocent purchaser.

[2] Whether, if ultimately successful in sustaining his title, the plaintiff in error can secure the land from Mr. Hartjoy because transferred to him as an innocent purchaser when no stay of the judgment was pending and before a writ of error was sued out, will not now be determined. Mr. Hartjoy is not a party to this action. In certain cases this court has held that an innocent purchaser, etc., during this period, relying upon the judgment, gets a good title. Cheever v. Minton, 12 Colo. 557, 21 Pac. 710, 13 Am. St. Rep. 258; Stout v. Gully, 13 Colo. 604, 22 Pac. 954; Pipe v. Jordan, 22 Colo. 392, 45 Pac. 371, 55 Am. St. Rep. 138.

If the rule announced in these decisions is applicable, it does not follow that the plaintiff in error is not entitled to his review of this judgment. In case he is successful in securing its reversal and is right in his contention that he was the owner of the land, we cannot agree that he is without remedy for the wrong against him, which was the occasion of his loss.

Volume 2, Freeman on Judgments (4th Ed.) § 484, recognizes the rights of innocent purchasers to be protected in certain cases when relying upon decrees which are subject to reversal by writs of error not then pending, but it does not concede to the plaintiff in such cases this protection, but, to the contrary upon reversal where the plaintiff is a purchaser, at page 843 it states:

> "The title of plaintiff is held to be liable to be divested by a reversal, because his purchase is paid for by a judgment which he ought not to have had, and because it is neither just to the defendant nor conducive to a good public policy that the advantages secured by an erroneous adjudication should be longer retained."

While this declaration applies to the plaintiff's purchase of real estate, we think the principle is applicable to a case of this kind, and that, if the judgment is wrong and the plaintiff in error is right and was the owner of the land, even though he has lost it, it would neither be just to the plaintiff in error nor conducive to a good public policy to hold that he did not have a cause of action against the party who was the cause of his loss.

The dismissal of this writ of error would forever bar him of this right.

The demurrer will be sustained.

(50 Utah, 44)

KENT v. KENT et al. (No. 3000.)

(Supreme Court of Utah. April 26, 1917. Rehearing Denied May 21, 1917.)

1. TRUSTS ⇨358(1)—CONSTRUCTIVE TRUSTS—FOLLOWING TRUST PROPERTY.

A trust will not be impressed upon funds or property in the hands of the alleged trustee where the original trust property or trust fund cannot be traced or identified either in its original or substituted form.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 523, 558.]

2. TRUSTS ⇨371(1)—CONSTRUCTIVE TRUSTS—PLEADING.

A complaint, setting up the receipt of funds by alleged trustee for investment, the investment of such money, the mingling and confusion thereof with private funds of the trustee, and that such trust property cannot be traced or segregated, held to preclude plaintiff from establishing trust.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trusts, Cent. Dig. §§ 588, 599.]

Appeal from District Court, Cache County; J. D. Call, Judge.

Action by Emeline H. Kent against John D. Kent and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

John A. Bagley, of Montpelier, Idaho, for appellant. Richards, Hart & Van Dam, of Salt Lake City, for respondents.

FRICK, C. J. The plaintiff commenced this action in equity to impress certain property with a trust and to recover the trust fund. In her complaint she alleged that:

> The defendants are the executors of the estate of one Sidney B. Kent, deceased; "that in 1881 the plaintiff was the owner of certain real property in Davis county, Utah; that at that time it was agreed by and between the plaintiff and Sidney B. Kent, deceased, that said property should be sold by Sidney B. Kent, and that he should invest the proceeds thereof in real estate and personal property in Cache county, Utah, and hold the same in trust for the use and benefit of the plaintiff; that pursuant to the said agreement between the plaintiff and Sidney B. Kent the said Davis county property was sold by Sidney B. Kent for the sum of $4,500 in cash, which said amount was received by Sidney B. Kent as trustee, pursuant to said agreement to be invested in property in Cache county, Utah, for the use and benefit of the plaintiff; that afterwards and during the lifetime of the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased, but the real dates are unknown to the plaintiff, the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased, used the said $4,500 in purchasing, acquiring, and improving real property and in purchasing personal property in Cache county, but the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased, in purchasing and improving said property, mingled the said $4,500, which he held in trust for the plaintiff, with his own private funds, and so used and invested said trust fund that it cannot now be traced and cannot be segregated from the private property of the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased; that by reason of the said agreement between plaintiff and the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased, a trust was created in favor of the plaintiff with Sidney B. Kent, deceased, trustee, and the said $4,500, thereby became a trust fund; that Sidney B. Kent died on or about the 8th day of December, 1914, and at the time of his death was a resident of Cache county, state of Utah, and at the time of his death he held the said $4,500 in trust for the use and benefit of the plaintiff; that the said Sidney B. Kent never, at any time, denied or repudiated said trust; that the said Sidney B. Kent, during his lifetime did not, and the defendants have not, paid to the plaintiff the said $4,500 or any part thereof."

Plaintiff also alleged that she had duly presented her claim to said executors for allowance, and that they had rejected the same. She prayed judgment that the trust be established, and that she recover judgment for said $4,500 with legal interest. The defendant, M. E. Kent, demurred to the complaint: (1) That it "does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action"; (2) that the action is barred; and (3) that the complaint is uncertain and ambiguous in certain particulars. The two other defendants filed an answer to the complaint, which, however, has no bearing upon the case. The district court sustained the general demurrer, and, the plaintiff electing to stand on her complaint, judgment dismissing the same was duly entered, from which she appeals.

The only error assigned is that the district court erred in sustaining the demurrer. The only matter, therefore, that concerns us on this appeal is the correctness of the ruling of the district court in sustaining the general demurrer. It will be observed that the plaintiff in her complaint, among other things, alleges that:

> "Deceased, in purchasing and improving said property, mingled the said $4,500 which he held in trust for the plaintiff with his own private funds, and so used and invested said trust fund that it cannot now be traced and cannot be segregated from the private property of the said Sidney B. Kent, deceased." (Italics ours.)

Suppose, after a trial of a case in which it is sought to impress a certain fund or property with a trust, the court should find from the undisputed evidence that the facts were precisely as they are alleged to be in the foregoing statement, Would not such a finding completely dispose of the claim that there was any property or fund upon which a trust could be impressed? Such a finding would conclusively show that the claimant had no better right to any specific property of the deceased's estate than any general creditor would have.

[1] The courts have frequently considered and passed upon claims like the one before us, but we know of no case where it has been held that a trust could be impressed on property or funds where it is conceded to be impossible to trace or identify the property or fund, either in its original or substituted form. The law upon that subject is well stated in an early California case, entitled Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 22, 89 Am. Dec. 141, in the following words:

> "Before a cestui que trust can claim specific real or personal property he must show that it is the identical property originally covered by the trust, or that it is the fruit or product thereof in a new form. The rule upon this subject is well and concisely stated by Mr. Justice Lewis in Thompson's Appeal, 22 Pa. 17: 'Whenever a trust fund has been wrongfully converted into another species of property, if its identity can be traced, it will be held, in its new form, liable to the rights of the cestui que trust. No change of its state and form can divest it of such trust. So long as it can be identified, either as the original property of the cestui que trust, or as the product of it, equity will follow it; and the right of reclamation attaches to it until detached by the superior equity of a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice. The substitute for the original thing follows the nature of the thing itself so long as it can be ascertained to be such. But the right of pursuing it fails when the means of ascertainment fail. This is always the case where the subject-matter is turned into money, and mixed and confounded in a general mass of property of the same description.' Story Eq. §§ 1257, 1259; Tiffany and Bullard on Trusts and Trustees, 33, 34."

In Orcutt v. Gould, 117 Cal. 315, 49 Pac. 188, and in Elizalde v. Elizalde, 137 Cal. 634, 66 Pac. 369, 70 Pac. 861, the case of Lathrop v. Bampton, supra, is approved and followed. In Little v. Chadwick, 151 Mass. 109, 23 N. E. 1005, 7 L. R. A. 570, the law upon the subject now under discussion is stated thus:

> "When trust money becomes so mixed up with the trustee's individual funds that it is impossible to trace and identify it as entering into some specific property, the trust ceases. The court will go as far as it can in thus tracing and following trust money; but when, as a matter of fact, it cannot be traced, the equitable right of the cestui que trust to follow it fails."

The foregoing case is followed in Lowe v. Jones, 192 Mass. 94, 78 N. E. 42, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 487, 116 Am. St. Rep. 225, 7 Ann. Cas. 551. To the same effect is Pryor v. Davis, 109 Ala. 117, 19 South. 440. Many more cases could be cited, but it is unnecessary to do so.

[2] The doctrine announced in the foregoing cases is followed by this court in the case of Waddell v. Waddell, 36 Utah, 435, 104 Pac. 743. In that case this court did just what is said in Little v. Chadwick, supra, a court of equity should do, namely, we went just as far as we could in "tracing and following the trust money." In the Waddell Case we applied as liberal a rule as, with reasonable safety, can be applied in following trust funds and in enforcing the trust. It was, however, not held in the Waddell Case, nor in any other, so far as we are aware, that a court has ever impressed, or has attempted to impress, a trust upon certain property or upon a certain fund where the original trust property or trust fund can no longer be traced or identified, either in its original or substituted form. That is just what, under the allegations of the complaint, we would be required to do if we overruled the demurrer and permitted the plaintiff to prevail upon the allegations of her complaint.

In view of the foregoing conclusion it becomes unnecessary for us to discuss or pass on the other questions raised by the demurrer. The judgment is therefore affirmed. Respondent to recover costs.

McCARTY and CORFMAN, JJ., concur.

(50 Utah, 48)

KENT et al. v. KENT et al. (No. 2999.)

(Supreme Court of Utah. April 26, 1917.)

Appeal from District Court, Cache County; J. D. Call, Judge.

Action by S. W. Kent and others against John D. Kent and others. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

John A. Bagley, of Montpelier, Idaho, for appellants. Richards, Hart & Van Dam, of Salt Lake City, for respondents.

FRICK, C. J. In this action the same kind of relief is sought as in the case of Kent v. Kent, 165 Pac. 271, immediately preceding this case. The only difference between this and the preceding case is that the plaintiffs are different. The same property that was sought to be impressed with a trust in the preceding case is also sought to be impressed with a like trust in this, and for the same reasons. With the exception of the parties plaintiff, and the allegations relating to formal matters, the allegations of the complaint in this case are the same as in the preceding one. A general demurrer was interposed to the complaint which was sustained by the district court, and, the plaintiffs electing to stand upon the allegations of their complaint, judgment dismissing the same was duly entered, from which they appeal.

For the reasons stated, and upon the authority of the preceding case, the judgment in this case must be, and it accordingly is, affirmed. Respondent to recover costs.

McCARTY and CORFMAN, JJ., concur.

(100 Kan. 588)

STATE v. SHIVES. (No. 21035.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑236(13) — UNLAWFUL SALE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

In a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquor, the evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction, although the witnesses who drank it professed not to be certain as to the character of the beverage sold.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 316.]

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑784(2)—INSTRUCTION—CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

The omission to give an instruction regarding circumstantial evidence held not to have constituted error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1883, 1960.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑448(2)—OPINION EVIDENCE—WITNESS' BELIEF.

Testimony regarding a fact is not to be characterized as opinion evidence because the witness undertakes to give only his belief in the matter.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1036.]

4. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑656(5)—TRIAL—REMARK OF TRIAL JUDGE.

A remark by the trial judge, suggesting a doubt of the candor of a witness, held to have had a sufficient basis to prevent its constituting error.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1530.]

Appeal from District Court, Reno County.

Roy Shives was convicted of selling intoxicating liquor, made a felony by prior convictions, and he appeals. Affirmed.

Carr W. Taylor, of Hutchinson, for appellant. S. M. Brewster, Atty. Gen., and H. E. Ramsey, of Hutchinson, for the State.

MASON, J. Roy Shives appeals from a conviction upon a charge of selling intoxicating liquor, made a felony by prior convictions.

[1] 1. The principal contention of the defendant is that the evidence did not warrant the verdict. There was abundant proof of his having sold four bottles of some kind of beverage, which the jury obviously found to have been beer, and the sole question involved in this assignment of error is whether there was any substantial evidence to support that finding. The person who bought it testified that he asked for beer and paid the defendant $1 for the four bottles, but that he did not know whether it was beer or not; that he could not tell for sure. Another witness who helped drink it said that at the time he thought it was beer, but that he did not know; that he could not swear what it was. Another said that he did not know what it was; that he did not know beer when he drank it; that it might have been "two per cent., or something like that." There was also evidence that it was in Schlitz beer bottles. The jury doubtless concluded, and were warranted in the conclusion, that the witnesses entertained no real doubt that the beverage was just what they bought and drank it for, but undertook to find justification in their own minds for their uncandid avowal of ignorance by reflecting that, not having exact scientific knowledge on the subject, they could not be absolutely certain about it, a form of perjury formerly quite common in such prosecutions, but happily less frequent in later years. The statement of a witness that he thought at the time that what he drank was beer was some evidence of the fact, and its weight was for the jury.

[2] 2. Complaint is made of the omission of the court to give an instruction concerning the effect of circumstantial evidence. No instruction was asked on that subject, but it is urged that one should have been included in the general charge, as it was incumbent upon the court to instruct on all material matters. The state relied on direct evidence of the offense charged. So far as circumstantial evidence was involved it was merely corroborative. In that situation it has been held not to be error to refuse to give a special instruction on the subject, even where it is asked. State v. Gereke, 74 Kan. 196, 86 Pac. 160, 87 Pac. 759. If such an instruction would have been appropriate in the present case, it was not so material as to render the omission to give it without a request a ground of reversal.

[3] 3. A motion was made in behalf of the defendant to strike out the testimony, already referred to, that when the witness drank the beverage in question he thought it was beer, on the ground that this was a mere opinion. The overruling of the motion is complained of. As already indicated, the statement was direct evidence as to a fact, the character of the liquor, the form in which it was given not affecting its competence, although having perhaps some tendency to impair its weight by suggesting a want of certainty on the part of the witness. 17 Cyc. 27, note 40.

[4] 4. In passing upon the motion referred to the trial judge added: "I want his opinion, a man who can drink beer and not know it." The remark is criticized as assuming that what the witness drank was beer. That was not the assumption. The witness testified that while he thought what he drank was beer he did not know it; in other words, that it might have been beer, although he was unaware of it, necessarily implying that he could drink beer without knowing it. If the judge betrayed a want of confidence in the candor of the witness, there was a sufficient basis for it to prevent its forming a ground for reversal.

The judgment is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 448)

BALL v. COLLINS et al. (No. 20452.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. NEW TRIAL 🔑72—GROUNDS—UNSATISFACTORY VERDICT.

Rule followed that if, upon weighing the evidence, the trial court is dissatisfied with the verdict of the jury, it is his duty to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 146–148.]

2. APPEAL AND ERROR 🔑867(2) — ORDER GRANTING NEW TRIAL—REVERSAL.

Error in overruling a demurrer to evidence will not cause the reversal of an order granting a new trial, where the appeal is specifically from that order.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3477, 3478, 3480, 3486.]

Appeal from District Court, Bourbon County.

Action by J. E. Ball against Charles Collins and another. Verdict for defendants, and on plaintiff's motion a new trial was granted, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

A. M. Keene, of Ft. Scott, for appellants. John L. Connolly and James B. Connolly, both of Ft. Scott, for appellee.

MARSHALL, J. The defendants appeal from an order granting a new trial.

The plaintiff sought to recover on a promissory note and to foreclose a chattel mortgage given to secure the payment of the note. The defendants answered that the note was altered by increasing the amount thereof without their consent or authority, after it had been signed by them; that it was given in part payment for the purchase of a certain business in Ft. Scott; that the plaintiff agreed to perform certain services in connection with the sale of the business; that he failed, neglected, and refused to render these services; and that there was $70 due the defendants from the plaintiff. The evidence was conflicting. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendants for $70, and found that the plaintiff had changed the note innocently. On the plaintiff's motion, a new trial was granted "on the sole ground that the verdict of the jury did not meet with the approval of the court."

[1] 1. The defendants insist that the court erred in sustaining the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, and argue that the reason given by the court for granting a new trial was arbitrary, unwarranted, and insufficient. The motion for a new trial named all the statutory grounds. The defendants cite Bourquin v. Railway Co., 88 Kan. 183, 127 Pac. 770, to support their contention that, upon a motion for a new trial on several grounds, the trial court, in sustaining the motion, should state the specifications which are upheld and those which are overruled. In that case this court said:

> "Where a motion for a new trial on all the statutory grounds has been sustained generally this court on appeal will assume, in support of the ruling, that the trial judge was not able to reconcile the verdict with what he regarded as the true weight of the reliable testimony." Syl. par. 1.

The defendants also cite Sovereign Camp v. Thiebaud, 65 Kan. 332, 337, 69 Pac. 348, 349. In that case the court said:

> "The discretion of district courts in the matter of granting or refusing new trials is a legal, not a capricious, one. It must be warranted by law and guided by established precedent. It may not be exercised simply because the judge might wish the verdict to be otherwise. The applicant therefore must show a legal reason for its exercise. The saying that it takes 13 to render a verdict has passed to an adage, but can mean nothing more than that, in cases where conflicting evidence raises a substantial and serious doubt in the mind of the trial judge of the correctness of the conclusion reached by the jury, he may interfere."

Other decisions of this court are cited by the defendants, but they do not break down the rule that:

> "If, upon weighing the evidence presented, the trial court was dissatisfied with the verdict of the jury, it was his duty to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial." Walsh v. Railway Co., 164 Pac. 184.

See, also, Richolson v. Freeman, 56 Kan. 463, 43 Pac. 772; Railway Co. v. McClure, 58 Kan. 109, 112, 48 Pac. 566; Railroad Co. v. Matthews, 58 Kan. 447, 452, 49 Pac. 602; Bank v. Goodrich, 96 Kan. 719, 153 Pac. 541.

The verdict did not meet with the approval of the trial court; it was his duty to grant a new trial.

[2] 2. Each of the defendants, at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, filed a demurrer thereto. These demurrers were overruled. The defendant Collins argues that it was error to overrule his demurrer. In his brief the plaintiff says:

> "Appellants [evidently meaning appellee] frankly admit that the testimony on the part of appellee shows that at the time that appellee altered said note and mortgage that appellee did not get the consent of said appellant, Chas. Collins, to said alteration; neither does the evidence show that said alteration was made in appellant, Chas. Collins', presence. The evidence does show, however, that shortly after said alteration that the appellant, Chas. Collins, learned that appellee had altered said note and mortgage, and that he remained silent and made no protest until appellee spoke to him regarding the same. Appellee contends that his conduct was such that he ratified the same, and that the trial court was correct in overruling said demurrer."

Section 6652 of the General Statutes of 1915 in part reads:

> "Where a negotiable instrument is materially altered without the assent of all parties liable thereon it is avoided, except as against a party who has himself made, authorized or assented to the alteration."

Authority or assent requires some affirmative action or statement. No such action or statement on the part of Collins was shown. He did not, within the meaning of the statute quoted, ratify the alteration. His demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence should have been sustained. However, the error committed by the court in refusing to sustain that demurrer is not now available to Collins, for the reason that his appeal is specifically from the order granting a new trial.

The judgment of the court granting a new trial will not be set aside as to either of the defendants, and is therefore affirmed. All the Justices concurring, except WEST, J., who did not sit.

(100 Kan. 529)

HAWKS v. ATCHISON, T. & S. F. RY. CO.

(No. 20839.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

APPEAL AND ERROR ⚷867(2)—GRANTING OF NEW TRIAL AFTER VERDICT—REVIEW.

Where a new trial is granted after a verdict for the defendant, this court will not ordinarily undertake upon an appeal from such order to determine whether the plaintiff failed to make a prima facie case, inasmuch as the trial court may have thought a new trial advisable even if that were true, regarding the failure as excusable and remediable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 3477, 3478, 3480, 3486.]

Appeal from District Court, Sedgwick County.

Action by S. S. Hawks against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company. Verdict for defendant, and from an order setting it aside and granting a new trial, it appeals. Order affirmed.

W. R. Smith, O. J. Wood, A. A. Scott, and Harlow Hurley, all of Topeka, for appellant. George W. Adams, S. S. Hawks, and T. V. McCluggage, all of Wichita, for appellee.

MASON, J. S. S. Hawks brought an action against the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company for damages for the obstruction of an alley back of his residence in which it had laid its track. A verdict was returned in favor of the defendant, but the court set it aside and granted a new trial. An appeal is taken from such order.

The trial judge was requested by the defendant to state the grounds upon which the ruling was based, and responded by enumerating practically all the reasons set out in the motion, which embraced most of those recognized by the statute, and added: "The court may possibly think of some others, but not at the present time." The situation is therefore substantially the same as though no reason whatever had been assigned for the decision. The appellant recognizes the rule that the trial court has a wide discretion in the matter of granting a new trial, but insists that here the ruling should be reversed because as a matter of law a verdict in its favor was required in any view of the evidence. A reversal of such an order has sometimes been had on that ground. Sovereign Camp v. Thiebaud, 65 Kan. 332, 69 Pac. 348. Here the substance of the appellant's claim is that the plaintiff's evidence had no tendency to make out a case. A demurrer to his evidence was filed and overruled, but no appeal was attempted from that order. A ruling which would in itself support an independent appeal may sometimes be inquired into a proceeding brought to reverse the final judgment (White v. Railway Co., 74 Kan. 778, 782, 88 Pac. 54, 11 Ann. Cas. 550); but an appeal from an order granting a new trial does not involve a review of the overruling of a demurrer to the evidence (Ball v. Collins, 165 Pac. 273, decided at this sitting). Even if this court upon an examination into the matter should be of the opinion that the plaintiff had failed to make out a prima facie case, the granting of the new trial might be permitted to stand on the ground that the trial court may have believed that "the failure, even if not due to any erroneous ruling against him, was for some reason excusable, and that justice would be promoted by allowing him another opportunity to introduce evidence." Bank v. Goodrich, 96 Kan. 719, 721, 153 Pac. 541. It is true that questions of law, which will have to be settled before the rights of the parties can be finally determined, have been argued in this proceeding, but in order for this court to pass upon them they must be presented upon an appeal by which they are directly raised. The present appeal is merely an effort by the defendant to retain the benefit of the verdict that was rendered; but if its theory of the law is correct, there was no issue to be submitted to the jury, and its legal rights cannot be seriously prejudiced by the setting aside of a verdict returned under such circumstances.

The order granting a new trial is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 450)

JOHNSON v. MENNONITE MUT. FIRE INS. CO.

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by Editorial Staff.)

INSURANCE ⚷665(3)—FIRE INSURANCE—OCCUPANCY..

In an action on a fire insurance policy, findings and evidence construed to show that the property was occupied during the 30 days preceding the fire within a 30-day vacancy clause.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 1711–1716.]

On petition for rehearing. The former decision, that part touching vacancy when the loss occurred being withdrawn, adhered to.

For former opinion, see 100 Kan. 53, 163 Pac. 1074.

WEST, J. In his petition for rehearing counsel for the plaintiff insists that the former decision was wrong in holding that the minds of the parties did not meet. From plaintiff's abstract, however, it appears that:

> "The agreement between Mr. Young was that Mr. Young would give me a policy without any vacant permit."
>
> "I told him that if he would make it as he agreed to, then it would be all right, but under those terms I did not want it. I understood if I was blown away after the vacant permit was out that the policy was no good."

The secretary testified:

> That after the loss when the plaintiff came to the office and introduced himself "he admitted that he never had paid anything, and that he did not want the policy under those conditions, on account of the vacant permit; that he wanted a policy that would be in force even if the building was vacant, and of course we had told him before in a letter, and told him at that time that we could not issue such a policy, but that we could issue vacancy permits for a certain time."

The clerk testified:

That the plaintiff said he did not pay the first cash payment, and that the reason was "that he did not want that kind of a policy, and that he did not want to bother with vacant permits."

The plaintiff testified:

"When you and Mr. Young were talking over at the livery barn did you make any request then for a vacant permit on this policy? A. He told me that he would write me a policy without any vacancy permit. Q. You did not ask him for a vacancy permit at that time to be placed on this policy? A. No, sir; I asked him to insure my house without any vacant permit; that is when he told me."

While the plaintiff was a little inaccurate in his references to the matter of vacancy clause, it is clear that he wanted a policy without one in it, and that the company refused to issue the kind he wanted; hence it follows as the night the day that the minds of the parties did not meet.

We thank counsel for calling our attention to the question of vacancy at the time the property was destroyed. It seems that the plaintiff had two sons-in-law, and an examination of his testimony in relation to when each was in the property had led to the conclusion that the jury meant by their answer that it had been occupied at a time thirty days before the fire, but counsel seems to be right that they meant it was occupied during the 30 days preceding the fire. This would have simplified the matter had the policy been in force even without resort to section 5362 of the General Statutes of 1915, rendering the vacancy clause void if the property were occupied at the time of the loss.

The former decision, that portion touching vacancy when the loss occurred being withdrawn, is adhered to. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 430)

FEIGHLEY v. C. HOFFMAN & SON MILLING CO. et al.

WIDLER v. SAME.

(Nos. 20023, 20175.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. RELEASE 🔑29(1)—JOINT WRONGDOERS—EFFECT.

The doctrine of Edens v. Fletcher, 79 Kan. 139, 98 Pac. 784, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 618, to the effect that an acknowledgment by the plaintiff of satisfaction against one of several defendants sued as joint wrongdoers which constitutes only partial payment of the damages and in which the plaintiff expressly reserves the right to proceed against the other wrongdoers does not operate to release the others, where it appears that the parties to the arrangement did not intend such a result, reaffirmed and applied.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Release, Cent. Dig. §§ 64, 67, 70.]

2. TRIAL 🔑156(2)—DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE—QUESTION FOR JURY.

The rule applied that upon a demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence the court cannot weigh the evidence nor settle conflicts in it, but that if the evidence most favorable to plaintiff tends to support the issues in the case, the demurrer must be overruled, and the case submitted to the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 355.]

Appeal from District Court, Dickinson County.

Actions by J. E. Feighley and by John J. Widler against the C. Hoffman & Son Milling Company, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, and others. Actions dismissed as to the railway company, and demurrers to each plaintiff's evidence sustained, and they appeal. Reversed and remanded for new trial.

E. C. Little, of Kansas City, and C. E. Rugh, of Abilene, for appellants. G. W. Hurd, Arthur Hurd, Bruce C. Hurd, and C. S. Crawford, all of Abilene, for appellees.

JOHNSTON, C. J. Two actions were brought against the C. Hoffman & Son Milling Company, the Hoffman Elevator Company, C. Hoffman, C. B. Hoffman, and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, one by J. H. Feighley and the other by John J. Widler, to recover damages for injuries resulting from an overflow of the Smoky Hill river, alleged to have been caused by the joint action and wrong of the defendants. It appears that a number of actions were commenced by other plaintiffs, all growing out of the same circumstances, of which one has already been appealed to and determined by this court. Arnold v. Milling Co., 93 Kan. 54, 143 Pac. 413. The situation along the river, the location of the Hoffman dam, and the obstruction at the railroad bridge are described in the opinion in that case. Upon the evidence produced in that case it was decided among other things, that the overflow on the Arnold land was caused by the obstruction at the railroad bridge, and not by the Hoffman dam. After that decision, and before these cases were tried, the railway company and the respective plaintiffs settled their differences, and through their attorneys entered into stipulations which were practically the same in each case, one of which was in the following terms:

"It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between J. E. Feighley and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company that the above-entitled action shall be and is dismissed as to the defendant the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, with prejudice. The plaintiff hereby reserves any and all rights or causes of action against any of the other defendants. It is the intention of the plaintiff herein to preserve his rights to continue his suit and claim against all of the other defendants and to proceed against them."

The stipulation in each case was filed in court, and thereafter the actions were dismissed as to the railway company. At the trials the court sustained demurrers to the evidence of each plaintiff, who appeals.

[1] The question is presented whether or not under the stipulation the plaintiffs could still proceed against the other defendants. It is contended that, the plaintiff having sued the defendants as joint tort-feasors, each wrongdoer must be considered as approving the acts of the others and to have made their acts his own. The plaintiffs might have elected to sue them separately, but it is argued that, having sued them jointly and the act of each being the act of all, the discharge of one amounts to a satisfaction of the injuries done by all. It is therefore insisted that the release given by the plaintiff to the railroad company of a joint liability operates to extinguish the entire damages and as a release of the codefendants of the railway company. The question presented by the defendants was before the court in Edens v. Fletcher, 79 Kan. 139, 98 Pac. 784, 19 L. R. A. (N. S.) 618, and every phase of it was carefully considered. It was not the intention of the parties that the payment made by the railway company and the release given to it should operate as a release of the others, and ordinarily the law gives effect to the intention and agreements of the parties which are based upon adequate consideration and are not contrary to good morals or public policy. All understood that only a partial compensation of the damages was made by the railway company, as it settled with plaintiffs by paying about 30 per cent. of the amount of their claims, and to leave no doubt there was a specific reservation of all rights and causes of action against the other defendants and an express statement of an intention to continue the suit against them for the remaining liability. In the Edens-Fletcher Case, supra, it was recognized that the authorities were in conflict on the question, but it was decided that the better rule, and one which is well sustained by modern authority, is that the intention of the parties between whom the agreement of release is made shall control. It was held that:

> "An acknowledgment by the plaintiff of satisfaction against two of several defendants, who are sued as joint wrongdoers, will not release the others, where the instrument offered to show such release shows that it was not intended to have such effect. Where such acknowledgment of satisfaction contains an express reservation of the right to proceed against the other joint wrongdoers, who are codefendants with those released, and other expressions in the instrument are not inconsistent with the retention of such right, the intention of the parties that the instrument should not operate as a release of such codefendants sufficiently appears." Syl.

In the opinion written by Mr. Justice Benson it was made too clear for doubt that the view taken was not in conflict with earlier Kansas decisions, and all of the objections were so completely answered and the governing rules so clearly stated as to leave no room for doubt or further contention as to the position of this court, or any occasion for a reconsideration of the question. The rule there announced was followed in the recent case of City of Topeka v. Brooks, 99 Kan. 643, 164 Pac. 285.

[2] Some contention is made that the evidence failed to establish a cause of action against the defendants. The question arises on a ruling sustaining a demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence, and if the evidence fairly tended to show that the dam and obstructions placed in the river contributed to throw back or hold the water upon the plaintiff's land, the demurrer should have been overruled. Some of the testimony does not support the plaintiff's contention, and there is confusion and conflict in it as to the injurious effect of the dam, but evidence was introduced fairly tending to show that the dam placed in the river by the defendants obstructed the flow, eliminated the channel, filled the bed with silt and other deposits, and all together operated to flood plaintiff's lands, causing injury and loss. Some of the testimony shows that the plane of high water was lower below than above the dam during the flood. The conflicting testimony and claims that the water was so high that the obstruction of the dam was without serious effect is one to be tried out by the jury, and not by the court. Authorities are not needed to show that upon a demurrer to evidence the court cannot accept some and disregard other testimony produced by plaintiff. It may not settle conflicts in the evidence nor draw inferences which conflict with any supporting evidence offered by the plaintiff. Putting aside the testimony unfavorable to plaintiff, the court must accept every fact and conclusion which the evidence most favorable to the plaintiff tends to prove, and if after allowing all inferences favorable to him the testimony on his behalf tends to support the issues presented, the demurrer must be overruled and the case sent to the jury. On that basis this was clearly a case for the jury.

It is said that a different result was reached in the Arnold Case, where the facts must have been substantially the same as in these cases. Evidence in that case, unless reproduced in this one, can be given no effect here. Rules of law determined in other cases may be applied, but every case is governed by its own facts, and we cannot consider facts in a former appeal which are not in evidence here, not even if it had been brought to review former judgments in these cases. C. B. U. P. R. Co. v. Andrews, Adm'r, 34 Kan. 563, 9 Pac. 213; Sanford v. Weeks, 50 Kan. 339, 31 Pac. 1088; Parkhurst v. National Bank, 55 Kan. 100, 39 Pac. 1027; Railway Co. v. Mosher, 76 Kan. 599, 92 Pac. 554.

Something is said to the effect that the dam was built in a manner and to a height authorized by statute, but if it be granted that the dam is no higher than the statute provides, that would not relieve defendants from liability for damages to those injured by its construction. The acts granting the right to construct the dam and increase its height expressly provided that it should not overflow the farm or lands outside of the natural banks of the river, nor was the owner of the dam relieved from liability for damages resulting from the building or raising of the dam. Laws 1869, c. 46; Laws 1870, c. 64.

The demurrer to the evidence should have been overruled, and therefore the judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for a new trial. All the Justices concurring except DAWSON, J., who did not sit.

(100 Kan. 463)

SECKMAN v. MONARCH CEMENT CO.

(No. 20577.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑405(6)—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT — PERMANENT PARTIAL INCAPACITY—EVIDENCE.

The evidence in an action under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Gen. St. 1915, §§ 5896–5942) held to warrant a finding that permanent partial incapacity resulted from the loss of the ends of the second and third fingers of the left hand of a workman who had already lost a part of the thumb and first finger of the same hand.

2. MASTER AND SERVANT 🔑385(1)—WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT—PARTIAL INCAPACITY—COMPENSATION—STATUTE.

The provision of the statute (Gen. St. 1915, § 5905) that in case of partial incapacity periodical payments shall not be less than $3 a week relates to the amount of recovery, and not merely to the manner of its payment; it means that the workman shall be entitled to receive at least that amount for every week that the incapacity continues until the statutory limit of 8 years is reached.

Appeal from District Court, Allen County.

Action under the Workmen's Compensation Act by A. A. Seckman against the Monarch Cement Company. Judgment for plaintiff in a certain sum, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Cullison, Forrest & Clifford, of Iola, for appellant. Ross B. Smith and Claude M. Brobst, both of Chanute, and John W. Brown, of Iola, for appellee.

MASON, J. A. A. Seckman, while in the employ of the Monarch Cement Company, sustained an injury from machinery requiring the amputation of two fingers of his left hand—the second finger at the first joint, and the third a little higher up. Under the Workmen's Compensation Law he was allowed and paid $136.80 on account of total disability for substantially 18 weeks, and recovered a lump sum judgment for $1,195.80, being an allowance at $3 a week for the remainder of the 8-year period. The defendant appeals.

[1] 1. The defendant maintains that the evidence did not warrant a finding that the injury referred to resulted in any permanent impairment of his earning capacity. He had already lost a part of the thumb and first finger of the same hand. Some testimony was given to the effect that in course of time the plaintiff could grasp and hold objects with his left hand as well as before his injury—with as strong a grip; that there would be some loss of convenience, but none of power. But there was also testimony that the extension of his grip was lessened; that while he would have practically the same intensity of power he could not apply it; that in swinging on a rope, for instance, his hand would slip more easily; that he could not make a full hand in many lines of work; that he could not handle small objects nor grasp large ones securely—could not use a sledge with accuracy. It is not unreasonable to suppose that the loss of the ends of two of his fingers caused some substantial lessening of his effectiveness as a workman and of his usefulness to an employer. The evidence left the extent of impairment in some doubt, and the decision of the trial court must be regarded as final.

[2] 2. There was evidence that after the accident the plaintiff lost the sight of an eye, and that he had refused employment offered him. Complaint is made of the refusal of the court to make findings based thereon. If it had been necessary to estimate the degree of disability that resulted from the loss of the ends of the two fingers these matters might have been important. But they are rendered immaterial by the fact that the plaintiff was allowed (after his total disability ceased) only $3 a week. The statute reads:

> "The amount of compensation under this act shall be: * * * (b) Where total incapacity for work results from injury, periodical payments during such incapacity, commencing at the end of the second week, equal to fifty per cent. of his average weekly earnings computed as provided in section 12 but in no case less than six dollars per week or more than fifteen dollars per week. (c) When partial incapacity for work results from injury, periodical payments during such incapacity, commencing at the end of the second week, shall not be less than twenty-five per cent., nor exceed fifty per cent., based upon the average weekly earnings computed as provided in section 12, but in no case less than three dollars per week or more than twelve dollars per week. * * * No such payment for total or partial disability shall extend over a period exceeding eight years."
>
> "* * * In the case of partial incapacity the payments shall be computed to equal, as closely as possible, fifty per cent. of the difference between the amount of the 'average earnings' of the workman before the accident, to be computed as herein provided, and the average amount which he is most probably able to earn in some suitable employment or business after the accident, subject however, to the limitations hereinbefore provided." Gen. Stat. 1915, §§ 5905, 5906.

This has been interpreted to mean that if a workman suffers a permanent injury which substantially reduces his earning capacity, he is entitled to receive at least $3 a week until the end of the 8-year period, regardless of what he could earn or what he did earn during that time. Cain v. Zinc Co., 94 Kan. 679, 146 Pac. 1165, 148 Pac. 251; Odrowski v. Swift & Co., 99 Kan. 163, 162 Pac. 268; Dennis v. Cafferty, 99 Kan. 810, 163 Pac. 461. The defendant, however, insists that it means, not that the injured workman shall be compensated at the rate of at least $3 a week for that period, but that after the total amount of his compensation has been fixed according to the extent to which his earning capacity has been diminished, it shall be paid to him in weekly installments of between $3 and $6; that the $3 a week minimum has no connection with the amount he is ultimately to receive, but relates only to the manner of its payment. We adhere to the construction previously adopted. The maximum and minimum weekly allowances are inserted in the section which relates to the amount of compensation. In the sentence regarding total incapacity they obviously form a part of the standard by which the amount of recovery is determined, for that matter is not elsewhere treated. In the sentence regarding partial incapacity they are used in precisely the same connection, and should be given the same force, although in the next section a rule is stated for computing compensation in case of partial incapacity which except for the limitations referred to would be complete in itself.

It is true that cases may be imagined in which $3 a week will more than compensate the actual loss of a workman who has suffered some permanent diminution of his earning power. The likelihood of the frequent occurrence of such cases would constitute a reason for a change of the law by the Legislature, but not for a refusal by the courts to give effect to its obvious meaning. The statute here construed has already been amended. The present law allows (in addition to compensation for the period of total disability) for the loss of the first phalange of the second finger, 25 per cent. of the average weekly wages during 30 weeks, and for the loss of the first phalange of the third finger 25 per cent. of such wages for 20 weeks. Here the plaintiff was earning $10.50 a week, and his allowance for partial incapacity would therefore upon that basis amount to $131.25. Laws 1917, c. 226, § 3.

The judgment is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 597)

ELDER MERCANTILE CO. v. OTTAWA INV. CO. et al. (No. 21091.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑110—SUSPENSION OF WORK—ABANDONMENT.

When the owner of real estate begins the construction of a building thereon and for want of funds to continue its construction or for other reason suspends the work, but with an intention and desire to complete it as soon as possible, and later contracts with a building firm for such completion which is begun, held, that as to such owner such suspension does not constitute an abandonment of the work.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 143.]

2. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑110—ABANDONMENT OF WORK—FILING OF LIEN.

When the materialmen are not advised and do not know of such intention and desire to complete the building, they may treat the work as abandoned and file liens.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 143.]

3. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑111(1)—FILING OF LIENS—SUBSEQUENT CONTRACT—EFFECT.

When, after so treating it and so filing their liens, they contract with a building firm, which contracts with the owner to complete the building, and agree with such firm, with the knowledge and co-operation of the owner, to furnish labor and material to complete the building, their former liens being recognized by such firm and owner, then upon abandonment of the work by such firm such materialmen may have liens for all the labor and material furnished.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 144.]

4. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑207 — FAILURE TO FILE BONDS—WAIVER—LIEN.

When in such contract to furnish labor and material for the completion of the building the materialmen agree not to file liens on the assumption that a certain bond will be given by such firm as required by its contract with the owner, they are not required to take notice of the failure to give such bond, but on ascertaining such failure may file their liens; their waiver so to do being contingent on the fulfillment of the contract to give such bond.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 381.]

5. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑198—MATERIALMEN—OTHER LIENS—PRIORITIES.

The company which began the construction of the building agreed with the firm which contracted for its completion to pay therefor certain bonds which were to be a first lien on the property, and agreed to see that an existing mortgage thereon should be released. When the materialmen contracted with reference to the completion of the building they knew of this provision. The owner and the holders of the first bonds were aware and had visual knowledge of the work of completion, and that the materialmen were putting their labor and material into the building, but failed to have such first mortgage released. Held, that the trial court did not err in giving the holders of such first lien a second lien, the building firm the third, and the materialmen concurrent first liens for their respective claims.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. §§ 348-355.]

6. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑97—TERMS OF CONTRACT—SUBCONTRACTOR.

While a subcontractor must take notice of the contract between his principal and the owner of the property, he is not bound by all of its terms, neither is he bound to know of its nonfulfillment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 129.]

7. MECHANICS' LIENS 🔑246—FORECLOSURE—EQUITY.

While mechanics' liens and the rights thereunder are statutory, their foreclosure and adjustment are not governed exclusively by the rigid rules of law, but to them are also applied the familiar principles of equity.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 431.]

8. Mechanics' Liens ⊂⇒161(1)—Materialman's Lien—Adding Profit to Cost.

A claim for material which adds to its actual cost a profit of 20 per cent. thereof is not, in the absence of proof, to be deemed unfair or unreasonable.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 280.]

9. Mechanics' Liens ⊂⇒161(1) — Subcontractor—Profit on Material Not Furnished.

A profit of 20 per cent. on that portion of the material not furnished because of abandonment of the work by the contractor cannot legally be allowed the subcontractor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mechanics' Liens, Cent. Dig. § 280.]

Appeal from District Court, Franklin County.

Action by the Elder Mercantile Company against the Ottawa Investment Company and the Commerce Trust Company, and others. From a judgment enforcing mechanics' liens and determining their priorities, defendants Dobson Investment Company, State Bank of Ottawa, and F. C. Dobson appeal. Modified and affirmed.

W. S. Jenks, of Ottawa, A. E. Crane, of Atchison, Oscar Raines, of Oskaloosa, R. F. Hayden, of Topeka, and Robert S. Heizer, of Osage City, for appellants. F. M. Harris, W. B. Pleasant, Page & Oakes, and J. L. Shelden, all of Ottawa, and Charles Carroll, of Louisville, Ky., for appellee.

WEST, J. Of the numerous defendants the Dobson Investment Company, State Bank of Ottawa, and F. C. Dobson appeal from certain judgments in favor of a number of materialmen in litigation arising out of the construction of a building on ground formerly owned by the bank. The assignments of error chiefly relied on have reference to the priority of liens and to the amount of judgment rendered in favor of the Elder Mercantile Company. The parties and issues were so numerous that the court made 38 findings of fact and 19 conclusions of law.

The State Bank of Ottawa owned a certain lot. The Ottawa Investment Company was organized with substantially the same membership as that of the bank, with a capital stock of $10,000, the lot being purchased for $7,500 in money and constituting the assets of the Investment Company. The latter company, desiring to build on the lot, had plans made, and executed a trust deed to secure the payment of $50,000, which deed was placed of record. The work began, and before any money was secured the State Bank paid the bills as they came in for the labor and material going into the building. The Investment Company deposited $10,000 of the bonds as security for the advances, borrowed $5,000 from a Kansas City bank; the company and its president, F. C. Dobson, indorsed the note individually, and caused the company to deposit $5,000 of the bonds with the Kansas City bank, and the money so borrowed was placed in the State Bank to cover an overdraft. Soon the overdraft grew to $10,000, and, the note for $5,000 having become due, it was paid by Dobson, who took it up, and also the $5,000 bonds, the Investment Company consenting that he should hold these as security, and later by agreement with Dobson, the bank, and the Investment Company, the bank became the owner of the $10,000 bonds which had been deposited with it, and Dobson became owner of the $5,000 bonds held by him as security and the indebtedness of the Investment Company to Dobson and the bank was canceled. On June 1, 1914, the work on the building ceased. The materialmen had made agreements with the Investment Company to furnish material, and liens therefor were filed. Late in September the investment company contracted with Peacock & Son with the consent of Dobson and the State Bank to complete the building according to the original plans, unless thereafter modified. In payment the investment company was to issue bonds in the sum of $65,000 secured by a first mortgage lien on the real estate, building, and contents, and issue its preferred stock to the amount of $35,000. The contract contained a stipulation that all bonds of the existing issue then outstanding and the mortgage securing the same should be canceled. Dobson was to accept in lieu of his $5,000 of the old bonds a promissory note of the Investment Company for that amount. The Investment Company was to secure the consent and agreement of the State Bank to accept $10,000 of the new bonds for $10,000 of the old bonds held by it. The obligation of the contractors to proceed with the construction of the building was conditioned upon the retirement and cancellation of the other bonds and upon the contractor's being able to make satisfactory settlement of the obligations and debts of the Investment Company. The contract contained a warranty that the title was clear save the mortgage for the $50,000 bond issue, only $17,500 of which was outstanding. The contract also contained this provision:

> "All materials now in said building or on the ground or in the street or otherwise furnished or delivered to said company for the purpose of constructing or erecting said building shall be and become the property of said contractors as part of the consideration of this contract, and said company agrees to put said contractors in possession of the said building for the purpose of said construction and in possession of the said property and warrants the title of said property to said contractors subject to the aforesaid claims."

Shortly after the signing of this contract it was suggested that the investment company did not have legal authority to issue the bonds and stock provided for, and thereupon at the suggestion of the Peacock firm the Dobson Investment Company was organized out of the same personnel as had constituted the Ottawa Investment Company, capitalized at $65,000. At this time Dobson was vice president of the bank and Finley, a member of the Dobson Company and the Investment Company, was its cashier. The bank had been consolidated with another, and in February, 1915, was transacting business across the street from the incompleted building involved herein, and the bank officials at all times knew that Peacock & Son were proceeding with its completion and Dobson and Finley and the bank knew that Peacock & Son had not furnished the surety bond for the faithful handling of the stock and bonds and for the completion of the building mentioned in the contract between them and the Investment Company. The Dobson Investment Company issued a trust deed upon the real estate in question, signed by Dobson as president and Finley as secretary, which trust deed recited that it was a first lien upon the real estate. It was executed June 25, 1915, and recorded August 18th following. The assets of the Investment Company were transferred to the Dobson Company in April, 1915. October 31, 1914, the Elder Mercantile Company contracted with Peacock & Son for the completion of the heating, plumbing, gasfitting, and compressed air vacuum lines, having heretofore perfected a lien for the work done before the construction of the building ceased June 1, 1914. Under this contract of October 31, 1914, the bond which under the former contract Peacock & Son were to furnish, assuring the early completion of the building, was waived and the agreement that if Peacock & Son were paid in bonds they need not pay the Elder Mercantile Company until they realized on such bonds, was stricken out of the original contract, and it was agreed, among other things, that payment for work, material, and labor should be made as otherwise provided in such original contract. Under the contract thus modified the Elder Mercantile Company furnished labor and material to a large amount. Peacock & Son abandoned the work about December 15, 1915. They failed to give the Dobson Investment Company or the Ottawa Investment Company the bond provided for in the contract of September 24, 1914, and the bank and investment company and Dobson refused to surrender the bonds of the Ottawa Investment Company and to have the mortgage securing such bonds released of record. In August, 1915, the Dobson Investment Company delivered to Peacock & Son $40,000 of the bonds of the Dobson Company on condition that such delivery should not operate as a waiver of the right to the bond already mentioned. The court found that the work done by Peacock & Son on the building and the work and material furnished by the lien claimants added to its value $15,000, and that to complete the building as it stood at the time of the trial according to the plans would cost about $32,000. The court concluded that by the contract of September 24, 1914, Peacock & Son assumed the obligations of the Ottawa Investment Company for labor and material that had theretofore gone into the building. Judgments were rendered for the various lienholders. The bank of Ottawa, F. C. Dobson, and the Ottawa Investment Company were given judgments for the amounts due them, such judgments to be second liens upon the property in question. Peacock & Son's judgment was decreed to be the third lien, and the materialmen were decreed to have concurrent liens prior to both.

It is claimed that the contractors and subcontractors abandoned the work on June 1, 1914. But the court found that no steps were taken to resume the work until the 24th of September, when the Investment Company entered into a written contract with Peacock & Son; that the time intervening between this and the date of actual resumption of work "was consumed by the organization of the new company, the preparation of the bonds and trust deeds, a vast amount of correspondence between the Peacocks and their attorney in Cincinnati, Ohio, * * * and many other details in connection with the transaction carried on almost exclusively by correspondence." It was the Ottawa Investment Company which was constructing the building, and while the work ceased, it was not from any purpose or intention on its part to abandon it, for the contract with the Peacock firm provided for the completion of the work according to the original plans, and also recognized the claims of the materialmen whose liens had been filed after the work had ceased. The contract recited that the investment company was indebted to certain persons for labor and material furnished for the building in the sum of $5,433.16, that the title to the real estate was clear save for the mortgage of $50,000, and that "any other debts or liabilities of said company, or any amount for which liens of either head of subcontractors or materialmen or others can be claimed or taken or otherwise asserted on said real estate or building or any part thereof, do not exceed in the aggregate the sum of fifty-four hundred thirty-three and 16/100 ($5,433.16) dollars. * * *" The contract between the Peacock firm and the Elder Company recited:

> "There having already been furnished labor and material on above contracts to the amount of fourteen hundred fifty-three dollars and sixty-six cents ($1,453.66) with 6% interest from July 16, 1914, that the said Elder Mercantile Co., agrees to cancel their lien upon the filing of a sufficient bond assuring the early completion of the building, with the understanding that they will be paid that amount on the completion of the building and will continue the above-mentioned contracts."

[1, 2] Thus it appears that both the Peacock firm and the company with which it contracted recognized the claims and liens of the Elder Mercantile Company when arrangements were made for resuming the work and completing the building. The investment companies and the Peacock firm having by their contracts and by their actions recognized and treated the province of the Peacock firm as one to complete and not to begin the construction of the building, and, having recognized the rights of the materialmen to the amounts for which they had filed liens, such materialmen, upon furnishing more labor and material, would plainly have the right, when the work was finally abandoned by the Peacock firm, to file liens for such additional labor and material as they had furnished. While in a technical sense it might be said that the liens filed before the Peacock firm came into the matter were premature, this, even if so, would make no substantial difference, owing to the recognition of their claims and liens by all concerned. In other words, when the work ceased on June 1, 1914, if the materialmen had no knowledge or notice of any intention of the Ottawa Investment Company to proceed further with the building, or any reason to think that the work had been abandoned, they were justified in filing the liens. Davis v. Bullard, 32 Kan. 234, 4 Pac. 75; Shaw v. Stewart, 43 Kan. 572, 23 Pac. 616; Lumber Co. v. Savings Bank, 52 Kan. 410, 34 Pac. 1045; Hotel Co. v. Hardware Co., 56 Kan. 448, 43 Pac. 769.

[3-6] On the other hand, if, as the fact appears, the Ottawa Investment Company had no intention or purpose of abandoning the work, but intended to provide for its completion as soon as possible, and did not so advise the materialmen, it could not complain because they filed liens on the theory of abandonment. But, however this may be, having in fact proceeded to contract for the completion of the building, and then having recognized the claims and liens of the materialmen, and the firm with which they contracted having likewise recognized them, it would certainly be harsh and unfair to hold that on the mere question of time of their filing such claims or liens should be avoided or impaired.

It is forcibly contended that as the mortgage securing the original bonds held by the appealing defendants was of record, the lien claimants were bound to take notice thereof and have no right to priority thereover. It is quite true that the lien of a materialman may not ordinarily supersede an existing mortgage upon property for the improvement of which he furnishes labor or material, but this is not an iron-clad rule which under no circumstances can have an exception. In this case the officers of the bank, and of the investment companies, and Mr. Dobson himself were largely the projectors and managers of the entire building scheme. Practically the same men who constituted the bank constituted in turn the two investment companies, Mr. Dobson and Mr. Finley being prominent in all three, all having actual and visual knowledge of the progress of the work; and when the contract with the Peacock firm provided that the bonds of the Dobson Investment Company should be a first lien on the property, then certainly as between the complaining parties and that firm the Dobson Investment Company bonds would take precedence over the Ottawa Investment Company bonds. It is urged, however, that all the lien claimants knew of the contract between the Ottawa Investment Company and the Peacock firm, and referred to it in their contracts, and by their admissions therein are estopped to deny the validity of the original mortgage. It is argued that as the labor and material to finish the building were to be paid for in stock and bonds of the Dobson Investment Company the subcontractors were bound to take notice of this agreement, and had no right to file liens against the property. It is further contended that in all but three of the contracts with Peacock & Son the subcontractors waived the right to file mechanics' liens, and that, having done this, they could not afterwards change their minds and file liens which could be recognized by law. Bloom, in his supplement to the Law of Mechanics' Liens, page 223, says:

> "An agreement to waive the lien of one who performs labor upon or furnishes material for a building must be certain and clearly and unequivocally established; and if such agreement is subject to conditions subsequent which are not performed by the other party, the claimant does not waive his lien." Concord Apartment House Co. v. O'Brien, 128 Ill. App. 437; Nice v. Walker, 153 Pa. 123, 25 Atl. 1065, 34 Am. St. Rep. 688; Holm v. Chicago, Milwaukee & P. S. R. Co., 59 Wash. 293, 109 Pac. 799; Pacific Lumber & Timber Company v. Dailey, 60 Wash. 566, 111 Pac. 869.

As Peacock & Son failed to carry out their part of the contract to furnish bond, it is argued that in effect the subcontractors failed to carry out their agreement; that it was their duty to see that the original contract was fully performed, that if it had been fully performed they would not have been entitled to a lien, and that by failure to carry it out they should have no greater rights. This provision to pay in bonds was stricken out of the second contract between the Peacock firm and the Elder Company. The court found that Peacock & Son wholly failed to give the Dobson Investment Company or the Ottawa Investment Company the bond provided for, and by reason of such failure the State Bank, the Ottawa Investment Company, and Dobson refused to surrender their bonds and to have the mortgage securing them released. The court further found that the Dobson Investment Company delivered $40,000 of its bonds, although without waiving the right to the bond agreed to be furnished by the Peacock firm. Also that in each of the contracts between Peacock & Son and the lien claimants the latter agreed that they would not take or assert any lien, but that they made these contracts relying on the terms and conditions of the contract between the Peacock firm and the Ottawa Investment Company, and did not waive their right to liens except upon condition that such contract be complied with. The court expressly found that none of the lien claimants except the Elder Company had any knowledge while performing labor and furnishing material that Peacock & Son had failed to furnish the bond provided for in their contract with the Investment Company, or that the Bank and Dobson had failed to have the mortgage of the Ottawa Investment Company canceled. The court concluded as matters of law that the Peacock firm assumed the obligations of the Ottawa Investment Company for labor and material already furnished, that the appealing defendants should have judgment for the amount of their bonds and a second lien therefor upon the property, and that the Dobson Investment Company bonds should be canceled. It would seem, therefore, that the lien claimants proceeded on the theory that the contract between the Investment Company and the Peacock firm would be or had been complied with. While doubtless it was their duty to take knowledge of the contract, we know of no rule which requires them to take notice of its violation or nonfulfillment.

> "A person making a subcontract is presumed to make it knowing the agreement of the principal contractor, but no subsequent agreement of the principal contractor can be set up to the subcontractor's disadvantage." Shaw v. Stewart, 43 Kan. 579, 23 Pac. 619.

A subcontractor's rights will not be affected by any subsequent agreement between the owner and contractor to which they have been assigned or by any act of waiver of the original contractor. Nixon v. Cydon Lodge, 56 Kan. 298, 43 Pac. 236.

> "His subcontract is subordinate to the principal contract with the owner, and is presumed to be made with knowledge of its existence, although he is not bound by all of its terms." Lang v. Adams, 71 Kan. 309, 311, 80 Pac. 593, 594.

The parties most interested in the construction and completion of the building were the ones who best knew of this noncompliance, and also knew that these claimants were putting their labor and material into the building and would naturally expect to be paid therefor. Having permitted this situation to continue, having without advising them of the failure of the Peacock firm to furnish the bond permitted the materialmen to add their property to the betterment of the building, it would seem most inequitable to permit these parties now, by reason of the failure of the Peacock firm to give the bond which they contracted to give, to step in ahead of the lien claimants with the mortgage which was retained after having expressly contracted that the Dobson Investment Company mortgage should be a first lien.

The mortgagee may safely witness the construction of building upon the property mortgaged and the use of material therefor furnished subsequent to the date of his mortgage, but if instead of merely resting on the priority of his security he agree with the contractor that his mortgage is to be a second lien, and knowingly permit the materialman to act on the strength of his agreement that the contractor is to have the first lien, it certainly cannot lie in the mouth of the mortgagee thereafter to claim a lien superior to that of the materialman.

[7] While mechanics' liens and the rights thereunder are statutory, their foreclosure and adjustment are not governed exclusively by the rigid rules of law, but to them also apply the familiar principles of equity. In the cited case of Shaw v. Stewart, this language was used:

> "The foreclosure of a mechanics' lien under the statute is an equitable proceeding, in which the powers of the court are evoked to mold the remedy, within the provisions of the statute, to suit the circumstances of the case. In this action the equities are with the plaintiffs." 43 Kan. 578, 23 Pac. 618.

In Lumber Co. v. Arnold, 88 Kan. 465, 471, 129 Pac. 178, 181, it was said:

> "It is true, as suggested, that a lien for labor or materials can only attach by virtue of the statute as applied to the facts, and that no lien of this kind can be created by force of equitable rules. At the same time courts are established for the purpose of doing justice, and not to assist a party to obtain an unconscionable advantage; and in a case like this slight circumstances might be considered sufficient evidence that the holder of the legal title acquiesced in the purchaser taking possession of the lots and in contracting for the material. If he permitted the purchaser to take possession under the oral contract and to make the improvements, he ought to be estopped to deny that the purchaser obtained the equitable title."

Within the spirit of these declarations the lien claimants are entitled to priority.

[8, 9] In the claim of the Elder Mercantile Company the actual cost constituted one item to which was added 20 per cent. profit. Some criticism is made of this, but certainly it cannot be expected that materialmen are to furnish their goods without any profit whatever, and there is no showing that 20 per cent. is an unfair or unreasonable charge in this respect, and therefore it was not error to allow it. However, an additional charge of $860.85 was made for 20 per cent. profit on the balance of the uncompleted contract, that is to say, if the Elder Company had been permitted to go ahead and furnish $4,304.29 worth more of material it would then have been entitled to a profit thereon of 20 per cent., or $860.85. As this amount was not furnished, and as the material which otherwise would have gone into this building was still the property of the company, no ground exists for charging this 20 per cent. profit on something which never was furnished or used.

Various other points are argued, but under the circumstances do not need to be considered.

No error appears in the record touching the matters complained of save the excess claim just referred to.

The judgment, modified by deducting from the lien of the Elder Mercantile Company $860.85, is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 441)

ELY v. WICHITA NATURAL GAS CO.
BELL BROS. & McDONALD v. SAME.

(Nos. 20350, 20351.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. Mines and Minerals ⟹83—Contract to Purchase Gas—Authority to Dispose of it Elsewhere.

The rights of one who had contracted to purchase certain gas, but refused to accept that which was tendered on the ground that it did not conform to the requirements, held not to be affected by his refusal to sign a writing authorizing the seller to dispose of it elsewhere.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mines and Minerals, Cent. Dig. §§ 212, 214, 215.]

2. Constitutional Law ⟹249, 315 — Due Process of Law — Equal Protection of the Laws—Decision.

A decision that gas tendered under a contract was not merchantable within the meaning of that term as there employed held not to involve a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 710, 935, 937, 941, 947.]

Appeal from District Court, Neosho County.

On rehearing. Former judgment of reversal adhered to.

For former opinion, see 99 Kan. 236, 161 Pac. 649.

J. J. Jones, of Chanute, J. H. Brennan, of Bartlesville, Okl., A. C. Malloy, of Hutchinson, and O. C. Massey, of Bartlesville, Okl., for appellant. Hugh P. Farrelly and Thomas R. Evans, both of Chanute, for appellees.

MASON, J. On the original hearing of this case a reversal was ordered on the ground that under the facts found by the trial court the defendant was justified in refusing to accept and pay for the gas which was tendered it; that the detailed findings made the question whether the gas was merchantable, within the meaning of the contract, one of law, requiring an answer in the negative. Ely v. Gas Co., 99 Kan. 236, 161 Pac. 649. After a rehearing, and a full consideration of the additional arguments and briefs, the court adheres to that conclusion, upon the grounds stated in the former opinion. This decision renders the matter of procedure unimportant, but to make clearer what was said in the original opinion on that subject it may be added that the court did not mean to indicate that by reason of the form in which it was brought the action was not maintainable, but merely that if the plaintiffs had been entitled to recover at all the measure of their damages would have been the amount of actual loss they could prove, which would not necessarily be the full contract price of the gas.

[1] 1. A contention of the plaintiffs to which we have made no previous reference, although it was urged at the first as well as at the second hearing, is that the defendant was not acting in good faith, and that this is shown by the fact that it refused to consent to the plaintiffs' selling the gas elsewhere. A short time before the trial the defendant's general manager refused a request, made in behalf of the plaintiffs, that he sign a writing in these words:

> "The Wichita Natural Gas Company hereby consents and agrees that Seth Ely and Bell Bros. and McDonald may sell of this natural gas product in Chautauqua county, Kansas, any amount that they may have an opportunity to sell, and they are hereby released from the existing contracts by and between said parties, to the extent of such sales so made to other parties. Sales thus made to other parties shall be credited on the minimum provided in said existing contracts, but in no other way shall said existing contracts be modified hereby."

The explanation given of this refusal is that the manager feared that the writing might be construed as a recognition of the defendant's liability under the contract. Whether the provision that sales made to other parties should be credited on the minimum stated in the contracts was open to such construction need not be determined. There was some room for a more or less plausible argument to that effect, and the unwillingness of the officer to commit his company by signing a document, the legal force of which was debatable, cannot be considered as a denial of the plaintiffs' right to sell the gas to some one else. A letter from the defendant to one of the plaintiffs, dated April 14, 1914, was introduced in evidence, which concluded with the words:

> "I have * * * advised you that as far as we were concerned, * * * you were at liberty to sell any part of this gas that you could sell elsewhere, as its quality prevented us from taking it in any large quantity."

The person addressed testified that while the first part of the letter looked familiar, that he did not remember the part just quoted. However that may be, the defendant had taken such a position in its pleading that it could not be heard to object to the plaintiffs selling their gas to other persons. In its answers it alleged that the gas was unmerchantable, and that it could not use it, and added that the provision of the contract forbidding the plaintiffs to sell gas to other persons was contrary to public policy and void.

[2] 2. The plaintiffs also contend that the decision results in a violation of the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution relating to due process of law and the equal protection of the laws, inasmuch as it deprives them of their property rights in the gas in controversy, without the police power of the state being involved. The contention is timely made, so as to preserve any rights the plaintiffs may have in that regard, but we regard it as not well founded.

The former judgment of reversal is adhered to. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 585)

McCORMICK v. McCORMICK. (No. 20940.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. DIVORCE 🔑249(1) — EQUITABLE DIVISION OF PROPERTY—POWER OF COURT—STATUTE.

If the court refuses to grant a divorce to parties, it may, under section 668 of the Civil Code (Gen. St. 1915, § 7576), make an equitable division and disposition of their property, although no demand for such division and disposition had been made by either of the parties in the pleadings originally filed by them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 701–703.]

2. DIVORCE 🔑249(1)—DIVISION OF PROPERTY — ADDITIONAL PLEADINGS — POWER OF COURT.

After refusing a divorce in such a case the court may, in its discretion, direct the parties to set forth their claims as to property rights, and what each would regard to be an equitable division of their property; but as such a division is incidental to the divorce proceeding, such written statements or additional pleadings are not essential to the authority of the court to make a division.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 701–703.]

3. DIVORCE 🔑130—EXTREME CRUELTY—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The evidence examined, and held to be sufficient to sustain the findings and judgment of the trial court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Divorce, Cent. Dig. §§ 442–445.]

Appeal from District Court, Riley County.

Action for divorce by George W. McCormick against Theodora B. McCormick. Judgment for defendant, making an equitable division of the property, and awarding her a certain amount, and requiring plaintiff to pay the costs of the action and defendant's attorney's fee, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Williams & Johnston and Sam Kimble, all of Manhattan, for appellant. Hal E. Harlan, of Manhattan, and J. V. Humphrey, of Junction City, for appellee.

JOHNSTON, C. J. This was an action brought by George W. McCormick to obtain a divorce from Theodora B. McCormick. The divorce was refused, and the court proceeded to make an equitable division of the property awarding the defendant the sum of $1,200, and requiring the plaintiff to pay the costs of the action and an attorney's fee for the defendant. The plaintiff appeals.

[3] The grounds for divorce stated in the petition were gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty. The defendant denied the averments of the petition, and further alleged condonation of the wrongs alleged by plaintiff. There was much conflict in the testimony, and the main contention is that it does not sustain the findings and judgment of the court. Plaintiff offered evidence tending to show that the defendant was of a jealous disposition, was unjustly suspicious of him, and had charged him with dishonesty and infidelity. There was testimony that she was quarrelsome, and had nagged and harassed him as to his property, going so far as to attempt to obtain a portion of it. Defendant offered testimony to the effect that she was required to live in a single room in a hotel when she very much desired and had been promised a home; that plaintiff had left her alone, and had spent a great part of his time in a village in Missouri, where he entered into some kind of a business relation with a woman of that place. The testimony is that defendant reproached him for leaving her and his regular place of business, and in view of the testimony in the case it is not surprising that she was jealous, nor that she should use strong language in complaining of his conduct. According to some of the testimony, things were said and done by each of the parties that were far from creditable. After reviewing the testimony at length, the court concluded that the plaintiff was not entitled to a divorce, and the decision appears to have sufficient support in the evidence. The complaint that the statements and findings of the court betrayed a prejudice against the plaintiff is not sustained. The court found, and apparently upon sufficient testimony, that after plaintiff had filed his petition asking for a divorce the plaintiff and defendant resumed marital relations, having on divers occasions lived and cohabited together as man and wife. Under the circumstances the court was warranted in refusing the divorce.

[1, 2] It is contended that the court was not warranted in ordering a division of the property between the parties, as no demand was made in the pleadings for such division. The Code does not require an allegation as to property rights, nor that a demand for a division of the property shall be included in the pleading before an order of that kind may be made. In an action to obtain a divorce where the parties are in equal wrong the court may refuse a divorce, or in any other case where a divorce is refused the court may make an equitable division of the property. Civ. Code, § 668 (Gen. St. 1915, § 7576). The matter of a division is not an essential part of the application for a divorce, but it is a mere incident of it. The right to make a division does not arise until a divorce has been refused, and it is then a matter within the discretion of the court.

Parties contending as to the granting of a divorce are hardly required to anticipate in their original pleadings the refusal of the divorce. A defendant would hardly be consistent if he insisted that there was no ground for a divorce and no reason why the marital relations should not be continued, and at the same time and in the same pleading should ask for a division of the property. Upon refusing a divorce it would be competent for the court to indicate that it had under consideration a division of the property, and to direct the parties to file written statements of their claims as to what would constitute an equitable division, but the practice has generally been to make the inquiry without written statements or formal pleadings of any kind.

In Bowers v. Bowers, 70 Kan. 164, 78 Pac. 430, there was an application for a division of property in connection with a demand for a divorce, but in the cases of Van Brunt v. Van Brunt, 52 Kan. 380, 34 Pac. 1117, Rullman v. Rullman, 80 Kan. 691, 102 Pac. 1102, and Danielson v. Danielson, 99 Kan. 222, 161 Pac. 623, it does not appear that a division of the property was mentioned in the pleadings, and in the view of the court a demand in the pleadings for a division is not essential to the making of an order when a divorce is refused.

We find no substantial error in the record, and the judgment of the court is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 487)

GEHLENBERG v. HARTLEY et al.

(No. 20677.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. COURTS 🔑33—JURISDICTION OF INFERIOR TRIBUNAL—SILENCE OF RECORD—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

The general rule that silence of the record of a tribunal of inferior jurisdiction on a jurisdictional point is fatal applies in cases of collateral attack to those jurisdictional facts only which the law directs the tribunal to enter upon its record.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Courts, Cent. Dig. §§ 135, 136, 138.]

2. HIGHWAYS 🔑54—ESTABLISHMENT—RECORDS—COLLATERAL ATTACK.

To be sufficient against collateral attack, the recitals of records relating to the establishment of a road need not exhibit technical precision. They should be liberally construed, and however informal, should be upheld whenever enough appears to show with reasonable certainty that the requirements of the law were complied with.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 90, 108, 169–172.]

3. HIGHWAYS 🔑54 — ESTABLISHMENT OF ROAD — NOTICE OF VIEWERS' MEETING — EVIDENCE.

Recitals of the journal of the proceedings of the board of county commissioners in establishing a road, and of the road record, considered, and held to show valid service of notice of the meeting of viewers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 90, 108, 169–172.]

4. HIGHWAYS 🔑63—ESTABLISHMENT—PRESUMPTION AND BURDEN OF PROOF—STATUTE.

Under the provisions of section 6, c. 108, Laws 1874, providing that when the viewers' report, the survey, and the plat of a road have been recorded pursuant to order of the board of county commissioners, "from thenceforth said road shall be considered a public highway," the record indicated is prima facie evidence that the road was legally established, and a landowner attacking collaterally the existence of the road has the burden of establishing the nonexistence of jurisdictional facts.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. § 168.]

5. HIGHWAYS 🔑54 — ESTABLISHMENT OF ROAD—VALIDITY OF PROCEEDINGS.

Discrepancies in the road record regarding the time and place of the meeting of the viewers considered, and held insufficient to impair the prima facie validity of the proceedings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. §§ 90, 108, 169–172.]

6. HIGHWAYS 🔑17—OPENING FOR TRAVEL—EVIDENCE.

The evidence considered, and held sufficient to sustain the finding that a road was opened in fact by travel within seven years from the time it was established.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Highways, Cent. Dig. § 24.]

Appeal from District Court, Saline County.

Action for injunction by Ben Gehlenberg against J. O. Hartley and others, as the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Saline, and M. D. Ross, as trustee, etc. Judgment for defendants, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

David Ritchie, of Salina, for appellant. L. W. Hamner, F. B. Bristow, and W. B. Crowther, all of Salina, for appellees.

BURCH, J. The action was one by a landowner to enjoin the board of county commissioners from opening a road. An injunction was denied, and the plaintiff appeals.

The road was established in October, 1888. The road record recites in regular order all the statutory steps for the location of a road. The statute then in force contained the following provision relating to notice of the meeting of the viewers:

> "It shall be the duty of at least one of the petitioners to cause six days' notice to be given in writing to the owner or owners, or their agents, if residing in the county, or if such owner be a minor, idiot or insane person, then to the guardian of such person, if a resident of the county, through whose land such road is proposed to be laid out and established, and also six days' notice to the county surveyor, of the time and place of meeting, as specified in the notice of the commissioners. Copies of said notice to owners of lands, with affidavits of service attached, shall be filed in the county clerk's office before said road shall be established." Laws 1874, c. 108, § 4; Gen. Stat. 1889, par. 5477.

The original affidavit of service of this notice is not abstracted. The journal of the board of county commissioners contains the following recital:

> "And whereas it further appears to the satisfaction of the board that H. C. Davis, one of the petitioners, did cause six days' notice in writing to be given to each of the owners of the land through and over which said road is proposed to be located, and that a copy of said notice with affidavit of service attached is now on file in the office of county clerk. Upon due consideration no legal objection having been offered against the establishment of said road and believing the same to be of public utility, it is ordered that the viewers' report of view be approved, and that said road be located as a public highway in accordance therewith, full record thereof to be made in the county road record and plat as road No. 553, and the trustees of Greely and Smoky Hill townships to be notified to cause the same to be opened to public travel."

The road record contains the following recital:

> "Also, upon said 10th day of October, 1888, there was presented to said county board the affidavit of H. C. Davis, one of the petitioners aforesaid, setting forth that due notice of the location of said proposed road, together with date of meeting of the viewers, as per published notice of county clerk, had been served upon each of the persons noted below, who as owners, agents or guardians were all the persons through whose premises said road is proposed to be located, to wit: Wm. E. Grier, owner; [description of land.] Mrs. A. T. Grier, owner; [description of land.] James Sharp, owner; [description of land.] A. M. Claflin, agent; [description of land.]"

The plaintiff's land is that for which the road record shows A. M. Claflin was agent, and was owned at the time by W. C. Glidden. The plaintiff argues that the order establishing the road was void for want of jurisdiction, because the record contains no finding by the board of county commissioners that Glidden was a nonresident of the county and no finding that Claflin was his agent.

[1] The attack on the proceeding is collateral. The general rule is that silence of the record of a tribunal of inferior or limited jurisdiction on a jurisdictional point is fatal. But this rule applies, in cases of collateral attack, to those jurisdictional facts only which the law directs the tribunal to enter upon its record. There is nothing in the statute of 1874 requiring the board to make or to enter of record either of the findings which the plaintiff suggests, before jurisdiction to act on the viewers' report attaches.

[2, 3] One of the petitioners must cause notice of the view to be given to the persons whose land will be affected, and must make affidavit of service of the notice. Proof of service may be filed at any time before the road is established. When filed, it is filed with the county clerk. When the report of the viewers comes in, the course to be pursued is prescribed by the statute:

> "It shall be the duty of the commissioners, on receiving the report aforesaid, to cause the same to be read before their meeting; and if said report is favorable, and no legal objections appear against said report, and they are satisfied that such road will be of public utility, they shall order said road [report], survey and plat to be recorded, and from thenceforth said road shall be considered a public highway, and the commissioners shall issue their order to the trustees of the respective townships in which such road is located, directing them to cause the same to be opened for the public travel." Laws 1874, c. 108, § 6.

It is plain that jurisdiction to act on the viewers' report depends on valid service and not on a finding made after service that due service was made. A copy of the notice with the affidavit of service lies in the county clerk's files, as a summons with the sheriff's return lies in the files of the clerk of the district court in an ordinary action. The commissioners will of course satisfy themselves that proper notice has been given before establishing the road. They may do this, however, in any way they choose. They may accept the affidavit of service. Whatever they do in this regard is confirmatory only and adds nothing to the service. Should the commissioners neglect to review the action of the petitioner in giving notice, and proceed to establish the road, their jurisdiction would depend on the character of the service. If that were valid, the road would be legal.

The plaintiff says the record as it stands does not show notice served on Glidden or any one for him. The court disagrees with the plaintiff. The journal contains a finding that notice was served on each of the owners of land affected by the proceeding, and that proof of service was on file with the county clerk. This finding covers every material fact essential to valid service. The road record recites that the affidavit of service set forth that due notice had been served on named persons, who, as owners or agents, were all the persons whose premises were affected. One of the persons named was A. M. Claflin, agent, with a description of Glidden's property appended. The recital fairly states that notice was served on A. M. Claflin as agent for the described property, which is sufficiently specific.

> "In determining the sufficiency of the records of inferior tribunals and public boards, to express their purposes or to preserve a memorial of their transactions respecting matters within their jurisdiction, technical precision should not be required; on the contrary, they should be liberally construed. They are not usually drawn by persons possessed of professional knowledge or skill in such matters; the law does not contemplate that such tribunals or boards shall be constantly attended by persons having such knowledge or skill, but, rather, that their duties will be performed, at least, generally, without such assistance. To subject them to the test of technical precision, would, in most instances at least, defeat the object sought to be attained by the Legislature in creating inferior tribunals and public boards; and, therefore, however informal their records may be, if enough appears to show with reasonable certainty that the requirements of the law have been substantially complied with, their proceedings should, upon grounds of public policy, if for no other reason, be sustained." Lewis et al. v. Laylin et al., 46 Ohio St. 663, 666, 23 N. E. 288, 289.

[4] Besides what has been said, the record in the present case would be sufficient to oblige the plaintiff to prove nonexistence of jurisdictional facts, if there were no reference in the record to service of notice on anybody. Section 6 of the statute quoted above provides that the commissioners shall order the viewers' report, the survey, and the plat to be recorded, and that "from thenceforth said road shall be considered a public highway." This is a legislative declaration, that upon the recording of the report, survey, and plat, the road shall be regarded, prima facie, as legally established. The declaration is unqualified, binds, landowners, public officials, and the courts, and casts upon any person contesting the road proceedings the burden of establishing their invalidity.

The provision of the statute under consideration was copied from a statute of the state of Ohio enacted in 1831, which received judicial interpretation by the Supreme Court of Ohio at least as early as 1861. In the case of Anderson and wife v. Commissioners of Hamilton County, 12 Ohio St. 635, the court said:

> "The objections to the record are based on the assumption that to give such a record validity, it should show on its face, or be supported by proof, that there was a petition signed by it at least twelve freeholders of the county, and notice, as prescribed by the statute. That there are cases in which the proceedings of tribunals or bodies of special and limited jurisdiction should show on their face, or be sustained by proof, that the prescribed requisites to the exercise of the power conferred upon them have been complied with is certainly very true. But, looking to the subject-matter and the provisions of the statute, we think that the record which the statute directs must be regarded in any collateral proceeding as evidence of the establishment of the road. If the report, survey and plat be recorded, as directed by the statute, the presumption that it has been properly and regularly done will arise, and the record will, in the language of the statute, show that the road is to be considered a public highway." 12 Ohio St. 642.

In the case of McClelland v. Miller, 28 Ohio St. 488, decided in 1876, the court referred to the Anderson Case and said:

> "The same class of objections were made to the admission of the record that are made in the case at bar, the law being that of 14th March, 1831, the same we are now considering. It was there claimed that the record must show on its face, or be supported by proof, that there was a proper petition and notice duly given; but the court say that the record which the statute directs must be regarded, in any collateral proceeding, as evidence of the establishment of the road. * * * What is to constitute the record of the road appears to be this: When the viewers have reported if the commissioners are satisfied that the road will be of public utility, 'they shall cause said report, survey, and plat to be recorded, and from thenceforth said road shall be considered a public highway, and the commissioners shall issue their order directing said road to be opened.' Swan (Ed. 1841) p. 798, § 4. Hence, as Gholson says in 12 Ohio St. 642: 'If the report, plat, and survey be recorded, as the statute directs, the presumption that it has been properly and regularly done will arise.'" 28 Ohio St. 498, 500.

These decisions are manifestly sound.

In the early case of Willis v. Sproule, 13 Kan. 257, this court said:

> "After a careful consideration of the question we have come to the conclusion that whenever the records and files of the board of county commissioners purporting to establish a county road are regular in form, and contain everything which the statutes require to be preserved and kept in such cases, such records and files will prove, prima facie at least, that such road has been legally established and has a legal existence, and therefore that there is no necessity in the first instance to resort to evidence aliunde to prove the legal existence of the road. Such ought to be the law, and especially so where the existence of the road is attacked collaterally, as in this case. The strongest reasons, and some very high authority, sustain this view of the law. Anderson v. Com'rs of Hamilton Co., 12 Ohio St. 635, 642; Beebe v. Scheidt, 13 Ohio St. 406, 418." 13 Kan. 264.

If the court had examined more closely the Ohio decisions cited, it would have discovered that they were based upon and were interpretive of a statute, and of a statute which the Legislature of this state had adopted verbatim.

It is true that section 4 provides that a road shall not be established until a copy of the notice to landowners with proof of service has been filed in the county clerk's office. The requirement is jurisdictional. But files in the county clerk's office, and particularly files a third of a century or half a century old, may be misplaced or lost or destroyed. The rule is that absence of documents from the files is not conclusive evidence that they were never filed. State ex rel. v. Railway Co., 95 Kan. 22, 147 Pac. 801, L. R. A. 1915E, 751. Section 6 anticipated the rule, and when the viewers' report, the survey, and the plat have been recorded, everything essential to legal establishment of the road shall be considered as having been done. The statute is a wholesome one, and is still the law of this state. Gen. Stat. 1915, § 8760. It does not appear to have occupied the attention of the court in any of its previous decisions.

The plaintiff relies on the case of Com'rs of Chase Co. v. Cartter, 30 Kan. 581, 1 Pac. 814. In that case a direct attack was made on the road proceedings. A petition in error was filed in the district court to reverse the action of the commissioners in establishing the road. The question was whether or not that which was brought up to the district court was sufficient to authorize the commissioners to act. The soundness of the decision from that standpoint need not be discussed. The plaintiff also cites the case of Com'rs of Wabaunsee Co. v. Muhlenbacker, 18 Kan. 129. In that case the action of the commissioners was directly attacked by proceeding in error in the district court. The syllabus expressly limited the rule announced respecting what the record should affirmatively show, to cases of direct attack. In this case the attack is collateral, and the record of the report, survey, and plat is regular. The plaintiff did not offer to prove that Claflin was not in fact Glidden's resident agent, or that the circumstances were such that Glidden should have been served personally with notice. The plaintiff stood on the record, and the presumption from the record is that all the steps necessary to establish the highway were taken.

[5] The record shows the viewers were instructed to meet at the post office in Salina on Friday, the 17th day of September, 1888, and proceed to view the road, and the record shows notice to that effect. The viewers' report shows that they met, pursuant to notice, at the lands of James Sharp, in Smoky Hill township, on the 7th day of September, 1888, and proceeded to view the road. It is said the proceedings were void because of these variances.

The date in the viewers' report is evidently correct, and the date in the road record is evidently a clerical error of the deputy who made up the record. There was no such day as Friday, September 17, 1888. The 17th of September was Monday. The 7th of September was Friday, and no doubt the viewers met on that date, pursuant to notice. If this were not true, the record shows that the agent Claflin, on whom notice was served, was present when the road was viewed.

A common meeting place is appointed to bring the viewers and their assistants together, and thus facilitate the view. Meeting at the designated place is not jurisdictional, and no landowner can complain unless he has actually been misled and deprived of an opportunity to present his claim. In this instance, the viewers met on land forming part of the site of the road, and the agent for the owner of the plaintiff's land was present.

[6] Finally, it is said the road lapsed because it was not opened for public use within seven years after the time the order establishing it was made.

The road extends east and west, and forms an extension of Crawford avenue in the city of Salina. It is 1½ miles long and crosses the Smoky Hill river. Approximately a mile of the road is west of the river. The river was not bridged or fordable. If local history were carefully written, it would probably disclose that the promoters of the road had in mind securing a bridge across the river, but none was ever erected. The result was, the road was little used. About one-quarter of a mile east of the river a gate was maintained across the road, but the landowner on one side set his fence over and the road was opened and was traveled down to the gate, and was used somewhat down to the river. West of the river a fence beginning near the river and one-half mile long was never removed from the center of the road, which was 60 feet wide. There was positive proof, however, that the owner of land lying next to the river and one-quarter of a mile north of the road used the road in 1894 for the purpose of hauling corn from his field, and did so for the express purpose of "trying to hold the road."

Whenever a road has been established, it is opened in fact when it is traveled. Webb v. Com'rs of Butler Co., 52 Kan. 375, 34 Pac. 973. After the lapse of so many years, neither very much nor very definite proof of use is to be expected, and the court regards that which was produced as sufficient. The road having been opened within seven years, subsequent nonuser is not destructive of the public right. Eble v. State, 77 Kan. 179, 93 Pac. 803, 127 Am. St. Rep. 412.

The judgment of the district court is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(100 Kan. 562)

MINNEAPOLIS STEEL & MACHINERY CO. v. SCHALANSKY. (No. 20859.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. EVIDENCE 🔑433(6)—WRITTEN CONTRACT—MUTUAL MISTAKE.

Where a mutual mistake in a written contract is alleged and reformation is asked, oral evidence may be introduced to prove the mistake and the contract as it should have been.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Evidence, Cent. Dig. § 1909.]

2. CONTRACTS 🔑100—MISTAKE IN CONTRACT—DEMURRER TO EVIDENCE.

Where a mutual mistake in a written contract is alleged and reformation is asked, and where the evidence is sufficient to show the mistake and the contract, a demurrer to the evidence should not be sustained.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Contracts, Cent. Dig. § 454.]

3. NEW TRIAL 🔑70 — FINDING OF JURY — SETTING ASIDE.

A motion to set aside a finding of the jury should not be allowed, where the evidence fairly tends to prove the fact found.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see New Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 142, 143.]

4. REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS 🔑46 — CONTRACT—MUTUAL MISTAKE.

The law of mutual mistake, as applied to the issues and the evidence in this case, was correctly set out in the instructions.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Reformation of Instruments, Cent. Dig. § 194.]

5. TRIAL 🔑250—INSTRUCTIONS—IMMATERIAL MATTER.

It is not error to refuse to give an instruction on a matter that is immaterial.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. §§ 584–586.]

Porter, J., dissenting.

Appeal from District Court, Smith County.

Action by the Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Company against Henry Schalansky. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Relihan & Relihan, of Smith Center, for appellant. Mahin & Mahin, of Smith Center, for appellee.

MARSHALL, J. Judgment was rendered in favor of the defendant in an action brought by the plaintiff for the recovery of a tractor engine.

The defendant contracted for an oil tractor engine, and agreed to pay $2,700 therefor. The contract contained these provisions:

> "I agree to accept said machinery on arrival and pay freight and charges thereon from Wichita, Kansas. * * * It is expressly agreed that this order shall not become binding until accepted and approved by an officer of the Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Company."

The printed warranty on the contract contained this provision:

> "This instrument comprises the entire contract between the parties hereto, and any verbal representations and agreements outside of or contradictory to the foregoing terms and warranty are hereby agreed to be void for all purposes whatsoever."

The contract provided that the engine should be shipped to the plaintiff at Claudell or Kensington, Kan., and that the defendant would pay $900 in cash and $1,800 in promissory notes, due at different times. These notes were to be secured by a chattel mortgage on the engine. The contract also contained this provision:

> "This settlement to be held by the Kirwin State Bank ten (10) days, at which time Mr. Schalansky can take up the notes and mortgage by paying $1,500.00 cash."

By an arrangement made, not shown in the contract, the defendant was to turn over, as part payment, an old tractor engine then owned by him. The new engine was shipped to the plaintiff at Claudell. A representative of the plaintiff went to Claudell to receive and load the old tractor engine, which had been sold by the plaintiff to other parties. A bill of lading for the new engine was sent to the defendant at the Kirwin State Bank. He went to the bank, paid the $900 in cash, executed notes to the amount of $1,800, gave a chattel mortgage on the new engine to secure the payment of the notes, took the bill of lading to Claudell, and paid $66 freight charges. A difference then arose over the unloading of the engine. After some communication by telegraph, the defendant and the plaintiff's representative, Mr. Quick, unloaded the engine. The defendant purchased oil to be used in transporting the engine to his father's farm in Dorr township. Mr. Quick drove the tractor, while the defendant rode in an automobile. On the way to the farm, the engine broke through a bridge and fell into the Solomon river. The defendant refused to remove the engine from the river. After some delay, the plaintiff took possession of that engine under the chattel mortgage, and sold it for $1,835. The plaintiff sought to obtain possession of the old engine. This was refused, and to recover the possession of the old engine this action was brought.

The defendant pleaded that the words "accept said engine on arrival and" were, by mutual mistake, left in the order instead of being erased as they should have been, and pleaded that the engine was to be delivered to the defendant at his home in Dorr township, in Smith county. The defendant asked for a reformation of the contract and for judgment for $900, the amount paid on the purchase price of the engine by the defendant, $66 paid for freights, and for $1,500 damages.

[1] 1. The plaintiff's first complaint is that the court committed error in the admission of evidence. This evidence was that which tended to show that the engine purchased from the plaintiff was to be delivered to the defendant at his father's farm in Dorr township, in Smith county. The defendant stayed at his father's farm. A mistake in the contract was alleged. The evidence complained of tended to prove that mistake and was therefore competent. In 11 Encyc. of Evidence, the author uses this language:

> "The very nature of an action for the reformation of a written instrument renders necessary a departure from the ordinary rule forbidding the admission of parol testimony to vary the terms of a written instrument, and it is therefore held that a plaintiff alleging a mistake in a written instrument and asking for a decree reforming the same may produce parol evidence to support his contention." Page 74.

See, also, Conaway v. Gore, 24 Kan. 389; Bush v. T. G. Bush & Co., 33 Kan. 556, 6 Pac. 794; Huber v. Claudel, 71 Kan. 441, 80 Pac. 960; Griesa v. Thomas, 99 Kan. 335, 339, 161 Pac. 670; Moore v. Railway Co., 7 Kan. App. 242, 248, 53 Pac. 775; 3 Jones on Evidence, 164; 1 Greenleaf on Evidence (16th Ed.) 426; and 34 Cyc. 982.

[2] 2. The plaintiff demurred to the defendant's evidence, and asked that the jury be directed to return a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and also requested an instruction to that effect. The defendant's evidence tended to prove that, before the contract was signed, it was agreed between the defendant and the plaintiff's general agent at Wichita that the engine should be delivered to the defendant at his home in Dorr township. The defendant is a Bohemian by birth and could not read the English language. The plaintiff's general agent, Mr. Howard, read a portion of the contract to the defendant, and then stated that the contract was as they had agreed it should be. This evidence, if true, was sufficient to establish the defendant's contention. The evidence was sufficient to compel the court to submit the question of a mistake to the jury. For this reason, the demurrer to the evidence was properly overruled; and the request for a directed verdict and the submission of the instruction telling the jury to return a verdict in favor of the plaintiff were rightly refused.

[3] 3. The plaintiff insists that the court erred in denying its motion to set aside finding of fact No. 8. This finding reads as follows:

> "Do you find that the person who wrote the contract of September 3, 1914, made a mistake by failing to erase a provision of the contract that should not have been included in the contract? A. Yes."

The plaintiff contends that there was no evidence to support this finding. The defendant's evidence on the mistake did not exactly correspond with the allegation of his answer. That allegation was that the words, "accept said machinery on arrival and," were by mistake left in the contract, instead of being erased as they should have been. The defendant's evidence tended to prove that the engine was to have been delivered at the farm in Dorr township. If the engine was to have been delivered at the farm, the quoted words should not have been left in the contract; they should have been erased, and probably the exact place of delivery should have been inserted in their place. The difference between the allegation and the proof was not sufficient to justify this court in saying that there was no proof to support the finding.

[4] 4. The plaintiff insists that the court erred in giving the following instruction:

> "You are instructed that if you should find from the evidence that the words, 'accept said machinery on arrival and,' should have been by agreement of the parties left out of the contract and were left in the contract by mistake of the defendant, and that he thought that they had been stricken out and that they were left in the contract, either purposely or by the mistake of the plaintiff's manager, when they should have been stricken out, this in law would be equivalent to a mutual mistake and should be so considered by you."

If the defendant had been the only party mistaken as to the contents of the written contract, and if the plaintiff had made the representations which the defendant testified were made to him, reformation of the contract was a proper remedy for the defendant the same as though the mistake had been mutual. Cox v. Beard, 75 Kan. 369, 89 Pac. 671.

The evidence that supported finding No. 8, and that compelled the court to overrule the plaintiff's demurrer to the defendant's evidence and to refuse to give an instruction directing the jury to return a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, warranted the court in giving the instruction quoted.

[5] 5. The plaintiff requested the following instruction:

> "You are instructed that if the witness Quick, who testified in this case, was acting outside the scope of his employment and without authority at the time he assisted in driving the engine in question, the defendant cannot recover in this action, and your verdict must be for the plaintiff."

This was refused, and its refusal is assigned as error. What Quick did in unloading and driving the engine was wholly immaterial, so far as the issues in this action were concerned; and it was, for that reason, not error to refuse to give the instruction requested.

This disposes of all the matters argued in the plaintiff's brief, although the plaintiff argues some of the propositions under other heads.

The judgment is affirmed.

JOHNSTON, C. J., and BURCH, MASON, WEST, and DAWSON, JJ., concurring. PORTER, J., dissenting.

(100 Kan. 582)

HAMMOND et al. v. WESTERN CASUALTY & GUARANTY INS. CO. et al.

(No. 20882.)

(Supreme Court of Kansas. May 12, 1917.)

(Syllabus by the Court.)

1. INSURANCE 🔑133(1)—LIMITATION OF ACTIONS 🔑100(1)—POLICY NOT CONFORMING TO APPLICATION—RELIANCE—LIMITATION.

Where a policy of insurance different from that applied for has been fraudulently issued, the recipient of the policy may, without reading it, assume that it conforms to the application; and an action thereon is not barred until two years after the fraud is discovered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. §§ 203, 211; Limitation of Actions, Cent. Dig. §§ 480, 493.]

2. INSURANCE 🔑143(7)—FRAUD IN ISSUING POLICY—REFORMATION—JUDGMENT.

Where fraud in issuing a policy of insurance, and a mistake in the policy, are alleged, and reformation is asked, and where the evidence supports the allegations, the court is justified in reforming the policy and in rendering judgment thereon.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Insurance, Cent. Dig. § 271.]

Appeal from District Court, Sedgwick County.

Action by J. K. Hammond and R. B. Hammond, partners, etc., against the Western Casualty & Guaranty Insurance Company and another. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendants appeal. Affirmed.

Edgar Bennett, of Washington, for appellants. J. N. Haymaker, W. D. Jochems, A. V. Roberts, and Carl H. Davis, all of Wichita, for appellees.

MARSHALL, J. The plaintiffs obtained judgment against the defendants on a policy of insurance against liability for damages sustained by workmen injured while in the plaintiffs' employ. The defendants appeal.

The plaintiffs, building contractors, purchased from the Western Casualty & Guaranty Insurance Company a policy of insurance to protect them against liability on account of injury to workmen while in the employ of the plaintiffs. The policy was purchased from Tanner, Cook & Co., agents of the Western Casualty & Guaranty Insurance Company, an Oklahoma corporation. When the policy was purchased, the plaintiffs asked for insurance against liability to workmen injured in their employ. The agent agreed to furnish such a policy, and, after a few days, delivered a policy which he stated was the kind the plaintiffs had asked for, and which the agent had agreed to furnish. The policy contained this provision:

> "No action shall lie against the company to recover for any loss or expense under this policy, unless it shall be brought by the assured for loss actually sustained and paid by him in money in satisfaction of a judgment for trial of the issue, nor unless such action is brought within two years after final judgment against him has been satisfied."

G. L. Horine was injured while in the employ of the plaintiffs, and recovered judgment against them for $1,200. That judgment has not been paid. The Western Casualty & Guaranty Insurance Company defended in that action for the present plaintiffs, and prosecuted an appeal to the Supreme Court. That judgment was affirmed, and execution thereon was issued and was served on the plaintiffs in this action in April, 1915. The policy was dated the 13th day of May, 1912. The present action was not commenced until the 2d day of December, 1915. When the policy was received by the plaintiffs, it was placed in a desk and was not read by either of them until after the execution had been served. They did not discover the mistake in the policy until they read it. The petition alleged both fraud and mistake, and asked for a reformation of the policy so as to make it correspond with the agreement made with the agent of the Western Casualty & Guaranty Insurance Company. The plaintiffs recovered judgment for $1,200, with interest, and the costs in the two actions. By contract between the defendants, the Western Indemnity Company has become liable under the policy.

[1] 1. The defendants insist that the plaintiffs' action is one for relief on the ground of fraud, and was, for that reason, barred by the two-year statute of limitations at the time it was commenced. The difficulty with the defendants' contention is that the plaintiffs did not discover the mistake in the policy until within two years prior to the commencement of this action. To meet this difficulty, the defendants say that the plaintiffs should have read the policy immediately after its receipt, and that, if the policy had been read, the mistake would have been discovered. In Insurance Co. v. Darrin, 80 Kan. 578, 103 Pac. 87, this court said:

> "The recipient of a policy issued in response to an application of the character described may assume that the company has discharged its duty and has written the policy on the basis of the application, and he is not obliged to read the policy to see if it conforms to the application." (Syl. par. 3.)

The action was not barred by the statute of limitations at the time it was commenced.

[2] 2. The defendants contend that the court erred in denying their motion for judgment on the pleadings, in overruling their objection to the introduction of evidence under the petition, in overruling their demurrer to the plaintiff's evidence, and in rendering judgment for the plaintiffs. These contentions are based on the proposition that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. That question has been disposed of. The petition stated a cause of action. The evidence of the plaintiffs tended to prove the allegations of the petition. The several contentions of the defendants are without substantial merit. The plaintiffs alleged fraud on the part of the defendants and a mistake in the policy of insurance issued. Both the fraud and the mistake were established by the evidence, and the court was justified in rendering judgment reforming the policy. Conaway v. Gore, 24 Kan. 389; Bush v. T. G. Bush & Co., 33 Kan. 556, 6 Pac. 794; Hornick v. U. P. Railroad Co., 85 Kan. 568, 572, 118 Pac. 60, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 826, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 208; Machinery Co. v. Schalansky, 165 Pac. 289.

When the policy was reformed, judgment was rightly rendered against the defendants. Miller v. Davis, 10 Kan. 541; Huber v. Claudel, 71 Kan. 441, 80 Pac. 960.

The judgment is affirmed. All the Justices concurring.

(53 Mont. 490)

WILCOX v. TOSTON STATE BANK et al.

(No. 3766.)

(Supreme Court of Montana. May 10, 1917.)

1. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE 🔑72 — VENUE — RESIDENCE OF DEFENDANT.

Under Rev. Codes, § 6986, providing that an action brought in a justice of the peace court shall be tried in the county where defendant resides, if he can be found and served with summons therein, but if he cannot be found and served in that county, the action may be commenced in any county where he may be found and served, a justice of the peace acquired no jurisdiction over the person of defendants by service of summons in a county in which they did not reside, where it did not appear that defendants could not be found and served in the county of their residence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 56, 143–145, 235.]

2. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE 🔑60 — JURISDICTION—WAIVER OF OBJECTION.

In view of the fact that under Rev. Codes, § 7007, a copy of an account serves the purpose of a complaint in a justice of the peace court, and section 7005, providing that the answer may be oral, and section 7010, providing that, if defendant has a counterclaim not exceeding $300 it must be set up or is waived, defendant, in an action in a justice of the peace court, did not waive objection to want of jurisdiction over his person, by presenting an answer containing a counterclaim, where they insisted at every stage of the proceedings that the justice of the peace did not have jurisdiction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Justices of the Peace, Cent. Dig. §§ 217–221.]

Appeal from District Court, Lewis and Clark County; J. M. Clements, Judge.

Action by Ida J. Wilcox against the Toston State Bank and another. From judgment for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Carleton & Carleton, of Helena, for appellant. Walter Aitken, of Bozeman, for respondents.

HOLLOWAY, J. This action was commenced in a justice of the peace court of Lewis and Clark county by filing a copy of an account as follows:

Shelby, Mont., June 28, 1915.
John C. Clarke and Toston State Bank to Mrs. Ida J. Wilcox, Dr.

April 27, 1914.	To money deposited with you on my acct.	$200 00
	To interest.........	2 65
	Total	$202 65

Service of summons was made in Lewis and Clark county upon Clarke personally and as cashier of the bank. The defendants appeared specially and moved for a dismissal upon the ground that the court had no jurisdiction of the person of either defendant. The motion was supported by affidavits to the effect that the defendants are residents of Broadwater county; that the contract upon which plaintiff sues was made and was to be performed in Broadwater county, and that service of summons was made while defendant Clarke was temporarily in Helena. The motion was denied, and defendants then demurred, but the demurrer was overruled. The bank answered by way of a general denial, and Clarke interposed a separate answer containing denials of all the material allegations of the complaint and a counterclaim for $71.85. Upon the trial it appeared from the testimony of the plaintiff that her cause of action accrued in Broadwater county, and defendants again moved for a dismissal. The motion was denied and defendants, declining to introduce any evidence, suffered judgment to be taken against them and appealed to the district court. Upon motion of defendants the district court reversed the judgment of the justice of the peace and entered judgment dismissing the action without prejudice, and for defendants' costs. From that judgment plaintiff prosecuted this appeal.

[1] 1. Did the justice of the peace court acquire jurisdiction over the person of defendants by virtue of the service of summons upon them in Lewis and Clark county? The place of trial of an action in a justice of the peace court is governed by section 6986, Revised Codes. Each of the first three subdivisions of that section in terms deals with a specific cause of action which accrues in a county other than the county of defendant's residence. Subdivision 4 is vague, but, when considered in the light of former statutes dealing with the same subject, we think it clear that this subdivision was intended to cover all other cases than those enumerated in the first three subdivisions wherein the cause of action accrues in a county other than the county of defendant's residence. It cannot refer to a cause of action which accrues in the county of defendant's residence. Section 1480, Code of Civil Procedure 1895 (Rev. Codes, § 6986), regulated the place of trial of actions in justice of the peace courts from 1895 to 1899. The place of trial of an action which accrued in the township of defendant's residence was in the place of his residence. Subdivision 9. Section 1480 was amended in 1899. A slight amendment was made to subdivision 5, and it was renumbered 4. Subdivision 9 was amended and renumbered 7. As under the former statute the only provision governing the place of trial of a cause which accrued in the same township as defendant's residence was the last subdivision of section 1480, so the only statute now governing the place of trial of a cause of action which accrues in the same county as defendant's residence is the last subdivision of section 6986. Such action shall be tried in the county where defendant resides, if he can be found and served with summons therein; but if he cannot be found and served in that county, then the action may be commenced and prosecuted in any county where he may be found and served. In the absence of a showing that these defendants could not be found and served in Broadwater county, the justice of the peace of Lewis and Clark county acquired no jurisdiction of the person of either defendant by virtue of the service of summons.

[2] 2. Did defendant Clarke waive objection to the want of jurisdiction over his person by presenting an answer containing a counterclaim? At every stage of the proceedings, defendants insisted upon their objection to the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace of Lewis and Clark county. If that court were one of general jurisdiction wherein formal pleadings are required, there might be merit to the contention that defendant Clarke submitted to the jurisdiction by filing his counterclaim; but a copy of an account serves the purpose of a complaint in a justice of the peace court (section 7007, Rev. Codes), and the answer may be oral (section 7005, Rev. Codes). If the defendant has a counterclaim not exceeding $300, it must be set up or it is waived. Section 7010, Rev. Codes. The complaint in this instance gave no intimation that defendants reside in Broadwater county or that plaintiff's cause of action accrued in that county. It was not until the trial that the latter fact was made to appear, and when it did appear the counterclaim had already been filed.

It was not necessary for defendants to appear specially and challenge the jurisdiction of the inferior court. They were authorized to present whatever defenses they had, and upon trial for the first time raise the question of want of jurisdiction. Section 7047, subd. 4, recognizes such right. Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson v. Superior Court, 106 Cal. 592, 39 Pac. 936. So long as defendant Clarke did not voluntarily submit to the jurisdiction of the inferior court, he did not waive his right to object that it was without jurisdiction over him.

The judgment of the district court is affirmed.

Affirmed.

BRANTLY, C. J., and SANNER, J., concur.

(53 Mont. 350)

STATE ex rel. PAYNE v. DISTRICT COURT OF FIFTH JUDICIAL DIST. IN AND FOR MADISON COUNTY et al. (No. 3921.)

(Supreme Court of Montana. March 7, 1917.)

1. Counties 🔑67 — Officers — Removal — Misconduct—Statutes.

Rev. Codes, § 9006, providing for the removal of public officers by summary proceedings where such officers have charged and collected illegal fees for services rendered or have refused or neglected to perform official duties, does not include misconduct by a county commissioner consisting of selling property, in which he is personally and financially interested, to the county.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 100–103.]

2. Counties 🔑67 — Officers — Removal — "Fees."

An accusation under Rev. Codes, § 9006, authorizing the removal of public officers by summary proceedings, where they have been guilty of collecting illegal fees for services rendered, charging a county commissioner with collecting both per diem and expenses for the same service, is not defective; expenses being fees within the section.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 100–103.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Fees.]

3. Officers 🔑74—Removal—Grounds.

To constitute the offense denounced by Rev. Codes, § 9006, providing for the removal of public officers by summary proceedings for collection of illegal fees by virtue of official position, it must be made to appear that accused was a public officer, that acting by virtue of his office he collected certain fees, and that such fees were illegal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. §§ 101–103, 105, 106.]

4. Officers 🔑74—Removal—Pleading.

Under Rev. Codes, § 9006, providing that public officers may be removed by summary proceedings when guilty of charging and collecting illegal fees, an accusation is sufficient if it clearly and distinctly sets forth the facts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language, and in such manner that a person of common understanding may know what was intended.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. §§ 101–103, 105, 106.]

5. Counties 🔑67 — Officers — Removal — Pleading.

Under Rev. Codes, § 9006, providing a mode of procedure for the removal of public officers guilty of collecting illegal fees, an accusation, alleging that accused acting in his official capacity as county commissioner spent one day seeing about a right of way for which he charged and collected a per diem and also an amount additional for expenses, was sufficient; the item not being authorized expressly by law, and therefore prima facie illegal.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 100–103.]

6. Officers 🔑61 — Removal — Statutes — "Criminal Prosecutions."

Under Rev. Codes, § 9006, providing for the removal of public officers guilty of collecting illegal fees by summary proceedings, is not unconstitutional within Const. art. 3, § 8, providing that all criminal actions in the district court except those on appeal shall be prosecuted by information and indictment, Bill of Rights, § 16, providing that in all criminal prosecutions accused shall have the right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury, or Const. art. 8, § 27, providing that all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name of the state, since the proceeding authorized by section 9006, Revised Codes, is not a criminal one; "criminal prosecutions," as employed in the constitutional provisions, referring to prosecutions for offenses which were crimes at common law and to statutory offenses.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. § 90.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Criminal Prosecutions.]

7. Officers 🔑61—Removal—Statutes.

Rev. Codes, § 9006, relating to removal of public officers guilty of collecting illegal fees by summary proceedings, is a valid enactment under Const. art. 5, § 18, declaring that officers not liable to impeachment are subject to removal for misconduct or malfeasance in office in such manner as may be provided by law; section 17, providing for removal by impeachment, not being exclusive.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Officers, Cent. Dig. § 90.]

8. Mandamus 🔑60—Grounds—Removal of Officers.

Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel a district court to act upon an accusation charging a county commissioner with collecting illegal fees, brought under Rev. Codes, § 9006, relating to removal of public officers by summary proceedings.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Mandamus, Cent. Dig. § 70, 71.]

Proceedings for mandamus by the State of Montana, on the relation of W. W. Payne, against the District Court of the Fifth Judicial District in and for Madison County and Jos. C. Smith, Judge. Writ issued.

James T. Shea, of Twin Bridges, for relator. M. M. Duncan, of Virginia City, for respondents.

HOLLOWAY, J. In June, 1916, an accusation in writing verified by W. W. Payne was presented to the district court of the Fifth judicial district charging Bert G. Paige, a county commissioner of Madison county, with official misconduct. The accusation is in three counts. By the first it was intended to charge the collection of illegal fees, and by the second and third that Paige was personally and financially interested in certain property which he caused to be purchased by the county. A citation was issued, and the accused appeared and denied the material allegations of the accusation. When the proceeding was brought to trial, the court declined to try in a summary manner the issues framed upon the second or third count, and, when it was sought to prove the allegations of the first count, an objection to the introduction of any evidence was sustained and the proceeding dismissed. The accusing party then secured from this court an alternative writ of mandate directed to the lower court requiring it to proceed with the hearing or show cause why it refused to do so. Upon the return a motion to quash was interposed and the matter submitted.

[1] The proceeding was instituted under section 9006, Revised Codes. That section does not comprehend such official misconduct as is charged in either the second or third count of the accusation, and for this reason the court correctly refused to try the issues presented upon either of those two counts.

The first count charges that the accused collected illegal fees from Madison county for alleged services rendered by him in his office as county commissioner, in that he presented to and collected from the county his bill for $249 for items among which are a large number every one of which it is alleged is illegal. Copied in the accusation is a list of these alleged illegal items. A part of that list, sufficient to illustrate the whole, is as follows:

1915.
June 13.	1 day with Grant, Waterloo..........	$8 00
	Expense on same day................	4 00
" 15.	1 day Big Hole road, French Ranch	8 00
"	And ex.	3 50
" 17.	½ day Wisconsin Creek lower road..	4 00
"	Ex.	2 00
" 18.	½ day to road crew, with extras.....	4 00
"	Ex.	2 50
" 21.	1 day, see about right of way Cox et al.	8 00
"	Ex.	5 00
" 24.	¾ day Point Rocks, Malley road....	6 00
"	Ex.	4 00
July 2.	½ day to road crew, with extras....	4 00
"	Ex.	2 00
" 7.	¾ day exchange help road crew.....	6 00
"	Ex.	3 00

There is a separate charge relating to an item of $12 which it is alleged was collected by the accused as and for expenses incurred by him in connection with his attendance upon a meeting of the board.

1. It is contended that this first count does not state facts sufficient to constitute an offense cognizable under section 9006:

[2] (a) Because the items of expense are not fees within the meaning of the word as used in that section. The term "fees," used in the Codes, is somewhat elastic. Section 3172, Revised Codes, provides that:

> "The county surveyor is entitled to receive and collect for his own use the following fees: * * * Expenses of chainman and markers," etc.
>
> Section 3173: "The coroner is entitled to receive and collect for his own use the following fees: * * * For each mile actually traveled in the performance of any duty, ten cents."

We think the term "fees," used in section 9006, is sufficiently broad to comprehend both per diem and expenses. Burrows v. Balfour, 39 Or. 488, 65 Pac. 1062; 19 Cyc. 462.

[3] (b) Because it is not alleged that the services for which the charges were made were not rendered, or, if rendered, that the fees received are not authorized by law. Section 9006 is directed against the incumbent of an office who makes use of his official position as a medium for securing fees to which he is not entitled. Smith v. Ling, 68 Cal. 324, 9 Pac. 171. The gist of the offense condemned is the collection of illegal fees by virtue of official position. To constitute the offense, therefore, it must be made to appear: (a) That the accused is the incumbent of a public office; (b) that, acting by virtue of his office, he collected certain fees; and (c) that the fees collected were illegal, that is, not authorized by law under the circumstances of the particular case. If the fees were collected for services never rendered, or never intended to be rendered, they would be illegal. Rankin v. Jauman, 4 Idaho, 53, 36 Pac. 502. If they were collected for services rendered but for which no compensation is allowed, they would be illegal. State ex rel. Rowe v. District Court, 44 Mont. 318, 119 Pac. 1103, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 396. If the accused collected for services rendered more than the law allows for such services, he collected illegal fees within the meaning of section 9006. Leggatt v. Prideaux, 16 Mont. 205, 40 Pac. 377, 50 Am. St. Rep. 498.

We agree with counsel for the accused that it does not aid the accusation to say that every item in the list above is illegal. These fees are legal or illegal, depending upon whether they are, or are not, authorized by law. A county commissioner can lawfully collect for services performed in virtue of his office, only such fees or other compensation as the law specifically authorizes. The law authorizes per diem and mileage for attending the meetings of the board (section 2893, Rev. Codes), and per diem and expenses while inspecting contract construction work on a highway or bridge under a proper order of the board (Laws 1915, p. 319).

[4] The statute does not prescribe rules of pleading. It does contemplate that the accusation may be prepared by a layman. In any event, it is sufficient if it clearly and distinctly sets forth the facts constituting the offense, in ordinary and concise language and in such manner that a person of common understanding may know what was intended. Woods v. Varnum, 85 Cal. 639, 24 Pac. 843.

[5] If the items for which the accused charged these fees show on the face of them that they are not authorized by law, there is no necessity to characterize them or to attempt to show wherein they are illegal. They show for themselves. We think the accusation, in the first count, is sufficient to charge the collection of illegal fees. In effect, it alleges that the accused, acting in his official capacity as county commissioner of Madison county, spent one day seeing about a right of way for which he charged and collected from the county $8 and $5 additional for expenses, etc. This item particularly is not comprehended within any provisions of the law authorizing fees or other compensation to a member of the board of county commissioners for services rendered in his office, and is therefore prima facie illegal. There are others of the same general character, and still others which are not prima facie illegal but may be illegal, or not, depending upon circumstances which are not disclosed by the accusation. Since this first count charges the collection of certain fees which on the face of them appear illegal, it is sufficient to withstand an objection to the introduction of any evidence.

[6] 2. It is next contended that section 9006 is unconstitutional, in that it attempts to authorize a prosecution for crime by a private individual and the trial and conviction of the accused upon a summary hearing without a jury. Section 8, art. 3, of the Constitution, provides that all criminal actions in the district court, except those on appeal, shall be prosecuted by information or indictment. Section 16 of the Bill of Rights provides:

> "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to * * * a speedy public trial by an impartial jury."

Section 27, art. 8, of the Constitution, provides that all prosecutions shall be conducted in the name of the state. If the proceeding authorized by section 9006 is a criminal prosecution, within the meaning of those terms as they are used in the Constitution, then it follows as of course that this section is invalid.

"Criminal prosecutions," as those words are employed in the Constitution, refer to prosecutions for offenses which were crimes at common law and doubtless to statutory offenses. McInerney v. Denver, 17 Colo 302, 29 Pac. 516; 6 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (2d Ed.) p. 974; 6 L. C. L. p. 458.

[7] Section 17, art. 5, of the Constitution, provides for the removal of certain officers by impeachment, and section 18 of the same article declares that officers not liable to impeachment are subject to removal for misconduct or malfeasance in office, in such manner as may be provided by law. Recalling that our Constitution is a limitation and not a grant of power, it will be seen at once that the provisions of section 18, above, added nothing to the power which the Legislature would have had in the absence of such provisions. In other words, the Legislature was left entirely free to enact such statutes as it might see fit providing for the removal of officers other than those enumerated in section 17.

Proceedings for the removal of a public officer do not necessarily partake of the nature of a criminal prosecution. Indeed, the power to remove an unfaithful or negligent public official is not essentially a judicial power. Under our Constitution, its exercise is left to the Legislature itself or to such other authority as the Legislature may designate. This is the plain import of section 18, above, and is the general rule in the absence of any constitutional declaration upon the subject. 29 Cyc. 1370; State v. Doherty, 25 La. Ann. 119, 13 Am. Rep. 131; Territory v. Cox, 6 Dak. 501. The power may be conferred upon the Governor (Cameron v. Parker, 2 Okl. 277, 38 Pac. 14), or upon a board (Donahue v. Will Co., 100 Ill. 94). It may be conferred upon a court of general or limited jurisdiction to be exercised in the mode provided by law, and consequently, if the Legislature sees fit to require a jury trial, a jury trial must be had; but, if it sees fit to provide for a summary hearing without a jury, no constitutional right of the accused is infringed. Rankin v. Jauman, above.

Many of the states have statutes similar to our section 9006, and they have been upheld uniformly. The proceeding need not be in the name of the state, and an accusation in the form of an affidavit meets all the requirements of the statute. Wood v. Varnum, above. In State ex rel. Rowe v. District Court, above, this court held that the proceeding authorized by section 9006 is quasi criminal in character, but that the accused is not entitled to a jury trial. 44 Mont. page 327, 119 Pac. 1103, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 396. Doubtless, it would be more nearly accurate to say that the proceeding is a special statutory one and avoid any attempt at arbitrary classification. It is one clearly authorized by law in the exercise by the Legislature of its plenary power. It is initiated by a private individual. It need not be in the name of the state. The accused is not entitled to a trial by jury, and it is not a criminal action in the sense that the public prosecutor must conduct the proceeding.

There are expressions by way of dicta to be found in State ex rel. McGrade v. District Court, 52 Mont. 371, 157 Pac. 1157, which indicate a contrary view; but on examination it will be found that the particular questions to which such expressions are directed were not necessarily involved in the decision of that case. The only question there presented was whether an attorney called upon to conduct such a proceeding is entitled as of right to compensation from the county for his services, and it was held that he is not, because the statutes do not provide for such compensation.

[8] 3. Is mandamus an available remedy? Section 9006 makes no provision for an appeal or other means of review. The trial court refused to proceed because of an erroneous view of a preliminary question of law, and in such case mandamus will lie to get the machinery of the law in motion. State ex rel. Arthurs v. Board, 44 Mont. 51, 118 Pac. 804.

It is ordered that a peremptory writ of mandate issue directed to the district court requiring it to reinstate the proceeding and try the issue presented upon the first count of the accusation.

Writ issued.

BRANTLY, C. J., and SANNER, J., concur.

(53 Mont. 359)

EDWARDS v. LEWIS AND CLARK COUNTY. (No. 3805.)

(Supreme Court of Montana. March 13, 1917. On Rehearing, June 4, 1917.)

1. Constitutional Law ⟹26—Constitution—Construction.

Our Constitution is not a grant but a limitation upon legislative powers.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 30.]

2. Constitutional Law ⟹30 — Construction—Self-Executing Provisions.

Const. art. 12, § 8, providing that "private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of public corporations, but the legislative assembly may provide by law for the funding thereof, and shall provide by law for the payment thereof, including all funded debts and obligations, by assessment and taxation of all private property not exempt from taxation within the limits of the territory over which such corporations respectively have authority," is addressed to the Legislature, and not to the board of county commissioners, which has no power to retire a warrant indebtedness by issuing and selling coupon bonds without statutory authority.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Constitutional Law, Cent. Dig. § 32.]

3. Counties ⟹21½ — County Commissioners—Source of Powers—"County."

The statutes constitute the charter of a county's power, and to them it must look for the evidence of its authority, as a county is but a political subdivision of the state for governmental purposes, and as such is at all times subject to legislative regulation and control.

[Ed. Note.—For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, County.]

4. Statutes ⟹230 — Amendment — Parts Not Changed—Construction.

Under direct provisions of Rev. Codes, § 119, where a statute is amended, the portions not altered are to be considered as having been the law from the time when they were enacted.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 311.]

5. Statutes ⟹225—Construing Sections Together.

Where two sections are part of the same legislative enactment and treat of the same subject-matter, they are to be construed together.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. §§ 302, 303.]

6. Counties ⟹178 — Issuing Refunding Bonds—Powers of Board—Statute—"Borrow Money."

Rev. Codes, § 2905, as amended by Laws 1915, c. 32, § 1, giving the county commissioners power and authority to issue and negotiate on the credit of the county coupon bonds to an amount sufficient to enable the county to redeem all legal outstanding bonds, etc., does not authorize the county commissioners to issue and sell coupon bonds to retire a warrant indebtedness exceeding $10,000, without submitting the question to a vote of electors, in view of section 2933, providing that the county commissioners must not "borrow money" for any of the purposes mentioned in this title or for any single purpose to an amount exceeding $10,000 without approval of electors; issuing such bonds being to borrow money within the meaning of the act.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. §§ 269-273.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Borrow.]

7. Statutes ⟹230—Construction—Changes After Judicial Construction—Intent.

Where, after a statute has been interpreted, the Legislature makes radical changes in phraseology, an intention is thereby shown to establish a rule different from the one announced by the court.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Statutes, Cent. Dig. § 311.]

8. Counties ⟹153 — Incurring Indebtedness—Extent—Inhibition to Legislature.

Const. art. 13, § 5, declaring that no county shall incur any indebtedness for any single purpose in excess of $10,000 without approval of electors, did not prevent enactment of Rev. Codes, § 2933, regulating borrowing money.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Counties, Cent. Dig. § 214.]

Appeal from District Court, Lewis and Clark County; R. Lee Word, Judge.

Proceedings by Frank J. Edwards against Lewis and Clark County. From a judgment denying him relief, plaintiff appeals. Reversed and remanded, with directions.

Edward Horsky, of Helena, for appellant. S. C. Ford, of Helena, and Frank Woody, of Missoula, for respondent.

HOLLOWAY, J. In October, 1915, Lewis and Clark county had outstanding registered warrants against its several funds, aggregating in amount $100,000. Of this amount, $32,077.82 represented road warrants issued for work done during 1914 and 1915 prior to June 14, 1915, on the public highways outside of the corporate limits of the city of Helena—the only incorporated city in the county. The board of county commissioners proposed to retire all of this warrant indebtedness by issuing and selling coupon bonds of the county to the like amount without having submitted the question to a vote of the electors, and plaintiff, a resident taxpayer within the city of Helena, instituted this proceeding to enjoin the issue of bonds to the extent of the $32,077.82 represented by the road warrants. The cause was submitted upon an agreed statement of facts. The trial court found for the defendant, and plaintiff appealed from the judgment which denied him any relief.

It is claimed by appellant, and conceded by respondent, that the property of appellant situated within the corporate limits of the city of Helena is not liable to taxation to pay the road warrants. It is conceded by both parties, as it must be, that, if county bonds are issued to retire these warrants, such bonds will evidence an indebtedness of the entire county, and all taxable property of the county, including plaintiff's property situated within the city of Helena, will be liable to taxation to pay these bonds and the interest thereon. It is the contention of appellant that his property cannot be subjected to taxation to discharge this indebtedness, by the mere subterfuge of changing the form of the evidence of the indebtedness without his consent, and that the county cannot issue refunding bonds without having the question submitted to and approved by a vote of the electors affected.

To justify the board in seeking to issue these bonds without consulting the electors affected, recourse is had to section 8, art. 12. of the Constitution, and section 2905, Revised Codes, as amended by an act approved February 26, 1915 (Laws 1915, p. 47). The section of the Constitution referred to provides:

> "Private property shall not be taken or sold for the corporate debts of public corporations, but the legislative assembly may provide by law for the funding thereof, and shall provide by law for the payment thereof, including all funded debts and obligations, by assessment and taxation of all private property not exempt from taxation within the limits of the territory over which such corporations respectively have authority."

[1, 2] Our Constitution is not a grant but a limitation of power. Section 8, art. 12, above, means nothing more than that the Legislature is prohibited from enacting any statute under which private property may be taken to pay the debts of a public corporation, such as a county or city. Aside from this limitation, the Legislature was left free to enact such measures as it deemed best touching the subject-matter under consideration. If it failed to act at all, there is no power other than public opinion which can coerce it into activity. The provision of the Constitution is addressed to the Legislature, not to the board of county commissioners, and justification for the board's action must be found in the statutes, if such action can be justified at all.

[3] A county is but a political subdivision of the state for governmental purposes, and as such is at all times subject to legislative regulation and control, except in so far as the Constitution has placed limitations upon the lawmaking power. Hersey v. Neilson, 47 Mont. 132, 131 Pac. 30, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 963. Within those limitations, the Legislature may circumscribe or extend the powers to be exercised by a county, as it sees fit. The statutes constitute the charter of a county's power, and to them it must look for the evidence of any authority sought to be exercised. 7 R. C. L. 936. The only statute upon which respondent relies, and the only one which furnishes even a semblance of justification, is section 2905, Revised Codes, as amended, above. That section provides:

> "The board of county commissioners of any county is hereby vested with the power and authority to issue and negotiate on the credit of the county, coupon bonds to an amount sufficient to enable the county to redeem all legal outstanding bonds, warrants or orders; or for the purchase of necessary public building sites, and for the construction of necessary public buildings, public highways," etc.

In the days of the territory, many general and special statutes were enacted to enable counties to borrow money, and to refund their outstanding indebtedness. A limit to the amount of indebtedness which might be incurred was always set, and before bonds could be issued for certain specified purposes the consent of the electors was necessary. Section 786, div. 5, Compiled Statutes 1887, authorized the county commissioners of any county to issue county bonds to redeem outstanding warrants or orders. Subdivision 4 of section 756 clothed the board with authority to borrow money upon the credit of the county in a sum sufficient to erect county buildings or to supply a deficit in the county revenues; but section 795 required that the question of borrowing money for either purpose mentioned in subdivision 4, above, must first be submitted to a vote of the electors of the county. By an act approved March 4, 1891, section 795 was amended to read as follows:

> "The board of county commissioners of any county may, when in its judgment it is advisable for the county to incur indebtedness or liability for any single purpose in an amount exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000), submit the question to the qualified electors of the county."

And section 808 was amended so as to authorize the issuance of refunding bonds and, upon a favorable vote of the electors, bonds for other purposes. Laws 1891, p. 226. In Hotchkiss v. Marion, 12 Mont. 218, 29 Pac. 823, it was held that under those statutes the question of issuing refunding bonds need not be submitted to a vote of the electors. This was the law when the Codes were adopted in 1895.

[4] Title 2, pt. 4, of the Political Code, dealt with the subject "The Government of Counties." Section 4240 of that title gave to the board of county commissioners authority to issue, on the credit of the county, coupon bonds to an amount sufficient to enable it to redeem all legal outstanding bonds, warrants, or orders, etc. Section 4270 of the same title declared that the board of county commissioners must not borrow money for any of the purposes mentioned in this title or for any single purpose, to an amount exceeding $10,000, without an approval of a majority of the electors of the county. By an act approved February 27, 1905, section 4240, above, was amended to include other purposes for which bonds might be issued, and as thus amended that section became section 2905, Revised Codes, and section 4270, without amendment, became section 2933, Revised Codes. By the act of February 26, 1915, section 2905 was amended to further extend the scope of the purposes for which bonds may be issued. Section 2933 has not been changed since it was enacted in 1895 or re-enacted in 1907. The amendment to section 2905 did not alter in any respect the provision authorizing the county commissioners to issue bonds for refunding or retiring outstanding indebtedness, and, under the rule of construction provided by the Codes (section 119, Rev. Codes), the portion of section 2905 relating to that subject is to be considered as having been the law from the time when it was first enacted.

[5, 6] We are, then, to determine the authority of the board to issue refunding bonds, by reference to sections 2905 and 2933, Revised Codes. The two sections are parts of the same legislative enactment, treat of the same subject-matter, and are to be construed together. The first contains a general grant of power—the power to issue county bonds for refunding and other enumerated purposes. The latter specifies the conditions under which the power granted may be exercised if the amount of the loan is to exceed $10,000.

[7] The language of section 2933 cannot be misunderstood:

> "The board of county commissioners must not borrow money for any of the purposes mentioned in this title, or for any single purpose to an amount exceeding ten thousand dollars without the approval of a majority of the electors of the county, and without first having submitted the question of a loan to a vote of such electors."

"The purposes mentioned in this title" include all the purposes enumerated in section 2905, for both sections are part of the same title. But we are asked to construe this phrase in the light of its historical antecedents; in other words, to declare that the language quoted above does not mean what it says, but was intended to comprehend only the limited number of subjects mentioned in subdivision 4 of section 756, div. 5, Compiled Statutes of 1887. This we cannot do. The language is altogether different from that employed in the territorial statute, and in reviewing the history of the act we cannot close our eyes to the fact that after this court had interpreted the former provisions, in Hotchkiss v. Marion, the Legislature deliberately saw fit to make the radical change in phraseology, thereby furnishing the very best evidence that it was the intention to establish a rule different from the one announced in that case. The language, "for any of the purposes mentioned in this title," is as comprehensive as it can be made. The commissioners cannot borrow money to refund outstanding indebtedness exceeding $10,000, by the issuance of bonds or otherwise, without having first obtained the approval of the electors of the county.

[8] If the commissioners issue and sell these bonds, will they thereby borrow money within the meaning of section 2933, above? We think counsel for respondent have confused the ideas expressed in section 5, art. 13, of the Constitution, and section 2933. The Constitution declares:

> "No county shall incur any indebtedness or liability for any single purpose to an amount exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) without the approval of a majority of the electors thereof, voting at an election to be provided by law."

In Hotchkiss v. Marion, above, and in Palmer v. City of Helena, 19 Mont. 61, 47 Pac. 209, it was held that the issuance of refunding bonds merely changed the form of the evidence of pre-existing indebtedness, and did not involve the creation of any new indebtedness within the meaning of the constitutional provision above. That inhibition of the Constitution is directed to the Legislature. Our Legislature is one of inherent, not of delegated, powers, and the restraint laid upon the lawmakers in that instance does not operate to prevent them from imposing upon the counties further limitations in the management of county finances. Acting upon the authority reserved to it, the Legislature has provided that a county shall not borrow money for any of the purposes mentioned in section 2905, to an amount exceeding $10,000, without the consent of the electors who must bear the burden of providing the funds for repaying the loan.

The terms, "incur indebtedness or liability," as used in the Constitution, are not synonymous with the term "borrow money," used in section 2933. 7 R. C. L. 944–951. It is apparent to any one that the indebtedness represented by the road warrants will not be discharged by issuing bonds and from the proceeds paying off the warrants, and that no new indebtedness will be incurred. The indebtedness will remain, but the evidence of it will be changed from the warrants to the bonds. The transaction is not unlike that of the individual who gives his note for an indebtedness represented by a due bill or open account, or who borrows from A. to pay B. The indebtedness still exists, though it may be evidenced by a different instrument, payable to a different creditor or more effectively secured.

Section 5, art. 13, above, has to do with the creation of new indebtedness or liability. The provision for funding an existing indebtedness is found in section 8, art. 12, where the entire subject is referred to the Legislature. While it is true that, by issuing and selling these bonds to take up the warrants, no new indebtedness will be incurred, it is equally true that, when the bonds are sold and the money received, the transaction has amounted to nothing more nor less than borrowing money from the purchaser of the bonds. Com. v. Select and Common Council of Pittsburg, 34 Pa. 496; Legal Tender Case, 110 U. S. 421, 4 Sup. Ct. 122, 28 L. Ed. 204; Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S. 665, 25 L. Ed. 1037. This is the sense in which the term "borrowing money" is used throughout our Codes. Indeed, a county cannot borrow money in any other manner than by issuing its bonds or other evidence of indebtedness, and in our opinion it was to prevent just such a transaction as the one contemplated by respondent that section 2933 was enacted. Whether the legislation is wise or otherwise is not a matter of our concern. Section 5, article 13, has to do only with the creation of new indebtedness, while section 2933 relates to borrowing money, whether the money borrowed is to be used to refund existing indebtedness or for any other purpose mentioned in the title of which that section forms a part.

If the commissioners were permitted to complete the issue and sale of these bonds, they would borrow $100,000 on the credit of the county without the consent of the electors and without having submitted the question of a loan to a vote of the electors, and all in violation of the express prohibition of section 2933.

Appellant also invokes the provisions of chapter 141, Laws of 1915; but, in view of the conclusion already reached, we deem it unnecessary to consider that act. Under the facts agreed upon, the plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause is remanded, with directions to enter a decree in favor of the plaintiff.

Reversed and remanded.

BRANTLY, C. J., and SANNER, J., concur.

On Rehearing.

SANNER, J. We have carefully considered the arguments and additional authorities submitted on the rehearing of this cause, and we have reconsidered the foundations of the opinion heretofore filed herein. We see no escape from the conclusions there announced, and, accordingly, adhere to our decision.

BRANTLY, C. J., and HOLLOWAY, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 12)

HALL et al. v. STATE. (Cr. 397.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑686(1) — RESTING ON STATE'S EVIDENCE—EFFECT.

Defendant cannot, by resting his case on the state's evidence in chief, limit the court's or jury's consideration thereto; but further evidence may be offered, and, if received, considered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1619, 1625, 1626.]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑236(4)—ILLEGAL SALE—JOINT SALE—EVIDENCE.

Evidence on prosecution for sale in violation of prohibition, held sufficient to connect a defendant with sale made by the other, as jointly conducting with him the business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 305, 306.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑475—EXPERT TESTIMONY —EVIDENCE OF ALCOHOL.

Testimony of experts as to amount of alcohol in liquor sold by defendants, as shown by chemical tests, is admissible on prosecution for violation of prohibition.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1063.]

4. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑396(1)—EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY BY REASON OF DEFENDANT'S EVIDENCE.

Defendant, prosecuted for violation of prohibition, showing that the beer sold by him was the same as that sold by another, samples of which were tested and found not to require an internal revenue license, the state may show samples of the beer of the other were tested by chemists and found intoxicating.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 861.]

5. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑134 — PROHIBITION—AMOUNT OF ALCOHOL.

Beer, though not containing sufficient alcohol to require an internal revenue license for its sale, may be intoxicating within the prohibition amendment.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 142–144.]

6. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑176—VIOLATION OF PROHIBITION—GOOD FAITH.

It is no defense to sale in violation of prohibition that defendants relied on a guaranty of the brewers that the beer was nonintoxicating, and investigation showing it did not contain enough alcohol to require an internal revenue license.

Appeal from Superior Court, Maricopa County; R. C. Stanford, Judge.

The appellants O. B. Hall and another were convicted of violating the prohibition amendment to the state Constitution by selling to one William H. Woolf certain intoxicating liquor, the particular name and kind of which said intoxicating liquor is to the county attorney unknown. The sale complained of is alleged to have been made on the 24th day of September, 1915. From a judgment of conviction, the defendants have appealed. Affirmed.

W. L. Barnum, of Phœnix, for appellants. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. Wm. Kramer and Geo. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

CUNNINGHAM, J. The uncontroverted facts appearing in this record are that J. J. Elliott, one of these appellants, sold to William H. Woolf on September 24, 1915, two bottles filled with a liquor called "Frio beer," one of which bottles was filled by the manufacturer, and was the original package, and the other bottle filled from a keg or barrel through a faucet; that the place at which the sale was made was known as the Anheuser bar in the city of Phœnix, Maricopa county, Ariz., and the stated purpose of the purchaser at the time he made the purchase was to analyze the liquid to determine its alcoholic contents and intoxicating qualities; that at the time of the said sale and for two or three days previous thereto, and for about the same length of time subsequent thereto, the business of selling this liquid was carried on at said bar. Appellant Elliott testified in answer to the question:

"Q. * * * What business was carried on there? A. We was selling this Frio; this stuff we got from the Copper City Brewing Company. Q. Who was selling it? * * * A. Why me and Mr. Hall. * * * Q. How long had you been engaged in selling Frio? A. From the 22d to the 25th."

The undisputed evidence is that during that period of time, and particularly on the 23d and 24th of September, the place was doing a rushing business selling "Frio." The information charged the appellants, Elliott and Hall, with the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor. Therefore I find in the record, aside from the undisputed facts above referred to, the controverted fact of the intoxicating character of the liquor sold, and Hall's connection with the sale in question.

The appellant Hall rested his case at the time the state rested its case in chief. This defendant thereupon moved "that he be discharged for the reason that there is no evidence to connect him with this alleged offense." The motion was denied. Thereupon the defendant Hall moved the court to direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, and demurred "to the evidence for the reason that it is not sufficient to sustain the allegations in this case against the defendant O. B. Hall." The court denied this motion. The counsel for both defendants made the following announcement:

"By Mr. Barnum: The defense will proceed only as to the defendant Elliott."

At the close of the evidence in the case the motion to direct a verdict as to defendant Hall was renewed and denied. The motion was based upon the grounds that the evidence does not connect the defendant Hall with the sale, and shows that he was not present at the time of the sale; and upon the further grounds that a variance between the allegations of the information and the proof is shown in the particular that the information charges the defendants with having jointly made the sale, and the proof shows that defendant O. B. Hall was not present or took any part in the alleged sale; and for the further reason that there is no evidence showing that said O. B. Hall is interested in the sale of said liquor, nor that he participated therein.

[1] The defendant Hall made an attempt to close the case against himself at the time the state rested. Such efforts as defendant Hall made at the close of the state's case in chief to shut out all further evidence against him by resting his defense on the state's evidence was ineffective for that purpose, and so recognized by said defendant when at the close of the evidence the defendant renewed his motion. Of course the trial court could not intelligently pass on the motion made at the close of all of the evidence, unless he considered all of the evidence produced on the trial bearing upon the matter of defendant Hall's connection with the alleged sale. In so considering the motion the duty of the court was plain to disregard the ruling on the motion as formally made, and give exact regard to all of the evidence bearing on the matter, whether the evidence was produced before or after the former ruling was made. A defendant cannot rest his case on the evidence produced by the prosecution in chief and limit the court's or jury's consideration to only such evidence as had been produced up to the time the defendant announced that his case is rested. Further evidence may be offered by the prosecution either in chief or as rebuttal, which materially affects the defendant who has rested his case. Such evidence may be offered, and when it is offered, if received by the trial court at any stage of the trial before the cause is submitted to the jury, such evidence is as important in the consideration by the court of a motion to direct a verdict or by the jury in arriving at a verdict as if it had been offered and received in the due order of the trial. Because evidence is received in the course of the trial out of its due, regular order is no reason why the evidence should not be considered and given due force.

[2] The evidence in the record which tends to connect the defendant Hall with the sale of the "Frio beer" is that at the time of Hall's arrest in the presence of Elliott both Hall and Elliott spoke about who were running the place.

"He said that they had a contract with the management of the concern that manufactured the goods. * * * Q. Did he (meaning Hall) say 'they' or 'we'? A. I took it he was speaking of the two. Q. Did he say 'they' or 'we'? A. 'We.' Q. Who was there when he was saying that? A. Mr. Elliott and Mr. Hall and myself (William H. Woolf)."

This is the state of the evidence connecting Hall with the transaction at the time he first moved for his discharge and for a directed verdict. The defendant Elliott testified as a witness in his own behalf, and admits that he sold Woolf "the stuff we was selling; Frio."

"Q. How long had you been selling this Frio beer? A. We sold it altogether about four days. Q. Where did you obtain this Frio? A. We got it from the Douglas Copper City Brewing Company."

On cross-examination this witness was asked:

"Q. * * * What business was carried on there? A. We was selling this Frio; this stuff we got from the Copper City Brewing Company. Q. Who was selling it? (Objected to. Objection overruled.) A. Why me and Mr. Hall. * * * Q. How long have you and Mr. Hall been engaged there in this selling of Frio? (Objected to, and objection sustained as to Mr. Hall.) * * * He may answer for himself, and not for Mr. Hall. Q. How long had you been engaged in selling Frio? A. From the 22d to the 25th."

This evidence tends to prove the fact that O. B. Hall and J. J. Elliott jointly conducted the business carried on at the Anheuser bar from September 22, to September 25, 1915, and that the nature of the business so carried on by said parties was that of selling Frio beer to all parties offering to purchase the said liquor. From such facts, if believed by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt, they were justified in drawing the inevitable inference that O. B. Hall, although not present, did advise and encourage every sale made, and impliedly gave his full consent to each sale made to each person who purchased the same during said period of time, including the sale to William H. Woolf by J. J. Elliott. As a consequence, the defendant Hall is shown to be a principal in the commission of the offense charged. His connection with the commission of the offense is sustained by the evidence.

[3] The appellants contend that error was committed in receiving evidence of expert chemists of the alcoholic contents of the liquor bought by witness William H. Woolf. The samples furnished the expert witness were tested for the presence of alcohol. They testified to the results obtained by them. Witness Woolf gave them the samples that they tested, and the samples were identified as the liquor bought by this witness at the sale in question. The liquor was shown by the test to contain alcohol in intoxicating quantities. The evidence was relevant to the issue and competent to establish such issue. No error was committed in admitting such evidence.

[4, 5] Objection was made, and the objection overruled, to witness Jim Murphy's testimony in chief. The admission of this testimony is assigned as error. This witness was introduced by the state in rebuttal to meet a situation injected into the case by the defendant Elliott's testimony. He had testified that a Mr. Parsons, a deputy internal revenue collector, came to the Anheuser bar for samples of the Frio beer they were selling at that place. The purpose for which the samples were sought was to determine whether an internal revenue license was required for its sale. Elliott stated:

> "Why he (meaning Parsons) came down and wanted to get some draught beer and some bottled beer, and I didn't have any draught beer at the time, and I takes him up to Thalheimer's, and he gives him some of the same shipment that came from the same place; bought from the same people."

The state objected to this evidence, and moved to strike it out of the record. The objection was overruled. Thereupon the matter of the taking of the sample at Thalheimer's place, the testing of the sample so taken for alcohol, and the results of the test made were gone into by the defense. The witness Jim Murphy was placed on the stand in rebuttal, and testified that he as deputy sheriff arrested Thalheimer for selling intoxicating liquor, and that he searched under a warrant Thalheimer's place of business for intoxicating liquor, and took samples therefrom of Frio beer on draught. The samples so taken were delivered to Dr. Watkins and Professor Jones, chemists, for testing. The bottles were marked. This is the substance of the evidence of this witness to which the appellants have objected and the admission of which is assigned as error.

A separate assignment of error complains of the admission in evidence of testimony of Claude Jones given in chief in said trial. W. W. Watkins' testimony is also assigned as error, and it is not plain from the assignments of error whether the appellants intend to attack the admissibility of the testimony given by these witnesses on their first introduction by the state, or their testimony given when called in rebuttal, but I think and will so treat the objections as if directed to their testimony given in rebuttal, as their testimony first given has already been decided to be relevant and competent.

The nature of the rebuttal testimony given by these expert witnesses had relation to the tests made by each of them of the samples of Frio beer taken from Thalheimer's place of business by J. T. Murphy, and the results of such tests. Such inquiry was made pertinent to the trial by the evidence given by Elliott with regard to having taken a sample of beer from the same place and from the same shipment from which Woolf bought. The sample which Elliott caused to be taken from Thalheimer's place was taken by Elliott for the internal revenue department's test for alcohol. The purpose in view for which such evidence was intended was clearly to show that Frio beer was not intoxicating. The fact that the United States laws do not impose a license tax for the privilege of selling liquors containing alcohol in quantities less than a specified percentage is absolutely no evidence that the sale of such liquors is not a violation of our prohibition amendment. The matter of privilege license is quite another thing from the matter of the offense of the sale of intoxicating liquors in violation of said amendment. Yet the defendant was permitted to go into that matter of requirement for United States privilege license to sell, and in all fairness the state should have been allowed to show that the very liquor which defendant had produced evidence tending to show required no revenue license was in fact an intoxicating liquor. The evidence was pertinent to the matter being inquired into, and the defendant brought about the situation making the evidence admissible. No error was committed by admitting the evidence.

[6] The defendant offered to prove by witness Elliott that the beverage alleged to have been sold by the defendants was sold to them by the Copper City Brewing Company under the guarantee that the same was a nonintoxicating liquor and that before receiving the same or disposing of any thereof the said defendants had taken the necessary precautions to ascertain the truthfulness of that statement, and from their investigation had learned that the same was not an intoxicant, that said investigation was made by the defendants in good faith by consulting the office of the internal revenue collector for the district of Arizona and New Mexico, and from said office the said defendants received information that the same was not an intoxicant, and that the defendants could rely upon the representations as made by the seller of said beverage. The state objected to the offer made, and the objection was sustained. The appellants assign this ruling as error.

The following additional offer of proof was made and rejected in part, to wit:

> "And I will offer to prove further by this witness that he (defendant Elliott) believed all of said representations and relied upon the same, and had no knowledge that the beverage called 'Frio' was an intoxicant or contained any alcohol until after the same had been analyzed from samples furnished by him to the sheriff of Maricopa county, and when so informed he immediately desisted from the sale of the same and has sold none since."

The theory of the defense offered by the defendants seems to be in effect that they relied upon the written guarantee given by the manufacturer that the liquor was nonintoxicating, and that upon investigation by the government internal revenue collector's office it was found to contain insufficient alcohol to require a revenue tax or privilege sale license.

The brewer's guarantee was a civil contract between private parties, to which the public was not a party, and therefore was not bound by its terms and conditions. If the brewer guaranteed that the liquor sold to the appellants was nonintoxicating, while in fact it was intoxicating, the person who made the sale violated the law. If in fact the goods sold were not of the quality they were guaranteed to be—that is, the liquor sold under the guaranty was in fact intoxicating liquor—then the purchaser had a cause of action against the seller for damages suffered for breach of warranty. The public had no such cause of action. The test of the intoxicating character of liquors which the prohibition amendment punishes for disposing of is not the contract by which the seller came into the possession of the liquor, nor the fact that no United States revenue license tax is levied against its sale, but the test is whether in fact the liquor sold was intoxicating liquor. One who sells liquors must know at his peril that the liquor sold is not in fact intoxicating in character. It is not enough to have an honest belief that the liquor is nonintoxicating. The act of selling joined with the intention to sell, and the fact existing that the thing sold is an intoxicating liquor completes the crime, whether the seller knew its intoxicating qualities or not, or whatever was his honest belief in respect to the intoxicating qualities of the liquor sold. The defendants' belief that the liquor sold was nonintoxicating is wholly immaterial and unimportant. The defendant's guilt is established when it is made to appear that the seller knowingly made the sale intending to sell the exact liquor which he transferred to the buyer, and that the liquor transferred was in fact intoxicating liquor. These facts shown, and the place of the sale within the jurisdiction of the court, are sufficient proof of the commission of the crime. The defendants controverted none of these facts. The defense offered to be shown is no defense whatever. It is in the nature of a civil defense of confession and avoidance, and not recognized in a criminal action.

Upon the whole case I am of the opinion that the defendants have been awarded a fair and impartial trial, and that substantial evidence sustains the judgment of conviction against both defendants. Therefore the judgment must be affirmed.

FRANKLIN, C. J., and ROSS, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 20)

SOUTHERN PAC. CO. v. STATE.

(No. 1529.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. CARRIERS ⇨18(2) — CONTROL — PROCEEDINGS BEFORE CORPORATION COMMISSION—REVIEW.

That a formal complaint was not filed before the Corporation Commission, nor the witnesses sworn, will not be considered on appeal from a decision of the superior court allowing recovery of a fine assessed by commission where the irregularity was not urged before the commission on motion for rehearing, in view of Civ. Code 1913, par. 2342, providing that no corporation or person or the state shall in any court urge or rely on any ground not set forth in the application for rehearing, and paragraph 2329, providing that informality in proceedings or taking testimony shall not invalidate any order, decision, or rule approved by the commission.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. §§ 13, 16–18, 20, 24.]

2. COMMERCE ⇨33—"INTRASTATE COMMERCE" — TRANSPORTATION OF CIRCUS BETWEEN POINTS WITHIN THE STATE.

In a proceeding before the Arizona Corporation Commission to compel defendant railroad to transport the Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix, held, that movement between named points was intrastate subject to jurisdiction of commission, although shows were engaged in a journey beginning in Texas and ending in California; the movement of the circus being a mere incident to the object of its existence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Commerce, Cent. Dig. §§ 26, 81.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, Intrastate Commerce.]

3. CARRIERS ⇨39—TRANSPORTATION OF PRIVATELY OWNED EQUIPMENT OF CIRCUS—COMMON-LAW DUTY.

The Southern Pacific Company was under no common-law obligation to accept and transport privately owned equipment of Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 98.]

4. CARRIERS ⇨39 — CONTROL — POWERS OF CORPORATION COMMISSION.

Under Const. art. 15, §§ 2, 3, and Civ. Code 1913, c. 11, tit. 9, it is obligatory upon common carriers to accept and transport between points within the state privately owned equipment of circuses under the rules, regulations, and rates, when reasonable and just, prescribed by the Corporation Commission, although carrier has not filed with commission rates therefor.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Carriers, Cent. Dig. § 98.]

5. APPEAL AND ERROR ⚷170(2)—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTE—PARTIES WHO MAY QUESTION.

Where the order of Corporation Commission could be violated but once, and daily accumulation of penalties or fines could not arise, appellant was not affected by that feature of Civ. Code 1913, par. 2357, making each day's continuance of a continuing violation a separate and distinct offense, and could not urge for the first time on appeal that such statute is unconstitutional.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Appeal and Error, Cent. Dig. §§ 1037, 1038.]

Cunningham, J., dissenting.

Appeal from Superior Court, Maricopa County; R. C. Stanford, Judge.

Action by the State against the Southern Pacific Company. Judgment for the State, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

C. W. Durbrow and F. B. Austin, both of San Francisco, Cal., and J. C. Forest, of Phœnix, for appellant. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. Wm. Kramer and G. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

ROSS, J. This is an action to recover a fine assessed against appellant by the Corporation Commission for contempt in refusing to obey an order of the Corporation Commission directing it to transport Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix, Ariz. Authority for the action is found in paragraph 2356, c. 11, tit. 9, Civil Code 1913.

In the complaint were set forth all the proceedings before the commission, including its findings of fact, conclusions of law, orders and judgments, both in the original hearing and the hearing in contempt. The answer of the appellant consists of: (1) Demurrers, general and special, the special being that the court had no jurisdiction of either the person or subject-matter; (2) averments that the order made and entered was not supported or sustained by any competent evidence or by any evidence whatsoever, or that any lawful proceeding was held by said commission in the matter of fixing rates; (3) that the Corporation Commission was without jurisdiction to fix rates for transporting Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix for the reason, among others, that the movement of said shows between the named points was interstate in character, the said shows being engaged in a journey beginning at El Paso, Tex., and extending through the states of New Mexico and Arizona into California, the destination of said Campbell's United Shows having been fixed at the city of San Bernardino, Cal., at the time said shows began their journey at said city of El Paso; and (4) that the commission had no jurisdiction to make or enter said order for the further reason that there were no intrastate tariffs then on file with said commission showing the rate for the movement of privately owned equipment in circus trains or otherwise or obliging defendant to transport privately owned equipment in circus trains.

The court's findings of fact and conclusions of law are as follows:

"II. That on the 20th day of March, 1914, there was promulgated under the authority and seal of the Arizona Corporation Commission, in docket No. 165 of that commission an order to show cause, on or before the 23d day of March, 1914, why the Arizona Corporation Commission should not issue a special rate authority compelling the defendant to publish on one day's notice a rate for the transportation of Campbell's United Shows, consisting of 18 cars, from Tucson, Ariz., to Maricopa, Ariz., at the rate of $3 per mile, and further requiring the defendant to furnish such equipment as was necessary to move Campbell's United Shows within the state of Arizona.

"III. That pursuant to said order to show cause, the defendant appeared before the Arizona Corporation Commission on the 25th day of March, 1914, and after a full and fair hearing the Arizona Corporation Commission entered the following order: 'That the Southern Pacific Company and Arizona Eastern Railroad Company transport the cars, property, employés and attendants of Campbell's United Shows from Tucson, Ariz., via Maricopa, to Phœnix, Ariz., and to extend to the said Campbell's United Shows the usual privileges in the movement of advance agents, for a total amount not to exceed $3 per train mile for the entire service. It is understood that the shipment will consist of not to exceed four coaches, four large box cars and ten flat cars, and it is further understood that the Southern Pacific Company and Arizona Eastern Railroad Company may enter into a contract covering this transportation, the terms of which shall not be in substantial variance with the contract now existing between the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company and Sells-Floto Shows Company, with respect to details as to responsibility, service and conditions, copy of said contract being on file with the commission, and made on March 4, 1914, by and between the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company and Sells-Floto Shows Company. It is further ordered that, upon submission of evidence that any charge or charges have been exacted by respondent companies for transportation of advance agents or employés, at variance with contract herein referred to, made by respondent Arizona Eastern Railroad Company with Sells-Floto Company, that the amount or amounts so collected shall be refunded to Campbell's United Shows.'

"IV. That on the 28th day of March, 1914, the Arizona Corporation Commission denied the defendant's application for a rehearing of said order recited in paragraph III hereof.

"V. That said order entered by the Arizona Corporation Commission on the 25th day of March, 1914, as recited in paragraph III hereof, was not complied with by defendant, but wholly ignored.

"VI. That on the 31st day of March, 1914, the state of Arizona, at the relation of George P. Bullard, Attorney General, filed a petition addressed to the Arizona Corporation Commission, praying that an order be entered, directed to the defendant, requiring it to show cause why it should not be punished for contempt of the order of the Arizona Corporation Commission, as recited in paragraph III hereof, and that pursuant to the said petition, the Arizona

Corporation Commission, on the 1st day of April, 1914, entered an order, directed to the defendant, requiring it to show cause on the 13th day of April, 1914, at 10 o'clock a. m., why it should not be punished for contempt, as alleged in the said petition of the state of Arizona, at the relation of George P. Bullard, its Attorney General, as aforesaid.

"VII. That pursuant to said petition of the state of Arizona, at the relation of George P. Bullard, Attorney General, a hearing was had, and the defendant was adjudged guilty of a contempt of the order of the Arizona Corporation Commission, recited in paragraph III hereof, whereupon the Arizona Corporation Commission, upon the 16th day of May, 1914, entered the following order: 'It is therefore ordered that the Southern Pacific Company be and it is hereby declared in contempt of this commission's order, in docket No. 165, and the said company be and it is hereby fined the sum of $1,500. It is further ordered that Arizona Eastern Railroad Company be and it is hereby declared in contempt of this commission's order, in docket No. 165, and that the said company be and it is hereby fined the sum of $500. It is further ordered that copies of this order be served upon Southern Pacific Company and Arizona Eastern Railroad Company, and the Attorney General of the state of Arizona, and unless the fines, as herein imposed, be paid and satisfied on or before June 1, 1914, that the Attorney General shall proceed to the collection of same as provided by law.'

"VIII. That the defendant refused to pay and satisfy the fine imposed by said order of the commission, as recited in paragraph VII herein, on or before June 1, 1914, and thereupon, to wit: Upon the 20th day of June, 1914, the state of Arizona filed with the above-entitled court its complaint against the defendant, which prayed for the recovery of the sum of $1,500, the fine assessed against the defendant by the Arizona Corporation Commission for a contempt of the order of said Arizona Corporation Commission, as recited in paragraph III hereof.

"IX. That the defendant engaged itself to transport for hire circuses and other institutions similar to that conducted by Campbell's United Shows, which the defendant was required to transport, as provided by the order recited in paragraph III hereof.

"Conclusions of Law.

"The court from the above special findings of fact concludes as a matter of law therefrom as follows:

"I. That the Arizona Corporation Commission had jurisdiction of the person of the defendant and the subject-matter of the action, and was authorized and empowered by the Constitution and laws of the state of Arizona to enter the order as recited in paragraph III of the special findings of fact, and to adjudge the defendant in contempt for a refusal to obey said order.

"II. That the above-entitled court has jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, and the subject-matter of the above-entitled cause of action, and is empowered by the Constitution and laws of the state of Arizona to enforce and collect the fine imposed upon the defendant by the Arizona Corporation Commission for a violation of the order of that commission, as recited in paragraph III of the special findings of fact herein.

"III. That the order of said Arizona Corporation Commission, as recited in paragraph III of the special findings of fact, in no way imposed a burden upon interstate commerce, in contravention of section 8 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States.

"IV. That it was the duty of the defendant, under the Constitution and laws of the state of Arizona, to transport Campbell's United Shows, as provided by the order of the Arizona Corporation Commission, as recited in paragraph III of the special findings of fact, even though it acted in such capacity as a private carrier, for the reason that it had held itself out and engaged to transport circuses and other institutions similar to Campbell's United Shows.

"V. That even though the defendant, in the transportation of Campbell's United Shows, engaged itself as a private carrier, it so engaged itself as a carrier for hire, and was, under the Constitution and laws of the state of Arizona, subject to regulation by the Arizona Corporation Commission.

"VI. That the order of the Arizona Corporation Commission as recited in paragraph III of the special findings of fact did not impair the liability of the defendant as a private carrier.

"VII. That the plaintiff is entitled to judgment against the defendant for the sum of $1,500."

The questions raised on this appeal by the appellant in its assignments of error are whether the original proceeding by the Corporation Commission fixing the rate to be charged Campbell's United Shows for transportation from Tucson to Phœnix was null and void for the reason: (1) That there was no formal complaint filed against the appellant with the Corporation Commission either on its own motion or on the motion of any third party; that at the hearing the witnesses who made statements to the commission in the nature of evidence were not sworn; and (2) if these statutory requirements and formalities were waived by the appellant, whether the movement of Campbell's United Shows was an interstate transaction, and therefore not within the jurisdiction of the State Corporation Commission; also (3) whether the Corporation Commission had jurisdiction to make its order requiring the appellant to enter into a special contract as a private carrier for the transportation of the privately owned equipment of Campbell's United Shows; and (4) whether the statute authorizing the assessment of a fine for disobedience of its order is constitutional.

[1] We do not think that the appellant is in a position to complain of the informal and irregular manner in which the proceeding was instituted before the commission, nor because the witnesses were not sworn. A formal complaint setting forth a grievance against the appellant should have been filed and, of course, the testimony should have had the sanctity of an oath. These things seem to be required by the statute and by the rules of the Corporation Commission—paragraph 2336, Civil Code 1913, and rule 5 of Practice and Procedure, A. C. C. The omission to follow the statute and the rules of the commission, when concurred in by the appellant, as was done in this case, no prejudice being apparent, ought not now to be permitted to upset the whole proceeding. Although this question could have been presented to the Corporation Commission by appellant on its motion for a rehearing, it was not done. Paragraph 2342, Id., among other things, provides:

"No cause of action arising out of any order or decision of the commission shall accrue in any court to any corporation or person, or the state, unless such corporation or person, or the state, shall have made, before the effective date of said order or decision, application to the commission for a rehearing. Such application shall set forth specifically the ground or grounds on which the applicant considers said decision or order to be unlawful. No corporation or person, or the state, shall in any court urge or rely on any ground not set forth in said application."

Again it is provided (paragraph 2329, Id.) that the commission shall not be bound by the technical rules of evidence, and that informality in proceedings or in taking testimony shall not invalidate any order, decision or rule approved by the commission.

[2] Of course if the movement of Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix was an interstate movement, the order of the commission was void for want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter. The evidence shows that this show was traveling around over the country giving exhibitions; that early in February, 1914, it was at El Paso, Tex.; that at that time its agent inquired of the appellant for rates from that place through New Mexico into Arizona with a probable destination into California. No arrangement was effected between the appellant and Campbell's United Shows for transportation over appellant's line of railway. The shows, in fact, under a special contract with the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad Company, were transported from El Paso to Tucson with stop-overs at Douglas and Bisbee. When the show people made application to the appellant at Tucson for a contract to transport their equipment and entourage from Tucson to Phœnix appellant stated to them that it could not make a contract as a common carrier; that it had already entered into a contract with Sells-Floto Shows to transport them from Tucson to Phœnix; and that under the rules it could not transport Campbell's United Shows for a space of 30 days after the Sells-Floto Shows had been transported.

In the hearing before the Corporation Commission in the matter of fixing a rate the attorney for the appellant gave two reasons for not entering into a contract with Campbell's United Shows: First, he said:

"We wish to take the position we are not common carriers for circuses and carnivals; we want that in the record."

And, second:

"I am not acquainted with this special 30-day contract, but I understand there is an agreement between all show people as well as railroads to keep the shows spaced. This show coming in before Sells-Floto and with which the company has a contract, if he tenders the money —the freight at the regular rate, we have to carry him."

These were the only reasons suggested by the appellant at the hearing before the commission for not entering into a contract to transport Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix. There was no suggestion or intimation at that time that the movement was an interstate movement, although the evidence discloses that the agent for Campbell's United Shows stated that the show would go from Phœnix to Prescott, Clarkdale, and Kingman, and from Kingman to Needles, Cal.

It developed that appellant and other railroads of this section of the country had been accustomed to enter into contracts of transportation with circuses and carnival shows at rates very much less than the regular tariffs and containing terms of exemption from the liability of common carriers; that Campbell's United Shows had such a contract in 1913 with appellant and other roads in this and contiguous states. It was in this action that appellant raised the question of the interstate character of the movement from Tucson to Phœnix, claiming it as an integral part of a continuous transportation from El Paso, Tex., through New Mexico and Arizona to San Bernardino, Cal., and in support thereof introduced evidence of a contract with the Santa Fé to move Campbell's United Shows from Phœnix to Prescott, Clarkdale, Kingman, and thence into California.

It is evident that when Campbell's United Shows started from El Paso, Tex., on the peregrinations of a traveling show, it had mapped out a route traversing several states, and one familiar with the wanderings of such institutions would not undertake to place limitations upon its rovings by fixing its ultimate destination or many digressions from original plans. Its movements may be likened to that of a sightseer in going from one state into another on a common carrier, and, like the common carrier, both are subject to the rules, regulations, and laws applicable to interstate commerce. Each is entitled to and must pay the tariff rates as promulgated or approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, but where the movement is wholly intrastate, and to be consummated under a separate and independent contract of transportation, even though it be an advance step along the general route outlined at the beginning of the trip, we think it is the subject of state control and regulation. Having arrived in a state the show or traveler in "doing" the state could not claim or demand the schedule rate for interstate transportation, but must pay at the local or intrastate rate as long as the movement is from one stop in the state to another stop in the state.

We think the decision reached by the Supreme Court of the United States in Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé Railway Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 27 Sup. Ct. 360, 51 L. Ed. 540, is decisive of this case. The salient facts in the above case were: Two carloads of corn were shipped from Hudson, S. D., with ultimate destination Goldthwaite, Tex.: the first lap of the movement was from Hudson to Texarkana, Tex.; at this place a change of ownership was effected and a bill of lading issued to the new owner, calling for the transportation of the two identical cars and contents from Texarkana, Tex., over the lines of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company and the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé Railway Company to Goldthwaite, to be delivered there to Saylor & Burnett, the last consignees and for whom the two carloads of grain were intended when first started on their journey from Hudson, S. D. The Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé Railway Company refused to accept the charges from Texarkana to Goldthwaite as prescribed by the State Railroad Commission, and demanded and collected a larger sum, based upon the interstate rate. The state of Texas, in a statutory action for extortion, recovered judgment in the Texas courts; the railroad company appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, contending that the movement from Texarkana, Tex., to Goldthwaite, Tex., was but an integral part of the movement from Hudson, S. D., to Goldthwaite, Tex., and interstate in character. The Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Brewer, said:

> "The single question in the case is whether, as between Texarkana and Goldthwaite, this was an interstate shipment."

Further on he said:

> "It is undoubtedly true that the character of a shipment, whether local or interstate, is not changed by a transfer of title during the transportation. But whether it be one or the other may depend on the contract of shipment. The rights and obligations of carriers and shippers are reciprocal. The first contract of shipment in this case was from Hudson to Texarkana. * * * The control over goods in process of transportation, which may be repeatedly changed by sales, is one thing; the transportation is another thing, and follows the contract of shipment, until that is changed by the agreement of owner and carrier."

And the court further said that the "thought or purpose" of the shipper of the corn as to its further disposition "was a matter immaterial so far as the completed transportation was concerned," and illustrated his meaning in the following language:

> "In this respect there is no difference between an interstate passenger and an interstate transportation. If Hardin, for instance, had purchased at Hudson a ticket for interstate carriage to Texarkana, intending all the while after he reached Texarkana to go on to Goldthwaite, he would not be entitled on his arrival at Texarkana to a new ticket from Texarkana to Goldthwaite at the proportionate fraction of the rate prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission for carriage from Hudson to Goldthwaite. The one contract of the railroad companies having been finished he must make a new contract for his carriage to Goldthwaite, and that would be subject to the law of the state within which that carriage was to be made."

Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé Railway Co. v. Texas has been followed and approved by the following: Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. v. State of Iowa, 233 U. S. 334, 34 Sup. Ct. 592, 58 L. Ed. 988; s. c., 152 Iowa, 317, 130 N. W. 802; Penna. R. R. Co. v. Mitchell, 238 U. S. 251, 35 Sup. Ct. 787, 59 L. Ed. 1293; United States v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 946; Acme Cement Plaster Co. v. Chicago & Alton Railroad Co., 17 Interest. Com. Com'n R. 220. In Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. v. Iowa, supra, it is said:

> "But the fact that commodities received on interstate shipments are reshipped by the consignees, in the cars in which they are received, to other points of destination, does not necessarily establish a continuity of movement or prevent the reshipment to a point within the same state from having an independent and intrastate character. Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fé Ry. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403 [27 Sup. Ct. 360, 51 L. Ed. 540]; Ohio Railroad Commission v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 109 [32 Sup. Ct. 653, 56 L. Ed. 1004]; Texas & N. O. R. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 129, 130 [33 Sup. Ct. 229, 57 L. Ed. 442]. The question is with respect to the nature of the actual movement in the particular case."

In Campbell's United Shows, including entertainers, attendants, and employés, there were about 110 "passengers" not distinguished in the application of the law from ordinary passengers when seeking transportation from a common carrier. The rest of the show consisted of baggage, animals, and some railroad equipment, the movements of which were necessarily coincident with the movement of the troop of entertainers, attendants, and employés.

The three principal cases relied upon by the appellant to sustain his contention that the carriage of the Campbell's Shows from Tucson to Phœnix was an integral part of a continuous movement from El Paso, Tex., through New Mexico and Arizona to California, and therefore interstate in character, are Southern Pacific Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. 279, 55 L. Ed. 310; Ohio Railroad Commission v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 32 Sup. Ct. 653, 56 L. Ed. 1004; Texas & New Orleans Railroad Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 33 Sup. Ct. 229, 57 L. Ed. 442. These cases all pertained to foreign commerce originating in the interior of the United States, and at the time the shipments were started on their journey they were definitely destined to some foreign port. The very nature and character of the movements required different carriers and changes of billing at the point of exportation and some times before reaching the point of exportation; hence it is said in those cases that the mere "accident" of bills of lading and forms of contract of transportation does not change the movement from an interstate or foreign to an intrastate movement. Commenting upon those cases in Louisiana Railroad Commission v. Texas & Pacific Railway Co., 229 U. S. 336, reading at page 341, 33 Sup. Ct. 837, at page 839, 57 L. Ed. 1215, the court said:

> "In those cases there was necessarily a local movement of freight, and it necessarily terminated at the seaboard. But it was decided that its character and continuity as a movement in foreign commerce did not terminate, nor was it affected by being transported on local bills of lading. The principle enunciated in the cases was that it is the essential character of the commerce, not the accident of local or through bills of lading, which determines federal or state control over it. And it takes character as interstate or foreign commerce when it is actually started in the course of transportation to another state or to a foreign country." Penna. R. R. Co. v. Clark Coal Co., 238 U. S. 456, 35 Sup. Ct. 896, 59 L. Ed. 1406.

The articles involved in those cases, to wit, cotton seed cake and cotton seed meal, coal and lumber, were all articles of merchandise, the subjects of barter and sale. The stoppage of them occasioned by the necessities of transportation during the course of their movement from the initial to the terminal points of shipment on a continuous movement to another state or foreign country may truthfully be said to be mere "accidents" of the movement. It is not so with a circus or carnival show where the stops are not "incidents" or "accidents" of the movement, but are the only means by which the purposes of a circus or show may be accomplished; the movement of a circus and show being a mere accident to the object of its existence —the giving of exhibitions.

[3] It is next contended that the Corporation Commission was without jurisdiction to make its order requiring appellant to transport Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix, because no intrastate tariffs had been filed with the commission showing the rates for movement of privately owned equipment in circus trains or otherwise, or obliging appellant to transport privately owned equipment in circus trains. That the appellant was under no common-law obligation to accept the privately owned equipment of Campbell's United Shows we think is well settled. It could entirely refuse to accept such transportation, or if it should accept it the law permitted the common carrier to dictate the terms upon which the privately owned equipment of such a concern was transported. Clough v. Grand Trunk Western Railway Co., 155 Fed. 81, 85 C. C. A. 1, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 446, and cases there cited.

[4] The rule of the common law prevails in this jurisdiction, unless it has been changed and modified by statute. Looking to our statutes and to our Constitution, we are satisfied that the common-law rule has been abrogated in this state so as to make it obligatory upon common carriers to accept and transport the privately owned equipment of circuses and other show outfits under the rules, regulations, and rates, when reasonable and just, prescribed by the Corporation Commission. Article 15, § 2, of our Constitution provides that:

> "All corporations other than municipal engaged in carrying persons or property for hire * * * shall be deemed public service corporations."

Section 3 provides that:

> "The Corporation Commission shall have full power to, and shall, prescribe just and reasonable classifications to be used, and just and reasonable rates and charges to be made and collected, by public service corporations within the state for service rendered therein, and make reasonable rules, regulations, and orders, by which such corporations shall be governed in the transaction of business within the state, and may prescribe the forms of contracts and the systems of keeping accounts to be used by such corporations in transacting such business."

Chapter 11, tit. 9, Civil Code 1913, known as the "Public Service Corporation Act," provides for the organization, powers, and jurisdiction of the Corporation Commission. In section 2278 thereof, subdivisions E and F, the term "transportation of persons" is defined to include every service in connection with or incidental to the safety, comfort, or convenience of the person transported, and the receipt, carriage, and delivery of such person and his baggage; and the term "transportation of property" is defined to include every service in connection with or incidental to the transportation of the property. In subdivision Z, the term "public service corporation" is defined to include every common carrier, and further declares it to be subject to the jurisdiction, control, and regulation of the commission under the provisions of this chapter. Section 2289 provides that:

> "All charges made, demanded or received by any public service corporation * * * for * * * any service rendered or to be rendered, shall be just and reasonable,"

—and prohibits unjust or unreasonable charges or demands for any service. Section 2290 requires every common carrier to file with the commission schedules showing the rates, fares, charges, and classifications for transportation between termini, within this state, of persons and property from each point upon its route to all other points thereon. It also requires every public service corporation, other than a common carrier, to file with the commission, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed, like schedules. Section 2295 reads as follows:

> "No public service corporation shall, as to rates, charges, service, facilities, or in any other respect, make or grant any preference or advantage to any corporation or person or subject any corporation or person to any prejudice or disadvantage. No public service corporation shall establish or maintain any unreasonable difference as to rates, charges, service, facilities or in any other respect, either as between localities or as between classes of service. The commission shall have the power to determine any question of fact arising under this section."

Section 2307 vests the Corporation Commission with power and jurisdiction to supervise and regulate every public service corporation in the state, and to do all things convenient and necessary in the exercise of such power and jurisdiction. Section 2308 empowers the Commission, after a hearing, if it shall find any contract affecting rates, fares, charges, or classification to be unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, or preferential, to determine the just, reasonable, or sufficient rates, fares, charges, and classifications for contracts to be thereafter observed; and further authorizes this action of the commission upon a single rate, fare, charge, or contract.

We think it was the intention of the law, both constitutional and statutory, that the Corporation Commission should have plenary power over every public service corporation transacting business in this state of a local nature. That this power of supervision extends to contracts for the transportation of both persons and property, whether effected in the capacity of private carrier or common or public carrier. Nor do we think that appellant can complain because it had neglected to file with the commission tariffs showing the rates for the movement of privately owned equipment of circuses and like organizations. These omissions may be excused, as stated by the Interstate Commerce Commission in its rules concerning circuses and other show outfits, owing to "the peculiar nature of this traffic and the difficulties of establishing rates thereon in advance of shipper's request describing the character and volume of the traffic offered," but it cannot justify a refusal upon application to fix just and reasonable rates or to enter into just and reasonable contracts.

[6] For the first time the appellant raises the question in this court that the statute (section 2357) under which the Corporation Commission assessed the fine in question is unconstitutional and void. The attorney for the appellant in the trial court during the course of the trial entered into the following oral stipulation:

> "I am going further * * * and stipulate that if the Arizona Corporation Commission had power and authority and proceeded regularly as required by the statutes of the state of Arizona to enter the original order compelling us to promulgate and apply this original rate that they ordered, that then they have taken sufficient proceedings to adjudge us in contempt. That narrows the issues to determine whether or not the commission in first instant entered a valid order, their original order."

Notwithstanding this stipulation it is now urged that the law is unconstitutional because of the excessive fines and penalties provided, and we are referred to the cases of Bonbright v. Geary (D. C.) 210 Fed. 44, and Van Dyke v. Geary (D. C.) 218 Fed. 111, as authority for this contention. The question involved in those cases is not the one involved here. Those cases involved the danger of the public utility incurring a liability for every day the order of the commission was not observed or obeyed pending an appeal to determine the validity of the order issued by the commission—the statute (section 2352) making every violation of any order, etc., a separate and distinct offense, and in case of a continuing violation each day's continuance thereof a separate and distinct offense.

We think it is clear from a reading of those decisions that it was not so much the severity of the penalty as the daily cumulation of penalties while testing the legality of the commission's action that influenced the decisions against the validity of the law. In the Van Dyke Case, Sawtelle, District Judge, quoted from Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123-144, 28 Sup. Ct. 441, 447 (52 L. Ed. 714, 13 L. R. A. [N. S.] 932, 14 Ann. Cas. 764), the contention of the complainants as follows:

> "The contention is urged by the complainants in the suit that the company is denied the equal protection of the laws, and its property is liable to be taken without due process of law, because it is only allowed a hearing upon the claim of the unconstitutionality of the acts and orders in question, at the risk, if mistaken, of being subjected to such enormous penalties, resulting in the possible confiscation of its whole property, that rather than take such risks the company would obey the laws, although such obedience might also result in the end (though by a slower process) in such confiscation. * * * Coming to the inquiry regarding the alleged invalidity of these acts, we take up the contention that they are invalid on their face on account of the penalties."

Further quoting from the Young Case:

> "We hold, therefore, that the provisions of the acts relating to the enforcement of the rates, either for freight or passengers, by imposing such enormous fines and possible imprisonment as a result of an unsuccessful effort to test the validity of the laws themselves, are unconstitutional on their face, without regard to the question of the insufficiency of those rates."

The decision in the Van Dyke Case was limited in this language:

> "On the authority of these cases and on principle we are of the opinion, and so decide, that said Act 90 of the First Legislature of the state of Arizona imposes such penalties and imprisonment as to practically deprive the complainant of the right to appeal to the court to determine the validity of the law and the orders of the Corporation Commission, and is therefore unconstitutional in that particular."

The order here applies to a single rate for one trip only. It was not a permanent order, and could not be violated but once; no daily accumulation of penalties or fines could result from its disobedience; the appellant took no chances of incurring accumulated fines and penalties in prosecuting this appeal, and, not being affected by the feature of the law held unconstitutional in the Van Dyke and Bonbright Cases, is not in a position to raise the question.

The judgment of the lower court is affirmed.

FRANKLIN, C. J., concurs.

CUNNINGHAM, J. (dissenting). The essential question in this case is whether the movement of the Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix via Maricopa, a movement wholly within the state of Arizona, is a movement of interstate commerce and under the protection of section 8, art. 1, of the United States Constitution. If in fact such movement was interstate commerce, the Arizona Corporation Commission, by its order made and entered on March 25, 1914, exceeded its jurisdiction by fixing a transportation rate chargeable for the movement, and the order so made was void and incapable of initiating a duty on the railroad company.

The trial court made special findings of fact and stated its conclusions of law therefrom. The court in its findings of fact does not find any fact nor refer to any testimony which shows or tends to show the points from and to which the shows moved on the journey. The findings are limited to the movement from Tucson to Phœnix within the state of Arizona. The conclusions of law on this issue are equally unsatisfactory. In the third paragraph of the conclusions of law the court finds as a fact, not as a matter of law, that the order of the Corporation Commission made and entered on March 25, 1914, "in no way imposed a burden upon interstate commerce." Inferentially the trial court must have believed that the movement of the said shows between the points in question was not in fact a movement of interstate commerce; but the fact was not found by the court.

A careful examination of the opinion of the Arizona Corporation Commission annexed to the complaint in this case, the basis for the order of March 25, 1914, will disclose that the Corporation Commission did not consider the matter of the beginning and termination of the journey laid out by the Campbell's United Shows, but only took into its consideration the matter of the reasonableness of rates charged by railroad companies for transportation between points in Arizona. The issue of fact whether the movement was interstate commerce is squarely presented in this case, and is the controlling issue joined and incapable of determination in the absence of evidence of the entire journey.

The defense introduced substantial evidence tending to show that it moved the Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix under a rate prescribed by the federal Interstate Commerce Commission; that said shows were moved from Phœnix to a point within the state of California stopping at a number of points along the course of the journey, but the movement was made pursuant to special rate contracts. The defendant introduced evidence tending to show that about March 6, 1914, the Campbell's United Shows opened negotiations with defendant, Southern Pacific Company, for transportation "between Tucson and Phœnix, with a probable movement to other points in Arizona and in California, at that time explaining that they were coming from Deming, N. M., into Tucson over the El Paso & Southwestern."

The reporter's notes of the hearing before the Corporation Commission resulting in the order of March 25, 1914, and introduced as a portion of plaintiff's Exhibit B in this cause, disclose that the representative of Campbell's United Shows, Mr. E. L. Williams, being examined before the commission, was asked:

> "Where do you propose to go from here?
> "Mr. Williams: From here to Prescott, Clarkdale, and Kingman, and from Kingman to Needles, and then into California."

The evidence is therefore without conflict that the starting place of this organization of shows was Deming, in the state of New Mexico, and its stopping place was within the state of California, the exact point in contemplation is left in doubt by the evidence, but that the route for the journey determined upon in advance of starting from Deming, N. M., was through Arizona to Needles in the state of California, with the expectation of frequent stops incidentally along the course of the proposed journey, is clearly shown. The transportation companies were informed of the proposed route of travel from the place of beginning to its termination at Needles, Cal., at least. The proposed incidental stopping places were not disclosed, nor, perhaps, fully determined upon. That the shows would stop at Tucson and at Phœnix, however, was definitely determined, of which stops the transportation companies involved had information. These facts were shown before the Corporation Commission before its order was made on March 25, 1914, and upon the trial of this cause the facts are undisputed. Notwithstanding these very vital and controlling facts before the court, directly bearing on and prima facie establishing the defendant's alleged defense, no special finding or any finding with regard thereto was made by the court.

Passengers, baggage, and freight move in interstate commerce, and are therefore subject to the exclusive regulation of the laws of Congress under section 8 of article 1 of the United States Constitution when the movement is commenced in one of the states with the intention that such movement shall continue and ultimately terminate within another state, and that intention is consummated. It is not the contract for the rate of transportation which controls the character of the movement. The incidental interruption of the movement along its course, either voluntarily or involuntarily, is not the controlling factor. It is the commencement and ending of the continuous journey in contemplation with which the movement begins which fixes the character of interstate commerce upon the thing moved. The several contracts of transportation of the interstate commerce pursuant to which the movement is commenced and continued to its terminus does not fix the character of the thing moved. The fact that the movement is not intended to proceed without incidental stop-overs, or under one contract, or that any of the transportation companies handling the movement acts for itself and not in conjunction with the other connecting companies in the movement of the thing, do not impair the interstate commerce character of the thing moved, nor the movement participated in by the several transporting companies. Hence the evidence establishes the fact that the movement of the Campbell's United Shows from Tucson to Phœnix was a movement along a connecting link of the journey contemplated and commenced at Deming, in the state of New Mexico, and intended to terminate within the state of California, in the course of which journey the intention of the shipper was to pass over the Southern Pacific Company's road from Tucson to Phœnix in the state of Arizona, as a definite portion and continuation of such journey, of which intention the Southern Pacific Company had full notice.

As a conclusion of law from these facts, the said shows, when they commenced the journey, and continuing on the journey from Tucson to Phœnix, were in character moved in interstate commerce. The attempt of the Arizona Corporation Commission to prescribe rates chargeable for such movement of such interstate commerce is an interference with a matter with which the said Corporation Commission has no jurisdiction, and as a consequence the order violated by the Southern Pacific Company was void, and its violation did not subject the Southern Pacific Company to punishment.

When goods have been delivered to a carrier for transportation to a destination in another state, and when they have actually started in the course of transportation to another state, such goods are in interstate commerce. Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission and Young, 219 U. S. 498, 31 Sup. Ct. 279, 55 L. Ed. 310; Texas & N. O. R. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 33 Sup. Ct. 229, 57 L. Ed. 442; Railroad Commission v. Worthington, 225 U. S. 101, 32 Sup. Ct. 653, 56 L. Ed. 1004; United States v. Union Stockyard, 226 U. S. 286, 33 Sup. Ct. 83, 57 L. Ed. 226; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas, 204 U. S. 403, 27 Sup. Ct. 360, 51 L. Ed. 540; Easdale v. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Kan.) 164 Pac. 164—citing Louisiana R. R. Com'n v. T. & P. Ry. 229 U. S. 336, 33 Sup. Ct. 837, 57 L. Ed. 1215, and A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Harold, 241 U. S. 371, 36 Sup. Ct. 665, 60 L. Ed. 1050. Hence if the movement from Deming, N. M., to Tucson, Ariz., is considered as a completed transaction, certainly the movement from Tucson was commenced to terminate ultimately in the state of California, and the movement on the journey commenced, the object moved became impressed with the character of interstate commerce and the regulation of such movement as to rates of transportation remained exclusively with the Interstate Commerce Commission, because that authority had acted in the matter and prescribed the rate chargeable for the transportation of such class of commerce.

The judgment in this case is not sustained by the evidence nor by the law. I am of the opinion that the judgment should be vacated and the cause dismissed for the reason the Arizona Corporation Commission did not have power to make and enter the order of March 25, 1914, and therefore such order was a nullity, and the appellant's failure to obey the order created no liability to punishment.

(19 Ariz. 40)

FUQUA v. STATE. (Cr. 420.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑112(1)—VENUE—PLACE OF OFFENSE.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the state, the contention that the court did not have jurisdiction for the reason that the liquors, before being brought into venue county, were actually introduced into the state in another county, and hence that the offense was committed in that county, was without merit.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 220, 221, 230.]

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑823(1)—PROSECUTIONS—INSTRUCTIONS.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquors into the state, the principle of law, stated in a refused requested instruction, that "you are instructed that, before you are justified in finding the defendant guilty, you must be satisfied by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant introduced the whisky in question into this state for an unlawful purpose, that is, to sell, give, barter or dispose of to another, he is not guilty if he introduced it for his own personal use or consumption," was fairly stated in a given instruction that: "The court instructs the jury that a person may lawfully introduce whisky into this state for his own personal use or consumption. That is no crime, and, if you believe from the evidence that the defendant introduced the whisky in question into the state for his own personal use or consumption, it is your duty to acquit him."

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1992-1994, 3158.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑823(1) — APPEAL — INSTRUCTION.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the state, where the court gave an instruction which fairly stated the law, no error was committed in refusing to give another which sets forth the same principle of law, but by a different arrangement of the language used to express the idea involved.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1992-1994, 3158.]

4. WITNESSES 🔑337(4) — EVIDENCE — IMPEACHMENT OF ACCUSED.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the state, where the defense was that the liquor which the defendant admits he introduced from California was for his own personal use, and not for illegal disposition, and he testified to that effect, the state had the right to test the matter of defendant's purpose in introducing the liquors by cross-examination into that issue, and to ask the questions whether it was the first time he had brought liquors into the state and if he had not made regular trips for such purpose.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. § 1131.]

5. WITNESSES 🔑380(2) — EVIDENCE — IMPEACHMENT OF ACCUSED.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquors into the state, where the defendant on direct examination and in support of his defense stated that he introduced the liquors for personal use, and on cross-examination denied that he had brought in other lots, evidence offered by the state in rebuttal, tending to show that defendant had made other and different statements of the intended use of the liquors he had brought in, was relevant and competent as bearing on the defense offered.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Witnesses, Cent. Dig. §§ 1211, 1219.]

6. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑371(10) — EVIDENCE — ADMISSIBILITY.

Evidence of trips made by defendant to the same place and of loads of whisky brought back by him other than the load in question was also admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 830, 831.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Maricopa County; R. C. Stanford, Judge.

R. H. Fuqua was convicted of the offense of introducing intoxicating liquor into the state, in violation of law, and he appeals. Affirmed.

Baker & Baker, of Phœnix, for appellant. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. Wm. Kramer and Geo. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

CUNNINGHAM, J. The appellant bought a large quantity of whisky, wine, and beer, at Imperial, in the state of California. He loaded the liquor in an automobile in cases and suit cases, and placed tags on the cases indicating their contents. A quilt used for bedding was thrown over the load in the automobile, and the suit cases were placed on the outside attachments of the machine. No attempt was made to conceal the character of the load carried.

The appellant testified as follows:

"We crossed the Colorado river at Yuma over the new state bridge, and came into Arizona at Yuma, in Yuma county, Ariz. We stopped in Yuma for a little while on the public street, and then came on towards Phœnix to a place near Buckeye, in Maricopa county, where we were arrested. I intended to drink myself this liquor I brought in, and never intended to sell it, * * * nor dispose of it to any one else."

On cross-examination, the county attorney was permitted, over the objection of appellant, to inquire of the appellant whether he had made a number of trips to the same place, other than the trip he admitted he did make. The purpose for which the county attorney asked the questions was to cross-examine the appellant "relative to his use of whisky, as a person who drinks that you inquired into." The objections raised were that the matter was not proper cross-examination, that the questions tend to show the commission of another offense, and that it is immaterial and irrelevant. The witness denied that he made frequent trips and returned with intoxicating liquors. The witness was asked whether witness had not made statements, at the time of his making a second trip, to another named person to the effect that witness was bringing the liquors in for a certain named person. This was objected to on the grounds that it is improper examination, that it is immaterial, irrelevant, incompetent, and improper cross-examination, and offered for the purpose of prejudicing the jury against the defendant. These objections were overruled. The appellant, in answer to all of the questions, answered in the negative. The matters to which these objections were raised were gone into in detail. At all times the defendant answered, when required to answer, in the negative.

When the defendant had rested his case, the state in rebuttal introduced testimony tending to contradict the denials made by the appellant on his cross-examination. The charge against a codefendant was dismissed by the prosecution, and the codefendant testified as a witness for the state. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. The court pronounced a judgment of conviction accordingly. From the judgment and from the order refusing a new trial, the defendant appeals.

[1] The appellant contends that the superior court of Maricopa county has no jurisdiction of the offense, for the reason the offense was committed in Yuma county, and not in Maricopa county, as the intoxicating liquors were actually introduced into the state within Yuma county. Consequently, he argues that the offense was committed wholly in Yuma county. This court, in Reynolds v. State, 18 Ariz. —, 161 Pac. 885, considered the question here presented, and a majority of the court resolved the question against the appellant's contention. I adhere to the ruling there made.

The defendant requested the court in writing to give the following instruction:

"You are instructed that, before you are justified in finding the defendant guilty, you must be satisfied by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant introduced the whisky in question into this state for an unlawful purpose; that is, to sell, give, barter, or dispose of to another. He is not guilty if he introduced it for his own personal use or consumption."

The court refused to give this instruction, of which order the appellant complains.

At the written request of the defendant, the court gave the following instruction:

"The court instructs the jury that a person may lawfully introduce whisky into this state for his own personal use or consumption. That is no crime, and, if you believe from the evidence that the defendant introduced the whisky in question into the state for his own personal use or consumption, it is your duty to acquit him."

[2, 3] Before the recent amendment of the prohibition laws of the state, these instructions, the one given and the one refused, fairly stated the law. Having given one, no error was committed by the court in refusing to give another which sets forth the same principle of law but by a different arrangement of the language used to express the idea involved.

[4] The appellant complains of the inquiry, on cross-examination, over his objection "if this was the first time he had ever brought any load of whisky into the state, and if he had not made regular trips to Imperial, bringing in whisky each time. The objection was made on the ground that it was not proper cross-examination of the defendant, and for the further reason that it tended to show the commission of another offense."

The sole defense offered by the defendant was that the liquors, he admits that he introduced from the state of California, were introduced by him for purposes of his own personal use, and not for illegal disposition by him. The appellant on his direct examination so testified. Thereupon the state had the right to test the matter of the defendant's purpose for introducing the liquors, by a cross-examination into that issue injected into the trial for the first time by the defendant's evidence in chief. The inquiry made was both relevant and material to the issue raised.

[5, 6] The evidence offered by the state in rebuttal, of which complaint is made, that is, evidence tending to show that defendant made other and different statements of the use to which the liquors which he brought in were intended for, was relevant and competent as bearing on the defense offered. The evidence of trips made by the defendant to the same place and loads of whisky brought back by him other than the load in question in this case was also pertinent to the issue raised on the part of the defendant.

The trial court did not err in admitting the testimony of which appellant has complained. I am of the opinion the record is free from reversible error. Consequently, the judgment must be affirmed.

FRANKLIN, C. J., and ROSS, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 44)

MARSHALL v. STATE. (No. 421.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1186(4)—NAMING DEFENDANTS IN STATEMENT CHARGING ACTS.

Where the names of defendants were given in the title of the information, and the charging part referred thereto by the use of the words "said defendants," the information was sufficient, although defendants were not named in the statement charging the offense, in view of Pen. Code, 1913, § 944, providing that no information is insufficient, nor can the trial, judgment, or other proceedings thereon be affected by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form which does not tend to the prejudice of a substantial right of the defendant upon its merits.

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1186(4)—ALLEGATION OF FILING.

The information was sufficient, although it did not allege the date of filing.

3. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑236(4) — IMPORTATION INTO STATE—EVIDENCE—SUFFICIENCY.

In a prosecution for illegal transportation of whisky over state line, evidence held sufficient to justify jury in drawing inference that accused advised and encouraged the unlawful introduction.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 305, 306.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Graham County; A. G. McAlister, Judge.

William Henry Marshall was convicted of the unlawful introduction of intoxicating liquors into the state, and he appeals. Affirmed.

W. K. Dial, of Safford, for appellant. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. Wm. Kramer and Geo. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

CUNNINGHAM, J. The appellant demurred to the information filed. The demurrer is upon the grounds that the information does not substantially conform to the requirements of paragraph 935, Penal Code of Arizona 1913, in the particular that it does not name the party charged with the commission of the offense in the body of the information, and that it is not direct and certain as it regards the party charged, as required by paragraph 936, Penal Code 1913. The demurrer was overruled.

[1, 2] The information, omitting the title of the court, is as follows:

"The State of Arizona, Plaintiff, v. Ed Knight, James Bozelli, William Marshall, Tom Williams, Jose Garcia, C. B. (John) Hellings, Defendants. Information. In the name and by the authority of the state of Arizona, said defendants are accused by the county attorney of Graham county, state of Arizona, by this information, of the crime of misdemeanor, committed as follows: That said defendants, on or about the 13th day of April, 1916, and before the filing of this information, at and in the county of Graham, state of Arizona, willfully, knowingly, unlawfully, did introduce into the state of Arizona, and into the county of Graham in said state, intoxicating liquors, to wit, whisky, contrary," etc.

Paragraph 934, Penal Code of Arizona 1913, requires that the information must contain: (1) The title of the action, specifying the name of the court to which the same is presented and the names of the parties. (2) A statement of the acts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language, and in such manner as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended. Paragraph 935, Id., sets forth a form for informations, and declares that if the form suggested and set forth is substantially followed the information is sufficient. The information filed does not allege the date of the filing. The names of the defendants are given in the title of the action, but not specified in the statement charging the acts constituting the offense. The title of the action is referred to for the names of the parties charged by the use of the words "said defendants." Paragraph 936, Id., requires that the information must be direct and certain as it regards: (1) The party charged; (2) the offense charged; (3) the particular circumstances of the offense charged, when necessary.

> "The * * * information is sufficient, if it can be understood therefrom: * * * (3) That the defendant is named, or if his name cannot be discovered, that he is described by a fictitious name. * * *" Paragraph 943, Penal Code 1913.
>
> "No * * * information is insufficient, nor can the trial, judgment or other proceedings thereon be affected, by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form which does not tend to the prejudice of a substantial right of the defendant upon its merits." Paragraph 944, Penal Code 1913.

The appellant is named in the title of the action, and that name is clearly referred to in the commencement of the information by the words "said defendants." The defendants named in the title of the action and so referred to are certainly the parties directly charged. Can this be misunderstood? This defendant is most certainly named within the four corners of the information, and as certainly the information charges this defendant with the commission of the alleged offense. If we should hold otherwise, we would disregard paragraph 944 of the Penal Code of Arizona of 1913, and hold that the information is imperfect and defective in form, but has no tendency to the prejudice of a substantial right of the defendant upon the merits. The omission of the date on which the accusation is made by the county attorney, and the reference to the title of the cause for the name of the party charged is a practice to be discouraged in the most positive terms, but after all these matters as they occur in this particular information are nothing more important than defects and imperfections in the form of the information, and do not seem to prejudice the rights of this appellant upon a consideration of a demurrer. The demurrer was overruled without the commission of reversible error.

[3] The fact in issue at the trial was whether the defendant Marshall was concerned in the act of transporting the whisky over the state line. The appellant conceded that he left Globe and went to Lordsburg, N. M., for the purpose of buying whisky and bringing the whisky back to Globe; that he went to Lordsburg, arriving there about 11 o'clock in the morning; that he met a man, who stated his name was Harris; that Harris informed defendant that defendant could get all the whisky wanted at Duncan, Ariz., from a man driving a wagon; and that, if defendant would return by the way of Duncan, he would meet the said driver of the wagon, from whom defendant could get the spirits wanted, and evade the penalty of the law for introducing the whisky into the state. Defendant followed the instructions given him by the man calling himself Harris, and met the "booze" wagon at the time and place Harris informed defendant he would meet it, and, after defendant informed the driver of the "booze" wagon that he (defendant) had seen Harris in Lordsburg, then no trouble was encountered in having 17 cases of whisky transferred from the "booze" wagon into defendant's possession, but this transfer took place in Arizona.

Courts have never applied the admiralty rules which recognizes the vessel of one nation within the waters of another nation as within the jurisdiction of its home to "booze ships" cruising about the Southwestern desert stretches and unconsciously crossing a state line. The "booze" wagon mentioned in the testimony in this case, from the description given of its contents, was a tramp vessel of the desert launched in the wet state of New Mexico, and cruising along under the radio orders of Harris. It was a matter for the jury to determine whether the appellant, Marshall, as a fact received the possession of the whisky within the state of New Mexico, and caused it to be introduced into Arizona for the purposes of sale, or whether he went to Lordsburg, N. M., for information as to where he could get the whisky closer home, and there found this "Desert Spiritual Admiral" Harris, and from him did get the information sought, and succeeded in evading the laws of the state of Arizona. No rational, fair jury would believe that Marshall was not concerned in introducing the whisky into Arizona. Because Marshall conveniently met a man driving a wagon loaded with whisky, all within Arizona, and got the whisky from the wagon and paid for it, all within Arizona, is evidence that the whisky was delivered to Marshall within Arizona; but the fact remains that the whisky in the wagon belonged in Lordsburg, N. M., that it was under the control of a man calling himself Harris, and that it was sent into Arizona from New Mexico for the purpose of being delivered in Arizona to the persons designated by Harris, including Marshall, and to be paid for on delivery.

Did Marshall aid and abet the introduction of the whisky into Arizona, or, not being present, did he advise and encourage such unlawful introduction? If the jury believed all of Marshall's and Hellings' testimony, they must therefrom believe that Marshall and Hellings did not directly commit the act of passing the whisky over the state line. So believing, the jury are justified in drawing the inference, from all the facts and circumstances in evidence, that Marshall did advise and encourage the introduction of such whisky into the state by Harris and the man in charge of the "booze" wagon.

Without the least doubt the "booze" wagon was on the road "this side of Duncan" by previous arrangement made by Marshall with the man calling himself Harris. It is not reasonable to believe that a man will load a wagon with whisky and drive along the public traveled highways of Arizona, accosting all the strangers he may meet traveling the road, and offering to sell whisky in wholesale lots, without some knowledge that the person met is in search of whisky, more particularly when the highway is one leading directly into a state where whisky is sold lawfully, and the travelers are coming from the direction of the licensed sale places. The jury are justified in drawing the inference of fact, from all of the circumstances in evidence surrounding the transaction, that Marshall advised and encouraged the unlawful introduction of the whisky in question from the state of New Mexico into the state of Arizona.

Upon the whole case I am satisfied that the appellant has been awarded a fair and impartial trial, and has been justly convicted of the offense charged. Consequently the judgment must be affirmed.

FRANKLIN, C. J., and ROSS, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 49)

MURRAY et al. v. STATE. (No. 419.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. Criminal Law 🔑633(1)—Criminal Prosecution—Conduct of Trial.

The exhibition, during a trial for introducing intoxicating liquors into the state, of a blackboard showing two other similar indictments against defendant, and collecting in the courtroom large quantities of whisky involved in such other cases, was improper, where the sole defense was that accused received the whisky inside the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1450, 1451, 1453, 1459.]

2. Intoxicating Liquors 🔑239(2)—Criminal Prosecution—Instructions.

In a prosecution for bringing intoxicating liquors into the state, evidence that accused, when arrested while driving from the state line with intoxicating liquors, stated that it cost him an additional amount to have such liquors brought and delivered to him within the state, warrants an instruction that persons aiding, etc., in the introduction of liquor into the state are guilty as principals.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 332.]

3. Intoxicating Liquors 🔑236(4)—Sufficiency of Evidence—Introduction Into State.

Such evidence sustains a conviction for unlawfully introducing liquors in the state.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 305, 306.]

4. Intoxicating Liquors 🔑231—Criminal Prosecution—Admissibility of Evidence.

In a prosecution for introducing liquors into the state, where the sole defense was that accused received it within the state, labels and internal revenue stamps showing the liquor was whisky and time and place of bottling are inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. § 291.]

5. Criminal Law 🔑1169(1)—Appeal and Error—Harmless Error.

The error in admitting such evidence is harmless.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3130, 3137.]

6. Intoxicating Liquors 🔑236(4)—Criminal Prosecution—Sufficiency of Evidence.

In a prosecution for introducing intoxicating liquor into the state, evidence sufficient to sustain conviction of one defendant does not sustain a conviction of his companion, who was not shown to have been interested either in the liquor, its purchase, or in the automobile used to convey it.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 305, 306.]

7. Criminal Law 🔑1166½(1)—Appeal and Error—Harmless Error.

A conviction for introducing intoxicating liquors into the state based upon the admissions of accused and attendant circumstances, the sole defense being that the liquor was received inside the state, will not be reversed because the jury was erroneously informed that other similar charges were pending against accused and the liquor involved in such cases was shown them.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3119-3122, 3128.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Cochise County; O. J. Baughn, Judge.

James Murray and Andy Johnson were convicted of introducing intoxicating liquor into Cochise county, Arizona, and appeal. Reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss as to defendant Murray, and affirmed as to defendant Johnson.

Alexander Murry and S. K. Williams, both of Bisbee, for appellants. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and Geo. W. Harben and R. W. Kramer, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

ROSS, J. The appellants were tried and convicted on the charge of introducing whisky into Cochise county, Ariz., from the state of New Mexico, in violation of the prohibition amendment. From the judgment of conviction, they appealed.

[1] Appellants complain of certain stagings or settings of the courtroom, which they claim were calculated to prejudice their rights in the eyes of the jury. It was the custom of the trial court to cause to be placed upon a blackboard in the trial court room in the morning before opening court the title of each case to be tried during the day. On the day this case was called for trial, there appeared on the blackboard in plain view of the jury the following calendar for the day:

"No. 712: State v. Andy B. Johnson.

"No. 835: State v. Andy B. Johnson and James Murray.

"No. 844: State v. Andy B. Johnson and James Kilcoyne."

The prosecution had also brought into the courtroom and placed in view of the jury panel as they assembled in the courtroom the following: Twenty cases of whisky admittedly the whisky the defendants were charged with introducing into the state in the present case; eight cases of whisky identified with cause No. 844; and twelve cases of whisky identified with cause No. 712.

Upon the opening of court, and before the jury was drawn and impaneled, appellants moved the court to strike from the blackboard the number and title of all cases against appellant Johnson, excepting the one then to be tried, and also to order removed from the courtroom the 20 cases of whisky identified with causes Nos. 712 and 844. The court's denial of this motion is assigned as error.

It must be admitted that the case was well and attractively staged and the settings admirably placed for the performance about to take place. Indeed, it was staged with as little regard to the forms of law as the average scenario trial in a moving picture show. The appellant Johnson was placarded upon the blackboard not once, but thrice; he had fractured the majesty of the law as many times as the cock had crowed before Peter forsook his Master. The jury was warned that he was at least adept, if not an expert, in the art of bootlegging; they were thus notified that he was a habitual lawbreaker and a bad man generally.

The more to impress them of his criminal tendencies and the certainty of his guilt, booties galore of his prowess in his particular field of operation were displayed in the courtroom. In addition to the 20 cases of wet goods involved in the case on trial, 20 more cases, presumably the fruits of his exploits at other times and occasions, were present in the courtroom for the purpose of letting the jury have an insight into all other charges then pending against appellant Johnson. While professedly trying one case against appellant Johnson, adroitly and cunningly, with the sanction of the court, the stage of action was so arranged and set as to throw upon the canvas in plain view of the jury a multiplicity of crimes in which he was accused of participating.

Every one charged with crime is entitled to a fair and impartial trial, and this is true whatever the character or grade of the offense. The scales of justice should always be adjusted for all alike. Neither many nor flagrant violations of the law, nor public clamor for convictions, should have any place or influence in a court of justice. The same rules of evidence and the same orderly and dignified conduct should be observed in the trial of all cases.

While the custom of the court in placing upon the blackboard the trial calendar of the day is commendable, in that it advises litigants and lawyers alike to be ready on the call of their cases, yet in this case it was likely to prejudice the rights of appellant Johnson, and therefore should not have been exposed to the jury at all. The court should have cleared the blackboard of the other two cases on his own motion and without being requested to do so by appellant Johnson.

The fruits of crime and the means and instruments with which crimes are committed are frequently introduced in evidence, and may generally be said to be competent when there is any controversy as to the manner in which the crime was committed or the means used in its commission. In the present case, the crime charged was the introduction of whisky into the state from without the state. The corpus delicti, therefore, was the introduction of the liquor. There was no question as to the character of the liquor or as to its quality or as to the ownership or its possession—all of these were conceded. That being true, we are unable to see why any of the whisky should have been paraded before the jury, unless it was to arouse prejudice and bias in the minds of the jury against the appellants. But, had the issue been so framed as to admit in evidence the 20 cases charged to have been introduced in this case, surely that was all and enough. Indeed, the other 20 cases were not offered in evidence, but they stood as mute witnesses of other devious and oblique conduct of at least one of the appellants.

As above indicated, the only issue between the state and appellants was as to whether the appellants had introduced the 20 cases of liquor from New Mexico into Arizona; as to whether the appellants had themselves brought the liquor into the state, or had caused it to be brought into the state. The fact in dispute, then, was the manual transference of the liquor across the state line. On this issue it was not necessary to have the liquor on exhibition. An inspection of it would have no tendency to prove it of New Mexico origin, or that it had crossed the line from New Mexico into Arizona. If they brought it or caused it to be brought from New Mexico into Arizona, it was a fact to be proved, as any other fact, by direct and by circumstantial testimony and by admissions and confessions of appellants.

The evidence upon this issue is, succinctly: The sheriff and the deputy sheriff of Cochise county on the 29th day of January, 1916, on the Borderland Route, which leads through Douglas, Ariz., to Rodeo, N. M., about 20 miles west of the New Mexico line, met the appellants, who were headed from the direction of Rodeo toward Douglas with an automobile containing 20 cases of whisky. The deputy sheriff said Johnson told him that they got the whisky three-quarters of a mile inside Arizona; that he paid $284 for it, and that it cost him $10 more to get it on this side of the line; that he had the whisky delivered to him on this side of the line; that he got it on this side of the line. The sheriff relates what Johnson said to him as follows:

"I asked where he got the whisky, and he told me he had gotten it this side of the line; and then I tried to find out where and how he had gotten it, but he did not tell me that."

Murray said to the sheriff:

> "Well, we did not go across the line to get it. It cost us $10 (more) to have it brought on this side of the line than it would have cost us if we had gone over and got it ourselves."

Johnson, testifying in his own behalf, said that he met a man by the name of Simpson about 3½ miles west of the New Mexico line with whom he bargained for 20 cases of whisky; that Simpson left him for about an hour and returned with the whisky when the trade was made, he paying Simpson $284 and receiving 20 cases of whisky; that Simpson told him that $284 was $10 more than it would have cost on the other side. Murray's testimony corroborated Johnson's, except that he disclaimed any interest in the liquor and explained his presence with Johnson as the latter's guest and traveling companion. They both said that Simpson, when they first met him, was driving a light spring wagon drawn by a pair of mules; that at that time he had no liquor with him; that after Johnson had bargained for the liquor he went away, remaining about one hour, when he returned with the liquor drawn by the same team and in the same vehicle. The appellants were residents of Lowell, Cochise county, Ariz. They claimed that their intended destination was Globe, Ariz., via Lordsburg over the Borderland Route; that they got within 3½ miles of the New Mexico line, and, owing to the heavy rain that was falling at the time, the roads had become impassable, and they had been compelled to retrace their steps back to Douglas.

There is no material conflict of evidence, no complexity of controverted facts to be reconciled. The only issue in dispute, the corpus delicti, if established at all, is made out from the mouths of the appellants and the circumstances hereinafter adverted to. The circumstance of finding the appellants on the public highway with 20 cases of whisky, 20, or 3½ miles, or three-quarters of a mile from the New Mexico line headed in the direction of Douglas, Ariz., unaided by any explanation, would not establish the fact that they had brought the liquor or caused it to be brought from New Mexico. It would afford grounds of suspicion or conjecture, but nothing more.

Does the explanation of appellants as to where and how they obtained the liquor supply the lack of proof on the question of introduction? It is undisputed that they bargained for the whisky in Arizona and that it was delivered to them in Arizona. The question is, then: Where did Simpson, the seller, obtain the whisky? Did he, when he left the appellants, with their knowledge go into New Mexico and there obtain the whisky and return with it into Arizona where appellants were and deliver it to them?

In view of the law in Arizona at the time, it is not likely that Simpson had a stock of liquors in this state; the saloon as an institution had been abolished, and the traffic in liquors prohibited. Just across the line in New Mexico there were licensed saloons and, in view of the admissions of appellants, wherein they say, "The whisky was delivered on this side of the line," "We did not go across the line to get it," and, "it cost us $10 more to have it brought on this side of the line than it would have cost us if we had gone over and got it ourselves," we think it reasonably inferable that at the time the bargain for the liquor was made in Arizona it was understood that Simpson would go across the line and return with it.

[2, 3] It is contended by the appellants that the state of facts above detailed did not authorize an instruction given to the jury as follows:

> "That all persons who aid and abet or, not being present, advise and encourage the introduction of said liquor, * * * are guilty as principals in the act."

It is said that Simpson is not shown to have brought the liquor from New Mexico into Arizona; that the instruction assumes as proven this necessary fact, and that, even if Simpson did in fact introduce the liquor into Arizona, it has not been proved that the appellants had knowledge thereof before they received and paid for it. We think, in view of the admissions of the appellants and the attendant circumstances, the instruction was justified and properly given. We also are convinced that there was sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti to sustain the verdict of the jury. Reynolds v. State, 18 Ariz. —, 161 Pac. 885.

[4, 5] The appellants complain of error in the admission of the label and internal revenue stamp taken from one of the bottles of liquor found in their possession. These were introduced over the objection of appellants for the purposes, as stated by the county attorney:

> "First, that it shows upon the face of it that it is marked whisky plainly. Second, it shows where it was made and the brand of the label and when it was bottled. It shows the place and when it was bottled."

As above stated, the character of the liquor was not questioned; it was admitted to be whisky. Therefore whatever it might have been labeled was immaterial. The legends on the stamp and label were that the whisky was made in Athertonville, Ky., and also when the whisky was bottled there. Of course, these things were immaterial under the issue; they did not show, or tend to show, an unlawful introduction of the liquor into Arizona. It was error to admit in evidence the stamp and label for the reasons above given. but we do not think that the error could have prejudiced the rights of the appellants. The purpose for which they were offered, as stated by the county attorney, showed that they did not prove, or tend to prove, any introduction of liquor into the state, or have any bearing upon that issue.

[6] As heretofore indicated in this opinion, the appellant Murray was only a guest or traveling companion of Johnson. It is not shown that he was interested in any way in the automobile used to move the liquor, or in the liquor itself; it was all bought and paid for by appellant Johnson; he did all the negotiating with Simpson, the seller; and everywhere the evidence discloses that he only was interested in securing the liquor. For these reasons, we are of the opinion that the judgment should be reversed as to Murray and remanded, with directions to dismiss as to him.

[7] Notwithstanding the many palpable errors that were committed in the course of the trial, we do not believe that the case should be reversed as to appellant Johnson. If the case had been tried upon the admissions and the statements of the appellants and the circumstances connected therewith, and the errors to which we have alluded had not crept into the trial, still we are satisfied that the verdict of the jury should have been one of guilty as to Johnson. We do not see how a common-sense jury, if the case were remanded for a new trial and the evidence in this record free from legal objection was submitted to it, could return a different verdict. If the facts bearing upon the issue of introduction were in dispute, or if it was made to appear that upon another trial free from error a different verdict might be had, because of the many flagrant and egregious errors in this record, we would be compelled to remand the case for a new trial.

Under the circumstances, we believe that the judgment of conviction should stand as to appellant Johnson, and it is so ordered.

FRANKLIN, C. J., and CUNNINGHAM, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 56)

GRISWOLD et al. v. HORNE. (No. 1521.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. Malicious Prosecution 🔑72(4)—Malice—Instructions.

In an action for malicious prosecution, an instruction that the jury might infer malice from want of probable cause was erroneous as authorizing the jury to find malice from want of probable cause alone.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. §§ 171, 172.]

2. Malicious Prosecution 🔑27—"Malice."

Malice in law may be defined as a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse, and it may exist along with malice in fact or where there is an entire absence of true malice.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Malicious Prosecution, Cent. Dig. § 60.

For other definitions, see Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Malice.]

3. Trial 🔑193(1)—Instructions—Invasion of Province of Jury.

In an action for malicious prosecution, an instruction containing the tacit intimation that in the opinion of the judge defendants ought to "smart" for the prosecution was erroneous as invading the province of the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 436.]

4. Trial 🔑244(2)—Instructions—Emphasis of Testimony.

It is error for the court in giving instructions to single out and group certain portions of the testimony favorable to plaintiff to the disparagement of other relevant and material facts favorable to defendant.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Trial, Cent. Dig. § 578.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Maricopa County; R. C. Stanford, Judge.

Action by Rebecca Horne against H. S. Griswold and another for malicious prosecution. From judgment for plaintiff and an order denying a new trial, defendants appeal. Reversed, and new trial granted.

Baker & Baker, of Phœnix, for appellants. Robert S. Fisher, and Robert A. Jarrott, both of Phœnix, for appellee.

FRANKLIN, C. J. This is an action for malicious prosecution. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, upon which judgment was entered. The defendants moved for a new trial, which was denied. From the judgment and the order overruling the motion for a new trial this appeal is prosecuted.

The appellants, Mr. and Mrs. Griswold, who were defendants in the court below, are an elderly couple advanced in years beyond the threescore and ten. For a period of four or five years Miss Rebecca Horne, the appellee, who was plaintiff below, lived in the home of appellants in Phœnix, Ariz., her occupation being that of a nurse and companion, and her reputation for honesty and integrity excellent. Miss Horne and the Griswolds grew to be very fond of each other, and lived together on the most amicable terms. Indeed, Miss Horne was regarded more as a member of the Griswold family than otherwise. She called Mr. and Mrs. Griswold "Daddy" and "Mother," and they in turn affectionately addressed her as "Dear Bess." In the summer of 1914 the Griswolds went on a summer's vacation to California, and before leaving Mrs. Griswold placed some jewelry in a small box and secreted it in a large box containing some bed linen located in the lower part of the house as a place not likely to be found by any one entering the house with intent to steal. The jewelry is not of any considerable value in money, but is highly prized by Mrs. Griswold. Some of its pieces are heirlooms of her family and dear to her as a matter of sentiment. During the absence of the Griswolds their house was occupied by Miss Horne and a Mr. and Mrs. McDole, but for a brief period of this time Miss Horne was away on a visit to Prescott. Two men, friends of Mr. McDole, also occupied a sleeping porch for two or three nights.

The Griswolds returned home on the 15th of September, and several days thereafter Mrs. Griswold, in looking for the jewelry, discovered that the small box containing it had been removed from the large box containing the bed linen and the contents of the large box containing the linen had been disarranged. Mrs. Griswold questioned Miss Horne about it, but the later denied any knowledge whatever about the jewelry or its hiding place. Mrs. Griswold thought that Miss Horne was hiding the jewelry from her as a practical joke, because, so she states, Miss Horne saw her secrete the jewelry and was asked to rescue it in case of fire. Some of the jewelry was found in the bottom of a trunk belonging to Miss Horne and a few pieces of silverware in a chiffonier drawer located in a room occupied by her. The testimony as to the circumstances attending these matters and the conduct and attitude of Miss Horne and the Griswolds thereabouts present sharp conflicts. Eventually, however, the Griswolds claim to have become convinced that Miss Horne had stolen the jewelry, and, at the suggestion of Mrs. Griswold, Mr. Griswold swore to a complaint before a committing magistrate charging Miss Horne with the crime of grand larceny. At the preliminary examination the magistrate discharged Miss Horne, and this ended the prosecution. In the above statement we purpose merely to give a general outline of the case so that some adequate knowledge of the matter before us may be had. As the case must go back for a new trial we do not consider it proper to go over the case and recite the testimony nor express any opinion about it.

[1] The heat of the controversy in the superior court centered about the good faith of the Griswolds in instituting the prosecution. The court gave the following instructions which serve as a basis for our conclusions to reverse the case:

"Envy, hatred, and malice are separate and distinct passions, and the worst of these is malice, because it is a deliberate purpose to do an injury to some person without just cause or excuse. Malice in law is the deliberate purpose to injure another without just cause or excuse. It means the willing act of an evil mind; the intention to wrong another unjustly. It implies the making up of the mind to do evil to some one. Therefore any indirect motive of wrong is a malicious motive. For example, if one sets the criminal law in motion against another, not for the purpose of bringing that other to justice for the violation of some law, but for the purpose, for instance, of aiding the prosecutor to recover property, a jury might well consider that was evidence of a malicious motive, because the criminal law was not designed to aid persons in the restoration of property; and they who set the criminal law in motion for such a purpose should smart for it, and in a proper case would be made to smart for it. I trust you clearly understand now what is meant by the malice which must be present as the motive in a malicious prosecution. That malice or malicious motive must be proved to the satisfaction of the jury by the greater weight of the testimony. It is not necessary that malice be expressly shown—for instance, by proof of threats or the like. Malice may be implied. It may be inferred from circumstances. For example, malice may be inferred in a prosecution, if the prosecution is one without probable cause. If the jury are satisfied from the testimony that the prosecution was wholly without cause or without probable cause, that they may infer, and justly infer that it was prompted by malice.

"The court instructs the jury that, if they believe from the facts and circumstances proved on the trial that defendant had not probable cause for prosecuting the plaintiff, and that they did prosecute her, as charged in the complaint, then the jury may infer malice from such want of probable cause."

These instructions make it clear that the jury were misdirected in the essential matter of malice, so that the case must go back in order that this feature may be fairly and accurately outlined and correctly presented for the determination of another jury.

The principles by which the rights of parties are to be measured in actions of this sort are well settled. It is frequently said that actions for malicious prosecutions have never been favored in law. The idea may, perhaps, better be expressed by saying that such actions are to be properly guarded and their true principles strictly adhered to. When this is done and the proper elements to support the action have been presented it will be readily upheld. The reasons for this must at once be obvious. The purpose of the law is to protect individuals in their just rights.

"In most instances," quoting from Modern American Law, vol. 2, p. 287, "in determining whether or not such a right has been violated, the law looks only to the conduct of the alleged wrongdoer, without regard to the motive actuating the conduct. In some instances, however, from considerations of public policy, this rule is disregarded, and conduct is declared tortious and actionable only when prompted by evil motive. In these exceptional cases the improper intent is as much an essential part of the tort as the conduct induced by it. Malicious prosecution falls into this exceptional class. The public policy requiring this is easily found. Society cannot be protected without courts, which are the great conservative agencies in and through which the disputes and controversies of men are adjusted. It is essential that these tribunals shall be open to all persons who in good faith believe they have grievances against their neighbors, or who in good faith believe the criminal law has been violated. To adopt a policy which would make every unsuccessful plaintiff in a civil case, or every witness for the state in a criminal case, liable in damages to the defendant therein, whenever the plaintiff in the case failed to obtain judgment, would make litigation so hazardous that men would fear to resort to it."

Though public prosecutors do their part in the detection and punishment of public offenses, still it is common knowledge that the public justice is largely vindicated through the knowledge of crime possessed by private individuals, and to treat that as a legal wrong which consists merely in an unwarranted prosecution would be plainly impolitic and unjust. Such proceedings to the one charged with crime may be serious, but whatever of inconvenience and damage that may thus be suffered by the individual is overcome by that public policy of the state which protects every man who in good faith and for the purpose of vindicating the public justice institutes or sets on foot criminal proceedings. The law has therefore taken hold of the matter and established certain rules by which to fix liability for the improper institution and maintenance of actions in the courts. But, says Mr. Cooley:

> "Nevertheless it is a duty which every man owes to every other not to institute proceedings maliciously which he has no good reason to believe are justified by the facts and the law. Therefore an action as for tort will lie when there is a concurrence of the following circumstances:
>
> "(1) A suit or proceeding has been instituted without any probable cause therefor.
>
> "(2) The motive in instituting it was malicious.
>
> "(3) The prosecution has terminated in the acquittal or discharge of the accused."
>
> Cooley on Torts, vol. 1, pp. 320, 321.

It will be observed that malicious motive is so important an element of this tort that it has been incorporated in its name. The action is called "malicious prosecution," and in discussing this most important element we must have some understanding of the meaning to be given to the words "malicious motive." In these instructions the jury are told in effect, in one by direct statement, and in the other emphasized by illustration, that:

> "Malice may be inferred from the want ot probable cause."

This is a phrase often found in legal textbooks and in the opinions of judges. We shall admit the declaration to be true as a general proposition of law, and it is not necessary, nor is it our purpose here, to qualify or weaken it at all. Still we shall have but a superficial notice of its meaning unless we examine its foundations and find the reason for it, and, understanding somewhat of this, we must then properly limit the influence of such declaration to the concrete case.

A statement of the law by an appellate court addressed to the trained legal mind is a far different thing from the trial court's instruction to a jury of laymen which latter ought to be a plain, accurate, and direct charge to their understanding and give to them a better knowledge as an aid to the performance of their duty. The giving of an instruction to the jury which has received express judicial sanction must not be confused with a statement of the law made by an appellate court. And here we must notice the danger in submitting requests as emphasized by taking words from opinions of judges in the appellate courts severed and disconnected from their texts and attempting to have them applied to another and different state of facts. We insert a few expressions from the authorities on this matter:

> "It often happens that judges in writing opinions and authors of legal text-books in discussing or defining propositions of law express themselves in language wholly unsuited for the purposes of instructions to juries." McGee v. State, 117 Ala. 229, 231, 23 South. 797, 798.
>
> "It is not always safe to take an excerpt from an opinion and embody it in an instruction, because the opinion is addressed to lawyers, while the instruction is addressed to laymen." Magrane v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co., 183 Mo. 119, 128, 81 S. W. 1158, 1159.
>
> "There are many things said in opinions that are sound law, but which nevertheless would be improper instructions to a jury." 38 Cyc. 1595.
>
> "The language of an opinion should never be framed into an instruction without fitting it to the case and leaving the jury to decide the questions of fact." Shannon v. Swanson, 109 Ill. App. 274, 277.

The Constitution forbids trial courts from instructing juries with respect to matters of fact or commenting thereon:

> "Judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of facts nor comment thereon, but shall declare the law." Const. art. 6, § 12.

We shall first notice the support which is given to this statement of the law as a correct instruction to the jury. In the brief of appellee it is said:

> "It is contended by this evidence, much of which was elicited on cross-examination from the defendants and their witnesses, plaintiff raised a question for the jury as to probable cause, and that the court was warranted in instructing the jury that they might infer malice from the want of probable cause. This is a principle so elementary as to scarcely justify argument. Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. 544 [16 L. Ed. 765]; Ray v. Goings, 112 Ill. 658; Carson v. Edgeworth, 43 Mich. 241 [5 N. W. 282]; Cooley on Torts (3d Ed.) 337; Cunningham v. Moreno, 9 Ariz. 300 [80 Pac. 327]."

Reading these authorities must convince one that the breadth of appellee's statement is unjustified and any support for it in the cases cited entirely lacking.

In Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. 544, 16 L. Ed. 765, there was no attempt on the part of plaintiff to prove express malice. The jury returned their verdict in favor of the defendants, and the plaintiff excepted to the charge of the court. It was made clear in that case that in actions of this kind the plaintiff must show that the defendant acted from malicious motives in prosecuting him, and that he had no sufficient reason to believe him to be guilty. If either of these be wanting the action must fail. Said the court:

> "Undoubtedly every person who puts the criminal law in force maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, commits a wrongful act; and if the accused is thereby prejudiced, either in his person or property, the injury and loss so sustained constitute the proper foundation of an action to recover compensation. Malice alone, however, is not sufficient to sustain the action, because a person actuated by the plainest malice may nevertheless prefer a well-founded accusation, and have a justifiable reason for the prosecution of the charge. Want of reasonable and probable cause is as much an element in the action for a malicious criminal prosecution as the evil motive which prompted the prosecutor to make the accusation; and though the averment is a negative one in its form and character, it is nevertheless a material element of the action, and must be proved by the plaintiff by some affirmative evidence, unless the defendant dispenses with such proof by pleading singly the truth of the several facts involved in the charge. Morris v. Corson, 7 Cow. [N. Y.] 281. Either of these allegations may be proved by circumstances, and it is unquestionably true that want of probable cause is evidence of malice, but it is not the same thing; and unless it is shown that both concurred in the prosecution, or that the one was combined with the other in making or instigating the charge, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover in an action of this description." (Italics supplied.)

The court held that whether the prosecution was or was not commenced from malicious motives was a question of fact, and it was for the jury to determine whether the inference of malice was a reasonable one from the facts in that case. This case makes it very clear, as do the authorities from a very early time, that malicious motives and a want of probable cause must both concur before a recovery may be allowed; that these two very essential elements are not one and the same thing; that, while the facts and circumstances tending to show want of probable cause may also tend to show malicious motives underlying the prosecution, they also may not tend in that direction; that the jury may so find, but that they also may not so find, according as the facts and circumstances of the concrete case might persuade. In that case the lower court, in charging the jury, said that the want of probable cause afforded a presumption of malice, but that such presumption might be rebutted by other evidence showing that the party acted bona fide and in the honest discharge of what he believed to be his duty, and then said:

> "If, however, the jury find that the arrest was wanton and reckless, and that no circumstances existed to induce a reasonable, dispassionate man to believe that the defendant was guilty of having stolen the horses he had in his possession, then the jury ought to infer malice."

While this instruction is less objectionable than those at bar, it was more favorable to the plaintiff than he had the right to expect, and the court concluded it furnished no ground for his exception.

In Carson v. Edgeworth, 43 Mich. 241, 5 N. W. 282, the charge as given required the jury to find the existence of malice as a fact. Said the court:

> "But the jury in this case had abundant evidence before them from which actual malice might be inferred."

In Cooley on Torts and Cunningham v. Moreno, supra, are found merely the language of legal abstractions, giving no instruction on the point under consideration.

Looking into the Illinois cases, that of Roy v. Goings, cited by appellee, while apparently in point, may be readily distinguished from the case at bar. In that case the court gave substantially the instruction here complained of. There was strong evidence of actual malice actuating the prosecution. Said the court:

> "Instructions are given in view of the evidence in the case, and not as mere legal abstractions. An instruction may be proper or not, in view of the evidence before the jury. If the trial court was satisfied that the evidence strongly tended to prove malice, then the instruction could, even if erroneous in that respect, have done no harm, and when considered in this case, it tends, in the strongest manner, not only to prove the want of probable cause, but malice on the part of appellant." (Italics supplied.)

Malice may be inferred from a want of probable cause where, as in Ross v. Innis, 35 Ill. 487, 85 Am. Dec. 373, a powerful house possessed of extensive means made an infamous charge which they knew was unfounded and wrongfully prosecuted a poor and friendless young man, or, as in Reno v. Wilson, 49 Ill. 95, where "there was no semblance of criminal conduct, and no act done which could be tortured into crime" and where the defendant's conduct "from the commencement to the termination of the prosecution seems to have been prompted by no reverence for the law, by no desire to bring one of its violators to punishment, but to gratify bad passions, which, causelessly excited, appellant had not the firmness and discretion to restrain," and the "arrest was attended with the most degrading and humiliating circumstances," or where, as in Chapman v. Cawrey, 50 Ill. 512, 517, "no crime was committed and no just suspicion of one" existed, and "malice on the part of appellant crops out in every part of this transaction," or, as in Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603, 610, where the Criminal Code was resorted to for the gratification of personal malice and the attainment of dishonorable personal ends. It may be so inferred in such like cases because in the facts and circumstances strong evidence of actual malice actuating the prosecution is present. The foregoing are fair illustrations of the cases in which such an instruction might be condoned as harmless, even if erroneous, not because it is a proper instruction to be given to the jury, but because under the facts actual malice is present independent of the mere fact of the want of probable cause. In other words, it depends upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case whether or not the inference be a proper one. Said the Illinois court:

> "Malice may be inferred from want of probable cause where the circumstances are inconsistent with good faith on the part of the prosecutor and where such want of probable cause has been clearly proven." Frank Parmelee Co. v. Griffin, 136 Ill. App. 307, 319.

And in the case of Barker v. Ronk, 134 Ill. App. 499, it is said:

> "When all the facts and circumstances proven show a want of probable cause for the arrest and imprisonment of the plaintiff on a charge of crime, the jury may take this fact into consideration, and from it infer malice, not as a matter of law, but as a conclusion of fact." (Italics supplied.)

Green, J., in Morrell v. Martin, 17 Ill. App. 336, said:

> "A person may entertain malice against another, and, moved by that feeling, institute a prosecution for a crime against the object of his hatred; and if the latter is guilty of such crime, or if the one instituting such prosecution has probable cause for believing him guilty thereof, an action for malicious prosecution will not lie. To maintain such action there must be no probable cause and malice concurring."

To justify a recovery for malicious prosecution said the court in Wilmerton v. Sample, 39 Ill. App. 60:

> "The proof must show both malice and want of probable cause. Whether either of these necessary elements existed in this case was hotly contested on both sides, and it was earnestly denied by appellant. It was therefore important that the law should have been accurately declared to the jury." (Italics supplied.)

In commenting upon the three necessary elements that must always exist in order to maintain this sort of action—that is to say, first, want of probable cause, second, the malicious motive in instituting the proceeding, and third, the termination of the prosecution in plaintiff's favor—Mr. Justice Pillsbury, in the case of Comisky v. Breen, 7 Ill. App. 369, 372, puts the matter of malice so clearly that we quote it at length:

> "The plaintiff must show that the motive of the prosecutor in instituting the proceeding was malicious, and the question of malice is one for the jury under all the facts in evidence. It must be found to exist as a material fact in the case, and while it is said in some of the cases that malice may be inferred from a want of probable cause, it is not intended to hold that this inference is in all cases necessarily to be deduced from the existence of the fact that there was no probable cause for the arrest. Justice Sheldon in Harpham v. Whitney, supra [77 Ill. 32], says: 'It is often said the jury may infer malice from the want of probable cause. They may do so under certain circumstances, but not in all cases. Malice is in no case a legal presumption from the want of probable cause, it being for the jury to find from the facts proved, when there was no probable cause, whether there was malice or not.' Therefore it is seen that it depends upon the facts and circumstances in the case going to prove the want of probable cause whether the jury should or should not infer malice from the want of probable cause. While it would be difficult to announce a rule applicable to every case as it may arise, perhaps it may be said that the jury would be authorized to infer malice from the want of probable cause alone, where the facts and circumstances in evidence which establish the principal fact are inconsistent with good faith upon the part of the prosecutor, but in cases where the proof may show a want of probable cause, yet if the evidence upon this point is consistent with good faith, the jury ought not to infer malice, simply because the principal fact is proved, but in such case the plaintiff should go further and introduce independent evidence of malice in the prosecutor. Malice therefore, not being a legal presumption in any case, is to be proved like any other fact, and so long as all the evidence in the case is consistent with good faith on the part of the defendant, it cannot be fairly said that malice is established. If the accompanying circumstances, however, show that the defendant in instituting the prosecution was actuated by an improper or wrongful motive, this will be sufficient proof of malice."

It will be seen, therefore, that the Illinois court is in accord on this question with the authorities elsewhere to the effect that malice is not a legal presumption, but is a question of fact; that want of probable cause and malice are not the same thing; that one element may exist without the presence of the other; that, while malice may be inferred in some cases from a want of probable cause according as the facts and circumstances disclose it, nevertheless it is a deduction that cannot be made merely from the existence of the fact that there was no probable cause for the prosecution; that the verdict of a jury will not be set aside simply because they have been told that malice may be inferred from a want of probable cause when the facts and circumstances in evidence clearly establish malice and the jury could not have found otherwise had such instruction not been given; in a word, when upon the whole case substantial justice has been done.

In sustaining an assignment of error to an instruction almost identical with the second one above, the Supreme Court of Arkansas, in the case of L. B. Price Mercantile Co. v. Cuilla, 100 Ark. 316, 141 S. W. 194, observed:

> "This instruction was erroneous in telling the jury, as a matter of law, that they might infer malice from want of probable cause. This amounted to an instruction on the weight of the evidence; for it was equivalent to saying to the jury that a finding of want of probable cause was sufficient to justify a finding of malice. Now, a trial jury in a case of this sort may or may not, according to the circumstances of the case, draw an inference of malice from a want of probable cause. It is a mere inference of fact, and not presumption of law; and, as the jury are not bound to draw such an inference as a matter of law, it amounts to an instruction on the weight of the evidence to tell them what facts are of sufficient weight to warrant the inference. * * * A trial jury, in determining whether a prosecution was maliciously instituted, may consider the fact that there was a probable cause for the prosecution along with other facts and circumstances proved in the case, including the conduct of the parties who instituted the prosecution; but they should not be told that the want of probable cause, any more than any other fact or circumstance proved in the case, was sufficient to justify an inference of malice. The giving of this instruction was therefore erroneous and prejudicial, and calls for the reversal of the case."

A less erroneous instruction of this kind was given in Kellogg v. Ford, 70 Or. 213, 139 Pac. 751, and held to be error. The Supreme Court of that state in reviewing it said:

> "The instruction as to the inference that might be drawn from evidence showing want of probable cause was misleading, and therefore erroneous. While it is true that malice may be inferred from want of probable cause, it is not a necessary inference and is never an inference of law. Want of probable cause is a fact to be considered by the jury with other facts in determining the presence or absence of malice."

This principle is recognized by the Texas courts:

> "Malice may be inferred from the want of probable cause, where there are no circumstances to rebut the presumption that malice alone could have suggested the prosecution; and it may be inferred where the defendant's conduct will admit of no other interpretation, except by presuming gross ignorance. 3 Phill. Ev. 257. In the language of Chief Justice Shaw in a case before cited, 'the groundlessness of the prosecution may in many instances be so obvious and palpable that the existence of malice may be inferred from it.' [Wills v. Noyes] 12 Pick. [Mass.] 326. But malice is in no case a legal presumption, or to be inferred as a necessary consequence of the want of probable cause."

Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603, 608, 58 Am. Dec. 85.

In Willis & Bro. v. McNeill, 57 Tex. 465, quoting the syllabus, the rule is adhered to that:

> "Malice is not an inference of law from the want of probable cause, but is a mere inference of fact, which the jury may or may not draw, according to the facts and circumstances of the case."

It is necessary then, in every instance, in order to maintain an action for malicious prosecution, that malice must be shown. The statement that malice may be inferred from the want of probable cause is not the statement of a legal presumption, but merely an expression of what the triers of fact are privileged to do if they see fit, and the facts and circumstances of the concrete case warrant the inference. There are different kinds and degrees of malice as well as the nature of the evidence going to prove its existence. Many definitions of the term have been attempted, and courts and text-writers are continually struggling with its meanings and definitions. For instance, says Gaynor, J.:

> "The jumble in some modern text-books on slander and libel concerning malice, actual malice, malice in law, malice in fact, implied malice, and express malice (all derived from judicial utterances, it is true) is a striking testimony of the limitations of the human mind." Ullrich v. N. Y. Press Co., 23 Misc. Rep. 168, 50 N. Y. Supp. 788.

[2] This confusion with its meanings is not entirely lacking in the cases on malicious prosecution. For the purposes of this case it is sufficient to say that the law recognizes a difference in two kinds or descriptions of malice, namely, malice in fact and malice in law, in actions for malicious prosecution; and in this sort of action it is absolutely essential to its existence that malice in fact as distinguished from malice in law be present. "Malice in law" may be defined as a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse, and it may exist along with malice in fact or where there is an entire absence of true malice. Said Henshaw, J., in Davis v. Hearst, 160 Cal. 143, 116 Pac. 530:

> "We shall define 'malice in law' as being that malice which the law presumes (either conclusively or disputably) to exist upon the production of certain designated evidence, which malice may be fictional and constructive merely, and which, arising, as it usually does, from what is conceived to be the necessity of proof following a pleading, which in turn follows a definition, is to be always distinguished from true malice or malice in fact."

And in Modern American Law, vol. 2, p. 299, the text reads:

> "Malicious motive is absolutely essential to the existence of this tort. Ordinarily evil motive is not necessary to make wrongful and injurious conduct a tort. The cases in which evil motive is essential are usually, if not always, those in which the act complained of as wrongful is primarily unlawful in its nature, but from considerations of public policy is licensed when committed with lawful motive. When evil motive actuates the conduct, the license is withdrawn, and the act goes back to its original state of unlawfulness.
>
> "Applying these general doctrines to malicious prosecution, we find that every time a plaintiff in a civil suit, or the state in a criminal action, fails to maintain the case, and final judgment goes for the defendant, this is an authoritative adjudication that the suit was wrongfully brought. Such conduct, strictly considered, should be unlawful. But, from considerations of public policy, this unlawful interference with the rights of the defendant, occasioned by an honest, though mistaken, belief that the action was well founded, is excused, or licensed, by law, and the successful defendant can maintain no further action on account of it. To allow such action would lead to endless litigation. Each time a plaintiff should be unsuccessful the defendant could sue him for damages, and each time a criminal prosecution failed the prosecuting witness would be subject to a like suit. This the law cannot tolerate. To avoid such conditions, it licenses the wrong of the unsuccessful suit unless it be prompted by evil motive. Hence the rule is universal that to maintain an action for malicious prosecution in every instance malice must be shown."

Whatever it is called, therefore, the element necessary here is malice of the one kind—the malice of the evil motive. Says Pollock in his Law of Torts (9th Ed.) p. 328:

> "The explanation of malice as 'improper and indirect motive' appears to have been introduced by the judges of the King's Bench about 70 years ago. But 'motive' is perhaps not a much clearer term. 'A wish to injure the party rather than to vindicate the law' would be more intelligible."

Bearing in mind, as Justice Henshaw says in the case quoted supra, "that it may be established either by direct proof of the state of mind of the person, or by indirect evidence so satisfying to the jury that they may infer and find the existence of this malice in fact," let us give an illustration or two that may indicate the distinction between malice in law and malice in fact. If one gives a perfect stranger unaware a blow with a deadly weapon likely to produce death, he does it of malice, because he does it intentionally without just cause or legal excuse. If he maims cattle without knowing whose they are, if he poisons a well of drinking water without knowing who is likely to drink of it, he does it of malice, because it is a wrongful act and done intentionally without any legal justification or excuse. This is the malice of the law—a malice of pleading and proof made necessary by definitions of offenses against the law or the exigencies of the case. It is established by a conclusive legal presumption, and proof of malice in fact is not required. If one publishes false words of another, and the occasion is not privileged, he does so at his peril, and he must answer for the consequences. The law will not protect him, because libel and slander in such a case are against public policy, and rarely, if ever, spring from other than malicious motives. It is a wrongful act done intentionally without justification or excuse. This also is the malice of the law. But if the occasion for the publication of the false words be privileged, this repels the legal presumption that slander springs from malicious motives. It is then prima facie excusable on account of the cause of the publication, and actual malice or malice as an independent fact must be proved to make out a case, as, for instance, that the publisher used the occasion to traduce or injure another. Speaking hereof in Hemmens v. Nelson, 138 N. Y. 517, 34 N. E. 342, 20 L. R. A. 440, the court says:

> "This kind of malice which overcomes and destroys the privilege is, of course, quite distinct from that which the law, in the first instance, imputes with respect to every defamatory charge, irrespective of motive."

In a case where a person in order to gratify feelings of revenge at the expense of female character persisted in prosecuting a woman for larceny after being advised by able and learned counsel to desist, the Maine court said:

> "There is no doubt that malice in fact, as distinguished from malice in law, is essential to the maintenance of an action for malicious prosecution. Actions of slander are sometimes maintainable without proof of actual malice, constructive malice being sufficient. The reason for the distinction is this: Slander is always against public policy, and very rarely, if ever, springs from other than malicious motives; but the prosecution of alleged criminals is not against public policy, and it is only occasionally that such a prosecution is commenced without probable cause. Hence, in actions of slander, the falsity of the charge being shown, malice is established by a legal presumption, and proof of actual malice is not required; but in actions for malicious prosecution the law allows of no such presumption, and requires proof of actual malice to sustain them. Actual malice may be inferred by the jury from the want of probable cause, or be proved by other circumstantial evidence, like any other fact; but it is a fact to be found by the jury, and not a fact to be established by a legal presumption." Humphries v. Parker, 52 Me. 503.
>
> "It is well established," says the Minnesota court, "that in the action of malicious prosecution both malice and want of probable cause must be proven by the plaintiff as distinct issues. The malice which is the essential element of malicious prosecution is not, like the malice essential in libel, slander, and false imprisonment, a mere fiction of the law; it is a state of mind to be proved as a fact. Want of probable cause may exist without malice. The reason is plain. The information on which a defendant acted may have induced him to act in the utmost good faith, so that his mind is entirely free from malice, and yet it may not be sufficient to constitute probable cause, for the test of probable cause is not the belief induced in him, but the belief induced in the mind of a reasonably prudent man. The jury may in a proper case infer malice from want of probable cause, but they are not bound to infer malice in every case where want of probable cause is proven. The inference which they may draw is one of fact, and not of law." Hanowitz v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 122 Minn. 241, 142 N. W. 196.

To constitute malice there must be malus animus, denoting that the party who instituted the original proceeding was actuated by wrong motives. 26 Cyc. p. 48.

The principle is announced in the English cases. It is said in Hicks v. Faulkner, 8 Q. B. Div. 167:

> "It is true as a general proposition that want of probable cause is evidence of malice; but this general proposition is apt to be misunderstood. In an action of this description the question of malice is an independent one, of fact purely, and altogether for the consideration of the jury, and not at all for the judge. The malice necessary to be established is not even malice in law, such as may be assumed from the intentional doing of the wrongful act, but malice in fact, malus animus, indicating the party was actuated either by spite or ill will towards an individual, or by indirect or improper motives, though these may be wholly unconnected with any uncharitable feeling towards anybody."

See, also, Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, per Bayley, J.

> "I have always understood," said Parke, J., in Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 Barn. & Adol. 588, 594, "that no point of law was more clearly settled than that in every action for a malicious prosecution or arrest the plaintiff must prove what is averred in the declaration, viz. that the prosecution or arrest was malicious and without probable cause; if there be reasonable or probable cause, no malice, however distinctly proved, will make the defendant liable; but when there is no reasonable or probable cause, it is for the jury to infer malice from the facts proved. That is a question in all cases for their consideration."

It was ruled in another English case not to be enough to show the prosecutor was in the wrong because there was no probable cause for the prosecution, but that it must appear that he was maliciously so, that is, obstinately and improperly in the wrong, through anger, ill feeling, or any bad motive or feeling differing from a sincere desire to put the law in force. Darling v. Cooper, 11 Cox C. C. 533.

The "malus animus," the "improper and indirect motive," is sometimes shown very clearly, as, for instance, where the prosecution is made use of to extort money, or to obtain a title to the property alleged to have been stolen, or to gain some personal advantage over the one charged with crime, or where there is a wish in some way to injure the party prosecuted rather than an honest effort to vindicate the law. Still it would be for the jury to find whether such was the motive for the prosecution, and, while the absence of probable cause is sometimes evidence of malice, yet it is not evidence of malice when the prosecutor honestly believes in the charge, and has no motive but a sincere and honest desire to vindicate the public justice. A person who on the strength of circumstances of grave suspicion, which are sufficient to convince him of the probable guilt of the person concerned, institutes an unsuccessful prosecution under a sense of public duty, would have a defense to an action for malicious prosecution, not because there was probable cause for it; for the state of circumstances which moved him to act, assuming them to be true, might not reasonably lead an ordinarily prudent person placed in the position of the accuser to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed, but because he could negative malice by reason of his honest belief in the guilt of the accused and his effort in good faith to vindicate the public justice. Here there would be an utter absence of evil motive, though, strictly considered, such conduct should be unlawful. Because the party acted with honest motives and for justifiable purposes, however, the law, from reasons of public policy, excuses him.

So it must be admitted that the imperative necessity for a clear and accurate direction to the jury in actions for malicious prosecutions is apparent, and the reason for the rule that such actions are to be properly guarded and their true principle strictly adhered to obvious.

Said Lord Bramwell in Abrath v. Northeastern Railway Company, 11 App. Cas. 252, 253:

> "A man brings an action for malicious prosecution; he gives evidence which shows or goes to show that he is innocent. You may tell the jury over and over again that that is not the question, but they never or very rarely can be got to understand it. They think that it is not right that a man should be prosecuted when he is innocent, and in the end they pay him for it. It is therefore all-important that these actions should not be permitted to be brought against persons or bodies or others who are not properly liable in respect of them."

Chief Justice Breese, in Collins v. Hayte, 50 Ill. 353, observed:

> "Our experience teaches us there are few questions of law more difficult of comprehension by a jury than those which govern trials for malicious prosecutions. It seems difficult for them to appreciate, if the plaintiff was really innocent of the charge for which he was prosecuted, that he still ought not to recover. They do not readily comprehend why an innocent man may be prosecuted for a supposed crime or offense, and yet have no recourse against the prosecutor who caused his arrest and imprisonment, and yet the preservation of the peace and the good order of society require, that even innocent men may be compelled to submit to great inconvenience and hardship, rather than citizens should be deterred from instituting prosecutions where there is reasonable or probable grounds to believe in the existence of guilt. Good faith on the part of the prosecution is always an important, if not a vital, element of inquiry, and is always a sufficient justification, except where an unreasonable credulity is manifested, inducing the prosecutor to draw conclusions of guilt, when it would have been wanting in the perception of a person of ordinary prudence and judgment."

For, said the same learned judge in Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 526:

> "Few men could be found who would be willing to originate a criminal prosecution if, on failure to establish the guilt of the accused, he himself was to be subjected to an onerous and expensive suit."

A learned author to the same purpose says:

> "Actions for malicious prosecution are regarded by law with jealousy. Lord Holt said more than 200 years ago that they 'ought not to be favored, but managed with great caution.' Their tendency is to discourage prosecution for crime, as they expose the prosecutors to civil suits, and the love of justice may not always be strong enough to induce individuals to commence prosecutions, when, if they fail, they may be subjected to the expense of litigation, if they be not mulcted in damages." Newell on Malicious Prosecutions, § 13.

It must not be overlooked that the element of malice in this action is as important as the fact of a want of probable cause. Want of probable cause may exist without malice. Malice may exist with probable cause. If there is no probable cause for the prosecution, but no malice, a recovery cannot be had. If there be probable cause, no malice, however distinctly proved, will avail. In a certain sense to prosecute another without probable cause therefor is wrongful, but in the true legal sense the wrong is not actionable unless it is done maliciously, because in this sort of action to prevail in it both malice and a want of probable cause must concur; and if either element be wanting, the damage, if any, caused by the prosecution, is within the maxim, "Damnum absque injuria esse potest." By the true principle then guarding this sort of action the mere prosecution of another without probable cause is not the doing of a "wrongful act intentionally without justification or excuse" from which the law imputes malice with respect to it irrespective of motive. Malice and the want of probable cause are independent facts to be proved like any other fact, and both must concur. Neither is a legal presumption. If this were not true, it would be necessary for the plaintiff only to prove his discharge at a preliminary examination by a committing magistrate. His case would then be complete; for the other necessary elements would be supplied by legal presumptions. The essential element of malice may or may not be inferred from all the facts and circumstances of a given case. The jury are not to be told, however, that it may be inferred from the mere fact alone that there is a want of probable cause for the prosecution. This generality of statement is scarcely justified in an instruction, and it must be held to be prejudicial error under the facts and circumstances of this case.

In literary aptitude and acquirement the instruction in the present case first quoted is somewhat embellished. It may not lack a proper taste and sentiment, nor in exploring the scenes of philosophical research is it, perhaps, found wanting. In all this it is an aspiring effort. The words "envy, hatred, and malice," with which it begins, are found in the litany of the Church of England, and there they are appropriate to the teaching of a splendid Christian lesson, but comparing one passion with others and emphasizing that of malice as being the worst of all has no place in a direct, simple statement of the law to be embodied in an accurate and dispassionate charge to the jury. A correct instruction on the malice here essential is "* * * the thing wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king." The thing that the jury is about calls for the exercise of a more practical duty than is concerned in a mere moral speculation. And right here it may be also observed that there is not entire accord among moral philosophers as to which is the worst of passions. Indeed, by some Envy is considered the name of the Prince of Hades, a very Pandora's box in which hatred and malice are nested, and whence fly a multitude of evils to afflict us. We are cited to no case authoritatively foreclosing speculation thereabouts. A little analysis of this instruction would demonstrate a number of imperfections in it.

[3] We are content to say that it is wholly bad, and the giving of the instruction is disapproved because it is highly argumentative, and in its very nature calculated to confuse, mislead, and prejudice the jury. There is a tacit intimation from the bench that in the opinion of the judge the defendants ought to "smart" for the prosecution. Instructions should be limited to a plain, simple, and direct statement of the law in order that the jury might intelligently apply the evidence that has been adduced before them.

An author says:

> "The judge should hold the scales of justice evenly, and not assume the character of the advocate. Argumentative instructions trench upon the province of the jury, and therefore should not be given and the giving of them is error." Thompson on Trials, vol. 2, par. 2301.

See, also, 38 Cyc. 1600.

[4] Assignments of error numbered 2, 3, and 4 take exceptions to instructions which in succession single out and group certain portions of the testimony favorable to the plaintiff and give them undue prominence to the disparagement of other relevant and material facts favorable to the defendant. Without prolonging the opinion to discuss these instructions separately, we quite agree with counsel for appellant in saying that:

> "By means of these several instructions all the facts supposed to be favorable to the plaintiff's case were paraded before the jury in succession and a profound silence was kept as to all facts favorable to the defendant's case. In other words, facts favorable to the plaintiff were emphasized and made prominent. No better way could be devised to control the verdict of a jury."

This method of instructing juries is disapproved.

Other assignments are predicated on erroneous procedure, but, in view of a new trial, error, if any here, may not occur again.

For misdirection to the jury to the prejudice of appellants, the judgment must be reversed, and a new trial granted.

It is so ordered.

CUNNINGHAM and ROSS, JJ., concur.

(19 Ariz. 78)

HILL et al. v. STATE. (Cr. 400.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑167 — SALES — PERSONS LIABLE.

In a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors brought against the president of a corporation and its manager, where the president actually sold the liquor and the manager, although not present at the sale, prepared the invoice therefor in the usual course of business on information received from the buyer, and left the invoice on the desk of the shipping clerk for his attention, such acts did not constitute advising or encouraging the commission of the offense within Pen. Code 1913, § 27.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 182, 183.]

2. INTOXICATING LIQUORS 🔑131—PROSECUTIONS—INTENT.

Where defendant, prosecuted for selling intoxicating liquors, knew that he was selling the identical cider in question, made a price therefor, and received payment accordingly, and caused the identical cider to be delivered, he cannot claim that he did not know that such liquor was intoxicating under Pen. Code 1913, § 24, subdiv. 4, excepting from punishment persons who committed the act or made the omission charged under an ignorance or mistake of fact disproving criminal intent.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Intoxicating Liquors, Cent. Dig. §§ 140, 161.]

3. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑371(10)—SIMILAR SALES OF LIQUOR—EVIDENCE.

In a prosecution for selling cider found to be intoxicating, evidence that defendant had, at prior times, made similar sales was properly admissible to show intent, and that the cider was sold in the usual course of business.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 830, 831.]

4. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1036(1) — REVIEW — PRESERVATION OF EXCEPTIONS.

Appellants, in a criminal prosecution cannot complain of testimony to which no objection is interposed, either at the time it is given or by motion to strike.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 1631-1640, 2639.]

5. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1169(2) — REVIEW — HARMLESS ERROR.

In a prosecution for selling cider which was subsequently found to be intoxicating, the admission of evidence that a purchaser thereof was convicted and fined for selling intoxicating liquor held harmless.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 3138.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Maricopa County; R. C. Stanford, Judge.

Walter Hill and Peter W. Duncan were convicted of selling intoxicating liquors, and they appeal. Reversed as to defendant Duncan, with directions, and affirmed as to defendant Hill.

Armstrong & Lewis and Charles B. Ward, all of Phœnix, for appellants. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. Wm. Kramer and Geo. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

CUNNINGHAM, J. The appellants are charged with having sold intoxicating cider to I. E. Troutner, at Phœnix, Ariz., on July 16, 1915.

The appellant Walter Hill, as a witness in behalf of the defendants, according to the abstract of record, testified with regard to his connection with the alleged sale of intoxicating liquor as follows:

"I am president of the Walter Hill Company. It is engaged in the wholesale business, produce, fruits, candies, fountain supplies, and summer drinks; by fountain supplies I mean cocoa, chocolate, cider, grape juice, Coca-Cola—soft drinks. I have distributing houses at Ray, Mesa, and Prescott and Phœnix, Ariz., and Los Angeles, Cal. I am general manager of all branches, and have direct control of the affairs of the corporation. I know I. E. Troutner. I first saw him the latter part of June, about the 20th, in my office. He came in to inquire about cider. I told him we had two kinds of cider; one made by Barrett & Barrett of Chicago, and another by Lewis & Leech of Denver. I made him prices, Denver cider 70 or 75 cents. I had some cider in stock at that time; I think it was in 28-gallon barrels. He made no purchase at that time. According to the records he made his first purchase June 26th. I can't say just how much he purchased then; I think he talked with me three different occasions about cider. The first shipment I received from Lewis & Leech came the middle of June; I think he bought two kegs on June 26th. His next purchase was on July 1st, three 28-gallon barrels. On July 2d he purchased some more. On June 27th we held up his order on account we read in the papers about bulldog cider. I didn't know what bulldog cider was until I talked to Mr. Brisbois, and then went back to the store and got a bottle of Lewis & Leech cider and took it over to Mr. Gandy. I gave it to Mr. Gandy (the county attorney). * * * About four days after going to the district attorney's office I made a test of the cider by drinking some of it. In the meantime I didn't sell any. Mr. Troutner, Mr. Hill (an employé of the same company), and the bookkeeper were present. Mr. Troutner poured it out of one of the kegs purchased from Lewis & Leech, being the same brand of cider sold to Troutner on July 16th. I have dealt in cider here in Phœnix only about a year; I made cider in Canada. This cider that I drank was sweet cider. After making this test I made a second sale to Troutner on July 1st. I next had a talk with Mr. Troutner in the afternoon of July 7th. He came in the store while I was getting ready to leave for California. I was in a hurry to get up home. He said he was selling lots of cider, and he wanted me to make him a better price on the Denver cider. I told him I would make it 70 cents in 50-gallon kegs. He ordered five barrels, and said he was in a hurry for them. I told him I would wire, which we did. I didn't tell him we were receiving weekly shipments. I went to California the next morning and returned on September 13th. This was the same cider we drank and tested on the 7th. Between the 7th day of July and the 13th day of September I personally had nothing to do with the sales, deliveries, or collections of money for sales of cider, but of the Walter Hill Company House. I received no money for cider on July 7th, and I made no entries in the books of any sale. * * * The cider which I sold Mr. Troutner was pure apple cider and nonintoxicating beverage. I never sold any alcoholic liquor of any kind to any person to my knowledge."

On cross-examination the witness explained that the test made by drinking the cider, was that he drank a cupful, that would hold a big wineglass.

Defendant Duncan testified that he was employed by the Walter Hill Company during June and July as manager.

"I oversee the business and do the buying and selling. We handled cider shipped from Denver. * * * The Lewis & Leech cider was branded 'Pure Apple Cider'; I knew Troutner. I had a business transaction with him on June 26th. He purchased some cider at that time and paid me for it. On July 10th he got some more cider. He didn't buy any cider from me on the 16th. The first I learned there had been cider ordered from Denver was on July 12th. Mr. Troutner came in and wanted to know if his cider had come. Hill went away on July 7th. Troutner came in the store most every morning inquiring about his cider; he said Mr. Hill had ordered five barrels of cider for him. I was not present when Troutner got the cider on the 16th. * * *"

Witness went to California on July 16th and returned July 21st. On cross-examination witness stated that his initials are on the invoice as the salesman.

"I put them there; on the 16th he asked me if it was in; I had talked with him the day before."

P. L. Simpson, the shipping clerk for the Walter Hill Company, testified in behalf of the state that:

"I believe Mr. Hill is proprietor. Mr. Duncan is manager; Mr. Duncan has charge of the place during Hill's absence; * * * I know I. E. Troutner; I know he made purchases from the Walter Hill Company. He was buying cider from the company. The system or method used when purchases were made like Troutner's were made in the regular manner, were made on one of our bills, Walter Hill Company's bills; whoever takes an order makes out those bills; I have a distinct recollection of one particular time when Troutner made purchase. There was a check made in payment. I made out the check I think at the shipping clerk's desk. * * *"

Witness was here shown four invoices, which he recognized, and identified two of them as having been receipted by Duncan; one he did not know whose receipt it was, and one, receipted by himself. Witness receipted the invoice of July 16th. Said invoice is in the handwriting of Duncan and receipted by witness, and was first seen by witness lying on his desk. On cross-examination witness stated in explanation of the occasion of his having receipted the bill of invoice, as follows:

"I happened to be the only one in the sales department at that time of the day, and I was collecting the money there just the same as I would for anything else that happened to be left there. When Mr. Troutner came up he said he wanted to pay this bill I have here. Then I wrote the check. I am not sure whether he gave it to me or whether it came from the office. The check is in my handwriting and he paid the bill to me; the bill for this cider was on the desk. If it was put there for me to collect the desk was the proper place. I find other bills there as shipping clerk for me to collect, not all of them, but in the ordinary course of business. There was nothing out of the way at all in this bill being laid there. Mr. Duncan was not there when I wrote the check for Mr. Troutner. He was not present when I was paid the money."

Here we have the story of the transaction as told by the employés of the Walter Hill Company from the incipiency of the transaction to the point of the actual delivery of the cider to Troutner's possession. The fact of delivery actually made to Troutner is not contested.

Walter Hill, the general manager of the Walter Hill Company, opened negotiations with Troutner to furnish him five barrels of Denver cider at 70 cents per gallon, for which Troutner agreed to pay upon delivery. Walter Hill wired to Denver for the cider, ordering its immediate shipment. This occurred on July 7th. Walter Hill left the state for the benefit of his health on the 8th of July. On the 12th of July, Troutner inquired of Mr. Duncan about the cider Mr. Hill had wired to Denver for, at Troutner's request. Duncan knew nothing of that occurrence before Troutner's inquiry. Having been informed of it by Troutner, and after Troutner had made daily inquiries of whether the cider had arrived, on July 16th Duncan made out the usual bill of invoice for the five barrels of cider to Troutner, at the price Hill had made to Troutner, placed the invoice on the shipping clerk's desk as a memorandum, and he, Duncan, on the same day left the state and did not return until July 21st. The system followed by the Walter Hill Company in making sales of cider was the same system followed in making sales of all other goods handled by it. When a sale had been made, a bill or invoice of the thing sold was usually, but not always, made out and furnished the shipping clerk. In this instance, Peter W. Duncan made out the bill or invoice of the Troutner transaction and placed it on the shipping clerk's desk. He did this relying on the statements made to him by Troutner of Troutner's prior transaction with Walter Hill. Simpson, the shipping clerk, found the invoice on his desk, and Troutner offered to pay for the cider. Simpson's duty was to collect such bills, and he did receive the money offered by Troutner.

The relation of Hill and Duncan to the transaction in question is important to an understanding of the issues involved with regard to the liability of the parties.

> "All persons concerned in the commission of a crime, whether it be a felony or misdemeanor, and whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid and abet in its commission, or, not being present have advised and encouraged its commission, * * * are principals in any crime so committed." Section 27, Penal Code 1913.

Mr. Hill arranged with Troutner all of the details of the transaction which finally resulted in transferring the five barrels of cider to him. Neither Duncan nor Simpson was present at this transaction. Mr. Simpson collected from Troutner the price Hill arranged for Troutner to pay for the cider. Neither Hill nor Duncan was present at the time of payment. Troutner received the cider, but from whom does not appear from the evidence. That neither Hill nor Duncan was present at the time of the delivery is clear. Simpson is not charged with the commission of the offense. He may have delivered the cider.

[1] The part Mr. Hill took in the transaction was an essential step in the commission of the offense. The collection of the price and the delivery of the liquor are also essential to the completion of the transaction. That the transaction should be made in accordance with the plan and system adopted by the Walter Hill Company in making sales of goods handled by it was not essential to this transaction. Duncan was not present at the time any essential act of the transaction was committed by either Hill or Simpson. Duncan did not directly commit any act essential to the transaction constituting the offense. Not being present, did Duncan advise and encourage its commission, by simply preparing an invoice in the usual course of the business on information received from Troutner as to the terms and conditions prescribed by Mr. Hill, and by leaving the invoice on the desk of the shipping clerk for that employé's attention? I think he did not as a matter of law advise and encourage the commission of the offense by the mere act of preparing a business record of a prior transaction had in his absence. Mr. Hill was the responsible person about the business of the Walter Hill Company. The witnesses who were employés of the company, including Walter Hill, in their testimony clearly indicate that Walter Hill was in fact and to all intents and purposes the dominant person, and the whole Walter Hill Company corporation. His orders in the business were final. They were executed by the other employés as orders of the corporation. Hill was president, general manager, and controlling director of the corporation, and holding such a powerful control over the business of the corporation the employés under him were simply engaged in executing his orders. Of course, Mr. Hill's orders to employés under him requiring such employés to sell or dispose of intoxicating liquors or do any other criminal act would not relieve the employé executing such orders from criminal liability. But Hill did not order Duncan to prepare the invoice of the Troutner purchase. Hill had evidently ordered the plan or system of making invoices of all sales made in the course of business by the employés making sales; but Hill made this sale in question and did not himself prepare the invoice of the transaction, nor directly order Duncan to prepare such invoice; whatever Duncan did in the matter, he did at the urgent insistence of Troutner. He had no opportunity to advise and encourage Hill in making the arrangement Hill did make with Troutner, and Simpson executed Hill's orders when the money was collected from Troutner. These facts and others in the evidence conclusively show that Duncan was not concerned in the commission of the offense charged either directly aiding and abetting or as one not being present advising and encouraging its commission. Consequently he was as a right entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal.

[2] The appellants contend that they had no knowledge whatever that the cider involved was intoxicating, and as a consequence they cannot be held criminally liable for the act of selling it. That the sale was made under a mistake of fact, and that a lack of knowledge of the intoxicating character of the cider which was sold relieved from criminal liability. They argue that in the absence of such knowledge the union or joint operation of act and intent requisite to every crime or public offense is likewise absent; also that the absence of such knowledge disproves any criminal intent within subdivision (4) of section 24, Penal Code 1913. Said statute is as follows:

> "All persons are capable of committing crimes except those belonging to the following classes: * * * (4) Persons who committed the act or made the omission charged under an ignorance or mistake of fact, which disproves any criminal intent."

The act here complained of as criminal was the transfer of the property right in and the possession of five barrels of cider of a designated name for a consideration paid therefor. No possible mistake of fact accompanied such transaction. Every circumstance in evidence surrounding the transaction excludes the idea of mistake or ignorance affecting the transaction. Every person concerned in the sale knew that the thing sold and intended to be sold and purchased and delivered was nothing other than five barrels of cider produced by Lewis & Leech of Denver, Colo., and bearing the trade-name of "Apple Queen Pure Cider." Every person concerned in the transaction, except the employé who delivered the goods to Troutner knew that the price fixed required to be paid, and which was paid, for the goods was 70 cents per gallon. Neither Hill nor Troutner intimate that they were ignorant or mistaken with regard to any of these facts. When a party sells a thing knowing that he is selling that identical thing, and makes a price therefor and receives payment accordingly, and causes the identical thing he intended to sell and nothing else to be delivered, he cannot claim that he did not know the nature of the article sold and delivered by him in excuse of a criminal charge for selling a prohibited article.

The questions here referred to have been heretofore considered by this court in Troutner v. State, 17 Ariz. 506, 154 Pac. 1048, L. R. A. 1916D, 262, and there decided against appellants' contention. The appellants concede the force of that decision, but they request that we re-examine the questions here, and present many arguments why that decision was wrong. I am entirely satisfied with the correctness of the Troutner decision, and adhere to the same. The contentions made on this appeal now under discussion are disallowed on the authority of the Troutner Case, supra.

[3] The state was permitted to give evidence of sales of cider made by the Walter Hill Company, by Walter Hill as salesman, to Troutner, at times prior to the 16th day of July, 1915. These sales are not relied upon for a conviction in this case, but the appellants complain of the ruling of the court admitting evidence of such prior sales. I think the evidence of such sales was admissible to show that the intention of the parties was to sell cider, and that the cider sold on the 16th day of July, 1915, was sold in the usual course of business and as an article of commerce handled by the Walter Hill Company; that the employés of the company who participated in such sales knew what they were doing, and that they knew that they were selling cider, carrying out the plan of the business concern. No one connected with this cause denies the fact that the prior sales were made in the ordinary course of the business, but, on the other hand, the appellants admit the sales were made and in the ordinary course of the business. No criminal responsibility is based upon any of such prior sales, and this is made clear during the course of the trial. The evidence was admissible for the purpose of showing the course or plan pursued by the Walter Hill Company's employés in the matter of selling cider. Such evidence would seem to be of advantage to the defendant's cause, rather than of a disadvantage. It tended to show that the sale in question was one made in the ordinary manner of making sales of cider, and was not made in suspicious circumstances. At least it tends to remove the moral sting from the transaction, if it does not remove the legal liability to punishment.

The court, over the objection of the appellants, admitted evidence to the effect that certain persons who bought the cider which the Walter Hill Company sold to Troutner on the 16th day of July, 1915, were charged and convicted of selling intoxicating liquor. Troutner was also permitted to testify that he was convicted of selling the same cider he bought July 16th from the Walter Hill Company. Such evidence was received for the purpose of showing that the cider bought by Troutner from the Walter Hill Company through the appellants was intoxicating in character.

An expert witness on July 21st took a sample of the cider in question handled on July 16th and made a chemical analysis of it. He found it contained alcohol in volume of 7¼ per cent. The evidence of the intoxicating character of the cider in question was not conflicting. Mr. Hill testified that he drank a cup full of the same brand of cider as a test, and gave as his opinion from his knowledge of cider that it was sweet cider. The cider he tasted was cider other than the cider Troutner bought on July 16th. There is no evidence in the record conflicting with the evidence produced by the prosecution tending to show that the cider bought by Troutner on the 16th day of July contained alcohol to the amount sufficient to intoxicate. The appellants produced some testimony other than that of Mr. Hill tending to show that the same brand of cider handled before the 16th of July was not intoxicating. As I understand the record of the testimony and the contention of the appellants as to the intoxicating character of the cider contained in the five barrels bought by Troutner on July 16th is that the cider was intoxicating. The appellants do not seriously contend on the trial nor on this appeal that such cider was not intoxicating, but their serious contention is that they had no knowledge of its intoxicating character when they sold it.

The testimony given by Troutner, Jack Gibson, and Byrd is attacked as having been erroneously admitted. Troutner, without objection, testified that his place of residence was at the county jail for selling cider the latter part of June and the first part of July, 1915. At the close of his examination in chief, in the absence of objection, he testified, according to the abstract of the record, as follows:

> "Got into difficulty over this cider on account of intoxicating character of it; was arrested, tried and sentenced."

At the close of the cross-examination he states:

> "* * * On the trial that I was convicted for selling cider did not go on the stand or offer any evidence at all."

Jack Gibson was called as a witness following Troutner. On his direct examination he testified, without objection, that he "handled cider bought from Troutner; do not remember date; was arrested for selling cider bought from Troutner; think purchase was two barrels." The examination then turned upon another matter of taking samples of cider. A cross-examination followed and closed. The prosecution thereupon asked the witness the following:

> "Q. Did you get into any difficulties by selling this cider?"

Objected to as not redirect. Then offered as a question omitted on direct examination. To which the following objection was made:

> "Mr. Armstrong: We don't care whether it is direct, or what it is. It is immaterial and irrelevant. We object on that ground. (Objection overruled.) A. Yes, sir; I got into trouble for selling this cider. Q. Were you arrested? A. Yes, sir. (Objected to for the same reason, and objection overruled.) Q. And was there any sentence passed upon you in any court for selling that cider? Mr. Armstrong: The same objection. A. I got fined $150 for selling it."

On cross-examination the witness testified that he pleaded guilty to the charge.

Then other witnesses were introduced by the state and examined and cross-examined after Jack Gibson retired from the witness stand. Thereupon L. M. Byrd was introduced by the state. He testified without objection that he bought one 50-gallon barrel of cider from Troutner five days before witness was arrested and when witness was arrested he had a quantity of the cider on hand; "got into difficulty for selling that cider; got arrested for it; was sentenced by the court and paid $250." On cross-examination he testified that he "did not go on the stand or testify to a jury; plead guilty."

No objection was raised to the testimony of either of these witnesses upon the matters of their arrest. The only objection raised was to the testimony of Jack Gibson, and the only portion of Jack Gibson's testimony not already before the jury without objection was the answer to the question, to wit:

> "Q. And was there any sentence passed upon you in any court for selling that cider?
>
> "Mr. Armstrong: The same objection. A. I got fined $150 for selling it."

[4] This answer is the only new testimony brought out by this witness. No motion was made to strike this answer, nor to strike the testimony of this witness theretofore given. The appellants cannot complain of the testimony given by Troutner, Gibson, and Byrd, to which they interposed no objection, either at the time it was given, or thereafter by moving to strike. The testimony given by Jack Gibson on his redirect examination to which appellants objected is the only matter in this respect open to inquiry on this appeal. Had the court sustained the objections to the questions asked on redirect examination concerning witness' difficulties for selling the cider, the statement that he had been arrested for selling the cider was still in the record, to which there was no objection. The objection to the new matter with regard to the fact that witness was fined for selling the cider is the question for consideration. Had this answer been excluded, leaving the former testimony of this witness and the testimony of witness Troutner with the subsequent testimony of witness Byrd in the record and before the jury, to which no objection was interposed would the result have been any different? Had all of this class of testimony been objected to and excluded, could the jury have reasonably reached a verdict any different from that which they have reached? It seems quite clear to me that, if the court had excluded Jack Gibson's answer to the questions, "Did you get into any difficulties by selling this cider?" and "* * * Was there any sentence passed upon you in any court for selling that cider?" the answer to the first question was that he did get into trouble, and the answer to the second question was, "I got fined $150 for selling it," leaving the other testimony in the case, to which no objection was made, no different verdict would have resulted. This class of evidence bears upon the intoxicating character of the cider, and could have no bearing upon any other feature of the case. All of the evidence other than the class of evidence now considered, before the jury without material conflict, is to the effect that the cider in question was an intoxicating liquor.

Without any doubt the matters of Gibson's arrest and fine for selling this cider had no place in the evidence in this case against Hill and Duncan, charged with selling the identical cider to Troutner. The same may be said of the testimony of Troutner and Byrd bearing upon the same matters. At the request of these appellants the court gave the jury the following instruction, to wit:

> "The court instructs the jury that there has been evidence admitted in this cause of sales other than the one herein being inquired into, and that you are not to render any verdict against the defendants, or either of them, by reason of any such other sales. The only sale that is material in this case is the sale alleged to have been made on July 16, 1915."

The appellants must have considered this instruction all-sufficient to meet the matter of sales made by Troutner, Gibson, and Byrd; if not, they would have requested other instructions more directly meeting their testimony. In the absence of a request for an instruction specially dealing with the sales made of the cider by the said three witnesses, the instruction given as requested must be deemed broad enough to sufficiently inform the jury of the law applicable to such and all sales mentioned in the testimony other than the sale of July 16, 1915.

[6] The admission of the answers of Gibson as testimony against Hill and Duncan was a clear technical error in the proceedings. But upon a consideration of the whole case I am of the opinion that no prejudice could or did result therefrom, for the reason no fair conclusion can be reached from the evidence remaining in the case, excluding the objectionable testimony, other than that the cider sold to Troutner on July 16, 1915, was intoxicating liquor.

I have considered all of the questions raised by the appellants on this appeal, and deem the foregoing discussion sufficient to set forth the reasons for my decision without a further discussion of the other questions. I am therefore of the opinion that the appellant Hill has been awarded a fair and impartial trial, and that this record presents no reversible error as to said appellant.

I am of the further opinion that the evidence fails to connect Peter W. Duncan with the commission of the act constituting the offense. Consequently the judgment is reversed as to Peter W. Duncan, and remanded, with instructions to discharge this defendant.

The judgment as against Walter Hill is ordered affirmed.

FRANKLIN, C. J., and ROSS, J., concur.

(19 Ariz. 91)

QUAYLE v. STATE. (Cr. 410.)

(Supreme Court of Arizona. May 19, 1917.)

1. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1144(15)—APPEAL AND ERROR—PRESUMPTIONS.
Where the record is silent, it will be presumed the trial court properly admonished the jury in a criminal case upon retiring.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2761–2764, 2901, 3033.]

2. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1039 — RESERVING GROUNDS FOR REVIEW—NECESSITY OF OBJECTIONS.
In a criminal case, accused cannot complain for the first time upon appeal that the court failed to admonish the jury when it retired.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2647, 2648.]

3. INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION 🔑41(1)—COMMITMENT—SUFFICIENCY.
Where a defendant was charged with rape, a commitment reciting that he appeared guilty "as charged," and ordering him held to answer "the same," is sufficient basis for an information charging violent rape.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Indictment and Information, Cent. Dig. § 152.]

4. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑917(1) — NEW TRIAL—POSTPONEMENT.
Under Pen. Code 1913, § 1105, subd. 4, authorizing the court to grant a new trial for material errors, and section 1012, authorizing postponements, the trial court's refusal to grant a postponement may be asserted as ground for new trial.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 2161.]

5. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑1151 — POSTPONEMENT—DISCRETION OF COURT.
Postponement of a criminal trial rests largely in the trial court's discretion, and his action will not be reversed unless such discretion has been abused to accused's prejudice.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 3045–3049.]

6. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑594(2)—POSTPONEMENT—DISCRETION OF COURT.
A trial court held not to have abused its discretion in refusing to postpone the trial of a rape case because a witness desired by defendant was absent, where such proposed witness' affidavit disclosed that he had no intention of venturing within the court's jurisdiction.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1322.]

7. RAPE 🔑51(4)—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.
Evidence, consisting largely of prosecutrix's story and physical facts, held to sustain a conviction for rape against the defense that the prosecutrix did not forcibly resist.
[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Rape, Cent. Dig. § 74.]

8. CRIMINAL LAW 🔑938(1) — NEW TRIAL—NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE.
There is no abuse of discretion in refusing a new trial motion in a rape case for newly discovered evidence, where one of the proposed witnesses testified fully at the former trial and the other two did not offer to testify in the future, and the evidence if given, would be cumulative or impeaching.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. §§ 2306, 2312, 2313, 2315, 2317.]

9. CRIMINAL LAW ⚿564(3)—VENUE—SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE.

The venue in a prosecution for rape held sufficiently established by indirect evidence.

[Ed. Note.—For other cases, see Criminal Law, Cent. Dig. § 1283.]

Appeal from Superior Court, Navajo County; John A. Ellis, Judge.

Charles F. Quayle was convicted of rape, and appeals. Affirmed.

The appellant was charged with the commission of the crime of rape upon one Eva Dick, alleged to have been consummated on September 12, 1915, was tried therefor, and convicted, from which judgment of conviction he appeals.

Jones & Jones, of Flagstaff, and Louis Kleindients, of Los Angeles, Cal., for appellant. Wiley E. Jones, Atty. Gen., and R. W. Kramer and Geo. W. Harben, Asst. Attys. Gen., for the State.

CUNNINGHAM, J. The appellant was charged with the commission of the crime of rape, on September 12, 1915, by a sworn complaint filed with a justice of the peace on the 14th day of September, 1915. On September 27, 1915, the defendant appeared for the preliminary examination of the charge. Having examined the witnesses produced by the parties, the magistrate entered the following order, to wit:

> "After listening to the evidence adduced, it appearing to the court that there is sufficient evidence to believe the defendant guilty as charged, I hereby order that he be held to answer the same and that his bond be fixed at three thousand dollars."

On October 7, 1915, the county attorney of Navajo county filed an information in the superior court charging the defendant with the commission of the crime of violent rape on Eva Dick, on or about the 12th day of September, 1915. The defendant, having been formally arraigned on the charge, entered his plea of not guilty.

On February 29, 1916, the defendant presented his motion to withdraw his plea of not guilty for the purpose of presenting a motion to set aside the information upon the grounds "that before the filing of said information he had not been legally committed by a magistrate for the crime of rape, or for any other crime." The motion was denied. The appellant urges as error the order of the court refusing to permit him to withdraw his said plea for said purpose.

The defendant thereupon moved for a postponement of the trial until the next jury term of the court, upon the ground and for the reason of the absence of a witness, Len Taylor. The motion is accompanied by an affidavit of the defendant setting forth that this party is a resident of the town of Winslow, and has been for many years last past; that a subpœna was issued for him on February 24th and placed in the hands of the sheriff of the county for service. The facts he expects to be able to prove by this witness are thereupon set forth in detail. He continues:

